CIVILIZATION'S SHAME.

TO CALL LEOPOLD.

British Government to Take Lead.

Sir Edward Grey Determined Congo Atrocities Shall Cease.

Will Propose That Powers Hold International Congress.

Belgian King and Government Have Failed to Better Conditions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The question of the administration of the Congo State is to be brought before the powers at an early day by the British Foreign Office, in the form of a suggestion that the whole matter be submitted to an international congress.

Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary, is understood to regard himself as pledged most solemnly to force an issue on this business unless a radical change occurs at Brussels.

The revelations which have been made in the last two years of Congo atrocities, perpetrated under Leopold's autocracy, have shocked the civilized world. The Belgian monarch has from time to time promised reform, but there is ample evidence that he has instituted no real reform. Now, it appears, the day of reckoning is drawing nigh.

In Foreign Office circles it is said that Grey intends to bring matters to a focus before the reassembling of Parliament.

MINISTER'S ATTITUDE.

He told the House of Commons during the last session that the best interests of civilization demand that Brussels be given a "fair chance" to reform the Congo government, but added with unusual impressiveness that, if the Belgian authorities failed to adopt adequate reform measures, the great powers would have no choice.

"It will be for civilization," said the Minister, "to see that civilization is not baffled indefinitely in Central Africa."

Since this warning, the Belgian Parliament has proposed to leave the administration of the Congo in the hands of King Leopold. This is virtually a refusal to assume responsibility.

SINISTER FIGURE.

Leopold's sinister figure loomed in the background at The Hague conference during the efforts of Mr. Choate and Gen. Porter to establish a permanent court of arbitration, and his influence was exerted adversely because of a fear as to the Congo State.

Public sentiment here is violently opposed to the idea of leaving that persecuted region in the hands of the present King of the Belgians, and Britons assume that the Americans are just as resolute.

Elihu H. Root,
Secretary of State, who is expected to retire in December.

CABINET CHANGES.

LATEST RUMOR CONCERNS ROOT.

SECRETARY OF STATE SAID TO BE PREPARING TO RESIGN.

Health Is Impaired and He Is Reported to Be Anxious to Be Relieved of Responsibilities—Change Will Not Take Place, If At All, Till After Congress Convenes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An important and, in a sense, a surprising change is imminent in the Cabinet of President Roosevelt. From time to time in the last few months it has been rumored that both Secretary Metcalf of the navy and Atty.-Gen. Bonaparte of the Department of Justice were likely to retire from administration life.

While the rumors have been denied, it is not unlikely that one and perhaps both of these officials may leave the Cabinet before the President completes his present term. That, however, is for the future, and the latest information as to a change in the Cabinet affects neither Mr. Metcalf nor Mr. Bonaparte. It relates to the retirement of no less a personage than the Secretary of State, Elihu Root.

Any direct statement that Secretary Root is considering his resignation from the President's official family would be denied, but it is nevertheless known to be a fact. Mr. Root is not a well man. His health is impaired and he is inclined to feel that he ought not to jeopardize his remaining strength, mental and physical, by the performance of the exacting duties of Secretary of State.

Secretary Root has some matters he desires to bring to the attention of Congress during the approaching session, but there is strong ground for the belief that the change will take place within a few months.

MITCHELL GROWS WEAK.

Condition of President of Mine Workers' Union Is Reported as Serious.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LA SALLE (Ill.) Nov. 2.—It was stated today that John Mitchell, president of the Mine Workers' Union, is in a seriously weak condition following an operation for abcess at St. Mary's Hospital last night.

This was the fourth operation performed in the last two weeks. The crisis is expected tomorrow.

FINANCIAL.

HOLIDAYS WILL BE CONTINUED THIS WEEK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 2.—Gov. Gillett, following a conference with bankers of San Francisco, today, issued a proclamation declaring next Monday a legal holiday. He also announces that in all probability Tuesday and Wednesday next will be declared holidays.

The Governor's office is in receipt of a letter from a banker in the northern part of the State to the effect that the banks in that section are in a more serious condition than those in cities where clearinghouse associations have been formed.

CHAMBERLAIN'S DECISION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 2.—Gov. Chamberlain has consulted bankers in every section of the State regarding the financial situation and as a result will proclaim a day-to-day holiday in the State until such time as it may be expedient to restore the usual order of things.

The bankers of this city are considering seriously the proposition adopted by the banks of Pittsburgh in issuing checks of small denomination to be used as collateral by the working classes. The pay rolls of the manufacturers in this city are very heavy and it is believed should Portland follow Pittsburgh's example a considerable step will have been taken to relieve the financial situation.

GOV. GILLETT'S STATEMENT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—The following statement was issued tonight by Gov. Gillett:

"The Governor states he had met this afternoon with the clearinghouse board, the president of the State Bankers' Association and representatives of some of the savings banks of San Francisco and discussed fully with them the financial conditions existing in the country today, and particularly in California.

"That it was the unanimous opinion of all that it was necessary in order to protect the financial, commercial and industrial interests of the State that legal holidays should be declared from day to day for a short time longer, until matters in the East reached a normal condition.

"Large balances are due the West from the East, which the bankers there are only willing to liquidate with clearinghouse receipts, because of the scarcity of money, but with large sums arriving from Europe and from other sources, this condition will soon be removed, and the balances due California will be paid in coin, which will relieve the stringency of the money market here and restore normal conditions once more.

"The State was never in a more prosperous condition than at present, and there is no cause for alarm. If our people will only have a little patience the unusual and unexpected conditions existing today will soon right themselves and business will move along in its usual way."

GOVERNMENT BIDS BAY CITY BANKS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—The government came to the assistance of the San Francisco banks yesterday, announcing through telegrams that it had taken steps to expedite the shipment of coin to the Pacific Coast. This action was the result of an appeal made by local financiers to Secretary Cortelyou of the Treasury Department.

A vast sum, said to be in the neighborhood of $10,000,000, is to be transferred by telegraph for the use of the San Francisco savings banks.

The government has coin in San Francisco to the amount of $343,000,000. Of this sum, $303,000,000 is stored in the mint and $40,000,000 in the subtreasury.

An effort was first made to induce the government to allow the local banks to deposit their bonds with the subtreasury here and obtain coin in return, but the authorities refused to consent to this plan.

An arrangement was effected yes-

IN HIDING.

DEFENDS ACTOR.

Girl to Be Witness for Hitchcock.

She Is Now in Hiding in New York, but Will Appear When Required.

Detectives Believe Comedian Went Either to Canada or Mexico.

Wife Gives Up Murder Idea and Continues to Appear on the Stage.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Herman Fromme, counsel for Raymond Hitchcock, the fugitive comedian, asserted today that Bella McKenzie, the girl whom the Children's Society agents believe went away with Hitchcock, is in this city in hiding and willing to be a witness for the defense, should the actor be placed on trial.

Fromme added that he believed he would hear from Hitchcock within a few days.

"Bella McKenzie," said the lawyer, "came to my office yesterday afternoon. I did not know here, never having seen her before. She said she wanted to make a statement about her connection with the Hitchcock case and to deny that she had gone with Hitchcock.

IN FAVOR OF HITCHCOCK.

"She said she had not seen Hitchcock since his disappearance, and had no idea of his whereabouts. She said further that before the case reached the stage of publicity she had frequently conversed with the girls whom the actor is accused of misusing, and that they told her they had no reason to complain of his treatment.

"Bella McKenzie is in hiding here in New York. She says she is keeping away from home because she cannot stand the reproaches of her people. I know where she is now, but I am watched so closely that I could not afford to send any reporters to see her."

Herman Ranke, Hitchcock's dresser, who is wanted by the police as a witness in the Hitchcock case, and who disappeared Friday, was still missing today.

MURDER THEORY ABANDONED.

The detectives who have been at work on the Hitchcock affair from the start believe that the actor has gone to Canada or Mexico, under the impression that he cannot be extradited for the offense with which he is charged. They do not think he would be foolish enough to take passage on a big ocean liner and virtually throw himself into the hands of the police.

Flora Zabelle, Hitchcock's wife, continues to play the leading woman's part in "A Yankee Tourist." She has abandoned the idea that Hitchcock was murdered, and from her demeanor the police infer that she has heard from him or of him.

A man who looked like Raymond Hitchcock and was plainly exhilarated visited the office of Henry W. Savage today. Word of the visit was sent to the police, but when detectives arrived the man had disappeared. The Savage force denied that Hitchcock visited the offices, and professed ignorance of the identity of the man with the jag.

PUMMELS GOVERNOR.

American Physician Thrashes Chief Executive of Honduras State and Official's Dismissal Follows.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MOBILE (Ala.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Unofficial advices reached the Honduran consul tonight that Dr. O. B. Hunter, the American physician imprisoned and said to have been cruelly treated in Honduras, was arrested because he gave Gov. Paz of the State of Corteza a severe beating.

The Governor, while out riding, accosted Dr. Hunter relative to a flippant retort said to have been delivered to one of the Governor's sons, growing out of an alleged unpaid rent bill. Dr. Hunter attacked the Governor and both were arrested for fighting.

According to the consul's advices Dr. Hunter was discharged from jail after an investigation and Gov. Paz was dismissed from office.

JAPS HAVE "LABOR TRUST."

Crafty Oriental Controls Organization and Supplies Harriman With Section Hands.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Over 2000 Japanese are now employed as section hands on various branches of the Southern Pacific system, and the Oregon Short Line, between Sparks and Ogden. These Japanese receive $1.60 a day, which is paid to the Japanese-American Industrial Coöperation Company.

Owing to the scarcity of white men, the industrial corporation has been able to organize a real "labor trust." This trust is controlled by Abeko, a crafty oriental.

H. Sugawara, who conducts the office of the corporation in Sparks, states that the labor trust gets $1 a month from every man hired to the Harriman system

So long as the $1 is paid, Sugawara said, the Japanese can continue working; otherwise he quits.

FACTORY FOR AIRSHIPS.

Three New York Men Found Company to Build and Sell New Flyers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hyman Lazerus, William Shapero and Julius W. de Uherocz, the last named a titled Austrian with a bent toward invention, have incorporated "the Bayonne Aërial Navigation Company in New Jersey"

Bayonne, N. J., is a suburb of New York City. The company is to manufacture and sell airships. It is capitalized at $100,000, and will begin turning out airships next February, possibly in or near Bayonne, if its plans carry.

According to specifications filed prior to incorporation, the airships are to be propelled by wings measuring twenty-four feet from tip to tip. A four-horse-power gasoline engine will apply the power, and the whole contrivance is to weigh 259 pounds.

De Uherocz is the inventor of the machine.

LEGISLATIVE.

MAY ASK FOR EXTRA SESSION.

BIG FINANCIERS URGE PRESIDENT TO ACT.

Big Industries Assure Chief Executive There Will Be no Opposition to Laws Embodying Federal Control—He Would Amend Sherman Anti-trust Law.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. — It was learned here today from undoubted sources that President Roosevelt is now being urged to call an extra session of Congress to deal with the financial situation.

The request comes from, and represents, the judgment of the conservative leaders in the financial world, who have represented the present situation as one compelling action of a character that will eradicate all ground for suspicion of American industrial methods.

The President has been assured from most reliable sources that there will be no opposition on the part of the industries of the country to the enactment of the necessary laws to carry out his ideas of Federal control to the extent to which he has expounded them in his recent public utterances.

These assurances are made at this time to avert what has been represented as the most dangerous situation which has confronted the country during an extended prosperous period—that is, the seeming growing lack of confidence based on known irregularities in business methods in some quarters, and no sure and speedy means of separating the good from the unsound.

To this end, it is suggested the President set Congress to the task of, first, making such amendments to the financial laws as will result in the maximum flexibility with the minimum of basic change in our system.

Next, and perhaps most in importance, the President will embody his suggestions on corporation control in succinct recommendations for enactment into law.

To meet his views, the President has suggested amendments to the Sherman anti-trust law and the adoption of a nominal clause to that and the interstate commerce regulations.

The benefit of having Federal legal machinery to detect and eradicate unwholesome business methods at this time was said to be the desirable end to be accomplished. This would mean, it is pointed out, a practical wiping off of the slate and starting afresh under business conditions which would have the closest possible scrutiny.

That the President has given the request for an extra session careful consideration is indicated by those who have been asked to lend their attendance to the matter. That information as to existing conditions is not alarming has been the continuing assurance which has come from the government's casual observations.

With this in view the President has been told that the call for an extra session of Congress might have the reverse effect from that desired by those who are urging such action; that it would tend to emphasize in the public mind an apprehension of unfavorable conditions which do not exist.

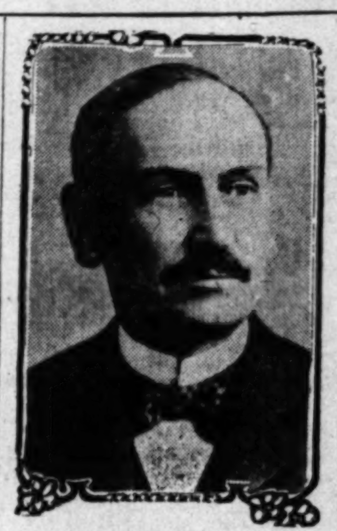
Failing in obtaining an extra session, those who have made the appeal for it have presented an alternative, or an additional request, that the President make a public statement of the assurance he feels in the sound condition of public credit. This, too, has met with a measure of opposition from the administration's advisers. Both suggestions are still matters of consideration, although no information whatever is obtainable regarding either directly from the White House.

FOUR RECEIVERS.

HUNTSVILLE (Ala.) Nov. 2.—Judge Huntley last night appointed Col. T. G. Bush as a fourth receiver in the bankruptcy case of the Southern Steel Company.

Receivers Thompson and Chandler represented to the court that there was a lack of harmony between themselves and Receiver Adler.

It is understood that Col. Bush will be made chairman of the board of receivers and will be able to raise the $110,000 estimated as necessary to operate the plants for the next sixteen days



Theo. E. Burton,
Republican Congressman, who hopes to win Cleveland mayoralty from Tom L. Johnson.

READY FOR THE SHOUTING.

CLEVELAND'S HOT CAMPAIGN ENDS.

BURTON AND JOHNSON BOTH CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS.

Audience of Ten Thousand Listens to Republican Congressman's Final Speech in Which He Predicts the Downfall of the City Hall Machine. Registration Indications.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I want you all to come down to the City Hall next Tuesday night," Mayor Tom L. Johnson told a monster crowd that stood an hour in a drizzle of rain and muddy pools of water tonight while he closed his campaign for a fourth election to the Mayoralty.

"We're going to have a wake there, a double wake; we'll be paying our last respects to the dear departed Congressman Theodore E. Burton and the Cleveland Electric Railway Company."

Johnson's distinguished opponent, scholarly and dignified, put it in a different way:

"On Tuesday, fellow-citizens, the City Hall machine will fall as did ancient Rome. You and I will march to the polls as another army of Alexander and win the great victory for common decency, for the common people, and for the common good. Bunker Hill and the spirit of '76 is to be reenacted."

Each candidate held his last grand rally tonight. All is over now but the shouting and the eleventh-hour campaign lies. Tuesday will see the finish of one of the most remarkable political fights in the history of the country. The two nominees have talked themselves into practical paralysis of the vocal organs, and great crowds have cheered them to further incapacitation.

Congressman Burton closed tonight in Central Armory before an audience of 10,000. He spoke two solid hours, reviewing his and the Republican party's case from the start to finish. He traced the long history of the street-railway fight, chapter by chapter. The big crowd listened patiently through it all, and cried for more.

Johnson brought the curtain down on his campaign with a series of tent meeting in various parts of the city. At the last meeting the wind blew the tent down. That did not feaze Johnson, neither did the rain dampen the ardor of the crowd that was listening to him. The Mayor climbed a packing-box set in the rays of the flickering street lamp and talked on. Johnson, hot, impetuous, a geyser shouting optimism, told his hearers that he would be returned to the Mayor's chair by a majority of 25,000.

"You know my motto—'Always fast, sometimes right,'" he said. "Well, this is one of the times that I am right."

Burton is cool, calculating, conservative, thinks he will be elected by 6000. William F. Boyd, Johnson's opponent two years ago, was defeated by 12,000.

Burton points to the big registration at which nearly 95 per cent. of the city's voting population qualified, as indication of his victory. That big registration came, practically all of it from the strong Republican wards of the city. Burton, who consented to make the race only after 20,000 Clevelanders had so petitioned him, and President Roosevelt had tersely but pointedly written to him "to make the fight," is handicapped by the Cleveland Electric's indorsement of him. His proposition of seven tickets for a quarter, for a year, a commission of experts thereafter to fix a rate "most consistent with good service," to continue for ten years, after which the proposition is to be yearly fixed by the Council, has been O.K.'d by the road.

Johnson celebrated the operation of the first of his 3-cent lines last night. From a line covering a couple of miles on the West Side, Johnson has in the year that has passed extended his 3-cent system over to the East Side and into the heart of some Cleveland Electric's most valuable territory.

"Burton promises these things; I have achieved them," he points out.

FRAU WAGNER ILL.

Widow of Famous Composer Is Compelled to Give Up Management of Bayreuth Operas.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frau Cosima Wagner is now so ill that there is little prospect of her ultimate recovery.

Her friends have decided to relieve her of the great responsibility and fatigue entailed by arranging for and managing the Bayruth operas, and she has consented to be relieved. She has heart disease, and is under the care of Prof. Schweninger, Bismarck's physician.

The operas this year will be managed by Frau Baussebelce of Dresden.

ELECTIONS.

TAYLOR IN LEAD.

Great Rally Closes His Campaign.

Betting Is Two to One on the Present Mayor of San Francisco.

Pinhead McCarthy Thoroughly Discredited in His Own Element.

Ryan Managers Make Fatal Mistake in Attacking Spreckels.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The local municipal campaign closed practically tonight with a great rally for Taylor, and meetings for other candidates. Union-labor leaders will try to make an impression on the public Monday night by a big parade similar to the one on last Labor Day, but it is thought by experts that this will not gain them any votes.

Pinhead McCarthy is so thoroughly discredited in union ranks outside of his coterie in the building trades that he has seriously hurt the labor ticket. Some idea of the way the public regards the contest may be found in the betting, which is 2 to 1 on Taylor. Ten thousand dollars has been offered by one of the leading sporting men at these odds, but there have been no takers. The general impression is that Taylor will get a very large vote, and Ryan will stand second.

TAYLOR'S CAMPAIGN.

The Taylor compaign has been carried on with great judgment, and, if straw votes are any indication, the arguments put forward in his favor have had a good effect. None of his speakers, either Democrats or Good Government men, has indulged in any abuse of the opponents, but they haven't minced words in telling what would be the condition of the city with McCarthy in power, nor have they failed to call attention to the fact that the Southern Pacific and all the old gang of office seekers are behind Ryan.

It looked, during the early part of the week, as though Ryan was gaining strength, but very injudiciously his managers allowed George Knight to speak for him and barred Langdon from speaking on the same platform; the result was that Knight came out flat-footed against the graft prosecution, and roasted Rudolph Spreckels to a turn. This cost Ryan many votes, as many Republicans, while they do not approve of some of the methods of Spreckels, are warmly in favor of continuing the graft prosecution and clearing out all the boodlers.

Ryan himself has made a good impression and his speeches have been well delivered, but he has no strong argument to advance except the fact that he is young and vigorous.

M'CARTHY'S TACTICS.

McCarthy has had a hard time in his campaign; a score of union-labor leaders have come out openly against him and his record as a traitor in several labor negotiations have been exploited. His lieutenants are all job chasers of the worst type, and his main arguments have been appeals to class hatred. His meetings have been well attended, because his roustabouts have hustled and insisted on men being present, but his feelers have failed several times this week to break up Taylor meetings.

McCarthy has lost ground during the week, according to the best experts. The most effective argument against him is that Schmitz chose him for candidate and that Schmitz has managed approximate 55,000.

The total registration is 77,000, and it is estimated that the vote cast will approximate 55,000.

This is the way the five chief candidates sized up their own chances, in statements dictated by them tonight:

CANDIDATES' STATEMENTS.

Mayor Taylor: "I shall be elected by a very large plurality, because I am satisfied that the people of San Francisco are in favor of honest and decent government, a government free of all partisanship, or bias, and which wishes nothing, knows nothing, or cares to know nothing except the welfare of San Francisco and its people. For many years I have been in favor of non-partisanship in municipal affairs, but never till now has the opportunity been presented to the people of San Francisco of having that policy carried into effect. The ticket of which I am the head has on it Democrats, Republicans and Union Labor men, and is in its personnel the best ticket that has been placed before the voters of this city for years. I sincerely trust that every man on the ticket with me will be elected. The city owes its deepest debt of gratitude to William H. Langdon, the present District Attorney, under whose administration the present prosecutions are being carried forward. Had it not been for his conduct as District Attorney, San Francisco today would still be under the rule of Schmitz and Ruef and the rest of the criminals who made her a byword and a mock before the whole world. I therefore am most heartily in favor of Mr. Langdon."

Daniel A. Ryan, Republican nominee for Mayor: "I am satisfied I shall be elected for these reasons: It is generally known that the Republican ticket was nominated by a convention wholly unbossed and absolutely free of corpora-

PROHIBITION.

COUNTRY IS MOVING TOWARD ABSTINENCE.

Over Thirty-three Million Americans Now Live in Prohibition Territory, and Temperance Sentiment Continues to Grow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Predictions are freely made that if the prohibition of the liquor traffic does not become a national political issue within a few short years, it will be because the issue itself will have been eliminated by State legislation, rendering the manufacture and sale of liquor impossible.

The temperance movement is sweeping the country in an irresistible wave, and soon, it is asserted, no whisky will be sold in the United States, except in the larger cities, into which the criminal elements of the country will flock. The trend is toward enforced abstinence, and the makers of liquor are plainly alarmed. The Prohibition party does not poll a large vote, but 33,000,000 Americans live in prohibition territory. That this sentiment is on the increase there is no question. Following is a table, showing the population living in dry territory:

Year	Population	Percentage
1880	7,100,000	14.
1890	11,300,000	18.
1900	18,355,000	25.
1907	33,000,000	40.

MANY DISTRICTS DRY.

The conditions of the prohibition movement in the various States are:

Alabama—Majority of counties dry.

Arkansas—Two-thirds of population live in dry territory; license majority of 52,000 in 1904 has changed to aggregate majority of 16,000 for prohibition in 1906.

California—Four dry counties.

Colorado—Precincts and township option law secured this year.

Connecticut—Town local option; ninety-six no-license to seventy-two license towns.

Delaware—Half a dozen dry towns.

Florida—Thirty-seven dry counties out of forty-five; Gov. Broward out for State prohibition.

Georgia—Prohibition law passed August 5, 1907.

Idaho—License.

Illinois—Probably 600 dry towns; local-option law recently passed; ten dry counties.

Indiana—half of population in dry territory.

Iowa—Sixty-five out of ninety-nine counties dry.

Kansas—Prohibition since 1880. Of the 105 counties in the State only twenty-one have any paupers; thirty-five have their jails absolutely empty, thirty-seven have no criminal cases on their dockets.

Kentucky—Ninety-one out of 119 counties dry. Only four counties license; seven-eighths of the county districts dry.

MAINE'S RECORD.

Maine—Prohibition law enforced in nine-tenths of the State. Maine was in 1855, the year it went dry, one of the most drunken and poorest of States. In 1900 it had more banks and $22,000,000 more money deposited in them than the wide-open State of Ohio, with six times as many people. Without a dollar of revenue from the saloons, Maine has more schools to every 10,000 of her people and more teachers in proportion to her school population than any other of the forty-five States. Maine papers have the largest circulations in proportion to population in the Union.

Massachusetts—Local option by cities and towns, 250 being dry and 100 wet; laws strict and well enforced.

Michigan—County option, with a few dry counties. No chance to vote by smaller units.

THINKS HUSBAND IS DEVIL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A living personal devil has been found in Chicago, according to Mrs. Grace A. Meese. She asserts that the evil spirit in question has his abode in the body of Frank Meese, her husband, and therefore she asks a divorce. "The good man I married twenty years ago is in heaven now, I hope," she testified, "but his body, instead of being dead, has been taken possession of by the devil to work iniquity in the world and my home. I do not care to live with the devil any longer." To strengthen her case she cites biblical references.

HOMESICK, ENDS LIFE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Despondent because of love, Mrs. Josie Smith, aged 29, wife of C. W. Smith, a special agent of the Missouri-Pacific Railway Company, committed suicide at her home here tonight. She stated in a note that she was homesick to return to her parents in New Orleans and was despondent on account of her intense love for her husband whom she said made her jealous.

BRIDE IN MOURNING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TAYLORVILLE (Ill.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Instead of a bridal veil, Miss Christiana Stork of Stoning is in mourning. Her marriage to E. R. Dubbard of Tonkawa, Okla., was to have taken place today at the bride's home in the presence of many invited guests. Dubbard was taken sick with pneumonia a few days ago and died Thursday. His funeral took place today.

ST. LOUIS DELEGATES RIOTOUS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] During a scene that verged on rioting, a motion to suspend Delegates Priesmyer and Warner, under indictments charging bribery, from the House of Delegates, was overwhelmingly voted down. The motion was made by Delegate Dwight F. Davis, millionaire, former national tennis champion and trustee of Harvard University.

HALLOWEEN SHOOTING FATAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SIOUX FALLS (Iowa) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] H. R. Bradford died today of a gunshot wound received at Trent, near here, on Halloween. Henry Hendrickson, a wealthy grain buyer of Trent, is alleged to have fired the shot as the result of enmity between the two men over the liquor question. He will be arrested, it is said.

"TEDDY SHUFFLE."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The "Teddy Shuffle" is the latest substitute for the "Kangaroo walk." It comes, declared one prominent physician today, from society women carrying Teddy bears. They cannot stand up straight with them in their arms, and so they get a sort of walk half-way between a shuffle and a leap.

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BATTLE CREEK (Mich.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The National Purity Congress this afternoon was devoted principally to discussion of the white slave traffic. Rev. Wiley J. Phillips told of an anti-vice campaign in Los Angeles, wihch brought about the conviction of a millionaire, who owned a resort.

BANDIT GOES FREE.

Emmet Dalton, Former Member of Notorious Bandit Gang, Pardoned by Kansas Governor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gov. Hoch today issued a pardon to Emmet Dalton, former member of the Dalton gang. Dalton has been a model prisoner.

In 1892, with his brothers and other companions, he tried to rob two banks at Coffeyville, Kan. He and Bob got $22,000 and started to ride away. In a pitched battle Bob was killed and Emmet was captured. Emmet was then only twenty years old. Emmet was wounded in the arm. The injury never healed, and three months ago he was paroled to go to Kansas City and have the wound treated. He returned a few days ago to serve out his sentence.

His mother, who is 92 years old, and lives in Oklahoma, has been working for years for her son's pardon.

terday, however, by which similar results may be achieved by operating through the New York subtreasury. The arrangement entered into between the San Francisco savings banks and the government provides that such Federal bonds as the local banks have on deposit in New York may be turned in to the subtreasury there. The New York subtreasury wil then wire the San Francisco subtreasury to pay out an equivalent amount in coin. The first of this money will be transferred this morning.

Dispatches from Washington approving this arrangement were received by the local savings banks too late to permit them to take advantage of the offer yesterday.

BRITISH FINANCIERS DISCUSS SITUATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Along what path American markets will emerge from the present situation is a question asked everywhere this week, and no intelligent reply is obtainable.

Looking ahead, financiers see plainly that the trust companies' difficulties must be solved largely through absorption by banking concerns, while those remaining must be subject to new and thorough banking legislation. It is realized, also, that legislation for greater elasticity in American banknote currency is bound to be enacted.

Concerning reports that American banks are making bids to facilitate the movement of gold into their own reserves, it is believed in Lombard street that the premium may be raised considerably before the crisis is definitely over.

NEBRASKA FARMERS STORING THEIR CORN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Disuatch.] Financial troubles in New York, with their later echo in the West, have not alarmed the farmers of Nebraska. For the last decade the farmers have disposed of their crops by contract before they were harvested, but this year conditions are changed.

During the week, word came to Lincoln from all sections of the State that farmers are building bins to store away corn they are soon to harvest. They say they will hold their grain for higher prices, although as high as 48 cents is now being offered.

Some, of course, will sell part of their crop within the next few weeks, while a few have already contracted for the disposal of their grain. These, however, are in the minority. The majority will hold their crop for higher figures, and some expect 75 cents a bushel. They feel assured they will be offered that price before spring.

NEGOTIABLE CHECKS.

SCRIP ISSUED INSTEAD OF CASH.

BANKS PAY OUT CASHIERS' CHECKS FOR MONEY.

Negotiable Paper of Small Denominations Used in St. Louis, Kansas City and Pittsburgh to Tide Over the Stringency in Coin and Currency.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The new scrip issued by the National Bank of Commerce, the Third National Bank and the Mechanics' American National Bank was put in circulation in St. Louis today. The notes are small blue, yellow and green slips, made payable to bearer and are signed by the cashiers of the respective institutions which issued them.

The only difference from the regular cashier's check is that they are made payable to bearer. If you lose one of them it is just the same as losing a bank note for the same amount.

No identification or indorsement is necessary in using the scrip. The reason why only national banks issue them is because they are privileged to do so without paying a 10 per cent. tax. The purpose of the scrip is to relieve the money tightness.

Festus J. Wade, one of the wealthiest men in St. Louis, president of the Mercantile Trust Company, was turned down when he tried to cash a fifty-dollar check at the Planter's Hotel. Charles L. Crane, insurance broker, suffered the same fate a few moments before and Mr. Wade magnanimously offered to vouch for him.

Mr. Wade aproached the clerk at the counter, introduced himself and explained that Mr. Crane was a personal friend. He would guarantee the check good, he said.

"I'm very sorry," replied the custodian of the Planters House funds, "I haven't $50 in the house."

KANSAS CITY TRIES IT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Nov. 2.—Half a dozen banks today began issuing cashier's checks in amounts of $1, $2, $5 and $10, to be used in lieu of currency and payable to bearer. The clearinghouse certificates also are being used.

The question of issuing the cashier's certificates generally was considered this morning at a meeting of the principal bankers but it was decided to leave it to the discretion of the individual banks. The financial conditions here continue to improve, according to the statements of the leading bankers.

PITTSBURGH SCRIP SYSTEM.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PITSBURGH (Pa.) Nov. 2.—The checking or scrip system decided upon here yesterday is in general use today by the members of the Clearinghouse Association.

It is believed that business men and employés will accept the plan in the light that it will insure the steady operation of the great industrial establishments of the Pittsburgh district. An exceptionally heavy rush of business is being accepted here and the money situation threatened serious interruption. The enormous payrolls of about $7,000,000 had to be met and much anxiety was prevalent among bankers.

Under the system begun today employers will pay checks of $5, $10, $15 and $20 denominations, ordinary sums being satisfied with cash. The landlord, grocer, and butcher are expected to accept these checks, the same as currency.

WEEK COMES TO END WITH LITTLE ACTIVITY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The financial week came to a close today without any notable developments. The Stock Exchange was comparatively steady over the day, with little activity. The runs upon banking houses seem to be practically at an end, and few important conferences were held by financiers.

The decline in the reserves of the New York clearinghouse banks was heavier than in any recent experience, but it will be largely offset by the arrival of gold next week.

The apparent loss in the reserve was about $37,000,000, but $7,000,000 of this was due to the requirement of 25 per cent. against an increase in deposits of $28,000,000. This increase in deposits in clearinghouse banks apparently represents the transfer of funds from the institutions which have been subject to the runs. The actual loss in cash is about $30,000,000, which reduced the reserve on hand to be about $25,000,000.

The gold engagements increased slightly today by orders from Pittsburgh and other points, making the total engagement to date $29,150,000. If all of these amounts should go into the reserves of the clearinghouse banks, it would practically restore their supply of cash during the past week. Even the diversion of a part of the amount to other cities will leave the bulk of the gold arrivals for the New York banks, and will probably result in an increase of reserve next week. Part of the decline in cash in the face of heavy deposits of treasury funds has been due to the calls of the country banks for currency. It is believed these have been pretty largely met, and the amount will not be nearly as large during the coming week.

Reports received from various parts of the country indicate that the system of meeting pay rolls by checks instead of in currency is being largely adopted without any essential inconvenience to wage earners.

William A. Nash, president of the Corn Exchange Bank, and member of the Clearinghouse Committee, said in explanation of today's bank statement that the clearinghouse banks have been taking over the loans called by the trust companies and this increased the bank loans. Mr. Nash added:

"The trust companies have increased their deposits in the banks. The total deposits have thus been increased without any addition to the stock of cash and naturally the percentage of reserve has fallen. I do not regard this as significant, because the increase of deposits by the trust companies is not in cash, but in clearinghouse funds.

"The changes in loans, deposits and reserve are so much in the nature of book-keeping that they should not affect the present situation.

"The real matter in the bank statement is the supply of cash. The losses during the week were not greater than I expected. The shipments to the interior and the hoarding of the currency account for the losses reported.

"I believe that from now on there will be an improvement. The gold on the way from Europe will begin to flow in next week, and with it will come a falling off in the excitement about cash."

SCRAMBLE FOR CASH FOR PAY ROLLS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There was a scramble in nearly every bank in town today by business firms to get currency for the Saturday pay roll. Some of the smaller banks had to go to money brokers to get currency. As a result, there was more gold in circulation tonight than perhaps ever before in the history of the city.

GO ABROAD RICH, RETURN HOME POOR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The money stringency has attacked the steamships that ferry millionaires across the Atlantic.

The Cedric arrived today with a lot of rich people on board, but the stewards said the trip was the leanest in pickings they ever had made. The untipped waiters were disgusted.

Some American women, returning from Europe, had hardly enough change left for car fare, and others were "strapped."

HEINZE CHARGED WITH FINANCIAL TRICKERY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charging that F. Augustus Heinze, while a director of the Hamilton Bank, borrowed large sums from that institution and which are still unpaid, Charles H. Tuttle of Davies, Stone & Auerbach, applied to the Supreme Court today for an order directing that a public examination of the affairs of the bank be made.

"Since the suspension," said Mr. Tuttle today, "the officers of the bank have stated that in the three days prior to the suspension 40 per cent. of the deposits were withdrawn. If that is so, it simply proves that the insiders in the bank got out their money and quietly tipped their close friends to do the same.

"If what the officers say is true there was a run, but it came from the inside and was so conducted that none of the outside depositors knew anything about it."

BETTER STATEMENT THAN IN LAST PANIC.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The weekly bank statement which is usually made public every Saturday morning, about 10:30 o'clock, was not given out today until just after the close of the Stock Exchange.

This week's statement shows a deficit in the total reserve of all the banks on all deposits amounting to $38,838,825, an increase over last week's deficit of $37,606,525. The reserve held therefore by all the banks against their deposits is equal to 21.30 per cent., compared with a reserve of 20 per cent. in 1893.

This week's statement, however, is really more favorable than the corresponding statement in 1893, because the 20 per cent. reserve then was only on $373,000,000 deposits, while this week's reserve is against deposits amounting to $1,100,000,000. The deficit in the reserve in 1893 was $16,500,000,000.

LABOR.

LABOR HOSTS FACE A WALL.

British Railroad Men Warned Not to Strike.

Lloyd-George Will Resort to Radical Preventive.

Bell on the Warpath, and Socialists Defeated.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The essentially social character of the railways in the United Kingdom is most forcibly shown at present.

On the one side stands a labor host demanding a recognition of a union. On the other stand the rulers of the railways refusing it recognition. Between the two stands President Lloyd-George, of the Board of Trade, saying on behalf of the whole body of citizens: "You must settle your differences without a strike. The Nation cannot continue its normal life—cannot be sure even of its safety—if the operation of the railways is suspended."

As always indicated in previous cable dispatches, Mr. Lloyd-George will take strong measures if necessary, but how far he will actually go remains to be seen.

If he fails to establish a conciliation board representing both sides, he will endeavor to hold the men back from striking until the government can obtain from Parliament the power to compel arbitration. Should all the expedients now in mind fail to keep the peace between masters and men, what course the government will take to protect society can scarcely be conjectured, but observers generally feel that the situation would drift rapidly to compulsory control of the whole railway system of the country.

When the men meet in Albert Hall tomorrow, the principal speaker will be Richard Bell, who warned the railway managers this afternoon that "a continued refusal of recognition of the union means open war and ultimate socialism."

The Socialists, or at least that portion of them which talks glibly, were overwhelmingly worsted in the municipal elections yesterday. Bell says that if trade unionism may not exist in this country, and if the attitude of the railway managers is to prevail, the workingmen will "reserve their conservatives and anti-Socialist vote and appeal to a more radical political movement for the redress of their alleged wrongs."

MAY COMPROMISE.

While Mr. Lloyd-George has taken a firm stand in his determination and declaration that there must be no strike, he has endeavored not to antagonize either of the two great factions. Withal, it is generally conceded that the Board of Trade president's prospects of averting the strike by arranging a compromise were brighter today.

A full meeting of the Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was held this morning, and it was decided to postpone all action on yesterday's resolutions in favor of a strike until after the conference to take place with Mr. Lloyd-George, November 6, to which he has invited the society to send representatives.

Richard Bell probably will head the delegation. A meeting of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union was to have taken place next Monday, and a joint meeting of this committee with a committee representing the General Federation of Trades Unions and of the labor party had been arranged for next Tuesday, but Bell has written the secretary of the first named organization, suggesting that the meetings be postponed, and adding: "Owing to a change of circumstances, I do not think it will be necessary to call them together at this stage."

A SIGNIFICANT STEP.

This is regarded as a significant step, because the two meetings were to have considered means to support the railway men if they went out on strike.

The circumstances to which Mr. Bell referred to are:

Mr. Lloyd-George's invitation to the conference of November 6.

The plan of the president of the Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade is to form a permanent board of conciliation with an equal number of representatives of the companies and of the men, and having an independent chairman. The railroad directors apparently are willing to adopt the plan, but the question arises whether the men, having demanded complete recognition of their unions and direct dealings between the men and the managers of the roads, will accept such a substitute. It is believed they will have to.

The partisans of the railways brand yesterday's resolution as a bluff, intended to frighten the railway magnates.

The supporters of the union say the atmosphere has cleared for action, and that while it has not actually declared war it has given its executive a "mandate" for war.

Public feeling against the strike is so strong, however, that the men are bound to go slow.

Prescott Fiend Works With Deadly Knife.

One Victim Dying and Is Badly Butchered.

Burglar Robs Hotels, Keeping Blade at Throats.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Robert Lutley lies dying at the Sisters' Hospital from wounds received in a desperate encounter with a burglar at 2 o'clock this morning, and a score of other lodging-house tenants mourn the loss of valuables aggregating $300, as the result of a series of hotel robberies early this morning committed by the boldest and most desperate burglar that ever operated in this city.

Lutley has a gash across his face from his forehead to his chin, which severed his nose from his face, and has a cut across the lower portion of his face from ear to ear; a knife-thrust in the left lung, and an abdomen wound that will likely prove fatal.

Twenty minutes after the robber had been scared from the Schuerman House by his fight with Lutley, he appeared at the Beckmeyer, where, with the same knife which had slashed Lutley to pieces, pressed against the throats of various roomers, he made a systematic search of the lower-floor rooms.

The Globe, Head and Cliff hotels were also visited during the early morning by the same man. His method of work in each case being the same—waking his victims and frightening them into delivering their valuables by means of the knife. The police have made no arrests, and are at sea as to the whereabouts of the burglar.

STOCKTON COMMITTEE FIGHTS FOR SUNDAY CLOSING.

Citizens Will Vote on Question, Following Decision of City Council not to Act Till Residents Have Expressed Wish in Matter—"Anti" Element Resolute.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In May, 1909, the citizens of Stockton will vote on the question of closing saloons on Sunday, the City Council having decided by 6 to 2 that they would not pass an ordinance closing the places where liquor is sold on Sunday without the people giving an expression of their wish.

There has been considerable agitation of the matter, and politics has entered into the fight in an effort to establish the Lincoln-Roosevelt League in Stockton.

The "Committee of Fifty," several members of which have already dropped out of the movement, having been scored at a public meeting by J. H. Collins for the manner in which they conducted themselves in private life, has announced it will continue the fight, and at the next city election do all in its power to enforce Sunday closing.

There is a report that numerous changes will be made in the committee, and the leader of the movement is already out for total prohibition.

Seattle Senator Begins Campaign to Make Commission Houses "Come to Time."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator W. H. Paulhamus, president of the Puyallup and Sumner Fruit Growers' Association, has begun an active campaign looking to the enforcement of the Commission House bill, passed by the last Legislature at his instance.

The bill provides that commission-houses receiving shipments as consigned goods must make returns to the shipper within a certain brief period, and must file a $3000 bond to observe the provision of the law.

Some houses went so far as to pass out of existence as commission houses, and now buy outright all of the produce they sell, and then are not accountable in any way for the prices which they pay for their goods. Others took out the necessary license and filed the necessary bond, and are endeavoring to comply with the new law. Still others are still doing a commission business, but have refused to comply with the law.

TO INVALIDATE FRANCHISE.

Independent Telephone Company Would Start Quo Warranto Proceedings.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—Atty.-Gen. Webb has been asked by the Independent Telephone Company of San Francisco for permission to institute quo warranto proceedings to invalidate the franchise of the Home Telephone Company, on the ground that it was obtained from the bloodling Supervisors through fraud.

Incidentally, the petitioner recites in affidavit form its preparedness to offer the city $750,000 for a legitimate franchise.

The Attorney-General has said that he will render a decision in the matter within a week.

IN FROZEN NORTH.

WHALERS MAY BE IN PERIL.

VESSELS PROBABLY CAUGHT IN NORTHERN WINTER.

Of Seven Craft Which Sailed from San Francisco Year Ago for Arctic Ocean Only Two Manage to Gain the Open Sea Through the Ice and Return to Port.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—Venturing too far to the westward in the Arctic Ocean, in the quest for whales, five vessels of the whaling fleet sailing from this port a year ago and having on board 225 men, may have been caught in the northern winter.

The information was brought to this city by the Jeannette, Capt. Hoffman, the last vessel out of the Arctic Sea. The missing vessels are the Herman, Capt. Tilton; Beluga, Capt. Porter; Belvedere, Capt. Cottle; Thrasher, Capt. Foley, and William Baylies, Capt. Bodfish.

Each carries about [illegible]ty-five men. None of these whalers was seen by the men of the Jeannette. The latter vessel was several times hemmed by the ice, and in one instance the men had to make a path through the solid ice by the use of gunpowder before the open sea was reached.

All of the whalers went further to the northwest this season than usual, the Jeannette plainly sighting Prince Williams land. But one other vessel of the fleet, the Bowhead, managed to gain the open sea after the Jeannette had escaped, and at noon today this whaler was sighted off this port, twenty miles outside the heads.

It was known positively that the missing ships were hunting in the same grounds, far to the westward.

Capt. Cottle of the Belvedere has his wife on board.

WHALER RETURNS LADEN.

MADE VALUABLE CATCHES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—The whaling steamer Jeanette arrived yesterday from the Arctic, with a valuable catch for the owners. In addition to 11,000 pounds of whalebone, the Jeanette brought a lot of valuable furs, including 180 fox skins and 7 bear skins. Among the skins was one of the black fox, a specie that is rapidly disappearing. This particular skin is said to be worth $1000. Five whales were killed during the cruise.

Southern Pacific Control Now Extends from San Francisco to Ogden, While the Union Pacific Management Runs from Omaha West to Ogden.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Oregon Short Line from Ogden to Sparks and Ogden to Green River, Wyo., has been acquired by the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

A telegram to this effect was received this afternoon by the Oregon Short Line officials at Sparks. The telegram confirms a rumor of Friday night and records one of the most important changes in railroad managements since Harriman gained control of the transcontinental line. The Southern Pacific control now extends from San Francisco to Ogden, and the Union Pacific management extends from Omaha west to Ogden. A change in officials corresponding with the change of management is predicted.

It is freely stated in Sparks that many of the men who procured their present positions when the old Southern Pacific management was supplanted will be taken back to the short line.

WOMEN AS USHERS.

Manhattan Operahouse Will Adopt European Plan of Having Feminine Seat Pilots.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—There are to be women ushers in the Manhattan Operahouse this season. Last winter there was considerable trouble with some of the men who were employed in this capacity, and many changes had to be made in the corps of seat pilots before the season was over.

Mr. Hammerstein and his son, Arthur, have studied out the cause and effect of last year's petty troubles, and they have decided that if women ushers, who are employed in many of the large operahouses in Europe, are a success, the plan should work in the Manhattan and will be tried.

Twelve young women, some of whom have been teachers in the public schools, have been engaged, and, beginning Monday night, they will take charge of the seating arrangements of the Manhattan. The women will be in uniform, and easily recognizable, even in a crowded aisle.

CONFESSION.

EVELYN THAW TO BE SPARED.

Will Not Repeat Confession at Second Trial.

Defense Decides Not to Call Her as Witness.

Assistant Prosecutor Secures Evidence Abroad.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Four weeks from Monday will see the opening of the second trial of Harry K. Thaw for the killing of Stanford White on the Madison Square Garden roof a year ago last summer.

This trial, like the first, will abound with sensational incidents of a character different from the features that made the previous trial in many ways the most extraordinary proceeding ever conducted in the local courts.

One surprising feature of the second trial will be that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will not appear as a witness in behalf of her husband. That much was learned today. Lawyers who followed the original trial closely now agree that a mistake was made in placing Evelyn Thaw on the stand and having her tell the story that traveled around the world and excited interest everywhere. Legal sharps are a unit in saying that what she told was all very well in its way, but that the defense would have been in a far better position had the wife of the defendant been eliminated altogether as a witness.

The principal reason advanced for the change of plans on the part of the defense have to do with the trip abroad taken by Assistant Dist.-Atty. Garvan last summer. It is understood that Mr. Garvan has been over nearly every inch of ground traveled by the Thaws in Europe, and is now armed with valuable information regarding their movements there.

Chicago Man's Wife Charged With Pouring Gasoline Over Bed and Setting Fire to It.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an attempt to rid herself of her husband, the police allege, Mrs. Matilda Anderson, No. 107 West Seventy-fifth street, poured gasoline over the bed in which he was sleeping and set fire to it.

The asserted attempt at murder was learned today by Lieut. Crane and Sergt Lyon, who caused the arrest of Mrs. Anderson on a disorderly conduct charge, but now are preparing to file charges of murder or attempted murder.

John Anderson, 44 years old, the injured husband, is a patient in the Washington Park Hospital, suffering from severe burns about the head and face. His condition is said to be precarious. Mrs. Anderson is a prisoner at the Hyde Park Police Station.

TWO LYNCHED.

NEGROES STRUNG UP.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MOBILE (Ala.) Nov. 2.—Abe Sumroll and Hank Lucas, negroes, were lynched early today at Vinegar Bend, Ala, near here.

Sumroll killed Julio Boax, a young Cuban, Monday night last, while he was trying to arrest him for burglary. Lucas's crime was the protection of Sumroll from the officers of the law and from the posse of citizens. The bodies were found hanging to a telegraph pole north of town.

It was at first decided to burn the negroes at the stake, but wiser heads prevailed.

Dist.-Atty. Sims and Detectives Seek to Connect Stenographer With John R. Walsh Case.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While Etaa L. McLean, stenographer, and Alexander B. Gordee, alias F. Weidling, are confined in cells at the County Jail, Dist.-Atty. Sims and secret service operatives continue the investigation of their case, and its connection or disconnection with the case of John R. Walsh.

It is known that the government's officials have in their possession more information than was disclosed at the hearing yesterday, and that efforts are being made to establish evidence against others "higher up."

It was declared today that a Federal grand jury would be called next month and that the case of the young woman stenographer and her lover, Gordee, will be thoroughly investigated by that body.

DENIES HE IS DEAD.

Illinois Man Who Has Been Missing Twenty-five Years Wants His Property Back.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—John Litt of Chicago called on the Kane County Recorder at Geneva yesterday, and declared he is not dead—though he had been declared legally dead ten years before. He had been missing twenty-three years.

"I am much alive," said Litt. "I don't see how the report got out."

"It's a little late to deny it now," the official observed. Maintaining that it was better late than never, Mr. Litt inquired concerning some property that had passed out of his hands when the court declared him dead. Its value exceeds $50,000. He secured some data, and said he would return today for more.

Mr. Litt, who was a resident of Elgin then, disappeared mysteriously in 1883. His wife and kinsfolks searched for him high and low, but without success. Mrs. Litt died in Chicago in 1888, and ten years ago, Litt, having failed to appear, his relatives took measures to have him declared dead legally, and were successful. They then divided the property.

It is Mr. Litt's intention to put in a claim for all his property. He gave no explanation for his long absence.

INDIAN OUTBREAK.

"MUST WORK OR STARVE."

Government Issues Ultimatum to the Utes.

Indians Reveal Little Desire for Labor.

Renegades Must Accept, or Be Left to Fate.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The Indians must work or starve." This is the pith of the government's ultimatum to the renegade Utes, now located on the Cheyenne River Reservation in North Dakota.

As the Indians—among whom there are 200 men and boys capable of bearing arms—seem inclined to reject the "work" theory, troops are being held in readiness to prevent any outbreaks.

The Federal decision is the outcome of the conference at the White House last night, between the President, Secretary Garfield of the Department of the Interior, Assistant Secretary Oliver of the War Department, and Commissioner of Indian Affairs Leupp.

It was decided to continue the policy of the Indian Bureau of furnishing the Indians opportunity to work, and in case of their failure to take advantage of the opportunity to leave them to their own resources.

Mr. Leupp discussed the situation in detail, pointing out that two opportunities had been given to the Indians for employment in railroad grading, both of which had been contemptuously declined by them, and his statement was supported by Indian Inspector McLaughlin and Labor Supervisor Paganee, both of whom were present.

BABY PRINCE HAS A RIVAL.

Infant Olaf of Norway Gives Way to Alfonso.

Future Ruler of Spain Is Popular With All.

Queen Ena and King Proud of Young Hopeful.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fickle public interest has deposed "darling little" Crown Prince Olaf of Norway and enthroned "baby Crown Prince" Alfonso of Spain. Olaf has gone into retreat at Sandringham with his mother, Queen Maud, while Alfonso, Prince of the Asturias, holds undisputed sway in town.

From early morning until evening, vast crowds, largely made up of well-dressed women, hang around the entrances to Kensington palace to catch a glimpse of the King and Queen of Spain, and especially of the baby.

When the baby comes out with his three attendant nurses and three footmen there is tremendous excitement.

The King never fails to hold his baby up to the windows of the carriage, so followers may devoutly gaze on his royal features.

Though fair of complexion, like his mother, the Prince of the Asturias unquestionably has inherited his father's very projecting under lip, the historic feature known as the "Hapsburg lip," the distinguishing mark of the Hapsburg family for a century.

"Queen Ena," as the English affectionately call her, has signally failed to transmit her own beautiful mouth to her first born.

The little Prince, not quite five months old, weighs nineteen pounds, and is the healthiest, plumpest, royal infant seen in Spain for generations. Queen Ena takes a constitutional walk every morning, early, in Kensington gardens, accompanied by her mother. Being a stickler for royal etiquette, even on these informal occasions, the mother walks about a pace behind her daughter.

AMERICAN WOMEN'S CLUB AT BERLIN OPENED.

Ambassador Tower, Consul-General Thackera and Entire Colony Attend Formal Ceremony Which Launches New Organization to Aid Our Girls in Germany.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Practically the entire American colony in Berlin, including Ambassador Tower, Consul-General Thackera and other embassy and consular officials, reinforced by detachments of visiting American residents from Dresden and other cities, this afternoon attended the formal opening of the new American Woman's Club, which has just established handsome quarters in the west end of Berlin.

The opening of the club marks an extension of the club work conducted by American women abroad, these organizations having definite and practical aims apart from social functions.

The club will devote its energy primarily to the task of caring for the young women who come from America to Germany for the purpose of studying music, or taking university courses.

Heretofore these young women, who are frequenty alone, have encountered manifold difficulties and embarrassment in establishing themselves in suitable surroundings and effecting the necessary arrangements enabling them to make the best of their time and money.

The club will endeavor to look after women of this class, who can secure membership by paying $1.25 annual dues.

Students who, through illness and other reasons, disappear from the view of their friends, will be systematically sought out and cared for. Among the prime movers in the work are the wives of Consul-General Thackera, Capt. Howard and Wisser of the American Embassy, and Julius A. Hulmacher of Chicago.

PARIS STIRRED UP OVER ARTIFICIAL JEWELS.

Nantes Experimenter Declares the Diamonds He Manufactures Are Real Ones—Prof. Bordas Also Turns Out Rubies, Sapphires, Etc., by Means of Radium.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There has been a great stir in late in scientific and commercial circles, first with regard to the artificial production of diamonds by M. Charret of Nantes, and next by the experiments of Prof. Bordas communicated to the Academy of Sciences in Paris, showing that, by means of radium, ordinary spar may be transformed into rubies, topazes, sapphires and other gems.

It was thought that the result of these discoveries would be to make all jewels so cheap that great fortunes in jewels today might at any time be reduced to almost nothing. But this alarm was short-lived.

Charret's diamonds have been pronounced by chemists to be naphtha lime. He disputes the arguments on which this conclusion is based, however, and says that with the larger apparatus he is now constructing he will prove clearly in a month or two that he has produced real diamonds.

As to the Bordas gems, jewelers say they only resemble precious stones. Bordas himself regards his transformation of spar into precious stones simply in the light of laboratory experiments and not as a matter of commercial value, as the process is too costly.

In order to transform a piece of spar into a topaz, he subjects it to contact with a tube containing a milligramme of radium for six weeks.

The whole amount of radium in the world is said to be two centigrammes. M. Curie has one centigramme.

Pretty Clementine Resigns Herself to "Single Blessedness," Lives a Lonely Life and Has Pack of Havana Griffons Which Fly Furiously at All Visitors, Including King.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRUSSELS, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Princess Clementine, King Leopold's youngest daughter, seems to have resigned herself to remain a spinster, and has mapped out her life accordingly.

The Princess leads a retired, lonely existence, seeking consolation in the company of animal pets—dogs and parrots more especially.

Her favorite dogs are Havana griffons. She has no less than twenty of them, all comfortably installed in a wing of Lasken Palace, remodeled and fitted up for them and other pets. They are the wildest animals for pets that can be imagined and have torn innumerable trousers off of officers and skirts off of ladies in waiting.

The Princess always has at least two of her griffons with her. As soon as anybody enters Her Highness' drawing-room, the animals fly at the person, barking furiously.

King Leopold, himself, has been frequently greeted in this manner on entering his daughter's salon. But all his protests have remained unheeded.

Not even out of consideration for her royal father's nerves will Princess Clementine restrain the ardor of her beloved griffons.

The wilder they are the better pleased is she.

GIRL EXPLORER IS COURAGEOUS.

MISS MARY HALL MUCH LIKE LADY STANHOPE.

Ventures Into Darkest Africa and Makes Adventurous "Trek" from the Cape to Cairo—Finds King Playing Football and Is Courteously Received.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Mary Hall, whose daring adventures through the African continent have just come from the press, is an English woman of the same type as Lady Stanhope of historic memory.

For a solitary woman to pursue the adventurous calling of an explorer, and to make a daring "trek" from the Cape to Cairo is no small achievement.

She had the necessary guides and bearers, and thus, of course, traveled through thousands of miles of forest, plain, rivers and lakes.

In remote Uganda, she was surprised to find the "boy King" playing football, while many other indications of western influence were in evidence.

As a marked contrast to the thorny paths of the earlier explorers of the past, Miss Hall gratefully acknowledged that from first to last she met with nothing but courtesy from the native chiefs and sultans. In fact, news that the "jungle woman" was approaching was sufficient for the high dignataries of the village to turn out to honor her coming.

STOLYPIN HAS ODD VICTORY.

APPARENT ELECTION TO DOUMA MAY BE OMINOUS.

Russian Statesman Has as Much to Fear from Reactionary Parties as from Members of the Left—Is Not Approved by Monarchists—Czar's Confidence His Strength.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Apparently M. Stolypin has triumphed in the elections to the third Douma, but this may be one of the victories that are worse than defeat.

During the closing days of the second Douma, Stolypin had about as much to fear from the Reactionary organizations as from the members of the Left.

The Monarchists condemned him for going too far, and the Revolutionists for not going far enough. Time alone can tell whether the majority obtained by the Conservatists will not prove as unmanageable as did the Radical faction, formerly.

Although far from willing to go to the lengths contemplated by Count De Witte when that statesman had reason to believe he would be the first Prime Minister of Constitutional Russia, Stolypin is by no means a reactionist He is almost as cordially detested by the men who would abolish the Douma as by those who would cast down the crown. His appeal for a majority representing the middle ground has resulted in one that includes some of the most aggressive champions of a return to the ante-parliamentary era.

Were he not high in the confidence of Nicholas his position might speedily become precarious. With the Czar's weakness remains the "unknown quantity."

Prince Can't Even Get a Lemon Easily.

Cup of Tea Must Be Signed for Repeatedly.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Partly in self-defense (for nowadays no royal purse is bottomless) a most elaborate system has been devised by which it is hoped that the incessant peculation which at one time went on in all palatial establishments can be checked if not wholly prevented.

In many a German palace the ordering by a guest of even as little as a cup of tea means that a leaf in the household order book has to be signed and countersigned before the tea and sugar can be produced, and with reference to the butter and milk, the same process must be gone through with in another book, and so on, ad infinitum.

The story is still told at Potsdam of how a British Prince, married to a daughter of the great house of Hohenzollern, finding it impossible to obtain a lemon for which his wife had a fancy, hurried out himself into the town and bought one from a grocer who lived near the palace gates.

French Tariff Commissioners Ask Government to Wait for Passage of New Law.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The tariff commissioners of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, which are drafting a bill for the revision of the tariff of 1902, at a conference with Premier Clemenceau and other members of the Cabinet, formally requested the government to agree not to conclude further commercial treaties until Parliament acts upon the bill being drafted.

The Cabinet practically gave the promise demanded, provided that the pending Canadian-French treaty be ratified.

This promise is a virtual decision to suspend traffic negotiations with all countries pending a revision of tariff, which is not expected to be accomplished during the present session.

Duke of Abruzzi's Aid-de-camp Says Noble Is Not Engaged to Miss Elkins.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The report that the Duke of Abruzzi is to marry Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Elkins of West Virginia, is unfounded. The Duke's aid-de-camp says that Abruzzi must marry a princess of royal blood, as so-called "morganatic" marriages are against the traditions of the house of Savoy.

The Duke also holds that naval officers should remain single, lest shore appointments be preferred to a life at sea, to the detriment of the navy. It is asserted that he does not intend to marry for many years.

She is one of the most beautiful women in Italy and speaks English fluently. Her mother was a Scotch woman, a Miss MackWorth Praed. She made many visits to the United States to study American methods of preventing cruelty to animals. The Princess founded a society with that object. She takes great interest in this society.

Her maiden name was Gresham. She was a native of Virginia, and was a noted beauty. Time sits lightly on her. She still looks young and retains her perfect figure, which has been reproduced in works of art by St. Gaudens and other sculptors and painters.

Mme. Blouet is now quite Europeanized. She spend most of her time in London and Paris.

TAYLOR IN LEAD.

tion control; the nominations were the free expression of a convention elected by the people; the ticket is composed of the best citizens, representatives of all classes; the people of San Francisco know it is necessary to get away from class fights; it is believed the Democratic and so-called Good Government forces represent the moneyed class, and that the so-called Union Labor party is not truly representative of labor, but of certain politicians and also of corporate interests. The Republican ticket is clear of the prejudices which naturally exist in the two other camps, and it holds out to the people a safe and conservative middle course, as against the radicalism of the other two. It is free from all the bitterness engendered by contending extremes. While it is true that never before in San Francisco was an approaching election so difficult to prejudge, I am willing to venture the following estimates as embodying my best judgment: Of a total vote of 57,000, there will be cast for me, 23,000; for McCarthy, 17,000; for Taylor, 15,000, and for Reguin (Socialist,) 2000."

Patrick H. McCarthy, Union Labor nominee for Mayor: "I believe now that I shall get more votes than will be cast for Taylor and Ryan combined. Of the 55,000 to 57,000 votes to be expected, I feel confident that 30,000 and possibly 35,000 will be for me. My friends, the enemy, can have the others. They are welcome to them. I can afford to stand some knifing within my own party and among the business element. The actual labor vote in San Francisco is, on account of the disturbed conditions caused by the earthquake and fire, difficult to determine, but it may be safely set down as not far from 30,000. I will get the big bulk of it and plenty besides."

LANGDON HOPEFUL.

Dist.-Atty. Langdon: "The District Attorney's campaign for reëlection has been strictly non-partisan, I having been nominated on the Republican, Democratic and Good Government tickets. I feel confident that if the election were held tomorrow I would be elected by an overwhelming majority. Two years ago I received 40,000 votes for the district attorneyship, and I know of no reason now why I should lose a single vote cast for me then. It is true that I have antagonized powerful interests in the community, but, on the other hand, those who stand for decency and honesty and for fair and just administration of the laws have rallied to my support by the thousands. While certain factions in the Republican, Democratic and Good Government parties will not support me, the votes I lose from those quarters will be offset very greatly by the backing I shall get from the ranks of labor. It is evident to me that there will be few straight Union Labor votes cast in this election. My contact with the men of that party convinces me that 50 per cent. of the votes will be for me. I confidently expect that of the 55,000 votes to be cast I shall get at least 40,000."

Frank McGowan, Union Labor nominee for District Attorney: "I'll get practically the solid Union Labor vote. I'll get the votes of many personal friends in the Republican party and of a large number of Democrats who are incensed with Langdon for his defeat of Bell's candidacy for Governor. The votes of the business men will be with me because they charge that the bribery-graft prosecution has been and is being conducted for political purposes, and to the disturbance of business interests. My plurality will be sufficiently large to leave no doubt of the result, and to loose the grasp of Mr. Heney on the Spreckels' millions. I estimate that my plurality will be between 4000 and 7000."

NATIONAL COMMITTEES KEEP OUT OF CONTESTS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The scattering political campaigns of this year practically came to an end today. Next Tuesday is election day.

The national committees of the two parties have not rendered assistance in any of the campaigns, which have been regarded as purely local affairs. Reports received here from the several contests are conflicting. The White House has heard with pleasure that there seems to be some prospect of the Republicans electing their candidate for Governor in Kentucky, but the message the Democrats get from that State is to the effect that while the election will undoubtedly be close they will surely win. The Democrats of Massachusetts having got rid of one of their candidates for Governor, have been making some headway the last ten days, but all the advices from the State indicate the reëlection of Gov. Guild. In both New Jersey and Rhode Island the Democrats seem to think they have a chance to win.

The Maryland campaign has been somewhat bitterly contested, the Republicans of these States believe if they can elect their candidate for Governor this year the State will take a permanent place in the Republican column. Each side is claiming the victory.

The Ohio municipal elections came in for a great deal of attention by reason of the fact that the State has a candidate for President, and because of the Cleveland contest, in which Tom Johnson (Dem.) and Theodore E. Burton (Rep.) are pitted against each other.

In New York City the financial troubles of the last two weeks have made it impossible for the politicians to take any interest in the contest. The campaign would not attract attention except for the fact that the Republicans have fused with the Hearst Independence League. This queer combination has necessitated a great deal of explanation, and the talk here is that, after the election is over, there will be still more explaining to do. New York men say the surface indications are that Tammany will win over the fusion ticket by a large majority, because the Republicans refuse to support the mongrel ticket.

BIG AUTO SHOW IS BEST EVER.

Madison Square Garden Is Motorists' Paradise.

Only American Cars Seen in Splendid Exhibit.

Week's Inning for Licensed Manufacturers.

BY ROY BRADLEY WHEELER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Better, more inclusive and handsomer in every respect than ever before, the eighth national automobile show opened tonight in Madison Square Garden to a crowd, which in spite of the wet weather, filled the entire building. The scheme of decoration, gray, crimson and gold, has been carried out carefully throughout the entire building, though with less elaboration than formerly. At the entrance is a large iron gateway and beyond that wall paintings, stucco work and balustrades give the effect of an Italian terraced garden, which is heightened by a wall fresco of an Italian village at the end of the building opposite the entrance.

For the first time American cars only are shown in the exhibit, and this, taken together with the high quality and mechanical excellencies of the machines exhibited, has induced a general feeling that this show marks the emancipation of the American industry from foreign influence.

The show is an exhibition by the association of licensed automobile manufacturers. No other makers show cars. Thirty-four firms are exhibiting gasoline pleasure vehicles, eleven shown are electric pleasure vehicles and there is one steam car, the White. In addition there is in the basement a most complete exhibition of commercial cars, and also of motorcycles, a feature never before seen in such completeness at a national automobile show.

His team is, moreover, strong in straight football, and comprises three of the best backs in America.

RAILROAD GETS ORDERS.

Indiana Commission in Drastic Terms Instructs Walsh Road to Supply Cars to Coal Mines.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most remarkable orders ever issued by a State Railroad Commission is that just sent by the Indiana commission to the Southern Indiana Railroad, owned by John R. Walsh.

The order especially declares how that railroad shall distribute cars to the coal mining dependent upon it for transportation, leaving nothing to the discretion of the managers of the road.

The order is the result of an investigation made by the commission of charges by the Oadora Coal Company that the Southern Indiana Railroad company was grossly discriminating against it in favor of the coal mines owned wholly or in part by John R. Walsh, in supplying cars.

Commencing immediately, the commission directs that the distribution of cars by the Southern Indiana road shall be based on the average daily capacity, or on the daily requirement, of each mine.

This is the first time any State commission has made so drastic an order against a railroad company and the precedent will be far-reaching.

SEVERE SHOCKS RECORDED.

SHIDE (Island of Wight) Nov. 2.—A number of small, but severe earthquakes were recorded at the observatory here yesterday, which are thought to have been more intense near the point of origin. The times of the principal shocks were 6:12, 7:35, 9:12 and 11:48 o'clock a.m., and 2:05, 2:45 and 3:25 o'clock p.m. These shocks represent broken upstrata in some distant country, probably Turkestan.

Pe-ru-na as a November Remedy.

The month of November, in temperate regions especially, requires of the human body a very radical adjustment to climatic conditions. The hot weather has passed, and cold weather has taken its place. That the CIRCULATION OF BLOOD IN THE SKIN SHOULD BE FREE and active is a matter of common knowledge. And in order that the body may be protected against the lowering temperature a vigorous circulation of blood in the skin must be maintained.

It is not so generally known, however, that the inside of the body also needs protection. THE MUCOUS MEMBRANES OF THE BODY, that line every passage and cavity and duct, also suffer from the change from hot to cold weather.

A medicinal compound that gently tones up these mucous membranes, enabling them to ADJUST TO WINTER WEATHER, is not only valuable to a great multitude of people, but to another multitude is absolutely essential to health.

Whether Peruna is a medicinal compound that meets these requirements can be judged by a hasty glance at some of its principal ingredients.

Take, for instance, hydrastis canadensis, which is an ingredient of Peruna. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is employed as a cure for DEPRAVED MUCOUS MEMBRANES, not only of the nose and head, but also of the stomach and intestines, as well as other internal organs. Hydrastis canadensis ordinarily known as golden seal, is thus very clearly classed by the highest authorities as a valuable remedy wherever the mucous membranes of the body are in need of a little medicinal help.

Cedron is also one of the principal ingredients of Peruna. It is recognized by the United States Dispensatory and all leading works on materia medica, as a TONIC OF THE GREATEST VALUE. It is also an anti periodic and anti malarial remedy, and is therefore frequently used as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE. It is a remedy of great merit, somewhat overlooked by the medical profession of late, but its undoubted tonic qualities are sure to reinstate this remedy in its original high-class rank as a safe and efficient tonic and appetizer.

Another ingredient of Peruna which is of manifest benefit is cubebs. Bartholow, in his excellent work on therapeutics, states that cubebs PROMOTES THE APPETITE, ASSISTS DIGESTION, and increases the circulation of the blood. He also goes on to recommend it for catarrh not only of the head and pharynx, but also of the stomach, as well as the other internal organs.

LAST, BUT NOT LEAST, IS COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS. This remedy, for many years has enjoyed a great reputation in southern states as a panacea for many diseases such as dropsy, indigestion, cramp, sick headache, and the like. Dr. Scudder, a writer of great fame, also recommends this herbal remedy for chronic diseases of the lungs and heart.

These are some of the principal ingredients of Peruna compounded into a single remedy by skillful and experienced pharmacists. The compound has been so devised that each remedy retains its full therapeutic value, one assisting the other in their beneficial action upon the human system. MAKING OF PERUNA A VERY EFFICIENT AND VALUABLE REMEDY.

People who pass through the month of November safely and find themselves acclimated to winter weather, generally pass through the remainder of the cold season without any serious difficulty. But NOVEMBER IS A CRITICAL MONTH. The adjustment of a large multitude of people fails to meet the exigencies of approaching winter.

No safer or more appropriate remedy than Peruna could be found. Taken according to the directions on the bottle, not only would catarrhal ailments be warded off but catarrh already acquired be corrected. It is with the assurance of knowing that we are right that we present to the public Peruna as an IDEAL TONIC AND CATARRH REMEDY.

The truth of the above statements is absolutely unassailable, and the knowledge concerning Peruna which they convey places this remedy beyond all cavil as a great family medicine. If any further evidence is needed we stand ready to furnish it through the MULTITUDE OF SINCERE AND UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS of the people, from Canada to Mexico, from Cape Town to Cairo, from Puerto Rico to the Philippines.

RAILROAD RECORD.

LUMBERMEN IN RATE TRAP.

Victory in Federal Courts Worse Than Defeat.

Action of Northern Pacific Comes as Shock.

Mill Products Cannot Get to the Markets.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The order issued by division superintendent of the Northern Pacific to local agents and operating men that no cars should be delivered to shippers of lumber and shingles until further notice, means that for the time being at least the Northern Pacific will refuse to handle forest products to eastern markets.

Railroad men in legal and traffic departments of all lines reaching this territory state emphatically that the victory won by the lumber interests in Judge Hanford's court will be barren of results and even worse. They say that a restricted car supply will be made even less by the practical working out of the decision.

HOIST BY OWN PETARD.

They unite in saying that the lumber and shingle men have blundered to their own serious detriment, inasmuch as the working out of the injunction will result in routing lumber and shingles between Minneapolis and Chicago and the East over one road, when heretofore it has been distributed between eight.

The Burlington, the railroad men say, will be forced to accept this enormous traffic, and will speedily become so congested that not a wheel will move. The other railroads between Minnesota Transfer and Chicago and the East will not get the traffic, because to send it over those lines the lumber and shingles shippers would be waiving all claims to rebate below the new tariffs, or in other words, the difference of 5 cents per hundred between the new and the old schedules.

WORK FORMERLY DIVIDED.

"These roads have heretofore divided the work of carrying Washington forest products between Minnesota Transfer and Chicago and other points East," said a traffic official, and he named the following: The Burlington, the Wisconsin Central, the Chicago and Great Western, the Northwestern, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, the Rock Island.

"None of these roads," he continued, "are parties affected by the injunction of Judge Hanford. These lines, you must remember, have joined with the northern lines in the new lumber tariffs which are in effect today. They can and probably will refuse to deliver cars of lumber and shingles shipped from Washington to points east of Minnesota Transfer except on payment of full schedules."

Last year this State shipped East [illegible] carloads of forest products. Shipments have decreased this year because of car shortage, though the demand has been heavier. The high rates named by the Hill and Harriman roads, but enjoined by the Federal courts, amount to an increase of $3 per 1000 feet, an increase of $150,000,000 on 50,000,000,000 feet of stumpage owned by the Weyerhauser Timber Company alone.

EXTENDS CONTROL.

Harriman Purchases Block of Stock of the Central Georgia Road.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—According to the Times today, E. H. Harriman was the buyer of the Central of Georgia stock sold last week by Oakleigh Thorne and Marsden J. Perry, and he has plans for the road in connection with the Illinois Central lines.

The two roads connect at Birmingham, and the possession of the Central of Georgia will give the Harriman system another outlet to the Atlantic.

A close associate of Mr. Harriman, when questioned regarding the purchase of the Central of Georgia by that capitalist, remarked that Mr. Harriman had not been idly watching recent events.

The Times says further that in the last annual report of the Illinois Central, November 1 was fixed as the date on which its lines to Birmingham were to be completed and that with that date comes the news that Mr. Harriman's influence in southern territory is to be extended eastward to Savannah, and westward via Chattanooga, Birmingham and Montgomery.

It is known that Messrs. Thorne and Perry paid about $3,600,000 for the $5,000,000 of Central of Georgia stock, which they bought last summer at the Richmond terminal reorganization, and it is presumed in financial district, the Times says, that the Harriman interests took over the road at not far from the same figures.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LA CROSSE (Wis.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The preventing of railroad wrecks and Federal supervision of railroads operating in the United States are the aim of Representative Esch of La Crosse.

He announces that he will go before Congress next December, prepared to introduce two bills of importance. One provides for the compulsory installing of the block-signal system on all roads doing an interstate business, and the other is a measure making it one of the duties of the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate all railroad wrecks and locate the weakness in railroad operation, so that a remedy may be provided.

He says he has been assured the sanction of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners, and says the President is favorably inclined.

DECIDES TO RETRENCH.

New Haven Railroad Lays Off Three Thousand Men in Construction Department.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The New Haven Railroad is the latest railway corporation to decide upon a policy of retrenchment in its improvement work. It was announced today that, owing to the stringency in the money market, construction work will be slowed down, and the road has laid off 3000 men in that department.

At a meeting last Wednesday the stockholders voted to issue 431,219 shares of new stock. The sale of this issue will net $43,121,900.

The proceeds of this stock sale will nearly all go into new equipment, which the company needs very badly and must have during the coming year.

THREE ROADS SUED.

SAFETY APPLIANCE AFFAIR.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SALT LAKE (Utah) Nov. 2.—The government brought suit in the Federal Court here today, through Dist.-Atty. Booth, against three railroads, for failure to obey the safety appliance law bearing on railroad rolling stock. There are three counts against the Salt Lake road, and one each against the Oregon Short Line, and the Southern Pacific.

DIPHTHERIA EPIDEMIC.

Malignant Form of Disease Raging Among Inmates of Illinois Insane Asylum.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANKAKEE (Ill.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Official announcement by the authorities of the Illinois Eastern Hospital for the Insane of the malignant diphtheria epidemic raging in three of its main buildings caused grave apprehension.

Although the asylum authorities declare they believe they have the disease under control, it is feared that more cases will follow in the big institution, which quarters 2400 insane patients.

There are seventeen cases of diphtheria among the inmates and the three main buildings are quarantined. The first death was that of a nurse.

Several persons sustained cuts and bruises and a property loss of $25,000 resulted early yesterday when the magazine of the Petroleum Torpedo Company, sixteen miles from Butler, Pa., exploded.

WASHINGTON.

CONSERVATISM NOW PREVAILS.

National Officials Will Not Complicate Situation.

This Tendency Expected to Last Through Winter.

Financial Legislation to Be Well Considered.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While friends of the administration insist that President Roosevelt will not permit himself to be frightened into any reversal of policies by reason of the financial flurries, there are signs here of conservative tendencies.

There are symptoms that the administration is not deaf to the talk that is being freely heard under the surface among members of Congress that it is a time to go slow.

There is no longer talk anywhere in Washington about smashing trusts and of sending corporation heads to jail. The Interstate Commerce Commission is creating as little stir as possible, and it may be said on the best authority that the commission will refrain from any general reductions of rates. It is even holding back the monthly reports of railroads and not letting them be made public.

Atty.-Gen. Bonaparte is going about in a mild and pacific fashion, expending any excess of energy he may have by lambasting the Democrats of Maryland.

Altogether, the trend of things is to do nothing to disturb conditions. Many believe that this tendency will last through the winter, and that the President will find himself forced to fall in with the programme of Speaker Cannon and the House leaders, to do as little legislation as possible in new and untried fields pertaining to railroads and corporations.

The administration is understood to be anxious that any financial legislation be extremely well considered and that nothing be done at the outset of the session.

KINDNESS REWARDED.

Man Who Aided Beggar Nine Years Ago Receives Thousand-Dollar Bill in Letter.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—On Christmas evening, 1898, John McNulty, a man in moderate circumstances, while returning to his home, aided a beggar who stopped him on the street and applied for alms.

The man insisted on getting his benefactor's name and address, saying that some day, perhaps, he might be able to show his appreciation.

McNulty thought no more of the matter until last night, when, upon returning from his work, he opened a letter which had come for him and found enclosed a thousand dollar bill and a brief letter which read:

"Dear Sir: Enclosed you will find $1000 in payment for your kindness and your merry Christmas given to me nine years ago, when I was broke and wanted a meal. I have traveled considerably in many places since that night, but I have always remembered your kindness. Take this and use it. Believe me, yours, P. E."

McNulty has no idea of the identity of the grateful man. The letter was mailed from the financial district in this city.

Put Sartoin into a pint of hot water (not boiling) and when dissolved and cooled add the Rose Water and Spirits of Cologne; then strain through a fine cloth. Any large bottle or a fruit jar will serve as a receptacle, providing it can be closed air-tight.

This mixture should be applied daily and massaged well into the skin and will soon produce the ruddy glow of youth so desirable, but the treatment should be continued until the rosy tint of the skin is permanent.

APPRECIATION.

REAL FREEDOM CITY'S ASSETS.

Secretary Emery Impressed by Los Angeles.

Pays a Tribute to Dominant Force of Principle.

Why Investors Are Attracted to This City.

Deeply impressed as he was yesterday by the beauties of Los Angeles and its suburbs, Secretary James A. Emery of the Citizen's National Industrial Association, who is a guest at the Alexandria, was still more forcibly impressed by the prosperous and generally busy conditions prevailing in the "Metropolis of the Great Southwest."

These conditions in Los Angeles, he believes, are due more than anything else to the industrial freedom which is so stoutly upheld by its citizens generally, including the vast majority of the city's wage-payers and wage-receivers. Speaking of the contributing forces to this splendid industrial situation Mr. Emery pays his tribute of respect to The Times, to its conductor, Gen. Otis, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and the public spirit of its citizens.

With all of its natural advantages Mr. Emery asserts that the most valuable asset that Los Angeles possesses is that industrial freedom which is a protection alike to the investor in industrial enterprises and to the independent American workingman. Speaking of these things last evening at the Alexandria, Mr. Emery said.

"There is no paper so well known to the great manufacturers of the country as is the Los Angeles Times, and there is no editorial personality held in higher regard than is that of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis. His signal success illustrates to the whole newspaper world the merited reward of right principles united to unusual journalistic ability; and it is the confident belief that while he lives and his great paper occupies the commanding position which it does, the chief city of the Southwest will be safeguarded against industrial disturbance, a fact that in no small degree causes eastern investors to have perfect confidence in the future of this remarkable city.

"While the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association continues to pursue the policy of industrial firmness and fairness which has characterized its activities, and is backed by the powerful influence of The Times in preserving industrial freedom for the Southwest, the industrial future of this section is secure.

"Individuals possess no asset more valuable than a reputation for honesty and ability. Cities, like men, have distinctive characters to attract or repel investments. Industrial peace is indispensable to the development of communities that capital may have secure and profitable investment and that labor may have permanent and remunerative employment.

"The only conditions assuring the widest opportunity for the development of individual capacity, of direction on the part of supervising leadership and rewarded skill upon the part of intelligent operatives is found under the principles which The Times has so ably vindicated and which the great commercial organization of this city has sustained with equal determination and foresight.

"The most valuable asset which Los Angeles possesses today is the widely recognized fact that the vast majority of its wage-payers and wage-receivers are united in the recognition of common economic and moral principles, and are protected in their enterprises by a splendidly developed public opinion which, over and above its natural advantages, makes the city of Los Angeles one of the most attractive points in America for investments of an industrial character."

Mr. Emery will leave early this morning for the North, spending one day in Santa Barbara before proceeding to San Francisco, where it is extremely probable that he will make his presence felt under the circumstances of the industrial battle which is the great problem—more than any other—there today.

RICH, DIES PENNILESS.

Fortune Awaited Man Who Deserted Family and Died Common Laborer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LA CROSSE (Wis.) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Twelve years after he had deserted his family here in destitute circumstances, August Grupp, machinist, died penniless, and was buried at Allegheny, Pa., while a fortune of $250,000 was awaiting him in Germany.

Recently a lawyer of Donsdorf, Germany, Grupp's birthplace, located the family in La Crosse, and told of the large legacy.

It now develops that Grupp went almost directly to Allegheny from La Crosse, and for eleven years had been employed there as a machinist. In his last days he was taken in by the father of Dr. George Metzger, an Allegheny phyician, who came from Germany, and upon Grupp's death the elder Metzger paid for his burial to save the body of his friend from medical students.

The police here succeeded in locating the widow of Grupp, with the result that the woman and her children, who are now grown, will come into possession of the German legacy.

AERONAUTICS.

TRIAL AIRSHIP TO BE BUILT

GOVERNMENT IMPRESSED BY THE ZEACHY TYPE.

Air Racer Which Won First and Second Prizes at St. Louis International Contest to Be Patterned at Cost of $10,000—May Be First of a Fleet.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arrangements were made today between the government and Charles J. Strobel of Toledo, O., owner of the Zeachy type of airship, by which Strobel will proceed to construct, at a cost of $10,000, a trial ship larger than Zeachy's, capable of carrying two people and with a sailing radius of fifty miles.

If the hopes of the War Department are justified, this will be the first of a fleet of such vessels.

It has been determined to ask Congress for $20,000, an appropriation with which to develop the fleet and make extensive experiments in the adaption of aërial navigation for the purpose of signaling ,and other military uses.

The ships made such excellent record in the St. Louis races, winning first and second prizes in their class, that the department has been convinced of their superiority to anything developed.

FAVORS WATERWAYS.

President Ramsdell of National Rivers and Harbors Association Issues Statement.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LAKE PROVIDENCE (La.) Nov. 2.—Congressman Ramsdell, president of the National Rivers and Harbors Association, which meets in Washington next month, today gave out the following statement:

"Friends of waterways are earnestly urged to coöperate until this great policy is safely inaugurated and the water systems of the United States are placed on a parity with those of Holland, Belgium, France and Germany.

"The coming convention will impress upon Congress the necessity of the broad, liberal policy of waterway improvement and making provision for the execution thereof on a comprehensive plan, so that all our waters on seaboard, lake and interior which are really worthy may be properly improved within the next ten years on the continuous contract methods. If this is done it will result in greatly diminishing the freight congestion and cheapening freight rates."

STORK WORKS OVERTIME.

Forty-two Births Occur in New Jersey Town of Three Hundred Families.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ROEBLING (N. J.) Nov. 2.—President Roosevelt has granted this place a postoffice on account of the wonderful activity of the stork hereabouts.

A delegation of citizens called at the White House and told him that there had been births in nine-tenths of three hundred families since the place was established as a manufacturing center two years ago. Before the delegation got back home, Mr. Roosevelt had abolished rural free delivery in Roebling by appointing A. L. Major postmaster.

Forty-two births in the last week brings the town to the front as the champion stork community of New Jersey.

TO NULLIFY WIRELESS.

Austrian Electrician Claims to Have Invented Apparatus That Will "Jumble" Messages.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An Austrian electrician is attempting to obtain financial support here from the American colony for an invention which he says will nullify wireless messages in war time.

The inventor declares his apparatus will make unintelligible all messages sent within a radius of 700 miles. The mechanism is quite simple, consisting merely of a revolving tower with ten or more batteries, which send flashes varying in strength.

With this at work, it is stated, operators will not be able to distinguish one message from another.

"HANDS UP."

COOL ROBBER GETS BUTCHER'S WEALTH.

A NERVY hold-up man walked into the butcher shop of Edgar B. Fay, at Pico street and Vermont avenue, last night at 8:30 o'clock and, at the point of a pistol, forced the proprietor to hand over $200 from the cash register. The robber then coolly pocketed the money and decamped.

So quickly was the whole affair accomplished that Fay hardly realized what had happened. Before he recovered his composure sufficiently to give the alarm the intruder had made good his escape. A careful search of the neighborhood failed to disclose any trace of the robber.

The hold-up man drove to the door of the butcher shop in a light buggy drawn by a bay horse. He hitched the rig in front of the shop and, walking in, shoved a revolver into Fay's face. With a quiet order to "open the cash register" he forced the surprised butcher to hand over the money and then, turning on his heel, walked quickly from the shop, unhitched the rig and, jumping in,, drove hurriedly away.

Fay had considerable money on hand, as he had made his monthly collections and had not had time to bank the coin. The highwayman evidently was conversant with the state of affairs as he went about the job in a cool way and did not seem in the least excited, though one of the clerks was also in the shop at the time.

The hold-up man is described by Fay as being slightly below medium height, light in weight and of dark complexion. He was dressed in a dark suit, and wore a mask. His coat collar was turned up and his hat pulled down over his eyes so the presence of the mask was hardly noticeable.

At the time of the robbery many people were passing on the street and but a moment before a street car had passed. Less than a quarter of a block away was a group of people, but they did not realize what was going on until the astonished butcher gave the alarm.

At 8:20 o'clock, just ten minutes before the robbery, the policeman on the beat passed in front of the butcher shop. At that time all was quiet and the officer continued on his rounds. The intruder evidently waited until he had passed well out of sight before making his entry. The officer believes that the man had been observing him and knew just about where he would be on his beat at 8:30 o'clock.

An hour before the robbery G. M. Decker of Highland Park reported to the police that his horse and buggy had been stolen from in front of the Hotel Locke at Hill and Second streets. The description of the rig given by Decker corresponds to that of the one driven by the man who held up the butcher. Decker and his wife were visiting friends at the hotel and when they returned to the street their rig was missing. The snap of the hitching strap had been unfastened from the bridle ring and the strap left hanging to the post.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

A Most Dangerous Disease, Which Causes Serious Results, Unless Properly Treated.

Catarrh of the Stomach is very common and is known as one of the most obstinate diseases, which, when neglected or improperly treated with cheap patent medicines, tonics, drugs, pills, and other secret quack remedies results in a broken down constitution and often consumption and death.

Catarrh of the Stomach, like every other disease of the stomach, except cancer, is the result of poor digestion. The digestive organs have become weak, there is a lack of gastric juice your food is only half digested, and as a result you become effected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, heartburn, vomiting, waterbrash, tenderness at pit of stomach, slimy tongue, bad taste in the mouth, constipation, pain in limbs and face, sleeplessness, nausea, belching of gas, diarrhoea, sick headaches, dizziness, mental depression, nervous weakness, and many other common symptoms.

If your stomach cannot digest the food you eat, then the stomach needs a rest, as that is the only way you can get rid of your catarrh, but in the meantime your body needs plenty of nourishment, because you must live and in order to live you must eat, and if you must eat, your food must be properly digested, and if your stomach is too weak to do the work, then you must get a substitute that will do the work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the only known substitute that will digest your food as well as any healthy stomach. They contains vegetable and fruit essences, aseptic pepsin (gov. test), golden seal and diastase, the very elements necessary to digest all foods.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a secret remedy and for that very reason thousands of physicians all over the United States recommend them to their patients for catarrh of the stomach, dyspepsia of all kinds, and other stomach troubles. Experiments and tests have proven that one grain of the active principle contained in these tablets will digest 3000 grains of food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges, and are sold in large 50-cent boxes at all drug stores.

Send us your name and address and we will send you a free sample package. The relief you will get from this trial package alone will convince you of the merits of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Woman Became Rich In A Year

By Her Own Efforts Amasses a Fortune

Indiana is the home of a woman who until a few months ago lived in a small frame cottage, but who now resides in her own palatial brownstone residence, purchased from the profits of her business earned in less than a year.

Until a few years ago Mrs. Miller's lot in life was not unlike that of the average American woman residing in a small town. She had her family to care for, including three small children. Today the business, which was first conducted from her cottage, requires almost all of the principal office building of the town, and a hundred clerks and stenographers are required in conducting the details.

And this great success is the outgrowth of energy and merit and not wealth, for Mrs. Miller was a poor woman only a few years ago. Her opportunity came shortly after her marriage when she found a simple home remedy for women which restored her health and strength. This remedy was so good in the treatment of all cases of female weakness and piles that she was called upon to furnish it to her friends. The demand grew. Persons living at a distance heard of the wonderful vegetable treatment and requests by mail for the remedy increased so rapidly that she was compelled to take quarters in an office building down town. The fame of the remedy has spread rapidly, and now it is doubtful if there is a county in all this country where grateful and cured users of the treatment do not reside. She has sent her remedy, free of charge, to more than a million women. Such a great demand and such universal reputation must surely be the result of many cures. In fact, the treatment seldom fails to affect a quick and permanent cure.

This year Mrs. Miller has planned to give away to women who have not yet used her remedy, 50,000 boxes of her regular 50-cent size of treatment. All she asks is that every woman suffering from female weakness or piles, write her at once, giving full name and address, and she will immediately mail a 50-cent box of the remedy; also her book with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer and how they can easily cure themselves at home without the aid of a physician. If you suffer in any manner from these afflictions, send at once. Address Mrs. Cora B. Miller, box 8964, Kokomo, Indiana.

Twin Sisters, Hale and Hearty at 73

Mrs. Emma Shively and Mrs. Belle Beatty, twin sisters, who are now 73 years of age, enjoy health and strength, and seldom have an ache or pain, thanks to the God-given medicine Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky

Mrs. Emma Shively resides at Big Clifty, Ky., and Mrs. Belle Beatty at Louisville, Ky. The illustration is taken from late photographs and shows how bright and vigorous they both are.

MRS. EMMA SHIVELY AND MRS. BELLE BEATTY, TWIN SISTERS, 73 YEARS OLD.

"I am in my 73rd year and preserve my health and keep my strength up by using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Have been using it for several years. As a tonic for old age I consider it without an equal."—MRS EMMA SHIVELY, Big Clifty, Ky., Feb. 28th, 1907.

"Before I began the use of your Duffy's Malt Whiskey last May I was so run down and nervous I could not walk a square; after taking several bottles I became strong and felt better than I did for years, so I have been using it ever since, and I now seldom ever have an ache or a pain. I am 73 years old."—MRS. BELLE BEATTY, 1731 15th st., Louisville, Ky.

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances renders it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions. It is dangerous to fill your system with drugs. They poison the body and depress the heart, while Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is recognized as a medicine everywhere. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has been analyzed and tested by chemists for the past fifty years, and has always been found absolutely pure and to contain great medicinal properties.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It is the one absolutely pure medicinal whiskey and is sold only in sealed bottles—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00. Illustrated medical booklet and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Los Angeles County—Its Cities and Towns.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

FOR WETNESS.

VOTE IN FAVOR OF DRY TRACT.

ACTION IS TAKEN BY NORTH PASADENA CITIZENS.

Question of Prospective Transportation Service for That Part of Town Is Discussed and Importance of Water Service for It Is Pointed Out—Schoolhouse Location.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Nov. 2.—On the North Side last night the citizens assembled in their regular meeting, and the stockholders in the North Pasadena Land and Water Company voted, as an expression of sentiment, that it would be wise to take in the "dry tract." The voters based their sentiments on the proposition that it would be well to proceed as if the city did not intend to purchase the water plants. Should the city fail to carry the propositions now proposed by the Mayor and the last vote of the people, there would be a section of country easily furnished with water which would remain dry.

For this reason, the sentiment of the people at last night's meeting was to go ahead and vote water for the "dry tract" from the supply of the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, and then meet the city on the new basis. The shareholders in the North Pasadena Land and Water Company argue that they can get $75 per share from the sale of the 250 shares of water stock now in the treasury of the company, and that the company may as well profit by this sale as to let it go.

As heretofore reported, the shareholders have postponed the vote on the watering of the "dry tract" until November 28. On that date they will assemble and make known their wishes. As a matter of fact, it would be easier for the people living in the "dry tract" to get their water from the city than from the North Pasadena Land and Water Company. The city proposes to charge a fixed price that would be 40 per cent. less than the company price. This whole water question is one of the travesties on municipal ownership. In other words, the people do not know what they want, nor how to get it. Mayor Earley and the progressive crowd with him want to try municipal ownership on sane lines. They have swept the history of twenty and twenty-five years ago off the map.

Mayor Earley wants to do something now while the iron is hot for municipal ownership, but it may be said that the chances are that he will fail to make good, because he cannot meet the arguments of every little interest that wants to make good and gather profit from the wave of public opinion. The case on the North Side is a contradiction of the whole argument advanced by the would-be patriots of the city. They cannot persuade the North Side company to surrender one penny's worth of value, but, while failing in this, they will go around and talk about robbing the city by a programme begun twenty years ago, when this town faced its first responsibilities as a city, and began to make arrangements to accommodate a larger population.

Last night Councilman Root and J. Edward Kent addressed the meeting of the North Side people on the school question. Councilman Root told the meeting plainly that there was no hope for a car line into the northern part of Pasadena unless the territory was watered. Mr. Knight told the people that when Lamanda Park wanted an electric line the railroad management called upon them to show that the whole tract to be served was watered. After these represetnations the members present voted to take in the dry tract, and as only a few residents of the North Side are not holders of stock in the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, the vote was practically unanimous.

Another interesting feature of the meeting was the discussion concerning the location of a schoolhouse. The city owns a site just outside the city limits known as Bonita Vista, near Las Casitas and Atlanta streets. William Esterbrook offers the southwest corner of Dakota and Lincoln avenues. The decision on the question was postponed. As a matter of fact one site would be as favorable as another to the majority of the citizens. It might be advantageous to the tract at large to choose the Esterbrook site as the city would still have its location for a second school when the territory is more densely populated.

TOURISTS ARE COMING.

From the register of the Maryland Hotel and the reservations already made it shown that the tourist season is already on. The dawn of each season is different from others, and in this case it comes up like Kipling's sunrise, as "thunder from China across the way." Among those registered at the Maryland Hotel are Miss Mary T. Potter and Miss Eva R. Shafter from Farmington Ct., and Mrs. Grow and Miss Muriel Weber. Miss Weber is a noted beauty and her father is the inventor of the Weber rail joint that takes off half the inconvenience of travel. Among those who are expected are Mrs. Forbes Morgan and family of Tivolio on the Hudson; James A. Penny of New York, who is accompanied by Mrs. Penny and little daughter. Col. and Mrs. A. H. Sellers of Chicago will be at the Maryland until they move into their new home in Pasadena.

Another party is composed of Mrs. John Emerson and Master Charles Emerson, Mrs. Charles Stone, Franz Stone and F. S. Fowler of Columbus, O. Mrs. Willis C. Ward of Orchard Lake, Mich., Mrs. T. E. Penny, children and servants are among the expected guests and R. R. Blackers of Manifee, Mich., is also on his way. Mr. Blackers will make the Maryland his home until his cottage is built on Oak Knoll, and this little cot will be a place to invite a king.

ALAS, THROOP LOSES.

All the boys who struggled so gallantly against the Harvard School while they were representing Throop are quietly taking defeat in the only way gentlemen do—they got licked by a score of 10 to 6, and what are you going to do about it? The boys did their best, and the lucky and strong team won. Harvard got her score on a touchdown and a goal. Throop lost the game from inexperience. One of their men, it matters not to publish his name, was doing down the field with the ball. He had a chance, but some one yelled, "Off side," he stopped to locate himself, then he was tackled, and that, and therein is the whole story of Throop's loss. Next time the cry will be "Keep a going," and the penalty for going two yards off side is no greater than for twenty. The boys will push the ball through before the season is over. When they know that the cry of wolf or off side is raised by an enemy, they will just butt into the unknown and bring victory out of chaos, as it appears to the boy with the ball who has a goal in his eye.

HE GOES TO WRONG PARTY

Officer of the Whittier State School Has Embarrassing Revelation.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Nov. 2.—Maj. Cole of the Whittier State School is the unwilling hero of a story which is going the rounds today. His convulsed friends are telling how the genial major "got into the wrong pew" last evening when, masked and perspiring, he came uptown to attend a Halloween frolic. It all happened because the major didn't know that two Halloween parties were to be given on North Washington avenue last night, the first at No. 203, by Mrs. C. W. Redman, and the second, to which the major was invited, at No. 321, by Mmes. Frederick Turner and William Learmont. Mislead by the Jack o' Lanterns and the arriving masked guests, he entered the Redman home, taking his part serenely in all the fun, but pondering somewhat at the success with which his friends kept their identity a secret. Not till the masks were removed and the astonished military man looked in vain for his hostess' familiar face, did the truth dawn upon him, and he made a hurried exit. Later he found his way to No. 323, where with vague excuses and much embarrassment he evaded the questionings of his friends as to his lateness. During the rest of the evening he was suspiciously quiet, and today he has spent most of his time explaining "just how it happened to happen."

Over 90 per cent. of the stock was represented. The entire board of eleven directors was reëlected by acclamation. Amendments to bylaws enabling the exchange to hold stock in the proposed box-manufacturing corporation were adopted without opposition. PUT HALL ON SHORE.

Citizens' Advisory Board About to so Recommend for Hermosa—City Building.

HERMOSA, Nov. 2.—The citizens' advisory board has practically decided to recommend to the City Trustees that the proposed combined City Hall and auditorium be located on the shore line. This recommendation will be made to the Trustees at their first meeting. The ground upon which the building is to be placed will be donated by Mr. Burbank and the $50,000 required in the erection of the building is to be raised by bonds that will be voted soon. The Hermosa Improvement Association is called to meet Monday evening. This organization will also discuss the auditorium project and is expected to make recommendations similar to those of the general committee. The paving of Hermosa avenue will also be discussed and the Trustees will be asked to take action.

FOR SANITATION.

REDONDO SEEKS DRAINAGE PLAN.

MONEY FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL AVAILABLE THERE.

Question as to Whether There Shall Be a Direct Outfall to the Ocean or a Septic Tank Much Discussed in the Seashore Town—Suggestion of Engineer.

REDONDO, Nov. 2.—The Board of City Trustees, the consulting engineer and the people at large here are very much interested in the manner of the disposal of the sewage. The city has $80,000 available for the building of a sewer. Former City Engineer Henderson sent in a report and suggested that the board adopt plans either for an outfall or septic tank. The present engineer has done the same thing and the matter is before the board to decide.

The board finds itself in a quandary. If it adopts the outfall system then the waste will flow into the ocean, if a septic tank, land east of the city must be purchased. The people have also taken the matter up and are divided in their opinions. What the outcome will be is a hard question to determine, the diversity of opinion among all the citizens and the Trustees making it a very difficult problem. Many think that the board should decide at once so that work will commence immediately and the citizens get results as soon as possible.

REDONDO BRIEFS.

No vandalism of consequence occurred here Thursday night. This was due no doubt, to the precautions taken by the city marshal and his deputies.

Neptune Lodge, No. 65, K. of P., gave a masquerade at the pavilion, Halloween night, which was largely attended. The big hall was tastefully decorated with Jack o' lanterns, which grinned grotesquely from all corners and in the subdued light gave a very witchy effect. The grand march began promptly at 8:30 o'clock and the costumes were attractive and varied. Ghosts, witches, lucifers, lunatics, yellow kids and others all trod the light fantastic till midnight. It was a success, both financially and socially.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Welton of Catalina avenue entertained Thursday evening with a Halloween party. The decorations were handsome and suggestive of the occasion. Covers were laid for thirty and the place cards were handsomely decorated, all reminders of Halloween.

Mrs. H. Snook has been spending a few days at Glendale visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy of Long Beach were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Venable Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. M. Stuart of Avalon is a guest of her daughter and son-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. R. Havenh.

COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT.

Treat Given Veterans of the Soldiers' Home by Two Musicians of Los Angeles.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Nov. 2.—Prof. Maximilian Dix, a violinist, together with Miss White of Los Angeles, accompanist on the piano, gave a complimentary concert to the veterans in Memorial Hall Thursday evening, which was one of the most enjoyable of the season. While the work of Prof. Dix was of a high order, the accompaniment of Miss White claimed a goodly share of attention. So closely did she follow every modulation of the professor that both instruments at times seemed blended into one. Miss White also contributed, vocally, several old-time ballads that particularly "caught on" with the veterans.

Gen. and Mrs. Adna R. Chaffee, Col. Webb Hayes (son of late ex-President Hayes;) Maj. and Mrs. E. F. C. Klokke and Mrs. Cornelius Cole and daughter, Mrs. Emma Cole Brown, visited Gen. and Mrs. O. H. LaGrange Friday, and, after luncheon enjoyed a drive around the home grounds.

Miss Viola Lame of the nurse corps has just returned from leave, and Miss Ella Johnson left today on thirty days' absence, which she will enjoy in a visit with friends at Santa Barbara. Miss M. J. Davis, former night superintendent of Santa Monica Hospital, is appointed nurse here, vice Miss Perkins, promoted.

Friends of "Dick" Devine, a popular nurse of six years' service, will be glad to learn that he is recovering from a two weeks' attack of la grippe and threatened pneumonia.

Emelio Zazzali, late Co. B, Fourteenth New York Volunteer Infantry (Spanish-American War,) admitted to this branch in May last, was granted a transfer a few days ago to Battle Mountain Sanitarium, at Hot Springs, S. D., a recently opened addition to the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. Zazzali left for that place on October 29. On Thursday notice was received at headquarters here that he had died, while en route, at Albuquerque, N. M., on October 30. His mother, residing at Cranford, N. J., has been notified. Zazzali was a native of Peru, South America, and was aged 31 years.

Notice is just received here of the death of Miss Elizabeth T. Beatty, who for seven years filled the office of chief nurse in the Home hospital. Early in the summer Miss Beatty obtained leave of absence, and later, owing to illness, tendered her resignation. She died at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Sepulveda, at Alameda, on October 24. Miss Beatty was highly esteemed by her associate nurses and by the medical staff and officers of this branch.

Master Vernon Bettin of Los Angeles, "the boy soprano," will add to the attractiveness of the semi-monthly concert by the Home Orchestra next Thursday evening.

There were twenty-six deaths here in October. This exceeds any previous month's mortality record here.

RECENT DEATHS.

LONG TIMBERS PASS.

Sticks of Great Length Go Through Long Beach on the Way to Chicago.

LONG BEACH, Nov. 2.—Passing through Long Beach on a Salt Lake freight today were some of the longest timbers ever brought from the north. They came from the Puget Sound country on the schooner Winslow, now being discharged at the Salt Lake wharf. They are destined for a Chicago firm and came here to be shipped because the rate until the first of the month was lower. In some of the timbers there are nearly 5000 feet of lumber. They are so long that three flat cars are required to carry them.

LONG BEACH NOTES.

Assistant City Attorney Lawson today prepared papers asking for a change of venue from Wilmington township of the cases of Officers Roy Taylor and Lon Auburn, arrested by the San Pedro police for alleged battery. Affidavits have been prepared alleging that because of hate and prejudice against Long Beach, the defendants cannot have a fair trial.

The first carload of machinery for the Craig ship plant arrived today and is in the Salt Lake yards at Los Angeles. Its contents are two large shears and a hoisting apparatus. Eight more carloads are on the way.

CHARCOAL STOPS GAS ON YOUR STOMACH

Wonderful Absorbing Power of Charcoal When Taken in the Form of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

TRIAL PACKAGE SENT FREE.

Charcoal, pure, simple charcoal, absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas. Where does the gas go to? It is just absorbed by the charcoal—the gas disappears and there is left a pure, fresh, sweet atmosphere, free from all impurities and germs.

That's what happens in your stomach when you take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful purifiers science has yet discovered.

You belch gas in company, sometimes, by accident, greatly to your own humiliation. That is because there is a great amount of gas being formed in your stomach by fermenting food. Your stomach is not digesting your food properly. Gas is inevitable. Whenever this happens, just take one or two of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges right after eating, and you will be surprised how quickly they will act. No more belchings; no more sour risings. Eat all you want and what you want, and then if there is any gas going to be formed, one of these wonderful little absorbers, a Stuart Charcoal Lozenge, will take care of all the gas.

And it will do more than that. Every particle of impurity in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away by the charcoal. No one seems to know why it does this, but it does, and does it wonderfully. You notice the difference in your appetite, general good feeling, and in the purity of your blood, right away.

You'll have no more bad taste in your mouth or bad breath, either from drinking, eating or smoking. Other people will notice your bad breath quicker than you will yourself. Make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, so when you talk to others you won't disgust them. Just one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath sweet, and make you feel better all over for it. You can eat all the onions and odorous foods you want, and no one can tell the difference.

Besides, charcoal is the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison or impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing,—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

CATARRH

When a known contagious disease makes it appearance in a community, it is wise to promptly enforce the strictest sanitary regulations, and, by confining it to one place, the doctor is able to check it and quickly stamp it out, but when Catarrh makes it appearance in a family the family physician may ignorantly or maliciously advise that it is not a serious matter—"a slight cold," and the like, and there is no danger of complications or infection, and consequently the people are misled into allowing a little thing to grow and, being off their guard, we soon have thousands of infected people, and the disease runs on unchecked until the whole system is a mass of corruption and poison. Thus, like a tiny hole in a dam, the germ starts, little and insignificant at first, but gradually growing and gaining in volume until it bursts upon the startled victim like a torrent, and the mischief is done. Beware of little things and the big things will take care of themselves. If you have catarrh—no matter how slightly—GET CURED NOW—DON'T ALLOW IT TO RUN ON AND RUIN YOUR HEALTH—IT DON'T TAKE LONG FOR COMPLICATIONS TO ARISE.

GLENDORA WOMAN SAVES SELF, CHILD AND HOME.

Throws Burning Gasoline Stove Outdoors, Then Casts Herself Into Tub of Water—Although Horribly Burned, Doctor Thinks She Will Recover.

GLENDORA, Nov. 2.—A gasoline explosion in a house a short distance south of town nearly caused the death of Mrs. E. A. Spencer this morning. As Mrs. Spencer was refilling the tank of the stove, a lingering flame at the burner ignited the gasoline and the inevitable explosion resulted. Almost crazed by the fear of burning her home and the baby near her, she caught up the stove and rushed out doors with the flames enveloping her. Then dashing the stove away from her she plunged into a tub of water nearby and extinguished the flames. Meanwhile her screams had awakened her brother, Mr. Southwick, who was sleeping in the house, who came to her aid and summoned Dr. Ellis of Azusa. Her baby is horribly blistered, and most of the hair is burned from her head, but the doctor believes she can recover.

Engineer Slemons of the Pacific Electric Railway was in Glendora this afternoon and stated that the rails are laid within four miles of Glendora, and inasmuch as they can be laid at the rate of a mile a day, promises to be in the city limits one week from today. Mr. Slemons says that the first passenger cars to Los Angeles will start from Glendora, and that they will positively be running on or before December 1, into Los Angeles.

GLENDORA NOTES.

SAN DIMAS.

SAN DIMAS, Nov. 2.—The eighth annual meeting of the stockholders of the San Dimas Lemon Association was held today, L. C. Meredith presiding. There was an unusually large attendance, there being over 120 lemon growers present. The year just closed has been the most successful since the organiaztion of the association. The report of F. H. Tarwood, the secretary and general manager, showed that 325 carloads of lemons had been shipped this past year, and these have netted the growers $3.11½ per hundred pounds, thus making this the record-breaking year for lemons here.

The following directors were elected: L. C. Meredith, president; L. S. Taylor, D. Durkee, C. B. Sumner, C. C. Warren, E. O. Kennard and A. P. Kerckhoff.

After lunch an address was delivered by P. J. Dreher, manager of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange, followed by a discussion.

THIEF TAKES CLOTHES.

Enters Sleeping Room of Ocean Park Building and Walks Away With Goods.

OCEAN PARK, Nov. 2.—A sneak thief yesterday evening entered the sleeping-room of Milton Vale, in the Maier & Zobelein building on Pier avenue, and stole new clothing to the value of about $75. A skeleton key was used in unlocking the door and, as no one was seen to come from the building, the officers are working on a cold trail, with scant hope of apprehending the thief.

The origin of the fire that destroyed the mission furniture factory last night is not known yet, and probably will forever remain a mystery. That it started in the shavings bins is certain. The blaze was under such headway when discovered that the firemen at no time entertained any hope of saving the structure. The best they could do was to turn their attention to preventing the spread of the flames to the plant of the Edison gas works. This factory, although only little more than a hundred feet from the planing mill, was unharmed. It has not yet been decided whether the factory will be rebuilt, although it may be, as the institution had succeeded in a short time in developing an attractive line of business.

City Engineer W. C. Steele has decided to retire from public life, and when the City Trustees meet next Monday evening will tender his resignation.

REGRET FOR WILSON.

Family of Captain of the Wrecked Schooner Is Living in San Pedro.

SAN PEDRO, Nov. 2.—The information received this morning that the schooner Willie R. Hume had been wrecked on Protection Point, Straits of Juan de Fuca, yesterday morning, while bound in ballast from San Francisco to Everett, was received here with great regret.

Capt. C. M. Wilson, master of the ill-fated vessel, is well known here, and is considered one of the best navigators on the Coast. His wife and daughter reside on Thirteenth street, in this city, and are anxiously awaiting news concerning the safety of Capt. Wilson and his crew. The Hume was a vessel of 665 tons gross, 183 feet long, 39 feet breadth, carried a crew of ten men, and was built in 1890 at North Bend, Or.

The past week has been a busy one at this port, nearly 11,000,000 feet of lumber and 3000 tons of freight and merchandise having been received. An unusually large number of carriers are now on the way and loading, for this port, and business during November promises to break all previous records.

Abdo, the Turk, and Young Peter Jackson, of pugilistic fame, have engaged training quarters here. Tomorrow at the Point Firmin diamond, the San Pedro Merchants will line up against the Hoegee baseball team of Los Angeles.

VENICE.

VENICE, Nov. 2.—Five obsolete cannons reached Venice today, and will at once be mounted at convenient places along the ocean front, thus giving an added attraction to the beach. The guns are from the Mare Island navy yards, and range in size from a 12-inch muzzle-loader down to Spanish four-pounders of the breech-loading pattern.

A water basketball game is to be held at the plunge at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning between the Venice team and a picked team from Los Angeles.

UPLAND BONDS GO ABOVE PAR.

ISSUE IS DISPOSED OF AT A PREMIUM.

Purchaser Says He Considers Them Gilt-Edge Investment—Many School Children Found to Be Suffering from Some Physical Defect—Volunteer Fire Company.

UPLAND, Nov. 2.—The entire issue of $30,000 in school bonds voted a few months ago by the city of Upland to provide money for the purchase of a site and the erection of a suitable school building to meet the growing needs of the city, has been subscribed by E. D. Roberts of San Bernardino. The bonds commanded a premium of $300, which is considered particularly good, considering the tight money market. Mr. Roberts is quoted as saying he considers the bonds a gilt-edge investment. The issue covers a period of twenty-four years.

PUPILS' DEFECTS.

Prof. George L. Leslie, who has a position as instructor in special educational lines in the city of Los Angeles, lectured to a small audience at the Methodist Church here, a few days ago. The following day he met a number of the parents of pupils who, for some cause or other, did not seem to be progressing in school as their playmates were. Mr. Leslie takes the ground that in a very large number of such cases the fault is to be found in some physical ailment of the child. It is said that in the cases he examined here almost 90 per cent. of the youngsters were found thus handicapped.

UPLAND BRIEFS.

Will Clatworthy has sold his ten-acre orange ranch on Fifteenth street, to W. P. Baker, recently from Wisconsin, the consideration being $8000. Mr. Clatworthy has departed for a visit with his relatives in England.

The annual convention of the San Bernardino County Sunday-school Association is to be held at Colton, November 4 and 5. A number of our people plan to attend.

For several weeks up to November 1, there was not an available box for rent in the Upland postoffice. Postmaster Hayden has now received a section of the needed boxes, and already nearly all are reserved, with the probability that another lot soon will be needed. The business at the local postoffice has had a rapid growth, in keeping with all other lines of the city's business institutions. It is estimated that over twenty-five families have arrived in Upland in the past month.

The boys who constitute the new volunteer hose company for Upland were out for their first night's practice last night, and show a creditable knowledge of their work for beginners. H. N. Sholl, as foreman, has had some experience with a paid department, and this fact tends to help the lads in their practice work. For the first time in her history, Upland now feels that she could in some measure cope with a blaze.

A number of complaints are heard over the city of some night prowlers, especially about homes where it was probably known that no men folk happened to be present. A short time ago, at the Temple ranch on Monte Vista avenue, some one was heard about the house trying to effect an entrance. Only a few days before the Temples had sold the ranch for a large sum of money, and it may be that this fact had possibly led some foolish person or persons to conclude that there was a big haul to be made. They did not secure entrance, but did succeed in badly frightening Mrs. Temple, who was at home at the time. Marshal Sawyer is keeping a sharp lookout for the culprits.

Owing to the past few days having been declared legal holidays, the trial of Mrs. Della Bergon accused of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, has been postponed.

RICH DOCTOR WEDS WIDOW.

SAN BERNARDINO HAS ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.

Invalid Physician Hastens Ceremony in Order That His Bride May Inherit His Wealth in Case of Death. Steps Are Being Taken to Organize a Humane Society.

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 2.—Dr. John McMahon, a wealthy physician of San José, and Mrs. Daisy Dowdoll Lewis, a pretty widow of Terre Haute, were married this morning by Justice of the Peace C. L. Thomas, but they plan still another ceremony, Dr. McMahon explaining to a reporter that his civil marriage today was only so that in case he did not recover from an attack of blood-poisoning which is now making him an invalid, his wife might have no difficulty in securing a share of his estate.

This confession was not made without protest from the bride. "We don't want to discuss this marriage with reporters," was Mrs. McMahon's appeal, when asked for some information regarding the nuptials which had just been performed. "We have nothing to say for publication, so please forget what has taken place, won't you?" and the pretty bride cast an appealing look at the reporter.

Then it was that Dr. McMahon explained the situation.

"Don't, don't tell that," exclaimed the bride, frantically; "he'll have it all in the papers," and with a winning smile, both promised that after the religious ceremony had been performed the reporter would be first remembered with all the story back of the wedding.

Dr. McMahon and his bride are now sojourning at San Jacinto, where he is taking the baths. He is somewhat crippled as a result of his ailment, but expects to return to San José himself again.

Justice Thomas had hardly completed tying a marriage knot for a Los Angeles couple, when Dr. McMahon and Mrs. Lewis entered the courtroom. The Los Angeles couple was just as anxious to keep the news of their nuptials from getting into the papers. They gave their names as George Clyde Gilbert, aged 29, and Jeanette McCoy, aged 18, both residents of Los Angeles. They were accompanied by the groom's mother.

STILL MISSING.

John O. Hendricks, who disappeared while returning from Daggett to his rich mining locations in the Death Valley region a month ago, is still among the missing, and the searching parties who have been out since three days after he dropped from sight, have concluded that he has either perished on the desert or was murdered and his body concealed beneath the sands. Hendricks had been to Daggett, showing very rich ore specimens. He refused to say where he had found them, and when he left for the claims he was shadowed by a man known as a hanger-on at low joints. Three days later friends of Hendricks reported his disappearance to the late Deputy Sheriff Smithson, who at once organized a large posse, and scoured the desert for days, but found no trace of the missing man. The officers also made an effort to locate the tout who was supposed to have shadowed Hendricks, but no trace of him, either, could be obtained. It is believed now that the tout shadowed Hendricks to his rich ledge and murdered him, burying the body.

MURDER CHARGE AGAINST THREE IN SAN DIEGO.

Laborer, Lately from Lower California, Dies of Wounds Received in Fight—One of the Trio Accused Is a Pugilist—Chamber of Commerce Extends Invitation for Warships.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 2.—After a fight at the Dewey saloon on Third street in this city early this morning Eduardo Coto died from wounds received in the brawl.

The Coroner's jury laid the blame for his death to Edward ("Kid") Webster, a pugilist of Los Angeles, Louis Luscher of that city and James J. Kelley, a waiter of San Diego. All three are held in jail on Coroner's warrants, based on a charge of murder.

One of the three prisoners says there was an argument in the saloon, in the course of which Coto threatened them with a knife, but no weapon was found on or near the dead man.

Coto was a laborer. He came from Lower California not long ago.

INVITES ADMIRALS.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce have sent invitations to Rear-Admirals J. H. Dayton, commander of the cruiser squadron, now at Santa Barbara; W. T. Swinburne, commanding the Pacific Coast squadron, at Magdalena Bay, and Uriel Sebree, commanding the Pathfinder squadron at Rio Janeiro, South America, to bring the vessels of the respective fleets here at their convenience. An invitation has also been sent to Rear-Admiral Evans, asking that a call be made here with the warships en route from the Atlantic to San Francisco. The good offices of the chamber have also been tendered to Rear-Admiral Goodrich, in his plans for the dedication of the Bennington memorial monument at Point Loma.

The local officers of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies have announced the reopening of the offices on full time. During the strike the work has been done by the managers.

COUNTY'S PRODUCTION.

The county statistician figures that the orange crop of the county will be 295 cars, or 107,380 boxes, valued at $214,750, and the lemons, 1205 cars, or 375,960 boxes, valued at $214,750, making the total value of lemons and oranges $1,060,670. Last year the production of oranges was 204 cars, and of lemons 800 cars, showing an increase of 91 cars of oranges and 405 cars of lemons. The butter output is valued at $170,000, being estimated at 520 pounds; eggs, 1,400,000 dozen, valued at $420,000; honey, 1,050,000 pounds, valued at $66,000; stock and beef cattle, 32,000 head, valued at $1,100,000; raisins, 65 cars, valued at $130,000.

SANTA ANA, Nov. 2.—An Orange county club of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League of Republican Clubs was formed here last night with a membership of thirty. Dr. C. D. Ball was elected permanent chairman, and Fred Mansur, secretary. The statement of principles made by the State league was accepted and the constitution and bylaws presented to the different clubs by the State league were adopted, with the exception that the club refused to accept the clause that required all amendments to the constitution and bylaws to be submitted to the State Executive Committee for approval. Lee C. Gates and Russ Avery of Los Angeles, and Dr. Ball delivered addresses in which they flayed the Southern Pacific for its grasp on State politics.

SANTA ANA BRIEFS.

Robert Paine, a rancher on the Santiago Creek, has complained to the City Council that gravel haulers in the city gravel pit in the creek bed have been taking gravel from a part of the bed that will cause any freshet's current to be directed against his land and render it liable to be cut away. The Council members made an investigation of the complaint this morning, and will act upon it at the meeting Monday night.

Letters of administration were asked today by Mrs. Rena Wagner upon the estate of her deceased husband, George L. Wagner, who was killed by a falling pipe in a well pit near Anaheim on October 11. The estate is valued at $30,000.

GENERAL MUSTER ON DECK TODAY.

CRUISERS WILL COUNT NOSES THIS MORNING.

Crews on Uncle Sam's Vessels in Santa Barbara Channel to Have Their Numbers Taken—Jackie Baseball Club Gets Drubbed by Local Nine.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tomorrow morning an order for a general muster will go into effect on board the four big armored cruisers under Admiral Dayton in the channel off this city. It is a regular order, occurring on the first Sunday of each month, and is a relic of the old navy of the nation. It is designed to systematically "count noses."

No one will be allowed to visit the ships during the muster, which will consume about an hour, and which will be under the direction of the captain of each ship, the inspection occurring simultaneously on all four cruisers.

Today was a quiet one for the fleet and the complement. The baseball nines of all four ships were ashore practicing, and the West Virginia's team, in a game with the Santa Barbara nine of the Winter League, was defeated by a score of 3 to 0.

The plans for next week are being kept closely, but it is likely there will be maneuvers on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It was learned this evening that the fleet probably will not leave here until after November 15. Its destination will be Mare Island.

The "ghost will walk" for the jackies on Tuesday, when nearly $100,000 will be paid to the 3100 men in the four ships.

Lieut. H. V. Butler of the flagship West Virginia was showered with congratulations today over his appointment as aide to Admiral Dewey and his being ordered to service in Washington. Lieutenant-Commander Spencer who moves up to the command of one of the scout cruisers, and whose promotion made the vacancy filled by Butler's appointment, will command either the Custer, Salem or Birmingham.

LEAVES IN A HUFF.

Because the local Chamber of Commerce refused to vacate the seats of four delinquent directors of the quota of fifteen, Dr. George A. White, a dentist of this city, president of the Pull Together Club, and one of the leading and hardest-working directors of the Chamber of Commerce, tendered his resignation last night and left the meeting in a huff.

After shooting sarcasm into the members to a considerable extent, Dr. White moved that all directors who have been absent from two or more consecutive meetings be notified that their seats have been vacated, according to the by-laws of the organiaztion. Opposition immediately presented itself, and after some discussion Dr. White resigned.

CHANNEL CITY ITEMS.

Chief Yeoman H. O. Emmons of the flagship West Virginia is to be the principal speaker tomorrow evening at the old operahouse at a big union meeting of the church organizations. Mr. Emmons, who spoke last Sunday evening at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, here, delighted a large audience. His topic tomorrow evening will be "Does It Pay?"

OFFICER MAKES DESERT CAPTURE.

VENTURA CITY MARSHAL FINDS MUCH-WANTED MAN.

Recognizes an Employee in Borax Mines as Forger Who Had Operated in His Own Town—Fellow Admits His Identity—Schiappapietra Land Case to Come Up Soon.

VENTURA, Nov. 2.—Marshal Russell has just returned from a visit to his borax holdings in the Frazer Mountain section. He made a haul while there, for, working in the mine next his own, he captured a forger wanted here for his misdoings. The fellow is named Charles Holmes, but in the mines went by the name of Kuhn. He succeeded in passing checks while here upon Joseph Roth and L. Cerf. From here he went to Bakersfield, and thence proceeded to get off the railroad and main lines of travel by going into the borax mines and changing his name. The Marshal had a pretty good description of the man, and on the day he left came across Holmes and placed him under arrest. Holmes, when confronted by the officer, admitted that he is the man wanted. He is an ex-convict, having been sent up from Leavenworth, Kan., for robbery. The Marshal brought him to town over the rough trails in ten hours.

NOTED LAND CASE.

The celebrated Schiappapietra land deal case will shortly be on again in the Superior Court here. The deal was for the big Rancho El Rio Del Norte, this county, involving some 6300 acres of land and over $1,000,000. The rancho was sold several years ago to Dugald Scott, the Cotton King, of Manchester, Eng., and a syndicate composed of other Englishmen. A big payment was made on the deal, then Scott conceived the idea that all was not right, and brought suit against Leopolda Schiappapietra, E. L. Temple, George C. Power, E. P. Foster and W. S. Newhall, alleging fraud. There was a demurrer to the complaint, which was upheld by the lower court. The Supreme Court, however, reversed this decision, and the case was sent back for trial. Defendants have made answer in a voluminous document of sixty-three pages, denying each and every allegation. J. H. Chapman and J. H. Shanklin are attorneys for plaintiffs.

VENTURA SHORT ITEMS.

"SPOOK" GETS AWAY.

Officers Injured by Maddened Spiritualists Whose Seance Is Raided, but "Spirit" Escapes.

Angered spiritualists injured two detectives and a deputy sheriff, when a squad of officers raided the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Baxter at No. 1369 East Twenty-second street last night. Detective McNamara was bitten upon the left hand, Detective Murray sustained a cut on the side of the face and a deputy sheriff was overpowered by three men and two women.

Mr. and Mrs. Baxter were arrested, however, and only the spirit escaped. The police have a warrant for the arrest of the escaped "spook" and expect to apprehend him before Monday.

For some weeks no steps have been taken by the police against spiritualists. Through information received yesterday, the officers secured warrants for the arrest of the trio, who hold seances at the Twenty-second street house.

Just as the "spirit" made its appearance and began to blow trumpets, the officers turned flash lights upon them. There was a wild scramble and the "spirit" suddenly demonstrated its reality by kicking and fighting and finally escaping by leaping through the window carrying away the sash.

STOLEN SMOKES.

One White and Three Black Boys of Tender Years Found Stupefied in Room.

Lying on the floor of a room in a Japanese lodging-house at No. 700 South San Pedro street, Detective McKenzie found three negro boys and a white lad last night about 7 o'clock. The boys had smoked many cigars and the nicotine had thrown them into a stupor. The youngsters ranged in years from 8 to 11.

In investigating a case in which a negro lad was accused of stealing a box of cigars, the detective traced the youths to the Japanese rooming-house. After some difficulty the officer induced the proprietor to direct him to the room in which the boys were closeted. He recovered the cigars and took the boys to Central Station.

They said they were Gerald Lester, white, No. 1440 Logan street; Albert Moore, No. 1519 Santa Fé avenue; David Pollock, No. 1571 Marboro street, and eGorge Barber of No. 1153 Irola street, the last three being black. The negroes said they had been confined at the Detention Home several times but were released upon probation.

Unable to send the boys to the home, because it is under quarantine, the officer was forced to release them.

THIEVES' TRICK PAYS.

One Diverts Attention of Lodging-house Keeper While Two Others Rob Room.

Mrs. A. B. Lounderville, who conducts a rooming-house at No. 500 West Eighth street, was the victim of a trio of clever sneak thieves last night.

A man called at the house and asked to be shown apartments on the floor above that upon which the landlady lived. Just as she started for the upper floor a well-dressed woman and another man entered the office. They said they would await her return. After looking at several rooms upstairs, the first caller said he did not want a room immediately.

Returning to her room, Mrs. Lounderville found it in confusion. The second man and the woman had disappeared. Mrs. Lounderville found that $30 and some jewelry had been taken. The thieves had worked rapidly, going through drawers and closets.

Policemen found that the robbers had met at Eighth and Hill streets. Then one man had gone to the rooming-house, followed by the other man and the woman. The police believe that the three will make similar visits at other lodging-houses.

WOODMEN IN EVIDENCE.

March Through the Streets With Brass Bands and Listen to Addresses in Simpson Auditorium.

The Modern Woodmen of America paraded the streets last night, under the leadership of their own brass bands. It was 9 o'clock before they reached Simpson Auditorium, where Chief Consul A. R. Talbot, of Lincoln, Neb., delivered an address on the quarter-century history of the order. A large audience had assembled at the auditorium and enthusiastically greeted the official party as it appeared on the platform.

The greeting to the head consul was spoken by W. F. McLaughlin, consul of Pacific Camp, who also spoke of the rapid growth of the order. J. O. Davis, State deputy, introduced Mr. Talbot, prefacing the presentation with a brief history of the guest of honor, who at the time he took up the work was the law partner of William J. Bryan at Lincoln. His speech dealt with the past, present and future of woodcraft.

TOT'S COMPLAINT.

The police will investigate the story told last night by Harry Captain, aged 6, and if it can be proved that his older brother, Samuel, compels the youngster to sell papers on the streets and turn over the money, the elder brother may be punished. Huddled in a dark stairway at Main and First streets the little fellow was found about 8 o'clock last night. The boys live at No. 919 Boston street. Samuel, aged 11, denies that he forced the younger boy to give up the money received from sales. Both were released.

FAINTS FROM HUNGER.

T. S. Brey, an aged soldier, fainted from hunger in the Los Angeles-Pacific Fourth-street station, last night. He said he had been employed on a ranch for some time and recently he has been making daily trips from the Soldiers' Home to his place of work. He told the surgeons at the Receiving Hospital that his employer refused him food and gave him only sufficient funds to get to the Soldiers' Home.

AUTO TOO SPEEDY.

After a wild chase from Bonnie Brae along Pico street to Figueroa and north on Figueroa to West Eleventh street, the motorcycle police succeeded last night in overtaking and arresting L. R. Townsley, chauffeur for A. P. McGinnis, tax commissioner of the Santa Fé railroad. Townsley was running at thirty-five miles an hour, the police say. He gave bail for his appearance in court.

AUTO STRIKES BOY.

Traveling at nearly thirty miles per hour, a large automobile, California No. 1302, collided with Monroe Stevens, age 10, who was riding a bicycle along Spring street, near First street. The bicycle was demolished and Stevens was thrown to the pavement. He was sent to the Receiving Hospital. According to the State register, the auto is owned by J. A. Hankey of Santa Ana.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

"A fair week." This voices the sentiment of the handlers of fruit and vegetables on the local market. Taking the money tightness into consideration, the volume of business transacted has been splendid. The only unfavorable report made by dealers is that collections are slow. Sales were up to the average, and receipts were heavy in most lines, but the retail buyers were tardy in paying up. There were no very large sales of any nature, the tendency of prices was with one or two exceptions bearing downward. The scarcity of citrus fruits was alleviated considerably by Saturday, when several good receipts of lemons and grape fruit were received. Butter and cheese were both easier, with a large decline in the former. Eggs remain hard to obtain. There were no new fruits of any variety offered, and all things with the exception of staples, were well cleaned out by Saturday noon.

Egg receipts were small, amounting to only 68 cases. They were not offered as fresh ranch candled stock, but as case count, and two sales, one of three and another of four, cases were made, the price paid being up to the prevailing quotation. The only other offering was of eastern stock, and there was no call for it.

Much dissatisfaction is shown in the butter situation. The market all over the country is but a reflection of present conditions, and it is not because of an oversupply that prices have fallen off, but rather because people cannot pay the amount asked, or will restrict themselves in its use. The Elgin and New York markets are away down to about 25 cents, while in the North there is also a slump. All the butter that may be wanted is purchasable at 67½ cents per two-pound roll in Los Angeles, in wholesale quantities. There are a few of the dealers who will not meet this figure, preferring to hold their stock until the price advances. On the Produce Exchange the quotation stands at the price mentioned, 67½ cents. There were not many offerings of any kind. The largest one made was of eastern fresh, which arrived from Dakota on Friday. Of excellent stock, it will sell readily, and even in preference to local butter.

Cheese receipts were very slight, amounting to only 96 pounds, and the tone was not firm. The week's average was good, and there was a fair demand; with only a few sales. The offerings consisted of imported Swiss on Saturday morning, but there were no takers. Most of the arrivals have been full cream from the North.

A total of 491 sacks of potatoes was received. This was perhaps the smallest arrival in the week, which has been exceptionally favored. On account of this, there have been several slight declines, and the market is shaky. A large portion of the potatoes now coming in are from Oregon, the central as well as northern portion of the State. The Sacramento River crop is almost entirely harvested, and there is a large stock of these potatoes on hand. Salinas spuds found no takers.

Three hundred and two sacks of onions closed a good week for this particular vegetable. Notwithstanding the increase in arrivals, and the favorable reports which make the crop almost as large as that of a year ago, the prices were advanced fractionally for nearly all varieties and grades. Australian Browns and Yellow Danvers were the most traded in. A few Globes and Silverskins were to be had at good values.

Beans have been coming in heavily from all the neighboring fields, as well as from the outlying districts. The soft breezes and the warm sun have done remarkable things in the way of helping out a very bad situation, as the rain for a time threatened some large losses. In Ventura county, not more than 10 per cent. of the crop was injured, the Limas being the heaviest sufferers. There was a promiscuous offering of this product on Saturday, Pinks, Limas and Lady Washingtons being the chief varieties. Sales were small, considering the influx. Receipts for the day were 73 sacks.

Sweet potatoes were hard to get rid of on account of the large stock on hand. There was a drop of considerable proportions during the week on account of the heavy, and in a measure unexpected, arrivals. Offerings have been strung continuously, but sales have not been frequent. The northern potatoes have the principal call, being of fancier stock than those grown near Los Angeles. The receipts for Saturday amounted to 67 sacks.

In the fruit world, grapes were undoubtedly the chief offerings, and sold the heaviest of any variety. There were some extensive losses on account of rains, as well as on account of the condemnation by food inspectors, who would not allow poor stock to pass. The principal grapes at present are the Black Morocco and the Cornichons. They with the Mission grapes have withstood the climatic change the best, the dampness not having affected them to any great extent. Red Emperors were in fair evidence during the latter part of the week. Tokays are scarce and bring a premium, while Concords have entirely disappeared.

The citrus situation has brightened up considerably toward the close of the week, and Saturday found a surplus of grape fruit where there had been a dearth before. The quality was excellent and the price was stiff, averaging $5. New navels were selling well, while Valencias are nearly cleaned up. Lemons had a good call, and limes were higher.

Apples were plentiful, and the offerings on Saturday large. They consisted mostly of Baldwins, Spitzenbergs and Bellefleurs. The quality is fair, and the arrivals have been above the average.

Persimmons, pommegranates and pineapples have all declined in the last several days because of heavier arrivals and good stock. Berries were the strongest in advance. From 7 and 8 cents they have jumped as high as 12 cents per box. Raspberries were fairly plentiful, while blackberries were not adequate to supply the demand.

The vegetable situation was characterized by its even tone. Products that made declines in the early part of the week have advanced as a rule to their former quotations, and the demand continues fairly good. Bunch goods have been moving more freely, while lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers have always been in oversupply. Celery has fluctuated fractionally, and has come out lower, while cauliflower is unchanged. A sack of garlic was sold on 'change.

The poultry market developed some curious features. Dealers did not agree on selling prices, and there was a tendency on the part of several to bull the market. Later deveopments showed that they were on the wrong side, and as a resut prices were brought back to better quotations. On Saturday morning five coops of hens sold for less than 14 cents, and fryers were also fractionally down on offerings.

Fish have been plentiful as a rule with the small varieties in excess of the demand. Large sizes were at times hard to obtain. On Friday and Saturday, sand dabs, sole and smelt were to be had in any desirable quantity, while halibut was scarce. Lobsters fluctuated between scarcity and just sufficient to go around.

NEW YORK MARKET.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The abstract of the statement of averages made by the banks to the clearinghouse was recorded on the tape today after all transactions at the Stock Exchange had been completed. Prices had been depressed early in the day to a slight extent, but had rallied with a show of considerable strength in the latter part of the session. It is not unusual for early estimates on Saturday regarding the character of the bank statement to prove strikingly accurate, but no such estimates were circulated in the usual channels today.

Operations at the Stock Exchange were concluded in ignorance of the condition disclosed by the bank statement. The most vital fact regarding the bank statement is that the reserve item is not made to show by anticipation any part of the enormous volume of gold now afloat for New York and destined to arrive and flow into bank reserves before the next week has expired. Meantime fresh credits have been accorded with unstinted hand, as is the proper method of meeting a crisis approved by tried wisdom. The $60,741,600 loan expansion, however, must be interpreted in the light of the issue of clearinghouse certificates which has been in force, and which is included in this item. The stress in which the trust companies have labored has caused the usual result in an unusual degree of transfer of loans from trust companies to banks; a process which, it is perfectly evident, does not affect the total outstanding volume of loans, although expanding that item of the banks themselves. The figure of the deficit below the legal reserve requirement of the banks is less enlightening than the proportion of the reserve to the liability, which stands at 21.30 per cent., as against 20 per cent. in 1896. The bank statement does not include the separate statement of government deposits, for which the banks are exempt from the cash reserve requirements. Bonds were weak, total sales par value, $1,386,000. United States 2's have advanced 2¾; the 3's, ½, and the 4's 1 per cent. in the bid price on call during the week.

Specie Movements.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Imports of specie at the port of New York for the week ending today, were $49,199 silver, and $150,348 gold.

Exports of specie from the port of New York for the wek ending today were $871,120 silver and $610,000 gold.

Imports of merchandise and dry goods at the port of New York for the wek ending October 26, were valued at $17,816,522.

Treasury Statement.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Today's statement of the treasury balances shows: Available cash balance, $235,818,516; gold coin and bullion, $13,519,994; gold certificates, $75,664,180.

Boston Copper Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—Copper opened with generally firm tone, orders being well distributed, with fair volume of trading. Considerable strength was displayed today, but trading was not very large. Not much news of importance was available in regard to the metal situation. Until the monetary situation improves, the market is likely to be a tame affair. The close was firm.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—The wheat market opened firm today, responding to unexpected strength at Liverpool. Later the New York bank statement was received, and it being considered the worst on record for that city, caused immediate and heavy selling of wheat.

Prices broke sharply and remained weak until the close. The rumors of shutting down of mills also caused some selling. The fact that some export business was reported from the East did not prove an offset to the financial situation. The close was weak. December wheat opened ⅛@⅜ higher at 96⅛ to 96¼, sold between 94⅛@94¼ and 96⅜, and closed at 94¼. The corn market was strong at the opening, in sympathy with wheat and the reports of poor husking returns. Considerable selling of long corn came out on the advance and then the break in wheat and the New York bank statement caused a sharp decline.

Cash houses were fairly free sellers and the market in general revealed poor support. December corn opened ¼@⅜ to ⅜@⅝ higher, at 59⅝@60, sold between 58⅞ and 60 and closed at 59.

The oats market opened strong in sympathy with wheat and corn, but later the attempt of prominent longs to unload, together with the decline in wheat and corn, broke the market sharply. Trade was in small volume and the range of prices was narrow.

December opened ⅛ lower at 49⅝, sold between 48⅞ and 50 and closed at 48⅞, the lowest point of the day.

The provisions market weakened under selling by packers, despite a bullish showing of statistics. The weekly receipts of hogs at western centers was much less than last week or the week immediately preceding, or the week corresponding last year.

January pork closed 17½ lower, lard was down 10@12½ and ribs were 7½ lower.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour was steady; winter patents, 4.40@4.75; straights, 2.50@4.65; spring patents, 4.50@5.60; straights, 4.40@5.50; bakers, 3.30@4.20; No. 2 spring wheat, 1.00@1.03; No. 3, 92@1.03; No. 2 red, 92@94½; No. 2 corn, 59@59¼; No. 2 yellow, 59@60½; No. 2 oats, 48; No. 3 white, 45¼@49; good feeding barley, 62@65; fair to choice malting, 77@90; No. 1 northwestern flaxseed, 1.15½; short ribs, sides (loose,) 7.37½@8.25; mess pork, per bbl., 12.62½@13.75; lard, per 100 lbs., 8.45; short clear sides (boxed,) 7.75@8.25; whisky, basis of high wines, 1.35.

New York Cotton Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The market was lower this morning, the visible supply showed spinners' taking to be about 100,00 bales less than for same week last year. On the opening the bulls in the near positions bid up December and January very sharply with those two options reaching levels higher than were seen on the bulge of Thursday. The advance seems to be altogether a matter of manipulation in the near positions on the theory that the bears can bring no cotton here for delivery. Mr. Price estimates the amount of cotton ginned up to November 1 at 6,100,000 against 6,906,000 last year.

The indications over the eastern and central belt were fair weather for tomorrow, generally fair and colder over the western belt. Cotton growers of Oklahoma and Indian Territory had a secret meeting yesterday and decided to hold the crop for an advance. The figure was not made public, but it is presumed to be 15 cents.

The New York Commercial says: "Cotton is coming here from Galveston, Georgia and Memphis. It will be certificated, but it is not yet known whether it will be delivered on contract."

READY MARKET FOR BONDS.

More evident realization trading was carried on on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday. Sales were in the investment and income bonds, seldom parted with because of the high rate of income. The feature transactions were in ten $1000 5 per cent. bonds of the Los Angeles Traction Company, at 105. There was a distinct demand for the bonds when it was evident that some were coming on the market. The close was strong at 104 bid, and none offered. The 6 per cent. bonds were not handled, as on Friday, but closed with firm quotations at 106@111. Two thousand shares of Continental Oil sold at 15 and the stock closed, at 14⅞@20. Olinda Land stocks was handled to the extent of 1000 shares at 10, and the stock was quoted at 10@11. A further drop was recorded for Associated Oil, ten shares changing hands at 24.25. The close was at 24@25.12½, lower than it has been quoted for many months, if not lower than it has ever been quoted before. Johnnie Consolidated was the only mining security dealt in during the mining call. Eleven thousand shares were sold at 8½, and another 1000 shares were handled at 8¾ on a buyer fifteen-day contract.

LOWER PRICES PREVAIL.

Trading in the mining shares on the Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange was rather slack yesterday, and prices had a downward tendency. Goldfield Consolidated sold at 3.85, and closed at 3.82½@3.85. These quotations show a net loss of 15 points on the bid, compared with the close of Friday morning. The selling price was fifteen points below that of Friday morning also. Only 100 shares changed hands at that price. Jumbo Extension was handled at 69 to the extent of 100 shares only, and the stock closed at 68@70, showing no change compared with the close on Friday morning. The State Mutual Building and Loan Association is the only building and loan association in Southern California that has a permanent guarantee capital similar to that of a Savings Bank.

The laws of the State Require that a building and loan association shall only lend its money on real estate security, on its own stock, and on certain classes of bonds on which Savings Banks are permitted to loan.

This Association loans only on improved real estate and on its ordinary stock. It makes no loans on its guarantee capital stock.

It is prohibited from making loans on real estate to any of its Directors.

It makes its loans almost entirely on the homes of its borrowers, and on all loans collects monthly the interest and an installment of the principal.

Upon the smallest monthly payment permitted the amount of the principal is reduced 25 per cent. after the first three years, and 50 per cent. in a little over five years, so that the security of its loans is continually enhancing in value when compared with the amount due on the loan.

All its loans are secured by deed of trust and all are a first lien on the property covered.

It has been in business 18 years and has loaned millions of dollars in that time.

That these loans have been carefully made is evidenced by the fact that it has no real estate on its books.

In the 18 years of its existence it has never failed to meet all demands when due, and has repaid its investors in that time over $3,000,000.

Nothing but advantage and no risk at all have those ladies who patronize Mrs. Kruseman, miliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich, as she makes exclusively to order, but, besides, takes all responsibility, which she can do on account of her thorough knowledge in that line, which she has acquired through her long time European experience and which enables her to make what you want, and this at same time becoming. As Mrs. Kruseman has no display to make and avoids consequently all the heavy, direct and indirect, expenses connected with same, she can be and is always reasonable, charging only according to quality and quantity of materials used and work done, which is always and only strictly first-class, for work of your own materials or retrimming. Close family relations are keeping Mrs. Kruseman always posted direct from Paris.

SEEK POSTOFFICE.

Residents of Brentwood, Near Santa Monica, Expect to Hear from Washington.

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 2.—Residents of Brentwood Park are expecting to soon receive word from the postal department that a postoffice has been authorized in that suburb. The petition asking this convenience was forwarded to Washington several days ago. Brentwood adjoins Santa Monica on the northeast, but is not a part of the municipal corporation.

SEASHORE FLICKERS.

Considerable credit is given the South Santa Monica hose team for the active part taken by it last night in fighting the fire that destroyed the factory of the Ocean Park Planing Mill. Had the Ocean Park firemen not been assisted promptly there is no question but the gas factory and retorts of the Edison Electric Company must have been consumed.

The baseball game scheduled for the Southern Pacific Park diamond tomorrow afternoon is to be between the Edison Electrics of Los Angeles and the Santa Monicas. Both teams are pennant winners in their respective leagues and the contest promises to be an exciting one.

Joseph Feltwell and family have returned from Rhyolite, Nev., and will once more make their home by the sea.

Miss Lulu Barry of Grand Rapids, Mich., has come to Santa Monica to make her home and will reside with her uncle, H. G. Dunston.

Joseph Goetz of this city was married at Los Angeles yesterday to Miss May Iseman of Sawtelle.

J. F. Keller has gone to Crackerjack to make his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Rogers have arrived home, after an outing at Elsinore.

Mrs. Frederick Salathe and her son have come from New York to spend the winter in Santa Monica and have taken the Nourse cottage on Second street.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Monrovia Woman Thrown from Buggy During Runaway and Suffers Bad Fracture of Leg.

MONROVIA, Nov. 2.—Mrs. D. S. Hosfield of California avenue is confined to her home by injuries received while she and her husband were driving to Azusa. When on Buena Vista avenue, their horse, a high-spirited animal, became frightened at some tents used for fumigation, and ran some distance, overturning the rig and throwing them out. Mr. Hosfield escaped with a few severe bruises, but Mrs. Hosfield's right leg was badly fractured just above the ankle. Dr. J. N. Wheeler attended.

Rev. Fr. J. J. Sheedy, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, arrived this morning from New York and will occupy his pulpit tomorrow morning. He has spent the past summer with his parents in Ireland, and reports a very stormy homeward passage. He was a passenger on the Umbria, which was almost entirely submerged by a tidal wave the second day after leaving Queenstown.

Capt. and Mrs. A. H. Johnson arrived this morning from Fort Dodge, Iowa, after a three months' visit with eastern friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferd Reichards returned yesterday from Huntington, Ind., after a summer's visit at their former home in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Anely have taken possession of the home which they recently purchased on North Primrose avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rupp are among the recent arrivals from the East, who have taken quarters in Monrovia for the winter.

SAWTELLE.

SAWTELLE, Nov. 2.—The chili canning factory at the Barnard pepper farm is in full operation, affording employment for fifty hands. Yesterday the output consisted of 3000 cans. This rate will be kept up until frost brings operations to a close. The enterprise is a new one, and will no doubt prove the means of encouraging some other company to establish a vegetable and small fruit-canning establishment.

Bowers' Hall will soon be completed, and will be formally dedicated November 12 with a party, to which the citizens of Sawtelle in general are invited.

Miss Rosetta King, a colored evangelist from Missouri, is conducting an undenominational revival in a modest little tent that has been raised on Seventh street. Civil War veterans are her auditors.

Even the reward of $500 offered by the family for information that would solve the mystery of the disappearance of George Nash, the Calabasas rancher, has brought no results. It is generally conceded now that he met his death in the mountains.

ROYAL RULER OF HOTLAND.

LUCKY BALDWIN PROUD MONARCH OF QUEEREST OF LITTLE KINGDOMS.

"We Aren't Going to Have Any Worse Town Than We Can Help," Says the Despot of Arcadia—American Gambling Principality to Be Born This Month.

Photograph of "Lucky" Baldwin, Taken Yesterday, his seventy-ninth birthday. He says he feels like living seventy-nine years more.

LUCKY BALDWIN'S dream of a little kingdom, with nothing in it but hot sports, and himself as king, is about to be realized.

When the starting gate flies up for the first time at Santa Anita Park on the last Thursday of this month, it will be old Lucky's special and particular Thanksgiving Day.

Every one knows how a feebly conceived State law has made it possible for Baldwin to become absolute dictator of the city of Arcadia; also made it possible for the old monarch to license race-track gambling within his dominions, whether all the rest of the community is opposed to it or not.

So this newspaper interview with old Lucky may be taken as the first unique address from the throne.

"LUCKY."

Lucky Baldwin was sitting in his buggy near the little administration office at the track and positively gloating with pleasure.

The reins that held a magnificent pair of black horses lay loosely in his hands. Back and around him came the clatter of hundreds of carpenters' hammers. In front of him an army of teamsters were working in a cloud of dust; swearing, cracking whips, thumping mules, and clawing up the earth with a patent road shovel, making a race track at a rate that track was never made before.

"Lucky" is a remarkable old man. Yesterday was his seventy-ninth birthday, but he is as chipper as a boy. He has just come back from a horseback trip around Lake Tahoe. One would think him to be 20 to hear him talk about his track and his town; his imperial dominion. No king ever had a more beautiful realm.

Already, before the track is made, Lucky is making plans for a grand "killing" with some new colts his stables have produced this year—a colt or two which he means to spring upon the "talent" by surprise and generally efface the earth—as far as bookies are concerned.

QUOTH HE.

"I made up my mind a good many years ago," he said, "to have a race track on my ranch. If they hadn't decided to move Ascot over here, it wouldn't have made any difference; I would have had a race track, anyhow.

"I have had to fight with guns and lawsuits and politics to keep this ranch, and now I am going to have what I want on it—and that's racing."

Old "Lucky" took off his dark glasses, which he has worn since being threatened with blindness, a year or so ago.

"Young man," he said, "I'm the oldest horse owner there is, and I started horse racing in California. I brought the first racing stable across the continent, and I liked horse racing well enough to pay $1800 a car to get them here.

"It's about thirty-five years ago I got hold of this ranch. I was a tenderfoot——"

Old "Lucky" grinned. "You know how they are. I came down to look at a mine, but when I saw this ranch there was nothing that would make me happy but to own it.

"Of course, I didn't get the whole Baldwin ranch at that time. I bought the 10,000 acres of the home ranch first. We had a great deal of dickering. Every time we talked about it the owners backed out, and put up the price."

Mr. Baldwin finally bought the 10,000 acres for $20 an acre. He has just sold the patch upon which Santa Anita Park is located for $1000 an acre.

"I had a pretty tough time keeping it," he said.

"When I first moved onto the place I lived in the little adobe that is still on the ranch—not much more than an adobe hut.

"Squatters who were trying to steal my land used to sneak around at dusk and shoot through the windows on a chance of hitting me. We never could have lamps after dark, for fear of making a target.

"One night they tried to chloroform me by dropping a rag through the latch hole and saturating it.

"It happened that there was a high wind that night, and I was outside seeing what damage the trees were suffering. When I came back, I saw these men skulking around the door. I began shooting as they began to run, and I chased them around as long as I had any cartridges left. Being pitch dark, of course, I couldn't see where I was shooting, but I'll bet I made them hear some bullets whistling.

"Another time in the courtroom in El Monte, some one started to draw on my lawyer, Col. Wiley Wells, and me. We whipped out our guns and you ought to have seen that gang! They didn't bother about waiting to find the doors. They took the windows also.

"All my troubles were not with guns and lawsuits although I had one lawsuit that cost me $200,000.

NAIVE CANDOR.

"I found that I couldn't live like a free American out here unless I went into politics. Sure I went into politics."

This is the naive candor with which Baldwin refers to the peculiar incorporation of Arcadia when a lot of cholos were moved in long enough to vote and then moved out again, leaving Lucky supreme. He appoints all the officers and makes all the laws.

The old gentleman's odd view of the situation is that he has given Arcadia freedom instead of a despotism.

"Yes, sir," he said emphatically, "this is the one place where a man can be a free American citizen.

"Why over there in Los Angeles you have to pay a tax to have a trunk moved across the street. You won't be bled like that in my town."

Some asked him innocently if there wasn't a rumor that it was going to be a pretty tough town.

"Well," said Lucky, with a grin, "we

ILL RUMORS ARE FALSE.

No Truth in Persistent Reports of Failures in Los Angeles.

Malicious reports of the failure of this business concern or that are circulated every day in Los Angeles. Some evil-disposed persons are spreading them broadcast by telephone. They filter into newspaper offices every hour. There is no truth in these reports. Every one of them has been run down and found to be false. The public should not pay the slightest heed to them.

MUST TELL IF ALIVE.

But If Dead He Must Acknowledge It—Queer Legal Order.

To be personally forced to answer the legal question as to whether you are alive or dead is the fate in store for H. M. Rodman, or at least the man who claims to be Rodman. It is because of this alleged uncertainty that Rodman will have to tell the commissioner of the Los Angeles Superior Court at Rodeo, N. M., whether he is alive or dead.

This question was arranged for among others in a stipulation prepared by Attorney Henry H. Roser for Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Oliver, his clients, in a suit ostensibly brought by Rodman through Attorneys Tanner, Taft and Odell to oust them from three valuable lots in Santa Monica which they have held for three years by adverse possession.

In their answer to the complaint of Rodman the defendants say that he is incapable of bringing suit for the reason that he is dead. Now the court will hear the sworn answer of the alleged plaintiff that he is still alive or the acknowledgment that he is really dead.

The defendants assert that the man who will answer this important question is really a dummy Rodman and claim Rodman has no right to answer by proxy.

LAWS OF DECENCY DRIVE AWAY UNDESIRABLE CLASS.

They Looked on City Regulations as Real Persecution—Some of Their Haunts So Vile That They Were Ordered Closed—Wild Agitators Are Leaders of the Hegira.

Disconcerted by the persistent attempts of the police and health departments to compel them to conform to American ideas of morals and sanitation, a number of Japanese left Los Angeles in a huff yesterday for Sacramento and San Francisco. Some asserted that they had been "persecuted" in Los Angeles. The agitators among them hinted vaguely at appealing to their government for "protection" and "redress."

Most of those who departed are of the undesirable class, who are inclined to become "cocky" when away from home—persistent lawbreakers, who refuse to obey the police and sanitary regulations here. A very few among them really believed the police really sought to throw them into a dungeon.

In the last fortnight there has been a general round-up of unsavory Jap resorts. This had its initiation in the general crusade against filth and waste. Health inspectors reported from every district that the Jap hotels, restaurants, and clubs were incubators of filth and disease.

Health inspectors went through Jap restaurants, and a dozen proprietors were fined for keeping filthy kitchens and selling tainted meat and vegetables.

Lodging-house inspectors visited Japanese hotels and boarding-houses. In some the conditions were so vile that the places were ordered closed at once; two were so bad that the owners were compelled to demolish the buildings.

Friday night the police made a clean-up of Japanese clubs and resorts where liquor was sold without a city license; many arrests were made, and a number of places were closed.

AGITATORS TO BLAME.

Jap agitators have inflamed the minds of their countrymen with wild stories that this action of the police and health authorities is part of a secret plan to run all Japanese out of the city. Among the Japs are some who are ignorant enough to believe that this is so.

A week ago Health Inspector Wright obtained a complaint against the Japanese proprietor of an East Fifth-street restaurant. When the officers went to serve the warrant they found the Jap had fled to Arizona, leaving the restaurant deserted. He thought he was "hounded" by the police. The restaurant furnishings alone are worth about $1500. Apparently the Jap thinks they have been confiscated. His offense was only a minor one, and he probably would have escaped with a $25 fine.

Some Japs refuse to believe they have violated any laws. They will not understand that it is the city's business to find out how many persons sleep under one roof, so long as they are in a building and not on the street. They likewise are unable to appreciate the epicurean tastes of the Los Angeles restaurant inspector.

Yesterday the Jap liquor dealers who remained here declared that they have been persecuted because they were arrested by the police, after securing special license from the United States government, permitting them to sell liquor. To the newcomers it seems incredible that the city should dare to interfere with a place that holds its liquor license direct from the government.

THE MAYOR'S IDEAS.

Mayor Harper went into the Japanese question in detail Friday night with Chief of Police Kern and Health Officer Powers. Yesterday the Mayor spoke of the recent arrests as follows:

"Neither the police nor the health department is unfriendly to the Japanese. All we have done is to insist that they shall conform to the police and sanitary ordinances while living here. If they run a restaurant they must sell only clean, wholesome food; if they conduct a hotel or rooming-house, they must keep clean beds and observe the State law regulating the amount of air space for each lodger.

GOD'S FIRST TEMPLES.

OUR WINONA IS ASSURED.

Presbyterians Now Control Millard Canyon.

Is One of Nature's Choicest Beauty Spots

Will Be Incorporated Soon by Unit Holders.

The scheme for developing a great Bible assembly at Los Angeles, after the long-established and famous resorts of a like character at Northfield and Winona, is now firmly "on its feet."

T. C. Horton is the man who conceived the idea and found the charmed spot for carrying out the scheme, though he modestly does not claim the credit; but he nevertheless has been the only active agency behind it.

He secured an option on 236 acres of land in Millard Cañon, for a consideration of $24,000, on easy terms. The purchase price was divided into twenty-four units of $1000 each, and he has now secured purchasers for twenty units, and the first payment of $10,000 has been made. The holders of the units will form the board of directors, and this week a meeting will be held to effect the incorporation of the company and probably at the same time to make choice of a name for the assembly grounds.

Scenes in Millard Canyon,
the new Presbyterian Chautauqua grounds.

Those who hold the twenty units now sold are: Lyman Stewart, W. E. McVay, Giles Kellogg, D. H. Steele, E. A. Hackett, Rev. J. M. Newell, Dr. A. T. Harris, W. L. Green, Milton Stewart, Miss Anna Wilson, J. A. White, S. I. Merrell, Mrs. Dimmick and Messrs. Touzeau, Lockwood and Lennox.

The investment is to bear 7 per cent. interest, and the deferred payments are to be made in one, two and three years.

WHERE NATURE TARRIED.

Millard Cañon, in which the property lies, is a most beautiful and picturesque spot, four miles north of the center of Pasadena. Said Mr. Horton yesterday:

"When nature was lavishing her gifts on the southland, she tarried a bit to put a few extra touches upon one spot, and left it a place of exquisite beauty. That spot is Millard Cañon. Providence put a hedge around it, kept it free from encroachment by ruthless hands and sordid investors, and kindly laid it at the feet of a few men who were looking for a place, where, in quiet and seclusion, they might have an opportunity to go apart to commune with God in the presence of His own deft handiwork."

For thirty years this magnificent site has been held by one owner, and when its purchase was sought by persons who desired to make it a popular drinking resort, he refused to sell it, although he was offered more than he received from the promoters of the assembly.

It is one of the most picturesque cañons in all this region, and is familiar to all roamers among the foothills. It spreads out amply wide for roadways and building sites, and in its centre is a purling stream of mountain water, which rushes its way through rocks and great boulders. It is well wooded with forest trees, affording plentiful shade and healthful air. It is at an altitude of 3000 feet above sea level.

AN IDEAL SPOT.

For the purpose for which it has been secured, it is ideal. One hundred acres of it spreads out into a rolling mesa, outside the mouth of the cañon, and is susceptible of being improved for the most beautiful homes, while inside the cañon are innumerable sites for secluded bungalows, amid the wildest and most fascinating surroundings, and which may be occupied all the year.

The plan of the promoters is to keep the resort under Presbyterian control, not for sectarian purposes, but in order that it may have a substantial organized body behind it, thus assuring perpetuation of the policy, which will be outlined at its organization. Among those who hold the units thus far sold are people of different denominations.

The property will be subdivided and lots will be sold or leased, subject to certain restrictions. Assembly halls will be erected for the holding of a summer school, and bungalows for the accommodation of those who wish to attend, and it is expected that it will attract students from all over the country, as the best-known Bible men of this and other lands will compose its faculty.

It is to be distinctly understood that this is no money-making scheme, and all the surplus beyond that required to pay interest on the indebtedness will go into the development of the enterprise, to make it a credit to Southern California and a national attraction.

The cañon will be kept as nearly as possible in its virgin state, and a competent landscape gardener will be secured to lay out the ground, in order to secure the very best results, but with instructions to keep ever in view the fact that nature is to be violated as little as possible. Wild trails will be built through the rolling hills, affording the choicest recreation and a great variety of scenery.

The water power will be utilized for electric lighting, and ample water can be stored for an abundant supply for domestic use, the land lending itself naturally to such purposes.

Since the option was secured a few months ago, the promoters have been offered an advance of $8000, or an increase of 33 1-3 per cent., before the first payment of $10,000 had actually been made. But it was not bought to sell, and will not be sold, except in building sites under such restrictions as they may see fit to adopt.

The portion lying outside the cañon is an important factor in the proper development of the scheme, for it shields the entrance from encroachment by anything undesirable, should the enterprise enter upon the greatest development.

It is believed that the leasing of lots will carry the debt from the start, and promote the enterprise. Stockholders will have first choice of lots, and, if they prefer, may exchange their stock for lots.

The men who stand at the head of the scheme assure its success, and there will be little difficulty in securing purchasers for the four units of $1000 each remaining unsold.

JERGINS'S GOOD PROFIT.

Effects Compromise With Smith Estate and Makes Two Hundred Per Cent. in Ten Months.

Final settlement of the dispute between A. T. Jergins and the heirs and executors of the estate of Eben Smith, deceased, was made yesterday, in which Mr. Jergins won a substantial victory.

Following the death of Eben Smith, about a year ago, Jergins went to the heirs, Mrs. Emily L. Smith, Cora J. Carnahan and Frank L. Smith, who had also been made executors under the will, and effected an agreement for the purchase of the property of the deceased, located at Seventh and Lucas streets, for $100,000. To bind the bargain, Jergins paid the heirs $10,000 on signing the agreement.

The widow is aged about 60 years, the daughter is married and the son is a business man, and they entered into the contract after due deliberation, believing that they were getting a fair price for the property.

But there were a lot of real estate men who had been shrewdly headed off by Jergins, and they began work on the heirs to have the sale to Jergins set aside, because the law requires that, as executors, even though they are the sole heirs, they are required to sell the property at auction to the highest bidder.

It looks a trifle "unprofessional" on the part of the real estate men who interfered when they saw that Jergins had made a good bargain, but they succeeded in winning the two women to their way of thinking, while Frank Smith stood to the agreement with Jergins.

The matter was taken into court, and in open auction Jergins ran the bidding up to over $140,000, and it was finally knocked down to T. Wiesendanger for $146,000.

No sooner had the sale been confirmed than Jergins gave notice that he would appeal to the Supreme Court for a confirmation of his contract, and ask that the increase over the contract price should be given to him and not to the heirs.

Pending the decision of the Supreme Court, a settlement was made yesterday which was a virtual compromise. Jergins was paid $30,000, covering the amount paid to bind the bargain, an advance of $20,000, which is a fine profit on an investment of $10,000 for ten months.

FINISH FIGHT.

GOING TO THE HIGHEST COURT.

WALNUT GROWERS TO APPEAL PATENT RIGHT CASE.

Supreme Tribunal of the Country Must Eventually Decide as to Right of Ranchers to Use Certain Bleaching Process Which San Jose Concern Claims Is Its Own.

As a rule patent suits are uninteresting affairs, except to the parties concerned, but there are two important patent cases pending in the United States Circuit Court that are of vital interest to hundreds of raisin and walnut growers in Southern California.

Hardly a week passes but some ramification of the two cases comes up in the local Federal Court. Perhaps the most important case is that of the Anderson-Barngrower Manufacturing Company of San José against numerous walnut growers' associations.

The complainant is seeking to secure damages from the associations for an alleged infringement of a patent process for bleaching nuts. Already the case against the Fullerton association has been decided in favor of the complainant.

Damages were assessed in a large amount by a special master. An appeal has been taken from this finding to the Circuit Court of Appeals. It will be months before any decision is reached by the higher court. In the meantime, the San José concern is preparing to press its suits against other walnut growers' associations which have used a process for bleaching nuts identical with that used by the Fullerton growers. As the court will probably find against the defendants in these cases, it is believed that the United States Supreme Court will eventually be called upon to settle the question of the infringement of the patent owned by the San José company.

The defendants all claim that the process employed in giving the walnuts that color so much prized by the dealers is not subject to patent, as it has been expounded in various treatises and has been advocated by professors at Berkeley in lectures to ranchers.

The other important suit for alleged infringement of patent is that of the United States Consolidated Seeded Raisin Company—otherwise known as the "raisin trust"—against various raisin packers, who are principally located in and about Fresno. The complainant claims to own a patent for a raisin seeder. It has brought suit in the Superior Court of Fresno county and has also filed a number of actions in the local Federal Court. The defendants will contest the actions to the limit of their resources, as the royalty demanded by the trust is said to be excessive.

HIS NARROW ESCAPE.

Long Brass Rod in Hands of Man on Car Makes Electric Connection, With Results.

Wilbur Miller, employed at the Broadway Department Store, narrowly escaped death by electrocution yesterday afternoon while riding on a Los Angeles-Redondo car. Miller boarded the car at Fourth and Broadway. He carried several brass rods for use in hanging lace curtains. One was at least eight feet long and it was with difficulty Miller got the rod inside the coach.

When the car reached Seventh street and Broadway, Miller rested one end of the longer rod on the iron steps of the car while the other touched the electric light switch. Immediately there was a flash. The fuse blew out and the heavy current of electricity shot into the ground. The fact that Miller was standing on the board floor of the car is what probably saved his life. A tremendous voltage passed through the rod that he held in his left hand. The rod was blackened and the switch was blown to pieces.

DISHONEST.

POLICE SEEK PATTERN FAKER.

T AFTER SWINDLER OPERATING IN SANTA MONICA.

Pretended Exclusive Agencies to Women Under Flattering Offers and Buncoes a Number of Them in Same Town—Is Branded a Fraud of Rank Sort.

Should a man red of face and meek of manner appear at your home and endeavor to coax your wife into accepting the local agency for the Standard patterns, detain him until the police can be called; for be it known he is a fake of the rankest kind. He has just finished working Santa Monica and the towns along that bay, and he is no doubt operating today in some city of Southern California.

As he worked it at Santa Monica, this [illegible] game. Dressmakers are his [illegible] and, guided by the placards as [illegible] conspicuously in the front [illegible], he has no difficulty in locating [illegible] victims. When he reads "Plain and Fancy Sewing" or "Dressmaking" he knows just what to do.

In Santa Monica he appeared at the home of Mrs. B. Carrillo and introduced himself as representing the Fifth-street store of Los Angeles. He was desirous of securing an exclusive agent in the beach town for the period of one year for the Standard patterns. He guaranteed Mrs. Carrillo a salary of $65 per month for making her sewing rooms the headquarters for his patterns, which would be supplied to her direct from the Fifth-street store. All he asked of Mrs. Carrillo was that she pay him the sum of $2.25, the cost price of the pigeon-hole rack that would be sent her, and in which she could keep the patterns. She paid the money and in return received a receipt, signed "Fifth Street Store." The receipt stated that she was to have the agency for the patterns for one year.

This was several days ago. The cabinet in which the patterns were to be kept was to be forwarded to her the next day. The patterns, which she was to sell for the store, were to accompany it. But up to last night netiher had arrived.

Mrs. Edgar Garret was buncoed by the same man in the very same way. However, he charged her $2.75 for an exclusive agency, covering the same territory he had previously sold to Mrs. Carrillo. And from Mrs. Garrett he went up and down the beach, wherever he saw a favorable sign, and sold exclusive agencies right and left. He charged the women whatever he thought he could get out of them, and to one and all he promised the same thing, and to all he guaranteed a salary.

Chief of Police Barretto of Santa Monica has already gathered a number of specimens of the fellow's handwriting, and each day a number of new names are added to the list of victims.

This sure-thing man is described as being tall, about 50 years of age, red face, flat nose and short stubby mustache.

The officers, as well as the proprietors of the Fifth-street store, are after his scalp, for when her patterns failed to arrive as promised, Mrs. Carrillo went to the Fifth-street store and told her troubles to the manager. She wanted to know why her patterns had not arrived. It was all news to the store folk. They denied having any such agent in the field, and when shown the receipts that had been given by the fellow denounced him as a forger and a fraud.

WHAT'S SAID IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—With our local mint chewing up gold bullion to the tune of a million dollars a day it would seem as though there ought to be money enough for us all. J. P. Morgan is going to give the world $50,000,000 more, and the despised British gold, so frequently denounced from the political rostrums of the past, is pouring into the country in a steady stream. Despite this influx of money several of our local banks seem to be asking for more and at least two of my acquaintances have not overlooked me in a strenuous effort to negotiate a small loan. One of the banks which temporarily closed its doors served as an object lesson to P. H. McCarthy, labor candidate for Mayor, who promptly declared that Mayor Taylor did it.

The financial stress has thrown the political campaign into the background but in spite of the love of money and its consequent fruitage as the root of all evil, the people realize that on next Tuesday they will have to elect a Mayor and a new set of officers. The friends of the three candidates are as busy as bees. The candidacy of Taylor is of a constructive character and for the general good. He says: "We must have a government free from class feeling and will to treat all criminals alike. The foul sty in which San Francisco has been wallowing has been filled up and disinfected. Let us keep it so." In derision of the activity of the present Mayor his opponents ask: "What has Taylor done for San Francisco?" They answer promptly: "Called Kearny street, Karny."

The candidacy of Daniel A. Ryan for the mayoralty is boomed by the sonorous voice of George A. Knight, which the Examiner offsets by praising Daniel A. Ryan. McCarthy was thinking of getting Joaquin Miller on the stump to divide the poetical vote of Taylor, but the aged Sierran bard was blue-penciled because he lectured to some college boys on the topic: "Give unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," which sentiment is not apropos to San Francisco politics.

Though seemingly submerged in the whirlpools of high finance and partisan politics we turn to the water question for relief. According to Marsden Manson, a former works commissioner, who has just returned from the East, the authorities at Washington are on the point of allowing us to use the Sierra waters of the Tuolumne. Manson says: "In conference with large business and financial interests in the East I was impressed with the view that if San Francisco owned and operated its own water works on a basis that would fully meet the demands of purity of home supply and an abundance for fire protection, it would do more to give stability and confidence to us, privately and publicly, than any other step we could take."

Mr. Mahon has gone. He came and he saw, but unlike the valiant Roman general of old, he did not conquer. Mr. Mahon is the head man of the International Association of Street Railway Employés and he visited us a few days ago to settle the car strike. After hunting all over the city and even going over to Oakland to find some evidences of a car strike, he gave it up in despair. Through the press urgent invitations were extended to the officials of the United Railways to meet Mr. Mahon in conference, but at no stage of the proceedings did the distinguished visitor come near Patrick Calhoun, Thornwell Mullaly or General Manager Black. Before he left to attend to some pressing matters in the East Mr. Mahon left assurances of his moral support to the carmen who quit work last May.

The question of veracity between a politician and an editor is agitating us at present along with other troubles. "Honest Tom" Reagan, former police commissioner, says that Editor Older has made affidavit to a tissue of lies about him and libeled him more than McClure's Magazine. Editor Older states under oath that Reagan admitted to him that he had aided Schmitz and Ruef hold up saloon licenses. It promises to be a merry battle of affidavits with "Honest Tom" getting hotter every day.

All things come to an end, good as well as bad, and no one in this city is dreading the inevitable termination of a good thing more than Abe Ruef, the political boss who pleaded guilty to the crime of extorting money from French restaurant men. Ruef has not been sentenced as yet and for months past has been living at a swell boarding house under the espionage of a court elisor. But all this is to cease and after election day has come and gone Judge Dunne has decreed that Ruef must go to jail like any other malefactor. The former head of the late administration would perhaps reconcile himself to jail environs, were it not that in the same edifice he is apt to meet Schmitz and Louis Glass, who are there largely through Ruef's instrumentality. However, the little fellow is somewhat of a fatalist and when he meets the baleful eye of Eugene will murmur Kismet.

THE POLICE AND CRIME.

The paragrapher, in his wit, remarks that the Chicago police dare not arrest the big criminals, because if they did they would have to arrest themselves.

Without desire to cast suspicion on the police officers of most cities, certainly men of no high moral conceptions manage to get into most police offices, where the star is a convenient cloak under which villainy is hid. In some cities the police force is notoriously and awfully corrupt.

What was the police force of San Francisco under the Ruef-Schmitz régime, with Jerry Dinan at its head? It was the most vicious influence in the city. Police officers concealing vice and condoning crime under the direction of the office could hardly preserve a very high degree of personal morality. It is but a step between turning your back on a crime under the influence of a bribe and doing the deed, if there is "enough in it."

Many stories are reported from cities of successful crimes which appear impossible of perpetration unless the police wink at them.

The head of a police force needs be a man of very high integrity, of the keenest wits and of fearless courage, in order to hold the men under him to a sense of their responsibility, and on a plane of efficiency sufficient to preserve the force from temptations, and to maintain a spirit of diligence in the performance of duty.

BLINDNESS OF SELFISHNESS.

It looks to the average man as if some members of the liquor trust are lacking in clear-sightedness because of undue selfishness. The city government proposes to raise the license fee imposed upon saloons for the privilege of doing business. The proposed increase is to be stiff, from $100 a month to $200.

It appears that many of those financially interested in the saloons are content to have this increased cost put upon them, while others resist it on the ground that it will be so excessive as to drive them out of business. It is the saloons owned by some of the breweries that take this latter stand.

It is essential to remember that the number of saloons permitted in this city is limited, and that rather narrowly. No more than 200 of these drinking places can be opened within the limits of Los Angeles. This restriction was put on many years ago, when the population of the city was little more than one-fifth what it is today. With the increase in population of 500 per cent., the capacity of the saloon to bear the city tax may not be increased by quite that percentage, but it certainly must be very greatly increased. It is something for Los Angeles to be proud of, that the city will not support as many of these drinking places as will the average American city. Whatever may be said in defense or palliation of the habit of imbibing alcoholic beverages, there is much less to be said in justification of the open saloon. It is a statement beyond the scope of successful contradiction that the open saloon creates more expense to the city government than any other form of business.

The saloon-owners who advocate a very high fee stand for their own real interests. The higher the fee, the more absolutely the impossibility of conducting "doggeries" and making the liquor traffic a disgrace to those engaged in it and a menace to the public peace. Those who would maintain the business on a plane of at least quasi-respectability want the license as high as the business will fairly bear.

As to the brewery saloons, there is good ground on which to attack the contention that they are less able to bear this expense than other types of drinking places. If the average drink in the beer saloon costs less, the cost to the saloon is probably proportionately less, and whatever difference there may be, the larger number of drinks sold would probably make up for it. Furthermore, in certain portions of the city, where these beer saloons abound and are most patronized, the rents are a good deal lower than in the other districts and the drinking is a good deal more frequent.

There is an impression abroad in the minds of some people (which may be apocryphal) to the effect that a barrel of beer sold by the brewery at, say, $9, retails over the bar in five-cent drinks at about $40. The brewery loses no money in selling the barrel of beer at whatever price it rules in this market; and certainly the saloon, which receives about four times as much as it pays for the barrel, is not in the way of losing much money.

It is a well-known fact that many of the saloons, wherein beer is the principal beverage, are owned by one or the other of the breweries, local or foreign. These saloon licenses are transferred every day in the year at from $7000 up to as high as $15,000. Certainly a franchise which brings a premium like this is not in great danger of being penalized if the city license tax is doubled.

The city should get a good round sum of money out of the taxes on the 200 saloons allowed here. There is no similarity between what these places should pay and the taxes due from a grocery store or dry-goods store. By limiting the number of saloons so narrowly, the city puts a high premium upon the value of the privilege and the public has a right to some of the benefit; and the saloons swell the municipal expense account incomparably.

DANGERS OF THE STREET.

Statistics will amply prove that a great proportion of the accidents which result in the loss of life or injury are due to the carelessness of the individual. Men and women do not seem to understand that their protection is best conserved when taken into their own hands. Undue and unnecessary haste, thoughtlessness and positive stupidity are the causes of many a broken head and limb and the still more deplorable destruction of human life. Will people never learn to take care of themselves?

There are altogether too many street car accidents in Los Angeles happening right along; but when the absolute recklessness of the average person is taken into consideration the wonder is that the list of casualties is not ten times as great. It is the commonest kind of spectacle to see men ducking in between moving cars, running in front of them at crossings and boarding them before they have come to a stop. Now, there is no man physically agile enough to do these things with safety in a city so crowded with traffic as Los Angeles is. The man who takes risks of the nature of these stands scarcely the chance to escape injury that he would in a pitched battle. There are a thousand unseen dangers lurking all around him while he sees but the possible one that he has fixed his mind upon. There are other cars than the one he seeks to board or avoid, and there are automobiles, vehicles and the surging crowds of pedestrians.

As for woman—well, words fail to describe the appalling chances she takes with her lovely eyes wide open and a smile of serene amiability on her sweet, red lips. To the man who has a horror of the sight of human suffering and whose kindly heart causes him to wish everybody long life and happiness, no words can describe the distress of mind he feels every time he beholds a woman about to alight from a street car. She usually arises from her seat before the car has time to come to a stop; she then poises herself on the step and waits for the car to start again before she makes up her mind to step off. And when she does alight she does it backwards. What saves her? Only the good Lord who knows that but for woman the world would die of either sin or ennui. Yes, it is the Lord that saves her—the Lord and the patient, God-fearing motorman who does not desire to have the blood of his fellow beings on his hands.

The people of Los Angeles must impress themselves with the fact that this is a big and a busy city—in certain sections almost the busiest city in the world. The traffic is always crowded, and at some hours of the day simply jammed. The street cars and all the other wheeled vehicles of commerce and pleasure must keep moving, and at a lively rate, too. The pedestrian must "watch out." He has his certain rights and no one desires to deprive him of them. But he hasn't rights superior to those of others who must also make their way up and down the congested highways of the town. "Stop, look and listen," is the law's rule, and there can be none better. Use your head, your eyes and your ears; then your chances to escape injury will be so ample that it is extremely doubtful that you will ever see the inside of the emergency hospital's hurry-up wagon.

FREEDOM IN THE OPEN SHOP.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and many others interested in the maintenance of the open-shop principle in Los Angeles, and in thus keeping our business life free from strikes, turmoil and trouble, enjoyed a treat on Friday night in the address of James A. Emery, secretary of the Citizens' National Industrial Association.

"That the right to labor, unmolested, is one of the indefeasible, inalienable rights granted by the Constitution, and that this is founded on basic principles which underlie this republic," was the keynote of the discourse. The clear elaboration of the theme by one who has spent years in the study of the subject in a practical way and in elucidating it to many audiences in all parts of the country, held the attention of all present and won commendation from this notable gathering of the leading business men of the city.

At the outset the speaker called attention to the arrogant claim so universally made by laborites, that they represent labor in a particular way and that they are the only laborers whose claims merit any attention, when, in fact, these organizations constitute less than 10 per cent. of the wage-earners of the country and not above 1 per cent. of all who work.

One of the most striking facts brought out by Mr. Emery is that relating to the organization of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. This body numbers over 600,000 persons. It is thoroughly organized, and has been one of the most successful of all labor organizations. It has caused less disturbance in the business world, and has gained many advantages for its members. This organization fully recognizes the principle for which the Citizens' Alliance stands and works—the open shop. Brotherhood men and those not belonging to that body work in perfect harmony side by side. Those who belong never ask whether those they are to work with are members or not. That is all the advocates of the open shop ask for. They do not propose to make war on labor unions, nor to oppose such organizations. They do not wish to ask men whether or not they belong to such an organization or not. The war is always declared by the union men, when they decline to work with non-union men; when they strike and proceed to boycott business men, to mob or kill non-union workers, or otherwise break the peace and violate the laws.

There was some surprise that Mr. Emery was opposed to the idea of compulsory arbitration. The Citizens' Alliance has deliberately and judiciously taken a stand against this way of dealing with labor difficulties. The purpose is to keep the industrial world absolutely free from all entangling alliances with labor-union organizations. It has been considered more surely preservative of freedom and of peace to stand for the open shop, or even absolute non-unionism. As at present organized, unions will not keep their contracts and cannot be forced to, and there is no sense in "arbitrating" with them. As for "compulsory arbitration," that is a contradiction in terms, under our institutions. Of course, the courts are forms of "compulsory arbitration," but they cannot make a labor union keep a contract.

NOVEMBER.

[From "California: Where Sets the Sun."]

A song-bird sits upon my porch and sings
Songs that are full of summer joy and rest,
As though he held his heart within his breast;
A lovely butterfly with golden wings
Floats like a blossom on the sunny air;
Fragrant and sweet the many blooming things
That make my winter garden bright and fair;
The leaves turn to the sunshine, shimmering the while,
The ripened berries in the pepper trees
Hold in their rosy globes the reddened glow
Which constant Sun's warm kisses will impart;
The grass is golden where does fall the smile
Of the warm sunshine. Flies and bees
Make gentle murmur in the noonday's heart;
Calm the wind's breath as though it were asleep;
As night does fall the moon does upward creep,
Set round with stars, like shining points of gold,
Seeing a world as fair with blossoming
As it were summer or sweet-budding spring.

ELIZA A. OTIS.

THE WAY TO SUCCESS.

No man ever succeeded in a business which he did not understand. Study and practice are the way to thorough knowledge.

The American Institute of Bank Clerks is organized on these principles. The members are all actively engaged in banking and are gaining skill as well as knowledge daily. What they acquire in this way is supplemented by study into the theory of banking and the details of practical work. Study of a very broad character is carried on by this institute.

Recently, at a meeting of the Philadelphia chapter, the subject of bank examination was set down for the order of the evening. The leading paper set forth the way this is done in England, and it is made to appear a very efficient plan. It is different from our way.

With us, both the national and the State banks are subject to examination at the hands of government commissioners. It is well known that in some instances the work is not done effectively. In the case of the Walsh banks in Chicago the examiners failed to find anything wrong, although everything was wrong, until a discharged employé in resentment obtained an appointment as bank examiner, and knowing from experience how concealment was effected, swooped down on the three allied banks and closed them all. In this State a bank commissioner ostentatiously set forth in a newspaper the solvency of the Nevada Bank of San Francisco, then under the management of the Fairs. In three days after, the concern would have had to close its doors if other banks had not come to its relief.

The plan outlined at the meeting in Philadelphia, as successful in England, is to have banks examined by expert accountants, not in the government employ, nor connected with any bank.

That plan works to admiration in England, where these public accountants are held to so rigid responsibility for the manner in which they do their work. Their failure to perform their duties properly is usually visited with severe punishment, going so far as imprisonment for long periods at hard labor.

Now, here is the point: In the case of the Walsh banks in Chicago the story is told that a bank examiner, who showed too much inquisitiveness, was removed from office through the political "pull" which Walsh had in the State. Would not a public accountant be as easily fixed where right is not the essence of administration? It may be held that an accountant would always have his reputation to uphold and could not always be put out of business by a political "pull." That is true. But we are somewhat familiar with what bribery can do if the bribe-taker can be assured of protection.

If a bank commissioner was removed from office because he tried to perform his duties, and he tamely acquiesced, there was nothing more to do. But suppose he had been sure of his ground and had gone before the people with his story, what then? Machine politics and crooked corporate interest tried to frighten Gov. Hughes from doing his duty. Had he "stood for it," that would have been the end of the event and of the Governor. But Charles E. Hughes made the situation known to the people of New York, and the people saw to it that the Governor had his way.

Honesty of purpose on the part of the official, combined with ability to grasp the situation and courage to do right, are the requisites to make any law effective. The man who calmly goes about executing the law because it is the law, who effaces himself and acts impersonally without resentment or noise, will always have the people with him.

LEGISLATIVE PANACEAS.

On a recent occasion, W. H. Ellis, Attorney-General of Ohio, was speaking at a Chicago "conference on trusts and corporations." Among other things this lawyer, who should and probably does understand corporation law, said: "Let Congress require every corporation to attend to its own business in its own name, without the power to own stock in other corporations, and we shall have no fear of the evils of corporate wealth."

The conference before which Mr. Ellis spoke looks to us dubious on its face. These conferences "on trusts and corporations" are generally composed of people who have no concern with any trust or with any corporation, with any organization or enterprise, which deals largely either in money of its own or of depositors. People who organize such meetings and attend them are too often profoundly ignorant, not only of corporate law or corporate action, but of enterprises on a large scale, or of the most elementary laws of political economy. The more intelligent among them are dreamers, "busybodies in other men's matters," persons with fads rather than principles to follow, and whose radical purpose is the subversion of the present order of things, not only in finances and industry, but in law and morals. We don't know whether or not this Chicago meeting was of this class or not, but simply breathe the suspicion.

Now the plan proposed by Mr. Ellis would fall before the minds of people of this suspicious class as a good fat fly before a hungry trout. It would look the most luscious and juicy morsel that the world could provide. It would be snapped up regardless and forgetful of the hook concealed under the bait. To our own minds it seems an unwarranted and dangerous interference with the personal liberty of the individual citizen.

It is difficult for practical business men to see why a stockholder who invests money, more or less, in one corporate enterprise should be debarred (in a corporate capacity) from investing another sum, large or small, in some other corporate enterprise. A capitalist has as much right to invest in a corporate capacity as in an individual capacity—and a corporation is composed of individuals. One individual is sometimes a corporation sole. No individual loses his rights by going into a corporation. It is just as difficult for practical men to see why a director in a given corporation should be by law barred from holding a similar position in some other corporation, whether in an allied or altogether separate line of business. Even coming to the president of a corporation, whether it be a railroad company or a bank, it is impossible for fair, broad-minded, practical men to see why, if the stockholders of some other corporation see fit to elect such a man as a director in that corporation and the other members of the board of directors should exalt him to the presidency, any law should be made to step in and say, This shall not be so.

The trouble with Ellis's class of mind is that it is exactly like the medical fellow who wants a panacea, and thinks one is discoverable which will cure all ailments. The one thing is just as impossible as the other. There is no panacea for human ailments, and there is no panacea for corporate ills excepting the one broad principle in the case of our bodies to establish good health, and in the other case to insist upon absolute honesty in the management of our affairs. That is all we need in the management of corporations. The method may be more complicated than Mr. Ellis's, but it will certainly be more effective, more just, but without including the injurious features of his panacea. The demand of the day is for governmental supervision of the management of corporate enterprise, whether of public or quasi-public utilities, the demand is that they shall be conducted fairly and honestly. It is like the daily life of every individual citizen. There is no panacea for making all men honest, but there are general laws to protect one man from the predatory disposition of his neighbor.

There were fourteen Governors with the President on his Mississippi River trip. They have now scattered to their various capitals, and we will give a prize of two eggs and a quarter of a pound of butter to any man or woman who can name three of them off-hand.

We have great respect for Judge Lawlor, but we can't for the life of us see why he permits so much horse-play in his court.

The Lancer.

JUDGE GROSSCUP of the United States Circuit Court, indicted by an Illinois grand jury for manslaughter, in consequence of a wreck on a trolley line which killed and wounded sixty-seven passengers, is deeply grieved. He pleads that he is a tender-hearted man, and that his sole connection with the accident is the fact that he "happened to be a director of the company." The grand jury alleges that the wreck was due to a bad system of operating trains and would not have occurred had the directors adopted a proper and adequate method of dispatching.

It is not conceivable that Judge Grosscup or any other director was consciously reckless of life or indifferent to the safety of passengers. Indeed the charge of manslaughter does not connote an intent to jeopardize life; it means that the wreck was due to negligence.

Judge Grosscup owes his indictment to that very fact that he merely "happened" to be a director instead of being an active, interested and diligent director of the railway company, realizing and accepting the responsibilities of the office. If it be true that a dangerous system of operating trains was maintained, the "just happened to be" directors obviously failed to give that attention to the management of the company which they owed to the company and to the public.

[illegible] in directors who are not expected to direct and who do not direct is a bad, slipshod corporation habit that is perniciously prevalent and needs drastic correction. Prominent citizens are too easily induced to allow their names to be used as directors of companies of which they know little or nothing. Instead of taking the responsibility seriously and making themselves familiar with the business of the corporation, these eminent figureheads just "happen to be" directors, and when trouble comes from bad management and their failure to do their duty, they are painfully surprised and cannot understand why anyone should blame them.

It strikes me that the indictment of so conspicuous a man as a Federal judge for negligence of duty may have a salutary effect. If His Honor should happen to go to jail for a brief term, the attractions of honorary directorships in railroad companies would be seriously impaired.

The Old Story.

Three Navajo Indians have been killed in Southern Utah by soldiers sent to enforce the orders of an Agency superintendent, and the Indian Bureau offers the hazy explanation that the trouble was caused by one Byillie's opposition to adoption of the white man's methods" and the disinclination of his band to "observe regulations." Byillie may be a bad Indian, but it is a good bet that the euphemistic phrases of the explanation cover the usual stupid tyranny of Indian Bureau officials and the natural resentment by Indians having personal dignity of fool interference with their private affairs. The Indians probably were ordered to cut their hair, wear store clothes or do distasteful work. The fact that the nature of the violated "regulations" and the rejected "white man's methods" is carefully concealed in the report is strong presumptive evidence that petty government officials have been exasperating the Navajoes just as they exasperated and nearly drove to desperate revolt the peaceful Hopis not long ago.

There is always some inspired idiot in the Indian Bureau service who cannot comprehend that an Indian is a man, that he has the right to be an Indian and to decline to adopt the fashions or customs of another race. If Byillie threatened to kill the agent, as reported, there was some other reason than pure cussedness for his anger. Modern Indians do not resist two troops of cavalry in these days unless they are driven to desperation.

An Iowa college president told a conference of high-school teachers that [illegible] destroys the modesty of girls to play basketball before men, and to make the fullest exposure of his mind complete he went into details, dwelling with the zest of a satyr on the "suggestive attitudes" of players of the game. The free, untrammeled movements of [illegible], male or female, suggests nothing evil to the normal, healthy mind, but modest girls might well hesitate to engage in any athletic sport before that college president after hearing him talk. The presence of a man so filled with [illegible], the mere consciousness of [illegible] a woman and subjected to his [illegible] would redden the cheeks of a modest maid. The mind of a man who can see nothing but indecency in the form of a woman needs fumigation.

Men Behind the Guns.

Our gun practice in the United States Army has improved almost miraculously since the Spanish War, if the reported results of target shooting given the public are true. And the coast artillerymen are credited with marksmanship even more wonderful than that of the battleship gunners.

The men behind the guns at Santiago were thought to be the greatest sharpshooters afloat, yet of all the projectiles, great and small, hurled by them at the Spanish ships less than four out of a hundred hit anything but the wide sea. Now the One Hundred and Fifteenth Company of the Coast Artillery, at San Diego, is officially credited with [illegible] per cent. of hits on a moving target at a range of 6000 yards. The target [illegible] yards wide and six and a half [illegible] high.

Commenting on this shooting, newspaper writers have pronounced it better than rifle practice which cuts the [illegible] of a playing card, but newspaper writers generally are equipped with profound and comprehensive ignorance of rifle practice, and emit nonsense when they write about anything connected with firearms. [illegible] newspaper writers and no novelists know the hammer of a gun from the trigger; they invariably cock a revolver, in their stories, by pulling the trigger, and it is always the hammer which clicks ominously when the hero pulls a gun on the villain. And their revolvers go on smoking like the Los Angeles gas works until the police arrive on the scene.

The shooting attributed to the Coast artillery is remarkably good, but it is not to be compared to expert rifle shooting in minute accuracy. The target described—sixteen yards long and six and a half yards high—is proportionately the same at 6000 yards as a [illegible] inches long and 7.8 inches high at 200 yards. Shooting from a rest at 200 yards, expert riflemen have put all their shots into a two-inch circle. Shooting off-hand, a fairly good marksman will put all his shots inside an eight-inch circle, which is the regulation bullseye. The Coast artillerymen shoot from an absolute rest; their guns are perfectly steady, and there is no deflection of aim by vibration of the marksman's body or by pulling the trigger. The range, elevation, windage and movement of the target are calculated accurately, and the gunner has only to sight the piece according to mathematical formula.

Movement of the target is the chief difficulty presented to the Coast gunner, but the relative motion of a target towed at a speed of ten knots, at a range of 6000 yards, is the same as a speed of six inches a second at 200 yards. To a rifleman it would be child's play to hit an eight by twenty-one-inch board, moving six inches a second, at 200 yards. A first-rate game shot will hit at that distance a deer running at the rate of forty feet a second. The Coast gunner, having the correct elevation for a known distance, has only to lead his target by about twice its length. If his target were a moving battleship, he could sight on the bow and his shot would strike amidships.

I am not trying to belittle the splendid work of the men behind the big guns; I only strive vainly to convince the artillerists of the daily press that hitting the side of a barn and picking off the eye-winkers of a fly are not identical feats of marksmanship.

Inane Sport.

A balloon "race" seems to me about as interesting sport as fly loo or betting on which of ten crows on a fence will caw first. A real race between gas bags that cannot be guided but must blow where the wind listeth is impossible. Once clear of the ground, a flock of balloons is helpless; it scatters as the winds determine and disappears in space, and no more is seen or heard of the "race" until the aëronauts let out gas and come down, not one of them knowing where the others may have drifted or landed, but hoping that he may have the luck to be farther from the starting point than anyone else. Rolling pumpkins down a hill is better sport.

THE LANCER.

THE MOTHER-HEART OF EVENING

When the sun is going down, and the shimmer of the light
Turns the simple cottage windows into jewels blinding bright,
Over all the spacious valley where the unknown people dwell
Draws the kindly touch of evening something like a tender spell,
So that gentle thoughts come softly for the myriad lives unseen,
Joined in heart, for now the subtle tides of evening flow between,
And we sense the one great longing, one divinity we greet—
Dim no longer as with distance—glorified and grand and sweet.

Like a vast warm bosom glowing 's the sunset world tonight,
All infused with rosy amber from the gracious western light;
And our souls look up in gladness, listen for the evensong.
Of the prophet stars approaching with a rhythm true and strong
Till it seems as if the sky with a mother-blessing smiled,
And we breathe a wonder-sigh like a happy little child—
Weary with the play of roving, ready now to be caressed
And with all save love forgotten, gathered sweetly home to rest.

RUBY ARCHER.

HOROSCOPE FOR THIS DAY.

Sunday, November 3, 1907.

This day a gentle influence doth shine
That toucheth pains and ills with hand benign.

The 307th day of the year. The moon, twenty-seven days old, is on the equator. Mercury is stationary in the zodiac. Mars and Jupiter are in benefic aspect with the moon.

Quarrel between the sexes is foreomened for this day. Let all discord be avoided zealously. Wander abroad. An excellent day to begin journeys in search of recuperation.

Good auspices shine on the hand and brain of surgeon and physician this day. Those who seek their aid in these twenty-four hours will find alleviation of pains or maladies.

A sign is set today of "darting peril" on the road. Drive cautiously. Cross highways with care.

Men whose birthdate this is will have an opportunity to travel in the coming twelve months. They will also experience a great change in business affairs. Powerful friends will aid them. Women whose birthdate this is have an ambitious year before them. The unmarried will be courted.

The boy born this day will rise in life and save money. Select his companions carefully, for it is written of him that much will come to him from friends.

The girl born today will marry early. She will be constant and unalterable in her devotion. In early life it will be well to restrain wisely a quixotic tendency to self-sacrifice for trivial reasons, that is pretty sure to develop.

ORIENTAL ART MUSEUM.

Like an Oriental museum of art is the second floor of the new building of the Boston Store, with its magnificent collection of curios and objects of art from India, Persia, Siam, Burmah, Ceylon, China, Japan, Kashmir, Thibet and Egypt. Even for its instructiveness, it is a display that is well worth seeing, while its main purpose, of course, is to tempt the buyer.

Mother Love.

Before you came to me, my dear,
I knew not what life meant.
'Twas as a barren plain unblessed
By Heaven's gifts; my soul, depressed,
Was longing for some nameless thing
Until you, dear, were sent.

My days were long and dreary, dear,
I craved a love unborn.
The swaying trees and scented flowers
Were naught to me; to mystic bowers
My spirit soared and ever searched
For you, my star of morn.

I pray to God each hour, my dear,
Your sweet soul to unlift;
And ask for life that I may guard
And keep your happiness unmarred,
This little crib holds all for me
Dear babe—God's greatest gift.

She Wanted the Cherry.

Lieut. B., just arrived from duty in the Philippines, came eastward to New York with his wife, picking up en route their four-year-old daughter, who had been left with a friend during their absence.

"Well, as we shall remain only one night," said Mrs. B., "I vote for the Manhattan."

The couple were suddenly electrified by their little girl sitting up and in drowsy tones inquiring:

"Oh, mamma, may I have the cherry?"—[Lippincott's.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Four hundred teamsters hauling sand from the river have combined to fight attempts to license the sand wagons or to lease the river bed.

Seeking to catch a bear market before it gets away, the Council and Board of Public Works passed emergency resolutions yesterday for the immediate purchase of $40,000 worth of copper wire.

Health Officer Powers and his waste crusaders have been summoned to appear before the Council Monday and explain why so many rats are escaping from the Board of Health drag-net.

Dana Burks Investment Company of Ocean Park starts suit against woman client who made payment on some lots, but quit.

Spiders spinning webs the busiest beings in the Courthouse during the bank holidays.

Twenty-nine Japanese, charged with violating the liquor laws, were fined $25 each yesterday in Police Court by Justice Austin.

AT THE CITY HALL.

ASK FOR LEASE OF RIVER BED.

MANY SEEK CONCESSIONS ON RENTAL BASIS.

Sand Haulers Hold Monopoly at Present and Combat All Attempts to Secure Revenue from Sale of Sand—Proposal to License Wagons Going to River Starts Rumpus.

The river bed is becoming an issue at the City Hall. Half a dozen different interests have discovered all at once that the possibilities of this valuable property are being neglected, and a number of proposals are incubating to divide with the city revenue from some kind of river-bed concession.

Contractor Doran is preparing to present to the Council at an early date an application in amended form for a concession to take sand from the river. A week ago Doran asked for an exclusive concession, and the Council declined to even consider the request. Now he is going to ask for a concession that will cover only a portion of the river bed, leaving sufficient territory for the sand haulers to exercise their monopoly over the remainder.

One coterie of pink-tea reformers is preparing to make an issue of a proposal to build a railway line along the river bank and preserve it as a means of egress for any transcontinental railway that happens to come along. Another branch of the same society thinks that the river bed should be macadamized and made the nucleus for a magnificent boulevard system. They think a narrow strip along one side is all that is needed to carry away the water.

A pertinent suggestion has come from a former Superintendent of Streets that the city should pass an ordinance licensing all wagons hauling sand from the bed of the river. He says that this is a practical method of securing a revenue from the users of the city's property, one that will entail no expense, and will not put the sand haulers out of business. At the present time about 400 teams are hauling sand from the river and selling it to grading and building contractors. A license of 10 cents a day on each wagon would bring the city a revenue of about $1000 a month.

This license proposal will be fought bitterly by the sand-haulers' lobby. These have enjoyed a monopoly of the use of the river bed for many years, and they will not yield that monopoly without a struggle. A number of attempts have been made in the past to secure a revenue for the city from the sale of sand, but no ordinance has had sufficient backing to put it past the political lobby of the sand men.

PLAYING THE MARKET.

EMERGENCY COPPER PURCHASE.

The Council and the Board of Public Works adopted emergency regulations yesterday for the immediate purchase of 800 miles of copper wire. The reason given for the haste to close the contract is that copper wire is advancing at the rate of ½ cent per hundred pounds a day and delay might mean a heavy financial loss to the city.

Thursday the Board of Public Works instructed the City Clerk to advertise for bids for copper wire to be used for power transmission, for telephone service, and for trolley wire along the Los Angeles aqueduct. Bids were to be received on Monday. Yesterday morning the board concluded that the time had come to close a contract. Waiting for two days looked to mean higher copper.

At the request of the board the Council met in special session to pass a resolution authorizing the emergency purchase. The resolution provides that the price paid shall not be greater than $17.50 per hundred pounds. The aqueduct bureau estimates that the actual cost of the wire will be about $40,000.

The Board of Public Works reports that about 400 miles of the wire will be used for power transmission along the aqueduct; a similar amount will be used to establish a municipal long-distance telephone service. About five miles of wire will be wanted for the municipal trolley line which the city will build from its cement plant to the line of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

This resolution for the purchase of wire establishes a precedent in corporation finances. It is the first time that the city has made use of the emergency clause in the charter for the purpose of "playing" the market.

"We are making this purchase just as a private corporation would make it," said Councilman Wallace, chairman of the Finance Committee. "The Council and the members of the Board of Public Works feel pretty certain that the copper market has struck bottom, and that delay in making a purchase means a considerable financial loss."

If the copper market should prove unruly and drop 3 or 4 cents this week the Council and the board might find some difficulty in explaining their market operations with bond money.

COUNCIL WANTS TO KNOW.

DOUBTFUL ABOUT CRUSADE.

The Council Finance Committee has called for the physicians having charge of the present crusade against filth to attend the Council meeting next Monday afternoon and report progress. Some of the legislators are not fully satisfied with the present progress of the crusaders.

Health Officer Powers went before the Finance Committee yesterday morning to ask that the "clean-up" ordinance be amended by the addition of a penalty clause. When the ordinance was presented originally it contained this clause, but it became tangled in the red tape and failed to find its way to the printer. Dr. Powers asked also that the ordinance be so amended that the rat catchers may get their money at the end of each week. He said that most of them are calling for time checks and discounting these with money lenders.

The committee had some interesting questions to ask about the number of rats actually caught, and the number of loads of refuse carried away and burned. The answers were not wholly satisfactory, and the committee asked that the physicians of the County Medical Association on the clean-up committee go before the Council Monday and explain.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

WANTS MONEY FOR ITS LOTS.

DANA BURKS COMPANY STARTS SUIT AGAINST CLIENT.

Purchaser of Land from Ocean Park Concern Pays Only in Part and Quits, Wherefore Seller Gets Into Action—All of Which Keeps "Mayor" in the Limelight.

Some of Dana Burks's dealings in real estate are presented in an interesting light in a complaint filed yesterday in the Superior Court.

The action is brought by the Dana Burks Investment Company against E. J. Slauson, who, it seems, purchased some lots from the concern in 1905, and seeks to get $2377.46 from Miss Slauson in one way or another.

The contracts for the purchase of six lots, as related in the complaint, were signed in Ocean Park at various times in the latter part of 1905 and early in the following year. First payments were made on the various lots, separately, ranging from $350 to $630, and small sums were paid to the Dana Burks concern from time to time as interest.

When $2961.34 had been paid by Miss Ella Slauson, on the six lots, leaving only $2377.46 to pay in order to secure title, she seems to have decided that it was not worth while to go on. According to the complaint, she refused to make the second and third payments.

Wherefore the Dana Burks concern has started the present action against her, not merely to recover possession of the property, but to assure itself the full amount which remains unpaid.

The plaintiff asks the court to make an order for the sale of the property in question, the money received to be applied toward the payment of the balance due from Miss Slauson in the event of her retaining the property.

One of the various actions brought by Dana Burks for alleged damage to his reputation was to have come up last Friday, in an argument on a demurrer to the complaint filed by counsel for Abbot Kinney, but the bank holidays intervened. Another matter, now in the hands of Justice Stephens, in which Burks is concerned, hangs fire for the same reason. This is the charge of criminal libel against Editor Holt.

SPIDERS GET BUSY.

HOLIDAYS JUST SUIT 'EM.

Not even in the course of the State campaign, which was nearing its close just a year ago, was the name of Gov. Gillett on so many tongues in and about the Courthouse as it was yesterday.

"When will it end?" was the general question, and the usual comment on the situation was: "The work is piling up."

Everybody—judges, clerks and all—had to come over and see. Some could depart in sadness, and others had to stay.

Some of the principals in pending divorce cases, set for trial in the past three days, sat waiting patiently for more than an hour in Department Six, apparently hoping their cases might be attended to.

Many hunting licenses were isued in the office of the County Clerk, and no falling off in the number of marriage licenses was apparent. But nobody filed an action for divorce. Possibly the divorce atorneys, in or out of the "ring," were discouraged at the formidable array of cases now awaiting trial.

Nothing was done in the justice's courts, beyond the issuing of a warrant or two on misdemeanor charges. And that was as far as action could go along that line, for no arrests may be made by the constables in such cases while the holidays continue.

No criminal complaints were sworn to in the office of the District Attorney, and the constables thus were compelled to join the throng of men who simply wait.

A few fat spiders, drawing false conclusions from the quiet, staked out homesteads in the cool, dark building on the hill, and proceeded to establish themselves, but their action was ill-advised. The action of the Governor does not have the effect of suspending the activity of the Courthouse janitors, and they have free sway these days in their domain. At any hour they may go into any departments and sweep and scrub, not having to wait upon the comings and goings of the judges.

And the Courthouse is as clean as it is quiet.

However, in a whirl of much dust and great noise, the strenuous activity will be resumed with pent-up force tomorrow, if the Governor concludes to ring off on the holidays tonight.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

ADMIT GUILT AND PAY FINES.

JAPANESE "BLIND PIG" OWNERS MAKE NO DEFENSE.

Their Violation of Law Thought to Be Due More to Ignorance Than to a Desire to Evade Payment of License—Russian Steals Bicycle to Save Car Fare.

Following the raid of Friday night on the Japanese lodging-houses of the East First street and San Pedro street districts, twenty-nine Japanese appeared before Justice Austin in Police Court yesterday morning and every one of them pleaded guilty as charged.

Information alleging that the Japanese sold liquor without a license were filed before Justice Austin. The courtroom looked as though the Japanese labor proposition had been called up for settlement. Great casks of wine, whisky and beer and huge kegs and tubs of saki wine, a Japanese gin, made from distilled rice, were brought into court as evidence.

Most of the Japanese were represented by attorneys, but they did not care to fight. When told of the character of the evidence advanced against them they told Justice Austin that they were willing to pay whatever the court saw fit to fine them.

Fines of $25 each were imposed, and $725 was paid into the city treasury. Two of the Japanese restaurant keepers who were released on bail Friday night failed to make an appearance in court, and Justice Austin issued bench warrants for the arrest of these men. Heavier fines may be imposed upon them.

The Japanese yesterday, in many cases, pleaded ignorance. They told the court that they had paid a revenue tax to a Federal officer, and that they thought that was all that was necessary.

The beer secured from the various "blind pigs" is of Los Angeles brew, with the exception of the Japanese gin. The police are now debating as to what they will do with the liquor.

Stole Bicycle.

Because his wife and baby were ill, Alexis Torko, a Russian lumberman, yesterday escaped a felony charge, and, instead, was tried and found guilty of a misdemeanor. Torko stole a bicycle from a curb on Jackson street. He did not know how to ride the bicycle, but, according to his statement in court yesterday, he wanted to learn to ride and save car fare for the care of his little family. He was caught with the wheel in his possession. He was fined $25, with the alternative of twenty-five days, and his friends raised the money to get him out of jail.

Fight Over Water.

An argument as to who should have control of water on a lot near Indiana avenue and East First street caused a neighborhood row, Friday, which resulted yesterday in the arrest of Henry Richards of East First street. Richards pleaded guilty to calling Mrs. Frank Chaloton "an animated corkscrew," and he was fined $5.

Opening of the Toy Department

5th
STREET STORE

Tomorrow we formally open the toy department, occupying when finished the entire top floor of the corner building. It's a spacious, well lighted room, with excellent elevator service, wide, easy stair cases. And it's filled with just the sort of things to delight and fascinate the children. There are no "Keep off the grass," "Don't handle the toys" signs about the department. It's a place we want the children to feel free in and to come freely to. It's our first season in toys; prices have been figured on a basis low enough to cause this new department to at once assume a place of first importance. These are samples for tomorrow.

HAS HOPE.

BULLETS DON'T STOP ACTION.

Now Court Makes Peremptory Trial Order.

Williams Will Have to Show Right to Ranch.

Reid Still Lives to Fight for Home.

Barring holidays, a case which has been pending for a year, replete with human interest and dramatic points, will come to trial in Department Five of the Superior Court tomorrow.

The action is that brought by aged William Reid, to recover title to his home, against C. B. Williams, a real estate and insurance agent in this city. Williams was an intimate acquaintance of William J. McKinley, nephew of the octogenarian, who now is serving a ten-year sentence in State prison for an assault upon his aged uncle with intent to commit murder.

Few situations, even in the Criminal Department of the Superior Court, have been more dramatic than the impulsive appeal of the old man to Judge Smith, for leniency for the misguided simpleton who had shot him five times in the head.

The trial of McKinley ended May 24. Learned counsel which defended him, though he was without funds of his own, had tried to throw discredit on the old man's story that he had been shot at all, in spite of his mangled and sightless eye and the scars on his face, because there was no surgeon to testify to having extracted any of the bullets. Wherefore, during the noon recess of court May 23, the old man had gone to the Receiving Hospital to undergo an operation which resulted in the finding of a flattened leaden bullet in his head, above the right temple.

Weak from the operation, bowed by the weight of his eighty years, he yet held his bandaged head high while attorneys Allender and Sturges cross-examined him scornfully.

"They are trying to make me tell lies," the witness said in indignant appeal to the judge.

And then, at the close of his testimony, he implored Judge Smith:

"He was obliged to do this shooting, judge. Be easy on him as you can."

FIGHTS FOR HIS RIGHTS.

The civil suit, by which the old man hoped to regain title to his four-acre ranch on the Santa Monica line, just beyond the city limits, was filed in the Superior Court November 16, 1906. Soon afterward Reid's nephew, McKinley, who had been staying with Williams at times, went out to the little ranch and raised some trouble with his uncle, finally attacking him. For this the weak-witted young man was ordered by Justice Pierce to keep away from the ranch.

December 14 McKinley went again, with a 22-caliber revolver which he had purchased a few days before, arriving late at night at his uncle's home. He knocked at the door, and the old man admitted him. The shooting followed without a word being spoken, according to Reid's testimony. The old man fell, and lay weltering in his blood all night.

In the morning McKinley and C. B. Williams drove out to the ranch, and found the old man still alive, cared for by neighbors who had found him.

"Fatally injured," ran the headlines in the papers. But Reid lived to send his nephew to the pen, though with seeming unwillingness. He has lived until now, and tomorrow Williams must face him in court.

On one plea and another the case has been continued many times, and once it went off the calendar. Recently, when it was again set for trial, Edwin A. Meserve, counsel for C. B. Williams, moved for another continuance, declaring that he had to go to Philadelphia.

William Reid, broken as he was, lived on, and is still alive.

Judge Conrey refused to grant another continuance; tomorrow the case will come to trial, and once more the old man, who refuses to die, will take the witness stand, this time to denounce a man for whom he has no such lingering affection as he showed for the nephew who had tried to murder him.

STRANGE STORY.

The title of the case is "William Reid vs. C. B. Williams, the Union Trust Company and the German-American Savings Banks." A strange story is told in the complaint, which charges that Williams never paid a dollar of his own to secure his alleged title to the little ranch.

"Prior July 14, 1906," runs the complaint, "the title of the property was vested in Joseph Wannop to secure a loan of $3500. From January 1 to July 14 C. B. Williams, falsely and fraudulently, and for the purpose of obtaining the record title, to defraud plaintiff of the property, represented that Joseph Wannop was attempting to dispose of the said property for his own benefit."

Joseph Wannop, who appears to have been a friend in need to William Reid in his tribulation and poverty, was not aware of what was going on, it seems.

According to the complaint, a deed transferring the property from Joseph Wannop to C. B. Williams was prepared, to be executed and placed in the hands of the Los Angeles Abstract and Trust Company until Williams should pay the sum of $3500 to Wannop. The latter signed the instrument, at the bidding of Reid, July 14, and on the same date, the complaint related, $3500 was paid by the German-American Savings Bank to Wannop, Williams secured the deed and had it recorded.

GETS CONTROL.

Williams, the complaint declares, had promised to hold the deed only as security for the $3500 which he claimed to have paid to Wannop.

An attempt on the part of Williams to sell part of the property to "John Doe," it is alleged, caused the filing of the suit, thus preventing the purposed sale.

It is claimed that Williams secured the $3500 on a deed of trust to the same property, deposited in the German-American Savings Bank, and did not advance any money of his own.

The complaint relates that one Carne, October 31, 1906, made Reid an offer of $10,500 for the place, and that Reid then sought Williams and asked him to come to an attorney's office for the purpose of receiving payment of the loan and releasing the property. Williams agreed to go, but did not. Another offer was made, it is alleged, to pay Williams the amount of the loan, with interest as agreed, and he refused.

The complaint asks that Williams be compelled to come into court, with representatives of the German-American Savings Bank, to receive the money, and that Williams be forever enjoined from asserting any claim to title in the property.

Strenuous efforts were made by detectives of the District Attorney's office to get Williams into court, at the time of the preliminary examination of McKinley on the charge of assault with intent to commit murder, and without avail. Now he must come, or relinquish his long fight to secure the old man's ranch.

JAILED.

EXPERT CROOKS IN THE TOILS.

TWO CRACKSMEN ARRESTED BY CLEVER DETECTIVES.

Men Who Have Been Robbing Houses in Residence Districts Captured—Both Have Criminal Records and One Has Been Out of Prison Less Than a Month.

Detectives Home and Chapman yesterday made one of the most important captures of the year in the arrest of C. F. Puckett and George Bowers, ex-convicts and burglars, who were wanted for the robbery of the home of C. C. Maxon, No. 681 South Burlington avenue.

Both men, according to the statement from headquarters, have confessed to the burglary and to other crimes about Los Angeles and San Francisco. A telegram from San Francisco yesterday stated that Bowers was one of the smoothest men in the West. Captain of Detectives Martin of San Francisco further warned the local officials that Puckett is considered one of the most expert burglars in the State.

Both men are of good appearance, good looking and well dressed. They are not considered in the ranks of the ordinary crook, but are looked upon as artists in their trade.

Bowers was released from the State Penitentiary at San Quentin, October 7. He came directly to Los Angeles. At San Francisco a close watch was kept for him, as it was thought he would try some work in the confusion of the northern city.

The tourists of Los Angeles appealed to Bowers, as did certain information said to have been furnished him by John Lewis, a Los Angeles boy, who was sent to San Quentin on a nine-year term, several months ago. Lewis, it is thought, supplied the information because Bowers upon his arrival here immediately took up the game just where Lewis and two of his confederates left it off.

Less than a week after his arrival in Los Angeles, Bowers was spotted by Detective Home. Home went to hear the Milan grand opera sing "Il Trovatore." Bowers is passionately fond of music. He is a Jew, and music has caused him to take desperate chances before. Also, Bowers is passionately fond of other people's jewelry.

He went to hear the opera, and sat in the first balcony, several rows ahead of where Home was sitting. Home happened to look down at the man. He caught him in the act of reaching out to "dip" a gold watch and charm from the shoulder of a woman who sat next him. The darkness and the confusion of applause gave him the opportunity he wanted, but just as his hands reached for the watch, he caught Home watching him, and he pretended to be interested in the opera again.

Home shadowed him from that time on. He sent North for his record. Bowers had been sent to the penitentiary from Los Angeles on a five-year term and from San Francisco on a short term. Puckett had never been convicted of a crime before.

While Chapman and Home were shadowing Bowers, they watched him meet Puckett. Puckett is also very fond of music and an accomplished musician. It is said he works as a waiter during the evening and then plies his other trade in the small hours of the morning.

Bowers met Puckett by accident in a Broadway 5 and 10-cent store. Puckett was buying a mandolin pick, and Bowers was looking over the scenery.

They went out together, with Home and Chapman after them. Several days ago, the men were again heard from, when a man arrested by the police told them that two new "guns" from San Francisco were working the fashionable homes in the Westlake district.

Yesterday Home and Chapman trailed Bowers and Puckett to a South Main-street store, and there watched while the two men sold two "diamonds," worth 10 cents each, to a merchant for $80. The men were then arrested and taken before Capt. Flammer. Flammer ordered that the men be taken to the pawn shops. They were identified at a Main-street place as the men who pawned the silverware and jewelry taken from the home of C. C. Maxon, No. 681 Burlington avenue, which was robbed October 23.

The Maxons were away from home at the time on a visit to Fresno. The windows of the fashionable home were jimmied, and the burglars ransacked the rooms, securing silverware and jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. This robbery was performed just two weeks after Bowers left the penitentiary.

Yesterday the police stated that the men made a full confession, and even told where they procured the tools with which the robbery was committed.

Conviction against Bowers may send him to prison for life, or for a long term of years, under the Inveterate Criminal Act.

The men were arraigned in Justice Austin's Police Court yesterday, and will be tried as soon as the holidays are over. In the meantime, Detectives Chapman and Home are trying to connect the two men with other robberies committed recently in Los Angeles.

COURT IN A COOP.

Justice Austin Assigned to a Room Little Better Than a Large Closet.

By an act of the City Council last week, Police Justice Austin has been relegated to a small room at the Police Station with a space just 10x10, in which to hold court, deal out justice and sentence criminals.

Every police judge in the city has protested, but without avail, and as a result of the action of the Council, Justice Austin yesterday held court in Justice Frederickson's department, and a jumble in the court calenders followed.

The justices thus far have been compelled to act like setting hens, for whenever one gets off the bench for five minutes another promptly comes in and takes a "setting" for as long as he can hold his own against all comers.

This condition has existed ever since the appointment of Justice Austin, some months ago. He has had no courtroom. Various committees have inspected the Police Station to find some corner where another courtroom might be arranged. It was at first decided to put a courtroom into one corner of the policemen's assembly-room, on the top floor of the building. Chief Kern promptly raised such a shriek of protest that the committee from the Council beat a hasty retreat.

An idea of putting a floor half-way up the walls in Justice Chambers courtroom and make a double-decker courtroom, like the Coronado beach cars, was the next suggestion, but that too was abandoned. Then came the action of last week, which the police justices consider an insult to Justice Austin. This is to be his courtroom, his sitting-room and his chambers, besides his library, his clerk's apartments, his jury-room and his prisoner's dock.

The room is ten feet wide and ten feet long, with one small window in it. Until some arrangement has been made Justice Austin will have to hold his Police Court in the other courtrooms during the hours when the other justices are not occupying the bench.

REMAINS IN COUNTY JAIL.

Convicted Murder Besold to Be Kept Here Until Supreme Court Decides His Case.

Anton Besold, who was tried and convicted for the murder of his wife, Cladie, several months ago, will remain in the County Jail until his appeal is heard by the Supreme Court at its January sitting in this city. Besold's attorney expected to argue his appeal from the verdict in the lower court at the recent session of the Supreme Court, but, owing to delay of the Attorney-General in filing his reply brief, the case went over.

The defendant, who will spend the rest of his life in the penitentiary, unless granted a new trial by the higher tribunal, was arrested in Washington, D. C., a little more than a year ago. His capture was due to some clever detective work on the part of a deputy sheriff. When the body of an unidentified woman was discovered in Temescal Cañon, the apparent absence of clews baffled the sleuths of the city for a long time.

A bullet hole through the skull of the dead woman pointed either to suicide or murder. The body was beyond recognition. The only distinguishing feature was a beautiful head of blonde hair. After various theories had been exploded and the grewsome find in the cañon near Santa Monica seemed to add one more to the long list of murder mysteries, finally a slight clew was obtained.

From laundry marks on the clothing of the deceased, patient effort identified the woman as Cladie Besold. Then began a search for the husband. He was located in Washington. When brought back to Los Angeles the man put up an elaborate theory of defense, but he was found guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Attorney A. A. Sturges fully expects to secure a new trial. The prosecution avers that a new trial might result in a verdict of murder in the first degree, the punishment for which is death.

Quality My Specialty

My desire in advertising is to convince a large number of people that dentistry can be done permanently and artistically; that good looks, good health and comfort are within the reach of any one afflicted with bad teeth.

I have inaugurated the popular-price system in dentistry so that wealth is not a necessary adjunct in obtaining relief from the tortures of bad teeth. True, I make less than the dentist who charges you $10.00 for the same crown I make for $5.00, but the future will pay me good interest on the investment. I give you the classiest dentistry possible at any price. And again, true, I could make more immediate money by using a less costly material (a la faker,) but no—it don't pay.

Besides the moral phase of the question, it is a business proposition to give a square deal. When I say I will make the BEST Gold or Porcelain Crown for $5.00, I mean the best—best in every way. It's the same with Bridge Work.

I will give you 50 PER CENT. more in value in my Plate Work Department than you can get elsewhere—actually 50 PER CENT. SAVED (i. e., $20.00 Plate for $10.00, or $10.00 for $5.00.) More good looks, comfort, usefulness for less money. That's worth your while.

THREE PRINCIPALS IN NOTABLE FIGHT FOR PRINCESS.

Princess Anne Monica.

King of Saxony.

Former Crown Princess of Saxony, Signor Toselli, and William Le Queux, the writer.

King Determined to Reclaim His Daughter.

Picture shows King of Saxony, his former wife, who was the Princess Louise, with her present husband, Signor Toselli, and the baby Princess, who is now with her mother, but whom her royal father seeks to secure.

MOTHER'S LOVE.

KING WOULD KIDNAP ERRING WIFE'S CHILD.

Saxony's Ruler Redoubles Efforts to Get Possession of Princess Anne Monica Pia, but Mother Tenaciously Clings to Her Baby.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 20.—A king and his cast-off wife in a thrilling battle for the possession of a little blue-eyed princess, the king calling to his aid powerful allies and secret emissaries, detectives and kidnapers, and the woman armed with little else save the cunning which is born of a mother's love for her child in danger.

All this sounds like the scenario of the wildest romance, but it is the brief outline of a drama of real life now being enacted.

The King of Saxony is the monarch referred to, his former wife the woman, and their child, the Princess Anne Monica Pia, the object of the terrible game.

CLINGS TO HER BABY.

The spectacle of the woman defying the ruler and battling tenaciously to keep her baby—more precious now than life to her—is one which has thrilled all Europe.

The King of Saxony has planned and schemed and fought for possession of Princess Monica ever since she saw the light of day, four years ago, soon after his wife had eloped with a court tutor because the love she craved was more to her than anything the palace of a ruler could offer.

King Frederick has been baffled at every turn, but an event has just taken place which has caused him to redouble his efforts to tear the child from her mother's arms. And because she loves the child more each day, and because the flame of her hatred for the King has been fed by various incidents from time to time, the royal ex-wife is doubly determined to thwart her former husband until the last.

Nearly sixteen years ago—November 21, 1891—there was a grand wedding ceremony which united the fortunes and destines of Frederick Augustus, then Crown Prince of Saxony, and Princess Louise, daughter of the exiled Duke of Tuscany, a brilliant and beautiful girl of 21.

LOVELESS MATCH.

The Prince had fallen in love with the Princess soon after she left school. Her parents saw the advantage of such a union, and although the daughter protested vehemently, they persuaded her finally to consent to the marriage. And so, with a loveless match from the first, at least so far as the bride was concerned, there was written the preface for a scandal which in after years was to astound every court in Europe.

All Saxony rejoiced at the union, for the reigning monarch was old and infirm, and the prospect of a beautiful and accomplished Queen to share the popularity of the Crown Prince when he should be called to the throne, pleased the people.

The Crown Princess was a student of languages, something of a painter, an ardent horsewoman and a devotee of outdoor sports. She loved cycling, walking, riding and dancing, and insisted that her enjoyment of these pleasures be hampered with as little formality as possible.

ENDS IN ELOPEMENT.

Her desire to override convention angered the King, who thought that his wife should maintain the dignity incumbent upon a Crown Princess. He reproved her on several occasions, and this, it is said, led to the quarrel which resulted finally in the thrilling elopement.

The climax came late in 1902, when the Princess, who had developed a fondness for amateur theatricals, appeared at a palace entertainment as a servant and blacked a pair of boots in one of the scenes. Frederick Augustus stormed and raved about this incident, and the quarrel which resulted was the beginning of the end.

The couple had seven children, five of whom survived, and the Princess had been a most dutiful and loving mother. Her popularity was undoubted, and when it was voiced abroad that she and her husband had disagreed all the sympathy was with her.

Then, like a thunderbolt, came the scandal. The Princess's name was associated with that of M. Giron, a tutor at the palace, a lady of the court having made a discovery and reported it to the Prince. Giron was dismissed, and the Princess fled from Dresden to her father's home at Salzburg, and besought her parent to consent to a divorce. Her brother sided with her, but her father was adamant. He would not hear of recourse to law to mend a family dissention, though he still had faith in his daughter and refused to listen to the Giron story.

JOINS HER LOVER.

So, left alone in her grief, and with none at home to aid her, the Princess decided to sacrifice all for the sake of the man she loved. Leaving her husband and her five children, Louise went to Zurich, where Giron awaited her, and the two went to Geneva.

It is said that her brother helped her in her flight to join her lover, that he took her from her father's castle by a secret route, hid her in the waiting-room at Salzburg, and took her all the way to Zurich.

Every effort was made at Dresden to hush the tongue of the scandal mongers, and to force the Princess to return. This having failed, the Crown Prince hurriedly divorced his wife. The death of his father was imminent at this time, and the separation was hastened to prevent the erring Princess from ever claiming the title of Queen.

Meanwhile the unhappy Louise wandered about with her affinity in deadly fear of being caught and sent to a convent. Her lover left her in a few weeks, either from a desire [illegible] simplify negotiations between the royal couple or become the Saxon ruler's emissaries had made his position uncomfortable. The Princess's chief regret was the loss of her children, and she wept day and night for them.

STRUGGLE FOR CHILDREN BEGINS.

A short time after she ran away her little daughter, Anne Monica Pia, was born, and then began the struggle between the Saxon court and the mother, which continues to this day, and will continue as long as the former Crown Princess can keep the child from the clutches of the father's minions.

The Crown Prince became King soon after this, upon the death of his father. He gave strict orders that his former wife never be allowed to see her children, and that the Princess Monica be brought to his court at all hazards. He contended that the child should be placed in a convent, and there, by a life of religious devotion, expiate the sins of her mother.

The former Princess, meanwhile took the title of Countess of Montignoso, and went to live with her baby daughter in a villa belonging to her father, near Florence, Italy. She obtained guards to watch the place, and these guards have been kept busy ever since keeping the Saxon King's agents away from the baby Princess.

Once, in 1904, the Countess Montignoso tried to enter the palace at Dresden to see her children. She was driven away weeping, but the populace recognized her and made a demonstration in her favor. So great was the clamour over keeping mother and children apart that the King was forced last year to allow her to see the little ones. But he compelled her to hold the interview in the presence of court officials.

HATRED OF KING INCREASES.

This insult to his former wife has increased her hatred of the King tenfold, and the battle over little Monica rages more bitterly than ever.

About a year ago the Countess and ex-Princess met Signor Enrico Toselli, an Italian pianist, and the two fell in love. Going to London together recently they were married by a registrar, in the presence of William Le Queux, the writer. They are now living with Princess Monica, at the Florentine villa.

News of the marriage has spurred the King of Saxony to redouble his efforts to recover Monica. The latter, now 4 years old, is aware of the King's desire to kidnap her, and she is just mischievous enough and curious enough to give the Saxon agents a chance to take her—just to see what would happen. She plays at kidnaping with dolls, it is said, and rehearses her own romance in the nursery. The guards at the villa have been doubled, therefore, and new precautions are being taken for the girl's safety.

Princess Monica is very proud and rather jealous of her mother's attentions to Toselli. Not long ago the latter tried to make Monica call him "papa," but the little lady drew herself up haughtily and exclaimed:

"My papa is the King of Saxony."

MA'S DUTIES.

Preserves and pickles—large the store,
  Are on the shelf,
And ma has now a chance once more
  To rest herself.

For she has naught to do but get
  Three meals a day,
And sweep and scrub and dust and let
  No cobweb stay.

Do all the family marketing
  To feed the pack,
And tote a basket big to bring
  The fodder back.

And take care of the bird and cat
  And feed the dog,
And, just to show pa where he's at,
  His memory jog.

What dull hours idleness would send,
  Oh, goodness knows,
If she had not a chance to mend
  The children's clo'es.

STATE'S TREASURES.

MARVELOUS RICHES OF OUR CALIFORNIA.

BY G. W. BURTON.

ALONG in the early sixties a dry year occurred in California, and the small, scattering population, attracted by the discovery of gold, and engaged for the most part in mining, came near starving to death. Little did they know that they were living in the midst of a country of productive soils which made the gold values of the State small by comparison.

It was some years after before an attempt was made to produce wheat on a scale which would permit of any export trade. As late as into the seventies nearly all the cured meats consumed in California came from the East. Here in Los Angeles the small population of those early days depended upon the northern portion of California for a large part of their supplies of potatoes. In the north, mining was looked upon as the only industry that would pay, and in the south we thought cattle raising was the only use to which the plains could be put.

The California State Board of Trade estimates that the agricultural products of the soil of California, added to the products of the mines, amounts to an annual average of $358,000,000.

Note how this wealth divides itself. The cereal products amounted to nearly $40,000,000, other field products to nearly $50,000,000, domestic animals and their products $75,000,000, vineyards nearly $11,000,000, orchards nearly $42,000,000, and garden truck over $6,000,000. The mineral production of the State, including petroleum, cement and coal, is set down at $48,000,000, lumber $72,000,000 and other products of the forests $15,000,000.

As recently as 1890 there were shipped out of the State a little over 16,000 carloads of all kinds of fruits. For 1906 these shipments ran to over 87,000 carloads, of which 109,000 tons were deciduous fruits in their natural condition, 382,000 tons citrus fruits, 108,000 tons dried fruits, over 40,000 tons raisins over 64,000 tons canned fruits, more than 82,000 tons green vegetables.

The fruit products of the State go not only to furnish food for those dwelling in the Eastern States of the Union, but a large portion is exported. The State produces about 120,000,000 pounds of prunes, of which 80,000,000 pounds are consumed in this country and 40,000,000 are exported.

A dozen years ago the wine product of California amounted to nearly 15,000,000 gallons, more than 9,000,000 gallons being dry wines and a little less than 5,000,000 sweet wines. Last year there were produced 26,000,000 gallons of dry wines and 15,000,000 of sweet. We are producing nearly 100,000 tons of beet sugar. The report shows that there were 5,000,000 domestic animals in the State, valued at about $90,000,000. The hay crop of the State is put at $32,000,000.

The report points out that in 1900 the production of petroleum had grown to 4,000,000 barrels. Ten years previously it had only been 403,000 barrels. For 1906 it is stated to have been 32,000,00 barrels.

This is perhaps the most astonishing item in the great growth of wealth production in the State It is about thirty years since crude oil was discovered in California on a scale justifying the working of wells. These first wells were in Pico Canyon and it is said to have cost Charles N. Felton a quarter of a million dollars to get the first paying well in that territory. Hole after hole proved "dry," but with obstinate persistence the former Senator from California kept putting "good money after bad" until he made it all very good. Attempts had been made at tapping the oil deposits in various parts of the State twelve of fifteen years before this, but the efforts were futile. For the current year it is estimated that the production of petroleum will not be less than 37,000,000 barrels.

As late as well into the eighties the great drawback experienced in developing manufacturing industries in the State was the lack of cheap fuel. The Board of Trade, which undertook to do work similar to that of the Chamber of Commerce of our day, held a meeting in the rooms of the association in the Baker block, at which eastern manufacturers were invited to speak. The only fuel known in those days here was imported coal costing, at San Pedro, by the cargo, $7 a ton. These eastern men pointed out that they laid coal down by the doors of their furnaces for $1.50 a ton, and that this high cost of fuel made it absolutely prohibitive to enter upon manufacturing in this State on a large scale.

California now, with this annual production of millions of barrels of crude oil, has the cheapest fuel for power purposes known to the industries of the world. We are producing not only enough for our own uses, but we are supplying the whole western coast of America from Chile to Alaska with this cheap fuel oil. We are sending it across the Pacific to Japan. When the pipe line now being constructed across the Isthmus of Panama is complete, California petroleum will compete for the market of our Eastern States, of Europe and of Africa.

The petroleum product of the State is by far the most valuable this year of any product of the earth. The citrus fruit of Southern California is worth all told to all interests, including railroads, which haul this fruit, an estimated value of $34,000,000. The gold production of the State last year was worth about $19,000,000. This petroleum is worth $1 a barrel wholesale, making the total value of the production approximate $40,000,000 for the coming year.

The interesting point in connection with this petroleum deposit of the State is its extent and the length of time it is likely to last. The Union Oil Company of this State, about the largest operator in the industry, which has contracts to furnish 10,000 barrels a month to Chile for a series of years and to deliver in Japan some 2,000,000 barrels within a period of a few years, is said to hold oil territory sufficient to last at the present rate of production for 200 years. Experts in the oil field contend that it will take centuries to exhaust the oil fields of California.

As said above, it is about thirty years since the first wells were pumped in Pico Canyon. These wells are producing fairly at the present time at about the same depth as the first wells were bored. In the Puente field, where the production has been in progress for about twenty-five years, the first successful wells were about 1000 feet deep. The following wells went 50 per cent. deeper, with the result of getting a very much larger production to each well. Perhaps the deepest wells in the world are in the Santa Maria field, where one has been driven to a depth of 4500 feet. Those that are down in the most favorable locations are in some cases yielding several thousands of barrels a day.

The field is continually being expanded. It lies almost entirely in what is known as Southern California, the central part of the San Joaquin Valley being the farthest point north where successful boring has been done.

The bearing of this upon the future industries of the State is of a magnitude which cannot be overestimated. Two and a half barrels of oil are capable of producing as much power as a ton of coal. The oil requires no labor. It is self-feeding and produces the steadiest power known in the industrial world. With this enormous production of such cheap fuel and with a field incapable of exhaustion in centuries, the manufacturing interests will be expanded with absolute confidence.

HOROSCOPES OF PROMINENT MEN.

NO. V—HENRY E HUNTINGTON.

BY M. J. BOUTELLE.

Henry Edwards Huntington, financier, capitalist, railway magnate, knight of the buzzing trolley, uplifter at large for the prosperity of Southern California, was born in Oneonta, N. Y., February 27, 1850, on which date the solar system positions were as follows: Saturn and Uranus in Aries, Mars in Gemini, Jupiter in Aquarius, and Neptune Venus and Sun in Pisces.

VENUS AND THE SUN.

In the nativity of Mr. Huntington exist three conditions which are powerful producers of good fortunes, and these are the close joining of Venus and Sun, the association of Moon with Jupiter, and the favorable relation between Mars and Uranus. Neptune, Venus and Sun being favorably situated in a watery sign attract him to regions bordering upon large bodies of water and bring him success and profit in such localities, while Moon and Jupiter well placed in Virgo, a sign governing country districts, agriculture and horticulture, give a fondness for rural scenes and environments, and confer a disposition to establish and maintain business enterprises in such localities.

Present conditions in the nativity of Mr. Huntington are good, and they will in the future increase and strengthen. He has before him an active and prosperous period, one in which his enterprises will be distinctly enlarged and extended, and wherein the financial returns from his investments will be much greater than during the past few years.

CONSTRUCTIVE.

The constructive element is strong in his horoscipe, and except as adverse legislation and depressed business conditions are liable to hinder, the public can, with confidence, anticipate the extension of his lines of travel to and along the Coast and in other directions, according as agricultural and horticultural development and progress may warrant.

The Marquis of Bute owns the finest private residence in the world, and the largest in Great Britain, which cost $10,000,000. Everything from a dining-room to aquarium is to be seen there, and among other things three libraries, swimming and Turkish baths, aviaries, a billiard-room and a dining-room which will accommodate 200 guests.

A SOUTHERN FAVORITE.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS TALKS OF HIMSELF AND UNCLE REMUS.

—BY JAMES B. MORROW.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Oct. 26—What he did, but I had come hundreds of miles, and doubtless there was some entreaty in that, was an unexpected outrage against a traditional practice—Joel Chandler Harris talked of his own life and books, even going so far as to give a brief account of Uncle Remus himself.

We sat on his wide, deep, wistaria-covered porch, he in his shirt sleeves and a dark wool hat, and looked down three short and grassy terraces, through elms, pines, locusts, cedars and magnolias, to the paved and shady street before the house. Several blue jays, with their black collars and gray waistcoats, pert as robins and soldier-like as grenadiers, fiercely charged a colony of insects living quietly in the lawn, and then silently and briskly marched on.

Beds of flowers, brilliant in the rich paints of autumn, were under the windows. Concealed behind shrubbery and honeysuckle to the left was a vegetable garden, and near it a tangled and empty pasture, the retreat from time to time of a ferocious band of robbers with corn-silk beards and wooden daggers, who, although tracked and hunted by a certain famous author, armed with a broomstick or hoe handle which he and they pretend is a gun, are never discovered.

"I used to keep three good cows," said the gentle and taciturn man at my side, "but had trouble to get some one to come and milk them regularly. They were a great care, and I had to give them up."

And all this pastoral comfort and beauty, with the pounding heart of a modern and very stirring city only twenty minutes' distant by the street cars!

Hair, auburn long ago, and probably even red, is now blonde and white—a brinded crest on a mountain of a head. The chin multiplied by the years takes nothing from the inherent refinement of the face, the features, save the mouth, which is strong, being delicate and wonderfully kind and good. But the Harris eyes—blue, furtive with merriment—are dominant in the portrait which memory bears away and will not forget. With the eyes, too, is a delightful little cackle of a laugh—a laugh that has been written into fables and books to the joy of men and children all over the earth.

"TO BE ROPED AND THROWN".

"But where are the children this morning?" I asked, seeing empty swings and teeter-boards under the trees.

"At school." And then with resignation, in which there was a note of sacrifice, he added: "Of course, they must go to school."

A bustling man would find a dry well in Joel Chandler Harris. So we sat and looked at the swaying leaves and listened to the shadowy music which the soft wind played among the vines and branches. Presently, having thought of something in answer to a question, he would talk. Meanwhile, the atmosphere was glowing and genial, and there was no embarrassment.

I had sought a photograph, but there wasn't one in Atlanta, and probably none in all the South. "Joel has to be roped and thrown," a friend said—one of the conspicuous men of Georgia—"when his picture is taken. I remember when Mammon, who in this instance was Andrew Carnegie, came to pay tribute, by presence and words, to the spirit. Mr. Carnegie is a nimble and eager person. He climbed Joel's porch with remarkable agility, beaming all over and eloquent in the gladness he no doubt felt.

"Joel got out of his rocking-chair, bowed, and said, 'Howdy.' That meant a great deal, coming from Joel; as much as a long address of welcome from any one else. Then Carnegie, as a man of letters, spoke of his personal indebtedness to Joel, whereupon Joel replied: 'Yes, and I owe you something, a grudge, I reckon, for trying to reform our spelling and drive Uncle Remus out of business.' Right good, wasn't it?

"Well, sir, those two literary lights had a grand time. Presently, a photographer came along; he'd been sent by a local editor who appreciated the history that was being made at Joel's house that morning. Joel backed behind the vines, but I took hold of him, and then Carnegie said, in a whisper which nobody heard but myself: 'The public will expect it, Mr. Harris; the public will expect it.'

BLUSHES LIKE A BASHFUL BOY.

"There was a funny look in Joel's eyes, but I posed him, mainly by force, while Carnegie posed himself. That's the only time I ever knew Joel to have his picture taken by any one in Atlanta. He is so sensitive that he blushes like a bashful boy if anything personal is said. When President Roosevelt came here and made an address, he spoke enthusiastically of Joel as a man and author. Joel got as red as a beet and looked very sheepish. In the evening Joel went to the banquet, and every little while the President would catch his eye, smile, and shake his fist at him. Joel has never referred to the matter, but down in his big heart I am sure he loves Roosevelt, who, as an author himself, is bound to good men and writers by a sincere comradeship."

As we sat on the porch, watching the birds and looking at the flowers and trees, I broke ground for the interview I hoped to get by saying: "In spite of your Brer Fox, Brer Rabbit, and Jedge B'ar, the President hasn't called you a nature faker."

"Not yet, not yet!" Then the twinkle in his eyes vanished as Mr. Harris earnestly continued: "Roosevelt is a fine man and the greatest of all our Presidents since Lincoln. I want him to run again, so that I may vote for him. Thousands of other Democrats in the South feel just as I do. But I am not a politician and have no license to talk. However, admiration for Theodore Roosevelt isn't political. To me it seems national."

"And Mr. Carnegie called on you?" I ventured to say.

"Yes, while going to Booker Washington's school in Alabama. I enjoyed his visit very much. He is an able and generous man."

Gradually I approached the point where I wanted to begin, and asked: "Will you tell me about the town in which you were born?"

"Eatonton, in Georgia? Oh, it was a primitive little village in the cotton country, where the planters came to buy and sell."

"At what age did you begin to learn the printers' trade?"

"I suppose I must have been about twelve. A man by the name of Turner—J. A. Turner—lived nine miles from Eatonton. He was a miscellaneous genius, owning and operating a large plantation, a hat factory, a tannery, and a distillery. I remember, too, that he had 120 slaves. He was also inclined to letters and printed a publication called the Countryman, which was patterned, as he supposed, after the Spectator of Addison and Steel. I think he dropped into the style and philisophy of Samuel Johnson on occasion, but the Spectator was the actual well-spring of his inspiration."

WAR RUINED HIS BUSINESS.

There was a pause at this juncture. Mr. Harris rocked quietly in his big chair, while a smile came cautiously into his eyes and then, growing bolder, twitched at the corners of his mouth.

"Headgear, leather, agriculture, whisky, and literature under a single management," he presently said, "were not especially incongruous to me at the time. One day the postmaster at Eatonton gave me a copy of the Countryman. Taking it home, I sat down on the lounge, and read it. I was a great reader for a youngster of twelve. There was an advertisement in one of the little columns on the back page soliciting applications from boys who wanted to learn the printers' trade. I saw Mr. Turner right off and got the place. I recollect that I was to get my board and clothes. Well, I became a printer, remaining with Mr. Turner for nearly five years and having, on the whole, a good time."

"You were scarcely old enough to be a soldier, but I suppose you saw something of the war?"

"I saw only one body of Federal soldiers—Gen. Slocum's corps, which was the left wing of Sherman's army when it marched to the sea. A regiment of Pennsylvania Germans stopped at the plantation and raided the hat factory. Their broken English amused me greatly. I followed them into the factory just to hear them talk. The war ruined Turner and he died in poverty."

Nothing more was said at the moment. Mr. Harris rocked. I waited.

"And it ruined me, also." This was said by and by. "You see, I trapped rabbits and sold their skins for 20 cents apiece. I would catch three or four every afternoon. I put the money in my trunk—it was a small trunk—and kept my clothes—I hadn't many—under the bed. Well, all of the rabbit money, being Confederate, of course, went instantly and permanently out of circulation when Lee surrendered at Appomattox Courthouse."

MADE $15 A MONTH AS EDITOR.

"Did you do any writing for the Countryman?"

"Oh, yes; I wrote some paragraphs which were ascribed to the 'Printer's Devil.' I guess any one would have known the author if the signature had been omitted."

"And poetry?"

"I am no poet, and never was," Mr. Harris hastened to reply, with much solemn energy. "I have written some doggerel, but that is all."

"What occurred after the collapse of the Countryman and your own personal disaster in the rabbit-skin business?"

"I worked at my trade at Rome, in the northwestern part of the State, and later in New Orleans. Then I returned to Georgia, going to the town of Forsyth, where I 'edited' a weekly paper. I set all the type, pulled the press, kept the books, and swept the floor, my mechanical, accounting and menial duties being concealed from the vulgar hilarity and comment of the world outside of Forsyth by the honorable and impressive title of editor. That often happens."

There was an outburst of merriment as Mr. Harris leaned forward, looked into my face, and said: "I did all that for $15 a month."

Then the blue jays came, enacted their little tragedy on the lawn, and vanished.

"When a man in Savannah," the reluctant and broken story was proceeding once more, "offered me $40 a week to be associate editor of the News I read his letter twice before I could believe it. Forty dollars was enough to keep me a year in the manner I had been accustomed to live. I was the biggest man in the world, I thought. Maybe I was. That was thirty-eight years ago. I came of age the following December. I wrote editorial paragraphs, some of which were supposed to be humorous—the kind that nearly all daily papers print now as a regular feature. I remained in Savannah for several years, and then, coming to Atlanta to escape the yellow fever, obtained a place as editorial writer on the Constitution."

"When did you begin to write your Uncle Remus sketches?"

"UNCLE REMUS'S SAYINGS."

"Sam Small, afterward the exhorter and evangelist, had been running a column, which was called Sam's something-or-other. When the Constitution was sold without his knowledge it made him indignant and he resigned his position. The new editor asked me if I could duplicate Sam's work. I told him I wouldn't attempt it, but would try another line. So I just naturally dropped on Uncle Remus. After a while I took up folk-lore; I don't know why or any of the circumstances. All I did was to write out and put into print the stories I had heard all my life."

"What was the first thing you wrote about Uncle Remus?"

"His revival song—that was his beginning as well as the first thing I contributed to the new column I had undertaken. The song, as I call it, was copied, for some reason, and, therefore, I wrote others, and also dialect prose, which I put under the general title of 'Uncle Remus's Sayings.'"

In the last edition of his works, Mr. Harris calls the song, "Come Along, True Believer." The initial verse is herewith given, because it introduces a new character into American authorship:

Come along, true believer, come along;
De time is rollin' 'roun',
When dem w'at stands a-haltin' by de way
Won't w'ar no glory crown!

Oh, de sun shine white, de sun shine bright—
Year de news w'at de spirits tells;
De angels say dere's nothin' fer to do
But ter ring dem charmin' bells!
Almos' home! Almos' home!
We faints and falls by spells;
Angels say ain't nothin' fer to do
But ter ring dem charmin' bells!

"Had Uncle Remus," I asked, "a basis in nature? Did any colored man suggest the quaint and philosophic character which you have built up into one of the monuments of modern literature?"

UNCLE REMUS NO INVETNTION.

"He was not an invention of my own—he couldn't have been made out of nothing—but a human syndicate, I might say, of three or four old darkies whom I had known. I just walloped them together into one person and called him Uncle Remus. You must remember that the negro is sometimes a genuine and original philosopher."

"What is the history of your first book?"

"The representative of a New York publisher came to see me, and suggested an Uncle Remus book. I was astonished, but he seemed to be in earnest, and so we picked out of the files of the Constitution enough matter for a little volume, and it was printed. To my surprise it was successful."

"What influenced you to write stories for children?"

"I can't say. Folklore had been interesting to me, and so I mixed it up with Uncle Remus from time to time. Besides, I was fond of children, but not in the usual way, which means a hug, a kiss, and a word in passing. I get down to their level, think with them and play with them. I was a child in feeling when I began to write for other children, and haven't grown up yet."

"Have you ever met Rudyard Kipling, who is also a master in such literature as you have written?"

"No, but have been in correspondence with him. He once wrote me a very generous letter, in which he said that he read Uncle Remus while a small boy. I was glad to know it."

"Have you ever lectured or given readings?"

"No; and I never shall. There was a man who managed lectures—I don't recollect his name—"

"J. B. Pond?"

"Yes, that was it. Well, he promised to pay me $1000 a week for a tour of readings, but I declined the offer. Why, sir, if I even got up before an audience of friends I should die on the spot. I'll not try it."

"But you have surely given readings here in your own home?"

"Never. Why, I do not read or tell stories to the children whom I know. I might not be afraid of them, but don't you see they would begin to look up to me and instead of being their playmate I should be an old man."

SAYS NEGROES ARE ALL RIGHT.

"Have you ever been interested in politics?"

"Only as an editorial writer. I wrote editorials on the Constitution for twenty-four years, political with the rest, but I am not a politician. I am a Democrat on election day, but that is as far as I go."

"What are your views on the race question?"

"The negroes are all right. There will be trouble and possibly bloodshed now and then, North and South, but eventually there will be peace and a good understanding. The disfranchisement of the negro will do him good—at least he will be out of politics and will cease to be a football for the politicians, who have done him more injury than any one else."

"But isn't the negro idle and thriftless?"

"No. He works and is accumulating property. Of course, there are bad negroes—black, thick men with small heads, and heels like a jay bird; you have seen them. They are animals and always will be. But generally, the negro has been misrepresented."

"Does an education hurt him?"

"Does it hurt a white man? There are plenty of white men in jail and plenty of others who ought to be, but that is no argument against schools and colleges. An education won't hurt anybody."

"You seem to be kindly disposed toward the negro?"

"I have to be."

"How is that?"

"The Lord put him here, and it is not for me to criticise the Lord's ways or works."

"Prohibition, which recently has been made the law of Georgia, is the white man's protection, I suppose, against the black man's crime?"

"It need not be. Away from the cities the negro is the most temperate person in the world. He may drink, but he is not a drunkard. Yes, we are to have prohibition after next January, but I don't believe the law can be enforced. A man from the country came to see me the other day. We sat on the porch and talked in our own way:

A TEMPERANCE DISCUSSION.

"'Joel,' said he, 'what do you think about this new arrangement?'

"'I am doubtful,' I replied.

"'I mean prohibition.'

"'I know what you mean,' I answered.

"'They have it in Maine,' he said by and by.

"'Yes, so I have heard,' said I.

"'And I'm told there's a saloon at every railroad crossing and pretty much everywhere else.'

"'I have heard that, too,' I said.

"He sat very still for some time.

"'Joel,' said he finally.

"'Yes,' said I.

"'A Yankee comes down here, scratches up the sod with his hind feet, growls a little, and then trots on. After he has gone the people of Georgia—I am among the rest, I reckon—peep out from behind the shed, cautiously approach his tracks, and, after smelling them and bristling the hair on their backs, open their mouths and bark as hard as they can.'

"Do you fish or hunt?" I asked Mr. Harris.

"I go to Florida occasionally and help eat the fish which my friends catch."

"How do you get exercise?"

"I knew a woman who quarreled with her sister, went to bed out of spite and stayed there forty years. She lived to be 90 and was cheerful, hearty and strong almost to the last. I used to go and see her. Now let me ask if exercise is really necessary?"

"How do you write?"

"In the morning on a typewriter. I retired from the Constitution in 1900. I don't write now for any publication except Uncle Remus's Magazine. I give it stories and editorials."

"Which of your books do you like the best?"

"I have no choice; one is as bad as another."

"Of all your experiences, which has been of the most value to yourself?"

"I can't say as to experiences, but the most important conviction of my life was when I came fully to realize that a Personal Providence watched over me from day to day. With me it is no longer a belief, but a fact. I have been on the brink of ruin many times and God has always rescued me."

"What is the state of literature?"

"I don't know much about modern literature. Some person has said that whenever a new book comes out the world should read an old one. That is what I am doing."

SEARCHLIGHT MINING NEWS.

Sales of Several Good Prospects—The Power Plant Project on the Colorado.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Nov. 1.—J. W. Taylor has purchased for the Santa Barbara Mining Company, of which he is superintendent, the Rick Hill claim, Nob Hill, of Howard Parkins. The price was close to $7000 for a single claim. No assays of consequence are below $20 and from that up to $200. There are three feet of shipping ore that goes $62, of which 70 per cent. is gold. There is a cropping of oxidized quartz, up to fifteen feet wide, that shows the length of the claim or for 1500 feet, and a fair average across the sampled portions ran $20. Regular shipments to some smelter will commence within sixty days.

Colorado power development capitalists have, for several months past, employed a mining engineer of this place to gather data with reference to establishing a power plant at Black Cañon on the Colorado River, twenty-five miles above Eldorado Cañon, and all reports are favorable for its early construction. Such a location is said to be feasible to supply electrical power from Bullfrog on the north to Needles on the south. Pumping stations are to be established where needed up and down the river and water piped to the different camps.

The Homestead Mining and Milling Company, a corporation owning property in Eldorado Cañon, has purchased the Good Hope group outright. The company is backed by business men of Colorado and Iowa, and it is their plan to at once erect a mill and start taking out the ore now in sight. Officers here this week were President Dr. W. N. Saseley, Secretary J. E. Van Winkle and Treasurer Lem Mummah, all of Colorado Springs. There is a 400-foot shaft showing much ore of a fair milling grade. Also the new owners have found a cropping about twenty inches wide that reveals much specimen rock. The reported price was around $100,000.

A sixty-five-foot crosscut on the 400-foot level of the Fraction claim of the Duplex, this week, cut the ore shoot. It shows a steady improvement over the levels above. Samples of the pay, in streaks and pockets, are remarkably handsome, the virgin gold showing in specks as large as grains of whea

The Silver Legion people, Nob H the first of the week, reported the d covery of a body of ore six feet and samples $50. The newest find in a fifteen-foot wins sunk abou way in the east drift.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Is the Original Remedy that "kills the dandruff germ"

Without dandruff the hair must grow luxuriantly, except in chronic baldness, which is incurable. Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a germ or microbe. To cure dandruff, this germ—a tiny vegetable growth—must be destroyed and kept out of the scalp by Newbro's Herpicide.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

A woman to be pretty must have pretty hair. Beautiful locks have a subtle charm, for the poet says, "fair tresses man's imperial race ensnare." The unpoetic and intensely real dandruff microbe makes the hair dull, brittle and luterless with later dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. Newbro's Herpicide destroys this enemy of beauty and enables the hair to resume its natural luster and abundance. Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the continued use of Herpicide. Overcomes excessive oiliness and makes the hair light and fluffy. It contains no grease or dye. Stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Discriminating ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide, speak of it in the highest terms, for its almost magical effect upon the scalp, and also for its excellence as a regular hair dressing. It is delightfully fragrant and refreshing.

"I have found Newbro's Herpicide excellent for the hair. The first application stops itching of the scalp and it leaves the hair soft and silky."

ROYAL TANGLE IN AUSTRI

Effect That May Foll Death of Emperor.

The Archduke Is Very Pop lar in Hungary.

Effect of His Marriage His Succession.

The recent serious illness of Fran Joseph of Austro-Hungary recalls t fact that he and Oscar of Sweden a the last of a remarkable generation sovereigns, which included King Chri tian of Denmark, Queen Victoria England, Victor Emmanuel of Ital Louis Napoleon of France and Kais Wilhelm I. of Germany, writes Willia E. Curtis in Chicago Record-Heral Next year will be the sixtieth annive sary of his coronation and the sevent eighth anniversary of his birth. Nex to Queen Victoria he has ruled longe than any other sovereign of moder times, and few men have had so man tragedies in their experience; few hav suffered so many great sorrows. Hi queen, Elizabeth, as you remember, was assassinated at Geneva, by an anarchist in 1899; the Archduke Rudolph, his favorite son, and heir, committed suicide in a most tragic manner. Maximilian, his brother, was shot by the Mexicans at Queretero. Ferdinand, his cousin, better known as John Orth, disappeared from the face of the earth and no one knows what became of him. His only surviving brother, Ludwig Victor, became involved in a disgraceful scandal several years ago and was dragged into police court like a common loafer.

Francis Ferdinand, his nephew and heir to the throne, is thoroughly disliked by his uncle. They have never been congenial. Francis Ferdinand married for love. "A happy domestic life is preferable to all the thrones in the world," he said, and against all advice he married the Countess Chotek, who was formerly one of the maids in waiting of the Archduchess Isabella.

This marriage took place June 15, 1900. The archduke was 37 then and his bride was 32, so the love affair was not a mere romance of children. The Emperor reluctantly gave his consent to a morganatic marriage, and the ceremony was preceded by a formal renunciation oath taken by the bridegroom, binding him not to extend to his wife the rank and privileges of an empress, should he succeed to the throne, and renouncing for his children, yet unborn, the succession to the throne of Austria-Hungary.

HUNGARY'S ATTITUDE.

The archduke always has been popular in Hungary, where he spends a great deal of time on his vast estate, and that part of the ducal monarchy has heartily supported him in his alliance, though he has met unending opposition and rebuffs in other parts of the empire. Hungary, it must be explained, does not recognize the morganatic marriage as such, but holds it as an ordinary marriage relation, and the law there also debars a father or mother from renouncing any rights of their children.

On these grounds the point was constantly made in the Parliament at Budapest that when the archduke succeeded his uncle as Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, his morganatic consort, who now bears the nobility title of Princess Hohenberg, would become Queen of Hungary, and her children, in consequence thereof, would be entitled to the succession of the Magyar throne, although prevented by their morganatic birth from any right to the Austrian crown.

HIS SON CANNOT BE EMPEROR.

The pragmatic sanction, however—that is to say, the treaty uniting Austria and Hungary, and providing for the succession of the Magyar crown—expressly stipulates that the latter shall always be vested in the occupant of the throne of Austria, and the son of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, being incapable of becoming Emperor of Austria, is barred by virtue of the pragmatic sanction and by the terms of the family statutes of the house of Hapsburg from becoming King of Hungary. Of course, the issue will be raised again in Parliament at Budapest. But it will be solely for the purpose of making trouble for the government, and is not likely to lead to anything excepting useless discussion and bad blood.

The archduke is the eldest nephew of Francis Joseph. He has been well educated, is quiet and retiring and, despite false stories, told by his many enemies, has never figured in any escapades. He is not merely a well-read man, but also an author, among the works which he has produced being an entertaining book modestly describing his two years' tour around the world, including his visit to America; several graceful monographs, notably one on the celebrated Field Marshal Radetzky, remarkable by reason of the high-souled patriotism apparent in every line of his essay, and two volumes of extremely petty Alpine poetry.

IS AUTHOR, COMPOSER, ENGINEER

Like most of his countrymen, he is devoted to music, and is something of a composer, having put upon paper for the first time several of those old Styrian melodies which until then had never been written, but merely handed down from father to son throughout the ages. Ferdinand is also an engineer, and is the only prince of the blood who has obtained his diploma as such, and enjoys nothing so much as driving the locomotive of an express train. He is an expert in machinery, of an inventive turn of mind, sufficiently so to have earned for him a handsome competence, if not a fortune, had he not in his own right been one of the wealthiest princes of the Old World. He is recognized as one of the best sporting shots of the Austro-Hungarian empire, is quite an adept in the sciences of zoology and of natural history, and last, but not least, is a thorough soldier, having everything connected with his profession as such at his fingers' ends.

CHARACTER OF FERDINAND.

"Ex-attaché," a newspaper correspondent, whose home is in Hungary, thus sums up the character of the heir apparent.

"In some respects Francis Ferdinand is a man of much stronger character than Francis Joseph. For whereas the latter is pliable and can be brought by persuasion or by mere weariness to yield, and to accord his consent to measures of which he at heart disapproves, the archduke obstinately refuses to give way. He is slow and deliberate about taking up his position in a controversy. But once he has assumed it nothing can induce him to budge therefrom. He is set in his ideas which are only reached after mature consideration, and while his prejudices are strongly developed, they are neither numerous nor all of them reactionary. He is recognized as one of the best sporting shots of the Austro-Hungarian empire, is quite an adept in the sciences of zoölogy and of natural history, and last, but not least, is a thorough soldier, having everything connected with his profession at his fingers' ends.

CHARACTER OF FERDINAND.

"Ex-attaché," a newspaper correspondent, whose home is in Hungary, sums up the character of the heir [illegible].

"In some respects Francis Ferdinand is a man of much stronger character than Francis Joseph. For whereas the latter is pliable and can be brought by persuasion or by mere weariness to yield, and to accord his consent to measures of which he at heart disapproves, the archduke obstinately refuses to give way. He is slow and deliberate about taking up his position in a controversy. But once he has assumed it nothing can induce him to [illegible] therefrom. He is set in his ideas. They are only reached after mature deliberation, and while his prejudices are strongly developed, they are [illegible] numerous nor all of them reactionary. But inasmuch as they are bound to influence his policy when he succeeds to the throne, they are deserving of a brief mention.

FRIEND OF CHURCH.

"A devout Catholic, he is disposed to frown upon those endeavors which are being made to curtail the powers of the church in connection with primary education, and to banish everything pertaining to religion from all public schools. Then, too, he makes no secret of his disapproval of the extensive concessions made to Hungary in the way of autonomy at the expense of the other moieties of the empire, taking the ground that the latter as a whole has been weakened by the policy of federation inaugurated during his uncle's reign. Finally, he does not conceal his distaste for the alliance with Italy. His antagonism toward the latter is based upon the traditional enmity of the Italians for everything pertaining to Austria, and which finds expression not only among the masses but also among the classes, and even in the highest political and official circles throughout the peninsula."

The married life of Ferdinand has proved very happy, but he has never given any reason to believe that he will violate the oath regarding his wife and his children, which he made at the time of his marriage, and it may safely be taken for granted that when he in turn is laid beside his father, the late Archduke Charles Louis, in the vaults of the Capuchin church at Vienna, he will be succeeded, not by his morganatic son, but by the eldest boy of his brother Otto, the now nineteen-year-old Archduke Charles Francis, the first of the princes of the house of Hapsburg to be brought up in the public schools of Vienna.

Ferdinand has three children, a girl and two boys, Princess Sophie, the eldest, being a child of 6.

COAST INDUSTRIES.

Great Money from Fruit.

ALDEN ANDERSON of Sacramento, president of the California Fruit Distributors, says the fresh deciduous fruits shipped East this year from the northern part of the State will net the growers over $10,000,000. Already 800 more cars have been sent East than for the whole of last year. Including yesterday's shipments, 2517 carloads of grapes have passed through this city, against a total of 2036 for 1906. It is believed that by the time the grape harvest is over the shipments will reach 3000 carloads.

Will Grow Belladonna.

A belladonna farm is to be started in the Castro Valley, near Hayward, where a tract of forty-two acres of land has been leased by an eastern drug firm. An analysis of the soil shows that it contains the properties required for the cultivation of belladonna. The product will be used chiefly in the manufacture of plasters and other medical appliances.

New Steel Company.

Articles of incorporation have been filed creating the Noble Electric Steel Company, which, on a capitalization of $1,000,000, is to engage at Heroult, on the Sacramento Valley and Eastern Railroad, in mining, extracting and smelting iron ores, and in creating, manufacturing and selling steel.

The directors of the new company are W. H. Noble of San Francisco, C. D. Morgan of Oakland, E. V. D. Johnson of Redding, Ernest E. Need of Mill Valley, and Ed Whaley of San Francisco, and each of them has subscribed for at least five shares. At the start $250,000 has been subscribed, and there are 100,000 shares at $10 each.

Smelting is to be done by electric process, and most of the necessary machinery is to come from Europe.

New Tanning Machine.

The Liedgen Side Unhairing machine manufactured by the Edward H. Munkwitz Company of Milwaukee, Wis., has just been set up by the Thomas Devlin Tanning Company of Arcata, Humboldt county, California, and has proved successful in all respects.

The hides are torn into two pieces when first taken into the "bean house" and then are immersed in a vat containing lime and water. This loosens the hair. After six days it has always been the custom to scrape the hair off with a knife made specially for this purpose, the hides having been placed on a rounded and inclined table. This was the hardest process in the handling of the hides. The machine does away with all this.

The machine weighs at least three tons, and is made of steel. It has a heavy frame ten by twelve feet and seven feet high. Fastened to the bottom of the frame are two heavy rubber blankets stretched diagonally across the inside of the frame. Flesh side down the hide is put against the blanket and fastened automatically to the top. On turning a lever, dull bladed knives, fitted on a roller working against it, clean the hide in a few minutes; at the same time a flow of water washes the hair away.

An inexperienced man can run this machine and can easily unhair about 300 sides in a day. It would require five men to do this in a day by hand work.

UNIQUE MADAME FALLIERES.

Said to Be the Only Wife of a Potentate Who Has Plain Ideas.

Probably the wife of no ruler over the destinies of a great nation possesses the unique accomplishments of Mme. Fallieres, wife of Clement Armand, Fallieres, President of the French republic. The first lady of France comes from Gascony, a district sung in the troubadour lays and illustrious in the annals of romance and history. In the midst of Paris frivolities she leads the simple life of the Gascon gentlewoman, spinning, weaving, embroidering and directing, even at a distance, the big country estate of her husband at Loupillon of Let-et-Garonne. M. Fallieres owns a farm of less than a hundred acres at Loupillon, but under the skillful care of madame he gets a comfortable fortune out of his flax and dairies. The wines and the fruits and the grain lands are his special care and they are equally profitable.

Mme. Falliers, now in her sixty-fifth year, has been busy all her happy life, and the results of her industry seem almost incredible. For she has spun and woven and embroidered for her four children a dozen fine table covers and twelve dozen doilies of varying sizes and for different uses. Each piece bears the monogram of its future owner, and all are kept in a great chest awaiting the division of the patrimony, after the demise of the elders. In addition, Mme. Fallieres has spun and woven exquisite linen curtains and embroidered them skillfuly in flowers and leaves with gracefully woven scalloped edges. Every window in her great mansion at Loupillon is curtained with the work of her hands, and her dining hall is filled with exquisite covers and drapings.

At the Fallieres' mansion the guest is given golden brandy made from a recipe handed down through five centuries and the brandy has been under madame's direction from the blushing peaches in the orchard below, and it has mellowed in the cellar for twenty-odd years before being promoted to the buffet. The cheese is the best which the famous region around the Garonne can boast, and a dozen different kinds are offered at the last course at luncheon. Wines which put the best brands from Burgundy and Bordeaux to shame are made on the Fallieres estate and figure with tremendous success at the Paris banquets in the President's home, Elysée Palace. Mme. Fallieres passes all her days in Paris embroidering and crocheting. All her personal gifts are made by her own skillful fingers. At Christmas and on the name day of her friends, she invariably sends either a dozen handkerchiefs with the monogram embroidered or a table scarf. M. Fallieres's friends get some excellent table stuff in the way of cheese or confections, and some highly appreciated bottles of wine or brandy. Mme. Fallieres is utterly oblivious to Paris frivolity or Parisian extravagance. She gowns herself after the fashion of Gascon women, in plain dark silks enlivened with a bit of yellow lace or iridescent trifles, and is as oblivious of the passing fashions as though she lived in a convent. Her household is conducted exactly the same in the magnificent palace of the Elysée as at Loupillon, and she has long ago dismissed the liveried flunkeys and established her own simple retainers from La Gascoigne.

Dr. Charles Finlay, chief sanitary officer of Cuba, is among those to whom is presented the Mary Kingsley medal instituted by the Liverpool school for the study of tropical diseases in memory of Miss Mary Kingsley, the African traveler. Dr. Finlay receives the medal for originating the theory that yellow fever is spread by mosquitoes.

We're Not Selling Out!

We want to remind you again that we are not going out of business. So many stores in the city are advertising "closing out" and "selling out" sales that it is possible that some of our patrons come to believe that we are one of them. The Eastern Outfitting Company is here to stay—we tell you that for once and all.

Some of our competitors who would have you believe they are going out of business intend to do nothing of the kind. These catch phrases are used to deceive you—if you are to be deceived. But we will not deceive you. We do not have to resort to such false means in order to sell our goods, and we intend to see that other dealers adopt clean methods, too. As long as these deceptive "selling out" and "closing out" sales continue we are going to cut our prices away below every competitor in the city. This advertisement contains some good examples of this price cutting campaign of ours.

"WORKS" HIM THREE WAYS.

Professional Swindler Wise to Farmer's Ways.

Cardinal Themes Which Appeal to Agriculturist.

"Improved Seeds" Catch Him for Thousands.

BY W. M. HAYS,

(Assistant Secretary Department of Agriculture.)

There are three cardinal themes which appeal to the interest—the self-interest—of the farmer. Crops, hogs and cattle. Anything which relates directly to any of these vital topics is sure to command the willing ear of the man of the soil. It is not strange, therefore, that the professional swindler who makes a business of cheating the farmer has recognized this fact and made the most of it.

For many years the "improved seed" swindle has been one of the most successful and is taking hundreds of thousands of dollars from the pockets of the farmers. Besides taking money for something worthless—or next to worthless—it does the direct damage of planting hundreds of fields with seed inferior in germinating power or lacking in value per acre of the crop and of undermining popular confidence in the practical value of progressive work done by the agricultural departments of the national and State governments—for too often the seed swindlers claim an indorsement by some department or some person connected therewith. There is not an agricultural department which has not placed the emphasis of its message to the farmer upon the great gain in results to be had from the careful selection of seed—whether in corn, in the smaller grains, in cotton or in grasses, clovers and the forage crops. There are few, if any, lines of recent experiment and research along which such immense and significant progress has been made by the agricultural scientists as in the matter of seed breeding; improving standard varieties and making new varieties. In this one particular the work of the national and State experiment stations has made a new chapter in the agricultural history of this country and has worked a potential revolution in productiveness of the tillable acres of the United States.

The men actually in charge of these experiments are so much the best, safest and most disinterested authorities on the new varieties of field, orchard and garden crops worthy of purchase, that their advice should be sought. Since their salaries are paid by the nation and States, part of their recognized work is to give information, and nowhere in the world is there a body of men more courteous or ready to be useful to those for whom they work—the American farmer. They will nearly always advise farmers to secure standard seeds, trees and plants already used in the neighborhood, or if new kinds are to be chosen these men will advise which of many new candidates for favor they should risk on their high-priced lands instead of kinds known to give good crops.

In the light of four years later a man who would grossly overstate the prospective yields of a "billion-dollar grass," not only securing the farmer's money, but inducing him to plant his land to a crop less productive of value than the crop he would otherwise continue to grow, is a business pirate.

The experiment stations and State and United States departments of Agriculture, State horticulture societies, field crop breeders' societies, the American Breeders' Association, and similar organizations, are rapidly developing the testing of standard, newly introduced and newly bred varieties, so that they are able to advise farmers which varieties to use in their regular business planting and which are valuable to experiment with in a small way.

The tree agent who induced the pioneer farmer to purchase from large fruit pictures orchard trees in which the family long hoped, but which cumbered the ground until the pioneer mother had brought up her family and had gone to her reward, has a mighty black spot in his record of deeds done. The seed firm which sold my friend Clark Red Top seed in which Kentucky blue grass seed was mixed for a permanent hay meadow far north, made well nigh worthless large areas of peaty land situated where it could not be pastured, but would have permanently produced fine crops of timothy. The dealer was criminally ignorant, because he was asked for seed for a specific purpose, and he put in the blue grass, which grows too short to mow for hay, but crowds out the variety suited to cut for hay.

The man who sold Burbank plums in a region so cold that they could not stand the severe winters is more guilty than the man who steals your purse. He gets a paltry $2 each for trees that would have been valuable elsewhere, but for this small consideration he robs the farmer of his time, his land, of his opportunity to use hardy plum trees, and even robs him and his neighbors of their faith in the possibilities of a family plum lot.

Our experiment station and department plant men are rapidly learning the seed and plant variety business. They are not only learning how to create new values by breeding, but they are learning how to distribute new stocks of seeds and plants. They are organizing the testing of varieties, so that few mistakes need to be made. They are coming to insist for themselves, for the domestic seedsman and nursery man and for the foreign seed house that the varieties must be tested within each state before they will endorse them. Seed vendors are gradually coming to see that they must get into line with the efficient and vigorous public seed service, and that they must sell only seeds which will produce wealth. A general labeling law is being talked of, and this would make it dangerous to sell two varieties out of the same bin of seeds, or sell trees under their wrong name—as it would prevent the clothing dealer from selling as all-wool clothing two-thirds cotton and one-third wool.

Now the seed or tree swindlers endeavor to convert all the newly-created sentiment arising from the work of the plant scientists for careful seed selection into grist for their mill. As most of their representations are made by personal solicitors, they are able to claim "department" endorsement with a freedom and recklessness which they would, perhaps, not use in printed matter sent through the mails—although they do not hesitate so to construct their letters and circulars as to deceive.

Whether the claims of these swindlers are made personally or by mail, as in some of the most exaggerated seed catalogues, the intent and the result in most cases is the same. The expectations of the ambitious and progressive farmer are raised to the point of exaggeration. He is convinced that by planting or by sowing the seed offered by the fake concern he will multiply his crop production; that his richest acres will greatly increase their previous production and that his poorest land, with pedigreed seed, will break the record of his choicest fields in corn, oats, barley, rye or cotton, and the forage crops from his wet lands will give him tons of nutritious fodder.

Of course, seed which will perform such miracles of production naturally comes high in price—these swindlers are too shrewd to charge an ordinary price for seed carrying claims so high as theirs. In some instances the price is double that which the farmer would pay for bona-fide, pure-bred, standard varieties, the yield of which has been tested by experiment stations, while in other cases four, and even six, times the normal price is charged.

Now as to the results: They are disappointing. Now and then the yield is fair as from ordinary seed, but seldom does it exceed that limit. More frequently it falls below that standard. The reason for this has been discovered by a few farmers, who have had enough of the true spirit of progress to dig into the history of the seeds for which they paid so fancy a price. Here is what they found: The "great propagating concern" is without the acres of land devoted to the raising of seeds so eloquently pictured by the agent; the "scientific specialists" claimed to be in the employ of the concern dwindle into a corps of young men who draw salaries of $50 to $60 a month and their "scientific labors" consist of traveling from one place to another and buying corn, wheat and other grains direct from the farmers in remote locations from the region in which the grains are expected to be sold for seeding.

These grains may be shipped to a dummy firm having the address of the warehouses of the seed company. There this common product of unknown fields is nicely cleaned, resacked into presentable packages and sold to the farmers as the choicest of selected seeds.

There are many good seed merchants, some of whom grow much of their own seeds; or contract for them before harvest, superintend their harvesting, curing, grading and storing, and send them out only after their viability or ability to germinate is determined by trial. These men multiply the best plant blood as pure bred live stock men multiply standard breeds, that all growers may secure properly grown seeds and plants of the most profitable varieties. They are ever ready to take those tested, and the newly bred and tested seeds and plants secured or created by the experiment stations and departments of agriculture, and rapidly multiply them for sale at pure-bred seed prices. And they are rapidly making of their institutions both clearinghouses of seed information and places where originate much of the new values in plant blood.

One of the greatest sources of profit to the farmer of the corn belt is the fattening of hogs. Corn converted into pork on the land of the farmer is generally believed to be the most profitable corn he can raise. But there is one serious drawback to this method of converting corn into an extra profit, and this is the hog cholera. For years the agricultural departments of the nation and States have been patiently and persistently conducting elaborate experiments in the prevention and the cure of this plague. The results accomplished have in many instances been most encouraging and the results of the experiments have been placed before the farmers of the country through bulletins and other avenues of publication. As a result of this educative work the farmers have grasped the idea that hog cholera cannot only be prevented, but also cured. This conviction is all the groundwork the "cholera-cure" faker needs for his business. All the careful and qualified work of honest and scientific specialists in this branch of agriculture is perverted into preparation for the success of the swindler when he finds a man whose knowledge of facts is practically restricted to the conviction that this swine plague is not beyond the reach of scientific treatment. Consequently "swine disease specialists" swarm like buzzards in every big hog-raising district where the cholera obtains a start—and there are few, if any, localities largely given to the raising of swin where, sooner or later, this plague does not appear. This information as to where the disease is prevalent is easily obtainable by the hog-cure swindlers from a systematic reading of the farm journals and agricultural papers. One of the first claims generally put forward by the swine specialist when he comes in contact with a farmer whose herd is afflicted with the cholera is that his remedy has the indorsement of the Agricultural Department. He sells the remedy at a high price and if the plague is general in the locality he finds it easy to depart with hundreds of dollars in his pocket as a result of a few days' work.

Of course some hogs which are given the remedy recover, in spite of it, and such cases are made the most of in testimonials.

Analysis shows that the remedies are usually compounded after some ingenious and worthless formula as the following:

"Coal oil—one gallon.
"Saltpeter—two pounds.
"Sulphur—two pounds.
"Assafetida—two pounds.
"Tobacco stems—two pounds.

"Boil the last four ingredients in water, and then add the coal oil. Drench each sick hog with a pint of the liquor."

Some omit the coal oil, perhaps by way of variety. The result is the same, for the hogs really affected by the cholera die, and the "swine specialist" has the farmer's money.

Some of the serums being devised may prove effective, at least in making the campaign sooner or later to be made to eradicate hog cholera from the country, as the Federal and State governments are now eradicating the "cattle tick" and the Texas fever. But the thousand and one internal remedies are quackery, and when a farmer uses a serum he should get it only of reputable concerns or of public departments.

The feeding or "finishing" of cattle is another profitable specialty of the corn belt farmer. To take a rough steer from the pasture or range and put him in fat and sleek condition in the minimum of time and the minimum of expense for feed is a very vital problem to the "feeding" farmer. So it is to the nation at large, and therefore the research departments of agriculture have given much effort to the practical solution of that problem. The "balanced ration" idea was once widely exploited by the scientists, though now not regarded so important as formerly. Latterly reasonably well balanced rations of those common grains and rough and green forage foods have been shown to be the real profitable feeding stuffs. And nothing is clearer in American feeding experiments than that adding so-called stock foods, with their minimum of well-nigh useless minimum amount of condiments, flavoring matter and medicines, is practically and absolutely a general humbug. But his faith in science makes the farmer ready to accept the blandishments of the traveling stock food purveyor. He has no more trouble to find the occasional farmer who will testify that this particular stock food worked wonders in his herd of flocks. It is on the same basis as testimonials from people who, having failed to die or even to continue sick when taking a given patent medicine, are willing to have their testimony published. And is not a few cases false testimonials are used.

The purveyor of fake cattle foods seldom fails to convince the feeder, at the start, that his particular food is a real Simon-pure balanced ration backed by the Department of Agriculture. Again, the swindler is wise enough not to lessen his chances of sale by putting a cheap price on his product. Occasionally he sells it as low as $2.50 the hundredweight, but more frequently at a price much above that—sometimes as high as $7.50 a hundredweight. The sales are for cash and the farmer is separated from his money before he has an opportunity to test out the ration in actual demonstration.

What does he find when the feeding period draws to a close? That his cattle have, perhaps, fattened to about the same propotion as when he used his own materials, grown on his farm and possibly supplemented by ground feed from the local mill or feed store. These balanced rations are often found, by analysis, to consist of the "tailings" of mills, elevators and breweries mixed with molasses and salt to make the compound palatable to the cattle. And one of the largest stock food companies is said to use fine sawdust finely ground to cheaply bring up the weight of his product. Instead of buying a superior and expensive "balanced ration" containing high fattening qualities and acting as a tonic, he has paid a high price for a feed containing, along with ordinary grains, finely ground alfalfa hay, and other common food stuff worth $5 to $25 per ton, a high percentage of refuse and nonnutritious matter, some of which may be positively dangerous to the health of his stock.

Naturally the question is asked by the farmer: How may I detect any or all of these fakes when they are offered to me? In the first place bear in mind that the Department of Agriculture and experiment stations are very chary of giving endorsements which may in any manner be used to the commercial advantage of any person, firm or corporation. These departments are conducted for the benefit of the people as a whole and great care is taken to prevent their authority or influence from being subverted to the special advantage of any person or individual enterprise. Therefore, when the seller of selected or "pedigreed" seed grains, of a remedy for hog cholera or of a "balanced ration" for the quick fattening of cattle claims that his wares have the endorsement of a department of agriculture or a State station it is safe to assume that he is a swindler. At any rate, there is only one safe rule to follow: Do not buy until you have written to the department or station from which it is claimed that the endorsement comes. You will get a prompt answer—and I believe that your inquiry will generally save you from being swindled. In the matter of buying choice seed grains I would add this suggestion: Your safest course is to buy only of those firms that you know to have large tracts of lands specially devoted to the scientific cultivation of grains for seeding—grains which have made a record for strong vitality and large dependable productiveness. There are plenty of these great seed farms which are scientifically and honestly conducted by men of capability and established reputation. Still another suggestion, which applies to all the cardinal interests of the farmer, is to read the bulletins and reports of the agriculture departments and state stations systematically and carefully. This will do much to protect you from imposition on the part of swindlers who base their hopes of success on the enlightened sentiment for progressive farming awakened by the national and State departments, for it will give you actual knowledge as to what is and what is not commended by those authorities.

IDEAS ABOUT BUSINESS.

HIGHER STANDARDS.

BY WALDO PONDRAY WARREN.

One point to which every merchant and manufacturer can well afford to give attention is that of educating people to appreciate and demand a better grade of merchandise than they would ordinarily buy. There is no advantage in making the same grade of goods year after year when the public might be taught to demand a better grade. A better qualify of goods requires more skill to make, and so develops the skill of the workmen; it requires a higher order of salesmanship, and so makes the salesman an educational influence; and it sets new standards for the consumer and so lifts his plane of living. The fact that these goods cost the consumer more money is one that will adjust itself. Nothing is gained by remaining in ignorance of relative qualities. As the standards of appreciation rise, men's ideas expand, and the measure of civilization increases; so it may be truthfully said that the right trend for all manufacture and merchandizing is toward improvement of the product.

Fortunately the world's affairs are so adjusted that it pays to do those things which contribute to the advancement of civilization. In considering new fields for development, therefore, the manufacturer and the merchant may profitably consider not only more territory, but higher standards for old territory. Every better-made brick is a sermon in stone advocating another step forward.

Schwab's Wildcats.

Charles M. Schwab, whose name was used, with his own consent and complicity, to boost the wild-cat stocks of Greenwater, is quoted as placing the blame on his engineers in this outburst: "I have been deceived by my engineers. The properties they recommended to me have not come up to expectations. They have exaggerated to me. They have lied to me. I think it is disgraceful."

All of which must be very consoling to people who loaded up with Schwab stocks at preposterous prices and are now told that Greenwater is a fake and fraud.

HEAD AGENCY

Chino Ranch

Sixty Minutes From Los Angeles. Rich Land in Ten Acre Tracts, and Multiples of Ten Acres, With Water

The best opportunity for the Homeseeker in Southern California is at Chino. Here you can buy land of proven value, with water, where hundreds of others have established homes and are making money, for $200 an acre, on easy terms. Or lands of the same character, not under irrigation but in the artesian belt, where water can be developed and no well was ever known to fail, for $100 to $150 an acre. On the irrigated land water is delivered in cement pipes, and one share of the water stock is given with each acre sold.

Chino lands sell for one-fourth cash, balance in one, two, three and four years, at 6 per cent. interest. Under common sense use you can make your deferred payments from what your land makes you. Many have done or are doing this. Come to our office—let us put the facts before you. See our exhibit of fruits and vegetables raised at Chino. You can't afford to buy land anywhere without finding out what Chino Lands offer you.

Brief Facts About These Fertile Chino Lands

Chino is not off in the wilderness somewhere. It's only 60 minutes from Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific.

There's a solid, established community here, with good schools, stores and the conveniences you would expect to find in a prosperous, well settled place.

Ontario and Pomona are near by—both thriving cities. This, together with the fact that Chino is in the great Orange Belt, gives Chino ranchers an immediate home market for all they can raise.

What can you raise? Practically all fruits and vegetables for which there is a market. And tremendous crops.

What do you think of getting $500 worth of Chili Peppers to the acre? Or $600 to $800 worth of onions to the acre? Or $250 to $300 worth of sweet potatoes—or $240 worth of peaches—to the acre?

These amounts have been realized this year at Chino. Other money makers are Alfalfa, Sugar Beets, Berries, Eggs and Poultry, Apricots, Tomatoes, Oranges, Grapes, Melons, Squashes, Walnuts, Apples, Etc.

These are facts, capable of proof. Talk directly with the ranchers themselves, when you visit Chino. They will tell you the same.

Understand, Chino Lands are not a recent subdivision, not an experiment. They were thoroughly exploited fifteen years ago. Only in the last two years has the balance of this property been offered for sale. And in over $600,000.00 in sales, not a single default in payments of principal or interest has been made. This speaks well for the prosperity of the buyers.

Come to our office. See our exhibit. Talk with us. Let us take you out to Chino and drive you over the ranch. Examine the soil. See our new irrigation reservoir, one of the largest in Southern California. Get the lay of the land. Talk with the people.

These things will show you more than we can tell you—will bring the facts home to you absolutely. And don't put it off. The best is to be had now. Get your part of it.

WHAT'S REALLY WORTH WHILE?

BY JOHN BURROUGHS.

> "We are beginning to see that money after all is not the main thing. The real values cannot be bought and sold. We are really here to be happy and to make others happy. It is a great mission to live simply and honestly with the times. We have got to make the most of our own time and get at the essential things as they are now, and any vital thought, any vital idea, is bound to bring fruit in some way. It is the little voice inside that we should hearken to."

"We all have need for money. I have to have money, but I do not want a great deal. The secret is not to want a great deal; cut down your wants by living in the country, as I do, where a very little goes a long way. In town you have to have a pile of money. Why, I shouldn't know what to do with [illegible]; I should have to give it away. In the city everybody you see is in a great hurry, rushing about and trying to do too much.

"For me, that would not do at all. I have to nose around and brood and get acquainted with myself. I have to enjoy things before I can write about them; in other words, I have to live them. You see I have not the talent that a great many people have, to write; I cannot let anybody select my theme for me; I can write only about certain things; things that I have lived. Robert Louis Stevenson says a man ought to be able to write on a broom-stick.'

"Some time I am going to write a story of how I originally came to the mountains. I have been back to the mountain where I taught school only once; every year I think I will go up, but I don't get there.

"We cannot go back in the past; we cannot go back in the Revolutionary times; if we tried to live that life over again we would be bound to be insincere. Up on the Hudson there is a monastery where lives a set of religious men, an order of the Episcopal Brotherhood. It is called 'the Holy Cross;' Father Huntington is at the head of the order. They go into the mountains and try to revive their monastic ideas among the backwoodsmen; but they cannot live there sincerely; they do not look like holy men; they are as worldly in their actions as I am. We cannot go back to the Colonial times and try to live as they did; we have got to live in our own times, to live sincerely and to devote ourselves to things practical.

"My motto is never to try to imitate anybody; I have always looked inward and followed the inward voice. If I lived like Roosevelt I should die in a day. Roosevelt represents the intense activity and energy of his time in the best American sense, and it is all right for him; change it, and you have the mercenary and materialistic American; take that away and you have nothing but rubbish. It is the little voice inside that we should harken to and listen to; yet, he likes my kind of work. When I was with him on the trip he was like a boy, and glad to get away from the crowd. I said to him: 'I wonder what you are going to do when you come down off the mountain into the valley,' and he said, 'Don't you worry, I shall find enough to do.'

"He loves to work and he loves to fight and to put things through. I shrink from it. Sometimes I would like to kick myself all around the county for being such a tenderfoot. Possibly if I had that other element I could not have done certain things I have done. Now, is it worth while? I cannot change myself or make myself over. I would not get as much enjoyment out of life as I do now, and really I have enjoyed life and do get something out of simple things. We are only here to be happy and to make others happy. I have my own life to live and cannot get myself to pattern after any other person. I must be as I am.

"I have never taken much interest in socialism; it would not work on a large scale, at any rate. I was able always to follow out my own plans in a general way. I wanted to go to college, but I did not want to go bad enough; if I had I would have gone there. I could not grind out Latin and Greek; I wanted to do a thing that appealed to me; with something in it. Still, I should like to know what the Greek language is. The Greeks made the biggest start ever made in intellectual and esthetic ways; not in a moral sense; still, I suppose there are a great many things in Greek civilization that we would be disappointed in. We have got to make the most of our own time and to get at the essential things as they are now. Whitman did it; and just think, he was born on Long Island. We are bound to get beyond the age of war. That idea is coming slowly, but it is bound to come; it has made tremendous headway within the last twenty years. I think that the war with Japan and Russia is the last of the great wars. I do not agree with Tolstoy's idea; he has advocated so many absurd things. Think of his idea of marriage as set forth in his 'Kreutzer Sonata;' that is absurd. And the idea set forth in 'Resurrection.' They excite people to hostility and antagonism. It is a great mission to live simply and honestly with the times. It is also a great thing to do work with the hands.

"One day I wanted to have some trees cut down that were growing too near the cabin here. Mr. H. brought a man and said: 'I have sent for a man to cut them down,' whereupon I took the axe and fairly surprised him by the way I swung it; but I learned this when I was a boy, and I like the things that one does in that way with one's hands; it helps the brain. Everybody ought to have some manual work. I think that manual training schools are good things. There is a great thought in this idea of going back to nature and the simple ways. We are beginning to see that money after all is not the main thing. The real values cannot be bought and sold.

"I go into a school-house now, and I find the song I first got in the old school-house, and there is something to connect me with the children and bring it all back to me. I shall come back to the Catskills as long as I live. I will be buried here. I love the Catskills. My father's family was born here. My grandfather came here from Connecticut when he was a young man. My first ancestor came from the West Indies to Connecticut in 1600. He settled at Stratford; he married in 1649; he was the first John Burroughs.

"The simple life is one of the things that will stay. I have a great many letters from young men who write me that they want a farm, and ask me how they shall get it; some of them say that they haven't the opportunity. I reply that they must make the opportunity; that they can begin right where they are; that they can find things anywhere; that they must be in earnest, must have it in their hearts, and must love nature. [illegible] if you don't love the soil [illegible] with the forces of nature. I love things. I have them in my [illegible] and I suppose I am quite selfish in the matter, but I do not want to reform the world.

"I have good times in the country. Indeed, the only time I do work is when the ground is frozen up. When the sap does not flow, my ink flows; and when the sap begins to flow, my ink dries up. My life has been exceptionally free from having to do things. I had to teach school when I was a young man. I wanted a little money to go to school, and I had to earn that money. Then I went to Washington as a clerk in the government's employ. I wanted the leisure time to read and write and to know Walt Whitman. For ten years we were very intimate.

"I have been reading the letters of Edward FitzGerald—I get a great deal from them. He lived a peculiarly secluded life, and a very simple life, although he had ample means. He was a man who was afraid of fame. He was a great friend of Tennyson, and yet I find him saying in one of his letters, 'Tennyson has been here—I had not seen him in twenty years.'

"FitzGerald lived within three miles of his brother. When his brother died, Edward wrote to Fanny Kemble, 'I have not been inside of his gate for three years, yet I loved him and he loved me.' He did not want to have the current of his life interrupted, even by friends. He was very shy; it creeps out in his letters; they are very delightful and written without attempt to write.

"Very few people write good letters. Robert Louis Stevenson's letters are delightful of a kind, but there isn't so much meat or substance to them; perhaps it is because he never for an instant was alone. He had a great social talent; FitzGerald shrank from that. FitzGerald's was more of a brooding nature. Stevenson could write most delightfully about a broomstick."

RAILROAD NOTES.

For eighteen months the Pennsylvania has had in use on the famous horseshoe curve steel rails made by the Spanish-American Iron Company in Cuba, and these rails have worn considerably better than have the ordinary standard rails of the same weight manufactured from other ore.

The railroad E. H. Harriman and associates are building down the Pacific Slope of Mexico is said to have more world-wide features in its construction than any railroad ever constructed. The ties are being brought from Japan, the steel rails from Bilboa, Spain, and from Belgium; the coal used in the locomotives is from Australia; the grading machinery is from Germany; and the laborers are imported in shiploads from Russia, Japan and China. These foreigners work side by side with Yaqui Indians. Comparatively little of the material used in this new road has been brought from the United States. The whole world has been searched in an effort to find the cheapest place to buy the various kinds of material, and it is bought where it can be had at the lowest cost.

It is announced officially that all of the $3,750,000 new common stock of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, recently offered shareholders at par, has been taken. The directors therefore, have not been called to underwrite any stock as they agreed to do when the new issue was offered.

In preparation for the expected opening of its line to Jackson, Miss., by the first of the year, the New Orleans Great Northern has placed large orders for freight cars with northern and eastern manufacturers. It has already received 100 and expects the delivery of 850 more to be made in January.

During October the New York Central lines moved 100,000 more cars than they did during the same period last year. Officials of the line say that the volume of business offering is the greatest ever known.

The British Board of Trade report on the railroads of the United Kingdom shows the total amount of capital involved in the roads the past year is nearly £1,287,000,000. Both passenger and goods traffic receipts were greater than in the previous year, that from goods having increased by £2,000,000 and that from passengers by more than £1,000,000. The total gross receipts amounted to £117,228,000, and the total working expenditure to £7[illegible]782,000. The net receipts, therefore, amounted to [illegible] 000, as against £43,466,000.

The sea-going railroad Henry M. Flagler is building from the Florida mainland to Key West will be opened for traffic as far as Knights Key, 109 miles south of Miami about January 15, and steamers will be put in operation from there to Havana. Fully 80 per cent. of the work on the line from Knights Key to Key West is completed. The cost of the road is said to be about $100,000 per mile, and by its aid the journey to Havana will be shortened by from ten to twelve hours.

While the Pennsylvania Railroad was first among the big corporations to trim sail and lay off men more than a year ago it is first to turn in the other direction. Orders are out for a large increase in the shop force at Altoona. The company finds the number of its men inadequate to make necessary repairs and to keep the system up to its high standard of efficiency. The Pennsylvania Railroad is as good a barometer by which to predict business weather as any we know. It has long been first to prepare for coming storms and first to spread sail when the squall has passed. A few hundred men are not much to this big system, but they constitute a good symptom.—[Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Dr. William H. Maxwell, New York City Superintendent of Schools, takes issue with Prof. Jelgersma of Berlin, who has declared that the woman student unfits herself for the duties of motherhood by her close attention to her studies. Dr. Maxwell says: "Higher education of woman has never done anything but good for the race. To talk of girls breaking down under the strain of education is all nonsense. You will find in our high schools the finest types of womanhood. Through the education of the mother thousands of children have been saved from physical and mental—ills. Ignorance in the mother hurts the child, and none of her offspring are injured because of information she has gained through schooling." The doctor also says that teachers make good wives.

NEWS OF MINES AND THE MINING INDUSTRY.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interests will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Bromic Silver.

ELY (Nev.) Oct. 3, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In doing assessment work on our claims near Patterson's Peak, we came across a small stringer of limestone that is a puzzle to all of our outfit, and all friends to whom we have shown samples. We think it may be a telluride, or a bismuth ore.

Please describe it, and let us know what it is at your earliest convenience.

Yours truly, H. C. P.

ANSWER: A sample exactly resembling yours has been received from "A. B. S."—manager of a mining company northeast of Osceola, Nev. The crystallized portions of semi-metallic matter in the seams of calcite are, approximately: Bromine, 42 per cent., and silver, 58 per cent.

Bromyrite possesses an adamantine and sheen-like luster. Colors, yellow, amber, or somewhat green. (Yours is greenish.) Hardness, 1.6. Sectile. Structure as a coating (other specimens are massive.) Fracture, compact (sometimes fibrous.) Specific gravity, 6. Before the blow pipe, with small piece of the ore on charcoal, a button of metallic silver is obtained. "Fuses without decrepitation in candle flame. On zinc, and moistened with water, swells up, turns black, and is reduced to metallic silver." Soluble in hot, concentrated aqueous ammonia, and imperfectly soluble in acids.

Ilmernite.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I submit specimens of iron ore from Utah.

I wish to know if there is any evidence of so-called tungstic acid in the ore, and, also, what is it that gives the samples their great specific gravity—something like native iron?

Yours truly, E. R. F.

ANSWER: The specific gravity of the specimens is 4.8. The samples very much resemble many pounds of a mixture of magnetite, ilmenite and hematite, once personally obtained from "Twin Buttes," fifteen miles east of Black Rock, Utah. From this locality fine crystallized specimens of pyroxene are obtained, and are purchasable from noted dealers in minerals the world over. Many are the tests that have been made for tungstic acid upon the minerals of the buttes referred to, and upon such ores as you submit for identification. One of your samples is magnetite. The specific gravity you refer to is no higher than that of magnetite.

Concentrates.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 10, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would like very much to have you give me the contents of this sample of "placer sand." It is from Kern county, and has produced about 85 cents a yard gold. Thanking you for a reply in your valued "In the Earth" columns.

Yours sincerely, W. H. S.

ANSWER: Your half-drachm (in volume) of concentrates in small vial is not placer sand. Observable in the concentrates are four microscopical gold nuggets, with some material that does not occur natively.

You state that the production has been about "85 cents a yard, gold," whether from a square yard, cubic yard or stock yard does not appear. If from a cubic yard, the estimate stated is too high.

Leached Ore and Silver.

ELKO (Nev.) Oct. 2, 1907.—[To the Editor of The Times:] With this "scribble" I hand you two samples of ore. No. 1 is from near Battle Mountain, and Sample No. 2 is from a location of copper ore owned by me four miles west of here.

Will you please state in your "In the Earth" if sample (1) is an ore of tungsten, and if sample (2) has any values in copper, i. e., have all of the values been "leached" by nature's agency? No hurry.

Faithfully yours, J. P. S. (Ph. D.)

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is wolframite (tungstate of iron,) carrying approximately 64 per cent. tungstic acid of commerce.

Specimen No. 2 is what the mining boys term "leached copper ore," meaning thereby that the ore is "in the leached zone," or parts of the lead exposed near the surface and not deep enough in the ground to show "live sulphides" or other rich copper ores. In the sense stated, the ore is "leached," and yet, approximately, 7 per cent. copper and twenty-one ounces of silver are in sample No. 2.

Native Saltpeter and Guano.

PROVO (Utah) Oct. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herein please find two samples of mineral from a cañon eight miles south of Salt Lake City. You will observe that the whitish specimen is brackish in taste. Is it rock salt? If not, please tell me what it is. The dark specimen I believe to be a hydrocarbon or guano. Thanking you in advance for a reply in Sunday's Times, I am, Cordially yours, D. B. A.

ANSWER. The yellowish-white sample is from a very narrow seam or crevice. It is of a vitreous luster; hardness 2; "of sectile tenacity; pentagonal in habit and occurs as an efflorescence." Formula, impure potassium nitrate. Sp. gr., 2.1. Cooling and salt-like to the taste. It deflagrates "vividly" on burning coals and "detonates with combustibles." Colors the b.b. flame violet.

Specimen No. 2 is often found in mountainous sections and resembles certain native hydrocarbons when seen (at a distance) on a summit, mountain crag or butte. It is simply a sort of a guano primarily formed by mountain rats.

Quartz and Calcite.

HOLCOMB VALLEY, Oct. 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you by mail two pieces of rock, one silica and the other a limestone. Please examine the same and advise me if either of them possess any commercial value. I have been a subscriber of your valuable paper for four or five years. Thanking you in advance for any information, I remain, Yours truly, J. G.

ANSWER. Your silica is pure and probably could be used in the manufacture of glass. Further, on the subject read "Mineral Resources of the United States, 1905—Glass Sand."

The limestone (calcite) sample is crystallized, but not the transparent variety. If you have calcite in quantity sufficient, such as represented by the specimen, it can be burned to first-class commercial lime.

Of Doubtful Value.

TEHACHEPI, Oct. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find small sample of rock which was found in a ledge three miles south of this place. Would like to have you tell me if it is of any commercial value or what it contains? Very respectfully,

R. M. S.

ANSWER. The sample possesses no commercial value, unless an assay for precious metal would show it.

Peridot Pebbles.

HOLBROOK (Ariz.) Oct. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times: Of the two pebbles I forwarded by post, which is the most brilliantine for a jewel? Near Fort Defiance I stuck them out near a big rock while the skies were cloudy and in the dark. Please accept them and name them in The Times. Lo comprendo mejor que lo hablo Ingles. M. SAN V.

ANSWER. Thank you very much, señor, for your gift of two peridot pebbles, which (when cut) will make beautiful gems. The smaller one will be the most brilliant as a gem. It would be well to search for peridot under more favorable conditions, in the sunshine, for instance.

No Platinum.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you two samples of mineral from near San Dimas in Los Angeles county. The red or rusty-colored quartz, I think, is a gold-bearing quartz, but carries some other metal, which I think may be copper. What is it? The dark, burned-looking rock I think contains platinum and some gold. Kindly tell me through your "In the Earth" if this is of value. Thanking you in advance. Yours very truly,

A. T. W.

ANSWER. The "rusty-colored" iron gossan might yield low gold values if assayed. There are traces of chrome values in the sample, but no copper values. "The dark, burned-looking rock" was very carefully tested for platinum, with the result: Not a trace of platinum by present-day, commercially valuable, processes.

Feldspar.

MELLEN (Ariz.) Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am desirous of learning the name of this rock from my claim near Parker. Is it quartz? Yours truly, S.

Aragonite.

PIOCHE (Nev.) Sept. 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] A good many mining boys in this section are "stuck" as to the make-up of the rock I send you from this locality. We think it must be a limestone or porphyry of some kind, but its peculiar shape is a new one to us.

Please name in in Sunday's Times. We will then hunt up the name and "study it." Yours truly, M. F.

ANSWER. The specimen is named in the sub-heading. It is calcium carbonate—and yet not ordinary limestone. It falls to pieces before the blow-pipe.

NEVADA.

GOLDFIELD'S RECORD MONTH.

OCTOBER'S TONNAGE GREATEST EVER SHIPPED FROM CAMP.

Fifth Dividend Declared by Florence—Five Leases on Jumbo Extension Closed Temporarily—Rich Strike in Sandstone—Figures on Future Production.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 1.—October, as predicted near the first of the month, is the record production month of Goldfield district for the year of 1907. In the matter of tonnage it far exceeds the score of any other month of this year or any previous year in the history of the camp. The value of its output is exceeded only by that of the famed express shipments made from Mohawk leases last year. Not only has October taken the palm for its aggregate tonnage, but has broken all weekly records by the achievement of its final week, ended Saturday, October 26. The score of this month is symmetrical in its increase from the first to the last of its four weeks, showing respectively 3764 tons, 3877 tons, 5406 tons and 7190 tons production, making up the total of 20,237 tons high-grade product.

Shipments of Goldfield mines and leases for the forty-three weeks of this year, closing with the final Saturday of October, amount to 95,781 tons. The weekly average for the entire year is 2227 tons. The record of the last week of October is 223 per cent. above that average.

FLORENCE'S FIFTH DIVIDEND.

By the first of the coming year the Florence company mill will be in operation. No further leases are being granted by the Florence.

Little Florence has declared its fifth dividend, swelling the total to a half-million dollars. Returns on a recent lot of 241 tons shipped show an average value of $271.53 per ton and the four to five feet of ore now being mined runs from $260 to $390.

In the Florence Annex lease on the Florence, at a depth of 300 feet, an eight-foot shoot shows two feet of average $135 ore.

By a cross-cut west on the 400-foot level the Syndicate lease on Florence has opened a big body of ore that runs better than $100 in gold per ton and displays copper contents up to 6 per cent. This lease is sinking for the 500.

CONSOLIDATED OPERATIONS.

Consolidated's regular annual meeting of stockholders is to be held at Evanston, Wyoming, on November 11, and transfer books will be closed from November 1 to November 12. H. C. Cutler has succeeded Walter C. Geddes as general superintendent of the Goldfield mines.

Mohawk's main company shaft is sinking now for the 550 level and will later be dropped to the 700, the mechanical equipment being good for a depth of 1800 feet. Mohawk is shipping on company account a large tonnage of ore that runs from $100 to $150 per ton.

The Mohawk-Combination lease is now sending out about 250 tons daily of average $70 ore and has enough in sight to maintain an even greater rate until the end of its life, two months hence. Two carloads daily are being shipped by the Begole lease, whose first contribution to the camp's tonnage was made on the first week of October.

Surveys of the Wedge fraction of the Jumbo Extension and Mohawk Number Two of the Consolidated are being made to effect a settlement of the apex controversy, which will very likely be adjusted through arbitration, out of court. Meanwhile the five active leases on this strip of Jumbo Extension territory are ordered closed down. This will affect the tonnage record only through the Mohawk-Jumbo lease, which is the only shipper since the week of September 21, the others being engaged in dead work. They are the Frances-Mohawk, Higginson, Jumbo Annex and Mohawk Ledge leases. However, the apex dispute may eventuate, all Jumbo Extension leases will be granted extensions of time to balance their enforced periods of idleness.

STRIKE IN SANDSTORM.

Sandstorm has again come to the front with a substantial strike of rich ore, uncovered by the Parkison lease on the same block from which Loftus and Davis extracted a quarter of a million of dollars in about a year. The latest exposure shows four feet of dirt that goes from $60 per ton up into the thousands.

ESTIMATES OF OUTPUT.

Computations upon present production and present possibilities, only, indicate for the next twelve months the following values of output from the ten mines now shipping:

Shippers—	Annual production.
Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company	$16,604,640
Jumbo Extension	6,757,920
Florence	1,586,000
Combination Fraction	592,800
Black Butte Consolidated	272,000
Sandstorm	250,000
Daisy	156,000
St. Ives	36,100
Velvet	25,740
May Queen	10,000
Total	$26,291,200

This table contains the names of only such producers as have been in the market since last June. It leaves out of the count Blue Bull, Gold Bar, Great Bend, Simmerone and a half-dozen others which are in the intermittent class, but which may join the regulars any week. At this time, Consolidated is confining its attentions to the Mohawk, Combination and Red Top.

All things considered, the developments of another twelve months in Goldfield district may prove this estimate of $26,291,200 annual production as low as was Director of the Mint George Roberts's prediction that the gold offerings of all Nevada camps in 1907 might reach a total of $15,000,000.

GOLDFIELD STOCKS.

October Quotations Show Decline of the Market Since Last Year.

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Nov. 1.—Comparison of closing prices on all mining stocks which recorded sales on the four weeks of October of last year and on the corresponding weeks of this year reveals the fact that a net decline of 12¾ per cent. was suffered in prices of October, 1907, as against market values of that month of 1906.

The following table of closing quotations on all securities, which recorded sales on the Goldfield boards on the final week of October, 1906, and also 1907, is made up from the official sales sheets published by the exchange:

The net decline for the entire market was 24.63 per cent., listed in the monthly recapitulation in even numbers as 25 per cent. The first week of October was its best and the third was its worst.

JOHNNIE IS BUSY.

Mills and Hoists Building and Big Crews at Work in the Mines.

JOHNNIE (Nev.) Oct. 30.—Work on the 150-ton mill being erected by the Johnnie Consolidated is being pushed rapidly. The Nisson stamps are all in place and the shafting, pulleys and other connecting machinery are on the ground waiting for the completion of the buildings, to be installed. The 12-drill compressor and the two engines, 100-horse-power and eighty-horse-power, will be unloaded from the cars in a few days, and with their installation the plant will be complete, which Contractor Elliott says will be not later than December 15.

Superintendent Perry of the Johnnie Consolidated, has his new forty-horse-power hoist working in the recently finished double compartment shaft down to the 800-foot level. He also has a large force of men getting the mine in readiness to begin stoping ore when the mill is ready to receive it.

There is more life and activity in camp this fall than has been seen for some time. With the big crews at work on the Johnnie Consolidated mill and underground workings and the numerous assessment contracts in all parts of the camp, more men are employed than for a number of years past.

John Beauregard and William Burke brought in some very rich specimens of free gold ore the other day, having made a new strike about four miles south of town. This is a section of country that has been but little prospected and was not known to possess anything on the high-grade order.

Superintendent Denecky of the Globe-Crown Point is pushing his incline and lateral to crosscut the Globe Treasure vein at a depth of about 300 feet. This vein is already open on the surface and at 200 feet, and some of the richest ore ever produced in Nevada has been taken out. Something over $100,000 worth of ore is sacked ready for the mill to start up, and it is predicted the first two months' mill run will make the owners of this property richer by $200,000, as the ore is very high grade and free milling.

T. A. Johnson and Robert Atkinson of Los Angeles have returned to camp after spending the summer outside and have two crews of men doing assessment and development work on several claims.

W. S. Woods of Salt Lake City, one of the heavy stockholders in the Deloras Mining Company, is pushing the work on ground where an exceedingly rich strike was made last spring, when specimen rock was found within eighteen inches of the surface.

Although the stage gives daily service, the travel into camp has become so heavy that four horses are now used instead of two as formerly.

Harry Simmonds and William Watters have developed a fine flow of water in their spring two miles east of the Johnnie mine. The spring was only a seepage, but, by running a tunnel, several inches of water are now obtained.

The Johnnie Consolidated has relaid its old pipe line with new four-inch pipe. The line is two miles long and brings water down from springs ample for mining, milling and camp purposes.

Traveling men say Johnnie shows more life and business is better than in many of the larger and more advertised camps on the desert.

ARIZONA.

COPPER MINES CLOSED DOWN.

THOUSANDS OF MEN THROWN OUT OF WORK.

Cananea's Thirty Thousand People in Serious Plight—Kelvin Is Abandoned as a Dead Camp—Closing of Humboldt Smelter a Blow to Many Small Mine Operators.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 21.—Last winter it was confidently expected that Arizona would lead the procession of copper producers for 1907 and that her production would be far greater than ever before known. These hopes have gone glimmering, and the prospect now is that almost every important copper mine in Arizona will be shut down for the winter. A few months ago it was hard to find miners for the extraction of the copper ores of Arizona, and the spirit of the laboring man was exalted and likewise his wage. All this has changed. Jobs are hard to find now in Arizona and there is little use for the miner to go elsewhere, for conditions are not very different all over the Rocky Mountain region. Instead of $4 a day for eight hours of work, it is not unlikely that the wage scale will descend even to $3 and then there will be found plenty of men willing to accept employment. Incidentally, the prosperity of a half dozen important mining towns has been crushed for the time being, and trade generally will suffer.

CALAMITY TO CANANEA.

The worst item proceeds out of Cananea in Northern Sonora, where Col. "Bill" Greene made a millionaire of himself and gave wealth to so many of his friends. During the summer the pay rolls of the camps were understood to carry the names of 6000 men. Practically all are to be discharged. Dr. Ricketts, general manager of the Greene-Cananea Company, has stated that the properties of the corporation will be closed down within two weeks, a course much regretted, but absolutely imperative. The company has an enormous supply of copper on hand and seems absolutely unable to sell any of it. Men have been dropped in bunches during the past month, and at the present time about 2500 are out of work. These are to be discharged until only 300 remain, the least number necessary to keep the property in good condition. The pumps are being removed from the Capote mine, the main producer, and the lower levels will be allowed to fill with water. Incidentally, this will do some good, as for many months a fire has been burning in the sulphide ore body between the 400 and 500-foot levels. The concentrators, hoisting works, smelters and mining railroad, all will be closed, and $750,000 a month in wages will be lost to the State of Sonora.

Only two furnaces now are being operated, cleaning up the ore in the bins. It had been expected to begin work at once upon a new, modern and economic smelter, to take the place of the reduction works once described by a mining expert as "an animated junk heap," but even this work has been put aside for more favorable times. Curious to note, it is expected that the last month's work of the old smelter will show extremely high return of bullion, for the richer ores have been called upon ever since copper went on the toboggan. Yet it costs the company from 12 cents to 14 cents a pound to make the red metal and it will be disastrous to continue operations with copper drifting around the 12-cent notch, even if the product could be sold.

It is no light blow to pull subsistence away from a community of 30,000 souls, and the only mavel is that it has been done with as little disorder as has been noted. Mexican troops have been thrown into Cananea to assist in preserving order and to guard the mines, but their services have been little needed, though it has been told that actual starvation is confronting a considerable part of the population. The Mexican notoriously lives from hand to mouth, spending what he receives, no matter what the amount may be, and now employment and revenue both have ceased. The American miners are coming across the border by the trainload and many Mexicans will be drafted into the interior for work upon railroad construction. W. C. Greene is at the camp. It is understood that he has lost a large block of his Greene-Cananea stock, deposited by him as security for New York loans at $10. The stock now is sold as low as $6 a share, a drop of something over $50.

WAGE CUT AT CLIFTON.

If copper remains low in price, something of the same nature is expected around Clifton, where the companies also are heavy employers of Mexican labor. The mines are all of low grade, the ores worked in the concentrators ranging from 3 per cent. to 5 per cent. copper. Naturally the most economical working is demanded. The Arizona Copper Company, the Shannon Copper Company and the Detroit Copper Company have cut wages 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. a day, the first wage reduction noted in the Territory. The companies are discharging men in squads as well and are cutting out al development work. Little development is needed in that district, for millions of tons of ore are blocked out, ready for stoping. The Shannon company has dropped 300 men, about a quarter of its total force, and may close down entirely, as it costs 13 cents a pound to produce metal. However, the entire production of the plant has been sold up to November 1 for 18 cents, so to that time the furnaces will be run. The Arizona Copper Company is able to produce at a cost of 9 cents per pound, yet this great property also is easing off its production. The Copper King mine, the main property of the Clifton Copper Company;, has been closed down, as well as a number of smaller producers.

SITUATION AT GLOBE.

At Globe several hundred men have been dropped by the Old Dominion Company, and the mining force will be worked only five days a week, giving Saturdays and Sundays as holidays. The Keystone mine of the company has been shut down and one shift of miners dropped. Only three furnaces will be operated. Despite the worry concerning the continuance of their jobs, the smelter force last Sunday made the record run of the works, turning out 770 bars of blister copper. Many smaller properties in the district have closed down. Those which continue to operate are beginning to lay off shifts, and all have accepted the six-day working week.

From Milwaukee, President D. D. Rose of the Twin Buttes Company has telegraphed Superintendent William McDermott to absolutely shut down all work on the mines south of Tucson. About sixty men have been employed getting out ore for shipment. The train service on the Twin Buttes road hereafter will be only twice a week. The company has been somewhat embarassed financially, and lately placed a loan in Milwaukee for $100,000, to be used in payment of all outstanding obligations.

Work is proceeding briskly on the Imperial smelter at Sasco, Pima county, where 150 men are at work. E. B. Gage, president of the Imperial company, states that he has been compelled to reduce the working force at the mines at Silver Bell, owing to the fact that the Douglas smelters would not handle as much ore as has been sent them heretofore. He stated that he expected to reëmploy the old force as soon as the smelter is in operation.

RETRENCHMENT AT BISBEE.

The most apparent effect of the copper slump around Bisbee has been the reduction of the output of the Copper Queen and CalumetArizona smelters at Douglas and the discharge of 600 smelter employés, about 25 per cent. of the force. Assistant Superintendent S. W. French of the Copper Queen and Smelter Superintendent James Wood of the Calumet and Arizona have stated that they expect to make no further reductions, and that they understand that operations will continue about as at present until more favorable conditions exist in the copper market. Yet retrenchment is the order of the day around Bisbee, where a large number of Copper Queen miners are being worked on the installation of a new ore-delivery system, which is to terminate at the Sacramento shaft, and which is expected to largely reduce the cost of hoisting and handling the product. There is grave fear that the next move will be a drop of wages to no more than $3.50 a day, in addition to the six-day working day already put into effect.

Nothing appears to be known in Bisbee concerning the scheme lately made public whereby the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company reported that it was about to import from Arizona 5000 miners to take the place of striking members of the United Mine Workers' Association. There is little doubt, however, that this number of men could be secured readily in the Southwest. All of the Southern Arizona camps, save Globe, are non-union.

KELVIN KILLED.

About 300 men got their final pay checks last Saturday at Ray and Kelvin, comprising the last survivors of about 800 men who had been employed in the mines along the Gila River in Pinal county. It was a death blow to Kelvin, yet, like the survivors of the San Francisco earthquake, the trouble was taken with a bold front, and every business house hung out signs. The Chinese restaurant had one, "Me Sellee Cheep." There was crepe on the front of the mercantile establishments and saloons, and inscriptions that told that "Kelvin is not dead but sleeping," and that "Kelvin was a good old camp, but she fell down." Enormous "For Sale" signs soon decorated almost every house and shack, and the people met at the thirst emporiums to assure each other that life still remained. About the entire population of the camp is moving to Phoenix.

Only a few weeks ago the new mill of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company was started at Kelvin, crushing 250 tons of ore a day, and the prospect seemed bright that the camp soon would become the largest in Arizona. The ore comes from mines around Ray, and though of low grade was susceptible of extremely economical extraction. A narrow-gauge railroad has just been completed between the mines and Kelvin, five miles distant.

MINES CLOSED.

The closing of the mines at Christmas was the cause of something of a financial disturbance among the creditors of the Saddle Mountain Mining Company. About $40,000 was owed by the company to material men and dealers in Phoenix alone, and the total liabilities of the company were many times this amount. There was a meeting of the creditors lately in Phoenix, and an agreement was arrived at looking to the payment of all obligations.

The Copper Butte mine in Pinal county is closed down, and its management announces that it will take 15c copper to start it up again.

With the crash in the Westinghouse concerns, back East, has come the stoppage of the mine and smelter of the Duquesne Mining and Reduction Company at Washington Camp, Santa Cruz county, wherein the Westinghouse interests hold about all the stock. The plant represents a tremendous investment, a number of plans having been tried for the home economical working of extremely refractory copper ores, wherein zinc and other base metals are present in extraordinary quantity, judged by Arizona standards. Last year it was announced that all difficulties had been solved by an electric process of separation, but no extraordinary results have been made manifest.

The mines and works of the Cornelia Company at Ajo, near the international line in Pima county, have laid off most of their men. The company has been experimenting with the Anderson electrolytic copper reduction process, with a plant capable of producing five tons of pure copper a day. The experiment has been so successful that the right has been acquired to erect a much larger plant of the same nature.

The Comanche smelter at Silver City has closed down, but it is announced that it will resume operations within thirty days with a capacity of 500 tons a day.

HUMBOLDT SMELTER.

A most serious feature of the depression is the closing down of the Humboldt smelter near Prescott. About 500 men have been thrown out of employment, with a half promise that work will resume November 15. This is believed hardly possible. Far more important than the loss of wages by the smelter hands to the community is the fact that the smelter permitted the operation of over 100 small mines wherefrom large returns were received by the mine owners, resulting in the most substantial prosperity known to Prescott for twenty years. The Humboldt smelter is controlled by Thomas Lawson of Boston and the stoppage was by his telegraphic order. The company has been in financial straits for several months, and has been very slow in making returns for ore purchased. It has been operating on its own account a number of copper mines near the Grand Cañon, which, of course, will be closed down.

At Cumpas, Sonora, the mines and smelter of the Transvaal Copper Company have been shut down, hundreds of employés being dropped. In the same neighborhood work has been stopped on the Belen and Promontorio mines. On the latter property, preparations had been begun for the building of a smelter, on funds understood to have been furnished by the Phelps-Dodge company to the owner, R. S. Travers.

MINES IN LITIGATION.

Disputed Ownership of Several Very Rich Arizona Copper Properties.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—The property of the Rescue Copper Company and of the Cornelia Copper Company in Ajo district, Pima county, is involved in a suit filed in this city by A. J. Shotwell against S. W. Purcell. Shotwell alleges that he had an option to purchase a number of claims in two groups in the Ajo district, on one of which he paid $25,000, out of a total of $35,000, and on the other $24,000, out of a total of $35,000, and that, despite his legal claim upon the properties, they were sold to defendant for $10,000 and $21,000. Judge Purcell replies that the entire petition is false, instituted to injure the present owners and to hinder them in the sale of stock, and that the second sale was made after Shotwell had forfeited all rights to the property. Shotwell alleges that the total value of the mines affected is not less than $2,000,000.

B. F. Graham appears to have been left alone in his litigation with the Kansas City stockholders of the Lucky Tiger Mining Company. Nearly two years ago, the Kansas City men deposited $203,000 in the Miners' and Merchants' Bank of Bisbee, the last payment on the total sale price of $650,000. Graham and his associates alleged that the payment was not made on time and seized the mine by force of arms. Latterly, through the Mexican courts, the Kansas City people have regained possession. Following the copper slump, Graham's associates have acknowledged the existence of a rich mine in the Bisbee bank and have been drawing out their proportion of the sum which had been placed on deposit in their credit. Among those participating in the division are C. H. Suits, Alexander Grant, A. H. Riordan and James A. Taylor of Douglas, and Judge Townsend of El Paso. Graham refused to take his share and states that he will keep on fighting.

George Mitchell, the copper millionaire, is understood to have lost a little matter of $175,000 in his speculation with the Britt mining property near Globe. He did a large amount of development work on the mine, against the advice of a competent mining expert, whom he had employed, and even purchased a smelting plant and made arrangements for an extension of the Gila Valley Railroad down Pinal Creek to the new smelter site. It is told that while the mine has a large body of ore, the values are extremely low. A second property purchased by Mitchell at the same time is considered one of extraordinary promise.

M. J. Cunningham of Bisbee, P. J. Tehaney and J. W. Hardy of Cananea are about to retake possession of the Cananea-Bisbee mine, which lies adjoining ground of the Greene-Cananea Company. About a year ago the property was bonded to W. B. Thompson and J. E. Thompson of Hayden, Stone and Company of New York for $500,000, it being provided that a certain amount should be expended monthly in development. Four thousand feet of development work has thus been done, but no activity has been manifest for several months past. Now it is stold that the Thompsons will fail to make the payment due in December and that an extension of time has been denied them, hence their prior payments will be forfeited and the property will revert to its former owners.

It is claimed that the Calumet and Arizona Company at Bisbee has the lowest productive cost of any mine in the Southwest, producing bullion at a cost of only 5.71c per lb.

A railroad is projected from Tucson into the Catalina mountains, the terminus to be about forty-five miles distant from the city, the entire road to cost $700,000. Behind the enterprise is a St. Louis man named Johnson, who owns mining property in the Catalinas valued by him at more than $25,000,000, though the principal claim was acquired by him only a few months ago for $2500.

Very rich ore is being shipped out by the Pittsburgh-Arizona Mining Company, which has mines eight miles west of Patagonia in Santa Cruz county. Manager T. A. Cox is preparing to erect an electro-magnetic concentrating plant, considered especially suitable for the base ores of the vicinity.

A large body of ore, carrying from 5 per cent. to 7 per cent. in native copper, has been struck in the Oregon shaft near Clifton.

A strike of free gold of wonderful value has been made on the Buzzard Shadow claim of the New York-Arizona Company near Morenci.

A 100-ton concentrator, erected on the Tiro mine in Silverbell district, is practically complete and several tunnels are being dug to connect the plant directly with the Silver Bell Railroad.

SOUTHWEST ARIZONA.

Mining in Yuma and Mojave Counties Is Unaffected by the Copper Depression.

YUMA (Ariz.) Nov. 1.—Directors of the Thumb Butte Mining Company have filed location notices on twenty-one additional claims. Their group of forty-four claims includes more than 1200 acres, and every claim in the least developed makes such an excellent showing in gold that the low price of copper cannot defeat their plans for immediate development. From several claims they have gold assays of from $4 to $20, and while the copper values have been regarded as superior, each claim contains sufficient gold to make it safe to proceed without regard to copper.

The Big Horn people and the De Luce people are proceeding with work, as usual. The Big Horn was located as a gold property, but an immense copper dike was struck, and it looks as if copper were to be its greatest treasure, although the ore carries high gold ues, and can be milled at slight pense. In doing the assessment on one of their claims they were fortunate as to encounter water shaft at a depth of only twelve At thirty feet they had eight fe water, which gives them an ample mestic and operating supply.

WORKERS' PAGE—Fisheries a Picturesque Branch of Uncle Sam's Service.

Government Fisheries.

PROPAGATION OF FISH AND PLANTING THE SAME IN RIVERS AND ON COASTS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

THERE are but few branches of industry today that are not very materially aided by our United States government departments. The successful fruit grower has the assistance of picked men to help him get rid of pests, the wheat grower and the fruit grower alike are aided in selecting the best soil and seed.

We are all familiar with these phases of Uncle Sam's work, but perhaps the most picturesque branch of government service is the Bureau of Fisheries.

We plant seed to reap harvests from our broad acres, and, quite as certainly we must propagate fish and plant streams to reap a harvest of fish. Maryland has her terrapin farms, there are lobster hatcheries on the coast of Maine, and there are hatcheries for frogs in Indiana. We have experimental clam farms, where one method and another is carefully tried and results noted in order to find out which will bring the largest returns, for your clam chowder and mine, and that of the rest of the world. This is also true of the oyster beds. There is an annual shad harvest, a cultivated crop produced by planting. If this were to stop awhile the fish would almost disappear because of the extravagant and careless methods of catching them.

The business of keeping our great lakes and streams stocked with food fish, and other ocean depths as well, occupies much of the attention of the Bureau of Fisheries; this is evident from the mere statement that 250,000,000 fish are hatched and distributed ally.

yone who has ever seen the great ls of tiny fish numbering seeminto the billions playing about piers along the beaches, or swimamong the reeds and marshes of land lake will wonder what posneed there could be to propagate The one who has frequented some or river for a term of years, and d the partial or total disappearof game fish that at first were ful, will recognize the necessity ocking.

e Sam has found it out, but it is order that he may make our vamore pleasurable that he uns the business of growing fish, order that the food supply of tion may not diminish.

resque though it is, this branch rnment service is often dangerhard. Those who go out with Cape Cod fishermen must frey brave wild gales, rough, teme seas, and bitter cold. Privad hardship is their lot, and sciroves a severe taskmaster. California is kinder to those who in the work of the Fisheries

Then the Fisheries Bureau takes it upon itself to ascertain the facts in the case.

It has long been suspected among those interested that the sea trout and the common trout of our mountain brooks were literally the same individuals. The fisheries bureau at Ukiah set about proving this. They attached a small marked silver tag to the mountain trout, fastening it securely to the fin on the under side of the body and released the fish. Then they published and sent broadcast bulletins requesting that anyone catching fish so marked would report the fact, together with the size and weight of the fish, as well as the place where caught. Reports have been received in sufficient numbers to prove to the bureau beyond doubt that the little mountain trout and the big sea trout are the same fish, somewhat changed of course by environment and food. The large jars in the picture show the sea trout that have been sent back to the hatchery; the smaller ones contain the lake trout. This experiment which has been carried to a finish in the hatchery at Ukiah, Mendocino county, Cal., is of great interest to those who make a study of fish and their environment.

The process of extracting the eggs from the female fish is done carefully and in such a manner that the fish is uninjured, and it is afterward returned to the water.

The utmost nicety of touch and handling is requisite to this work, and not only skill but knowledge of the science, of the fish and of environments goes to make a success of this branch of Uncle Sam's work which has to do with the angler's sport, but more with the nation's fish supply of food.

Examination of the figures of rates of wages paid in these industries in other cities develops the fact that, taken as a whole, labor secures the larger returns in Los Angeles. That is why so many, if not the majority, of our wage-earners own their own homes, a condition certainly not existent in San Francisco, even before the fire. On this basis, an "open-shop" city, like Los Angeles, is the best city for a wage-earner to work in.

Notation should be taken, also, of the considerable increases shown above in the number of workers in nearly every case in 1906 over 1905.

Women Workers in Africa.

Until recently women were employed in England in connection with surface work in coal mining and brick yards. The women were found to be very strong, but they were otherwise unsatisfactory, and were ultimately dispensed with at the collieries. The coal mines regulation act of Great Britain prohibits woman labor being employed under ground.

In German Southwest Africa an investigator found many native women at work about the mines. They were useful in carrying in loads, especially of firewood. The woman labor was cheap, and as long as they were left alone to take as much time as they liked over the work and do it as they wished they were all right.

His next experience was higher up the coast, in West Africa. Labor was short, and they decided to try women to carry stones. They carried the first two loads and then they struck.

These women quite altered the conditions of carrying stones. They carried them for a certain distance, but three or four relays had to be provided. After that they were tried at carrying sand and things like that. They went on for a short while, but did the work in fits and starts.

In another place, also on the west coast, where women had been tried against the black men, it was found that for carrying in firewood they were by far the best and cheapest. There, of course, they were on piece work, although their tickets were marked just the same as if they were on day work.

Their task was to carry in a cord of wood a day. They used to start about 4:30 a.m., and went on carrying until 7 o'clock, and from 7:30 to 9 or 10 o'clock. Then if they wanted to get off early the next day they used to carry another cord of wood in the afternoon or a part of it.

They were a decided success, but they were very particular as to whether the cord of wood was exactly in what they called their circle. They did not mind how close it was to the boilers, but if it were a little over their distance they would go to the manager and want an increase directly.

Some women used to carry about one hundred pounds on their heads; on an average about eighty-five to ninety-five pounds of wood.—[The Montreal Standard.

How Is Your Backbone?

Haven't you depended on clothes, upon appearances, upon introductions, upon recommendations about long enough? Haven't you leaned about long enough on other things? Isn't it about time for you to call a halt, to tear off all masks, to discard everything you have been leaning on outside of yourself, and depend upon your own worth? Haven't you been in doubt about yourself long enough? Haven't you had enough unfortunate experiences depending upon superficial, artificial, outside things to drive you home to the real power in yourself? Aren't you tired of leaning and borrowing and depending upon this thing and that thing which have failed you? The man who learns to seek power within himself, who learns to rely upon himself, is never disappointed; but he always will be disappointed when he depends upon any outside help. There is one person in the world that will never fail you if you depend upon him, and are honest with him—and that is yourself. It is the self-reliant man that is in demand everywhere.—[O. S. Marden, in Success Magazine.

SUCCESSFUL COLONISTS.

THRIFTY CHARACTER OF MORMON SETTLERS IN MEXICO.

Every Person Works and the Families All Enjoy a Net Income from Their Labors — Good Houses, Schools and Farms Characterize Their Settlements.

The Mormon colonies in Northwestern Chihuahua and the two colonies just over the State line in Sonora, numbering in all about 4000 souls, are the only success in foreign colonization yet made in Mexico, says the Chihuahua, (Mex.) Enterprise. And they are without question the thriftiest, most progressive, industrious and law-abiding people of which this republic can boast. Outside of President Diaz, who has encouraged them to come and settle in this country and always stood ready to help them, these thrifty pioneers have never been properly appreciated by any one.

A little over twenty years ago people of the Mormon faith from Utah, Arizona and other parts began coming to the State of Chihuahua to establish colonies. The inducements held out, so far as Mexico was concerned, were a concession for small tracts of public land for settlement and exemption from Federal and State taxes for each and every colonist for a term of ten years and this tax privilege applies today to newcomers.

All lands were acquired by the Mexican Agricultural and Colonization Company, incorporated under the laws of Colorado. The stockholders are principally Mormons in Utah and other States and some in the colonies. A. W. Ivins, president of the church in Mexico, is the head of the company, and it is to his great business ability that the credit is due for this remarkable success of the colonists. But the hearty coöperation of each and every colonist was an important factor and is today.

This company is merely a practical business organization. It is not speculative, but is, in fact, a perpetual fund for the acquisition of lands. The plan is to acquire lands and sell them out to colonists, not only Mormons but any one who can bring proof of good moral character, at a slight advance and on long time and low interest. Thus the company has a perpetual fund to acquire more lands. It is safe to say that the Mormons have in Chihuahua alone over a quarter million acres, all of which is utilized for agriculture or grazing.

Immediately on locating these people did not sit down, they set to work building the best houses they could out of adobes and put little saw mills in the mountains thirty or forty miles away to get lumber and shingles and began tilling the soil.

How is it today? If one goes into the Dublan and Juarez colonies, he will think he is suddenly transported into a thrifty American settlement with tree-lined streets. Nice one and two-story brick houses of the American style will greet the eye, good schoolhouses, good barns, flowers, fruit trees, good horses, cattle and hogs will be seen on every hand. Everywhere is the sign of thrift and the people look healthy, happy and contented. If you go to their houses hospitality is the greeting always, and these modern American houses are furnished in good but simple taste, an organ and sometimes a piano is in the parlor and books and newspapers are in evidence. And each and every family owns its own home or is paying for it. All of the colonies are more or less alike.

Farming, stock raising and some manufacturing are their industries, with a little lumbering and brick making.

From an agricultural standpoint the Mormons excel anything in Mexico. They are good farmers. Their deciduous fruits, such as apples and pears, are equal to the best in the States. They raise wheat, corn, vegetables and splendid alfalfa. A Mormon must have hay for his work stock and plenty of eggs, milk and butter for his family.

The Mormons have good grades of cattle, horses and hogs, fully up to what one would see in similar settlements in the western part of the States. Their lands are practically all fenced with barbed wire. Recently some of them organized a company and imported four black Percheron stallions weighing from 1800 to 2100 pounds each, and three fine French coach stallions which were distributed in the colonies. Dublan, Juarez and Diaz for breeding purposes.

As a sample of Mormon thrift and prosperity, the showing of Colonia Juarez for 1906 is a remarkable object lesson The Mormons by their tithing system for the support of their church keep accurate statistics of every one's income. Colonia Juarez, with about 650 inhabitants, showed an income for every man, woman and child of $200 Mexican; and this was net, not gross.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

The Large Amount That Labor Secures from Railroads Shown by Table.

[Bradstreet's:] The three main claimants upon the revenues of the railroads of the United States are labor, capital and government. According to the latest available statistics, the expenditures for these three sharers, in the form of wages, dividends and taxes, averaged $1,391,000,000 yearly for the last five years. Of this total the employés of the railroads, including officers and all kinds of labor, received 57.3 per cent. For dividends and interest paid to capital the average disbursements were 38 per cent., and the bill of the tax collector for all political divisions was 4.7 per cent. The table below, which we take from the Wall Street Journal, gives the totals for each of these lines of expenditure between 1902 and 1906, inclusive, as reported by the Interstate Commerce Commission:

	Wages.	Div. & Int.	Taxes.	Total.
1906..	$901,000,000	$595,000,000	$75,000,000	$1,571,000,000
1905..	840,000,000	560,000,000	62,000,000	1,462,000,000
1904..	818,000,000	533,000,000	62,000,000	1,413,000,000
1903..	757,000,000	430,000,000	58,000,000	1,245,000,000
1902..	676,000,000	468,000,000	53,000,000	1,197,000,000
Av.	$798,000,000	$529,000,000	$62,000,000	$1,391,000,000
Per cent..	57.3	38	4.7	100
P.c. inc., 1902-'06 ..	33.0	27	41.0	...

The total represented in the above figures forms somewhat more than two-thirds of the gross earnings of our railroads. The other third not represented is held in the form of working capital, of surplus and other undistributed resources. The annual disbursements of the two-thirds here under discussion comprise a series of financial operations of the most intimate relation to the communities concerned. The wage payment or earnings of employés in 1906 was $901,000,000, having increased $225,000,000, or over 33 per cent., since 1902; while dividends and interest, or the share which capital gets, increased 27 per cent., and the share of taxes 41 per cent. The number of employés of railroads has increased during this period from 1,189,315 to 1,521,355 persons, or nearly a third. The total amount of disbursements to the credit of labor has kept pace with the gain in numbers. The rewards to capital have gained somewhat less, while the amount of taxes has increased more rapidly than either of the other participants.

Honesty the Best Policy.

One beautiful spring morning a well-dressed young man, probably 20 years of age, entered the office of a large manufacturing concern in St. Louis, Mo., and applied for a position as salesman. After he had introduced himself to the manager of the sales department and made his business known, the manager proceeded to ask the usual questions regarding the applicant's ability, etc. A man was needed to take out samples at once.

"What experience have you had on the road?" was asked.

"About a year."

"For what house did you travel?"

"I traveled—er—or—I——"

"Well," interrupted the manager with his eyes fixed on the applicant's face, which had reddened considerably, "you didn't travel quite long enough to learn the firm's name. No, we haven't any position to offer you at present; good day."

As the young man was leaving the building, he met a tall, honest-faced youth, who nodded and entered the office. He applied for the same position as salesman.

"What has been your experience as a salesman?" came the usual question.

"As yet I've had no experience," promptly answered the youth.

"What makes you think you can sell goods on the road? You must understand that when we employ a man to carry our samples to show the trade, we must have some assurance of getting our share of the business."

The youth with a serious yet pleasant face answered: "My only assurance to offer you is that if I am permitted to carry your samples, I shall endeavor to show them up to the best possible advantage for the house. I think that inasmuch as your goods have merit and men are successfully selling them on the road, I can sell them too."

He got the job.—[The Circle.

Persistence Is Wanted.

In considering applicants for positions, employers are always on the watch for signs of persistence. Many well-known business men think that they can judge a man on this point by the manner in which he seeks a place, and this is not a bad method. Men often advance to some responsible position, and then suddenly and without apparent reasons, fail and drop out. "The place got too big for him," we say. But in most cases the real reason for the failures is that the man began to slacken in effort, thinking that he had advanced so far on the ladder of success that he could afford to take things easy.

For the business man of today there is no such thing as taking things easy. The higher he gets, the more is expected of him, and the harder he must strive. The president of a great manufacturing company, for example, says that one of his duties alone, the securing of capable assistants, is harder work than he ever had to do when he was only the head of a minor department. The man who does not realize that continuous effort is as essential to a general manager as to an office boy, will not be of permanent value.

The managing director of one of the largest British banking institutions, having more than one hundred branches throughout the world, attributes the failure of many men to not realizing this truth. It has been his observation that out of one hundred employés starting on an apparently equal footing, only ten ever rise above the surface, and of this number not more than one ever proves fit to hold permanently a position of great trust and responsibility. The other nine begin to take things easy as they advance farther and farther, and thus fail to reach their maximum value. For of fit men there is a great scarcity. Whenever found, large salaries and unlimited opportunities for advancement await them—[Exchange.

Industrial Independence.

ORGANIZER LABOR'S SMALL RESPECT FOR ITS CONTRACTS WITH EMPLOYERS.

THERE are frequent evidences that organized labor is losing its head, as the expression is. Intoxicated with their apparent strength they forget that obligations are as binding on themselves as upon the other members of the contract. No better example of this has occurred than the recent action of the Printing Pressmen's Union in attempting to repudiate an agreement entered into with the employing printers for a fifty-four-hours' week's labor until January 1, 1909, after which the hours should be reduced to forty-eight a week. A change of officers of the union led to the notification of the employing printers that an eight-hour day must be granted at once or a strike would be called. Fortunately, the unions do not make all the laws, nor have they yet succeeded in dominating the courts, and the attempt to repudiate their contract with the Typothetae has resulted in an injunction being issued by the court restraining them from such action. The lesson of this is that the unions cannot be depended upon to observe their contracts with employers. This is certainly not an envious position.

Printers, more than any other body of labor men, have argued and contended for the closed shop. They have demanded contracts in which that shall be one of the provisions, and yet it would seem that if their contracts are of no more value than is placed upon them by the printers themselves their repeated demands are no more than a scheme to get the employer completely at their mercy.

There is another phase of the situation which is worthy of the attention of the men themselves. Is the labor union fair to its own members? The thousands of men who went to work under this contract between the Typothetae and the I. P. P. believed that for five years at least their troubles were over. They could plan ahead for that time just as their employers mapped out their business for the same period.

One of the significant features of this case is that in the election of the new president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union the eight-hour day issue was raised by the members of the union, and he went into office elected, in part, at least, on that issue. The members of the union thus proved their low moral tone on contracts by taking a position in repudiation of the contract signed with the Typothetae by the president and four of the directors of the Pressmen's Union. Thus elected it behooved President Berry, says American Industries, to stir matters up a bit even to the limit of repudiating a contract made by the men who elected him. Mr. Berry's activity ran along until September, when he took a decided step by sending a letter to the various local bodies which, for sublime indifference to the rights of employer and employé alike, is a gem. He asked the local unions in so many words if they would be satisfied to go back on their word, repudiate their contract and demand an immediate eight-hour day. The answer came in no uncertain form. St. Louis replied first and voted five to one to sustain the original agreement. Mr. Berry saw the handwriting on the wall, and fearful of his prestige and without waiting for the result of the referendum which he had himself invoked, he had a letter sent to the various members of the Typothetae stating that unless they signed an agreement on October 1, to put into effect the eight-hour law on November 18, he would call a strike in every one of the shops. Even then the Typothetae believed, foolishly enough it would seem, that the contract with the union was of some value, and so its reply to Mr. Berry was that it stood by its contract, willing to perform all that it had promised to perform and demanding similar treatment from the union. Mr. Berry's reply was to call out the men in nine of the Typothetae shops.

The appeal made to the courts by the Typothetae was the next step, and the courts naturally ordered the Pressmen's Union to stand by their contract. It is impossible to conceive of a more absurd situation than the one in which the Pressmen's Union is now placed. The members of the union may quit work, if they wish, but they cannot harrass the members of the Typothetae without being at once in trouble with the court. A similar repudiation of agreements threatens the employers of labor throughout the country.

The San Francisco Carmen.

The recent strike of carmen in San Francisco followed the arbitration of a previous strike, the result of which arbitration was accepted by the United Railroads, but repudiated by the carmen, though they had their own representatives on the Board of Arbitration. It was a case where the strikers agreed to arbitration for the settlement of differences and then refused to abide by their own agreement. Under the circumstances, the United Railroads has persistently refused to consider any further propositions for arbitration or to deal with the Carmen's Union. The members of the union had proved that they are unwilling to abide by any agreements that may be entered into. Recently the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employés authorized President Mahon to go to San Francisco and investigate the situation, as a preliminary to the further payment of moneys to the strikers. It was an opportunity that seldom comes to the president of an international union to set unionism right before the world, but Mr. Mahon has failed utterly to measure up to the opportunity. He has decided that unionism must be supported, right or wrong, and will consequently recommend that the Amalgamated association continue to pay money for the support of men who would not accept the result of arbitration.

Incorporation of Unions.

The Bureau of Labor statistics at Washington recently interrogated the labor-union leaders of the country regarding the incorporation of labor unions. There was a wonderful agreement in the answers—an opposition to the proposition. Incorporation of the unions, it was recognized, would bring financial accountability. It would make them pay more regard to pledges and contracts. It would enforce a spirit of caution and fairness among their leaders, and thus would result in the deposing of many of their present heads. Hence the labor-union magnates, by a large majority, are against incorporation. This throws an additional light on the class and caste inequalities of much of labor-union demands and practises. If the employer violates his contract the member of the union can sue him individually, or can sue his company for any damages which may have resulted to the worker from such breach of contract. But no such redress is open to the employer when, as is far oftener the case, the violation is by the other side. If the employer attempts to make the worker carry out his contract he is barred by the court's ruling that this would mean involuntary servitude, and as such prohibited by the Constitution and the laws.

It is hardly possible to believe that a condition so one-sided and unfair as this could exist in a free and enlightened country, or that the spirit of fairness so zealously upheld by the American people would tolerate an economic status which enables one class to evade all moral and legal rules of conduct while compelling another class to observe them. The recent arousing of public interest in the vitally important cause of labor unrest indicates that the public is at last recognizing its connection with and responsibility for the aggressions and oppressions by organized labor.

Legal incorporation must be required of every union in the country. If the unions refuse they will stand before the public in the unenviable position of evading responsibility for their actions.

Strikers Must Behave.

Judge A. G. Dayton, in the Federal Court at Wheeling, W. Va., sentenced John Beymer, a striking telephone lineman, and his wife to sixty days in the Bannock County Jail for contempt of court. Some time ago the court granted an injunction against the strikers, and Judge Dayton made the injunction permanent. Two days later Beymer and his wife were arrested. The offense consisted in calling nonunion men "scabs" and hurling abuse at them. In passing sentence the judge scored labor unions for attempting to interfere with the right of a man to work if he chooses. He said the strikers had a perfect right to work or not, as they chose, but no right to prevent others from taking the positions they gave up.

Strike Closes a Ship Yard.

A number of the largest vessels on the Great Lakes have been built at the South Chicago ship yard of the American Shipbuilding Company, but no more will be built there. President Wallace announces that the plant will be stripped and the machinery sent to other yards of the company. This action is the result of the frequent labor troubles the company has suffered at South Chicago.

At various times during the past two years the work at the South Chicago yards has been delayed by strikes called at inopportune times—for the company—and this action of the men has cost the company large sums of money. This fact, as well as the improbability that conditions would ever be any better as long as the yards remained located so near Chicago, are said to have been the determining factors in the resolve of the officials of the company to discontinue all new work there.

The closing of the plant will be a big loss to South Chicago, as when the yard was working full force about 1800 men were employed with a daily payroll of about $5000.

The Apprenticeship Question.

The regulations of labor unions for the restriction of the number of apprentices has the effect of ultimately reducing the number of skilled workmen. The fact appears to be lost sight of (perhaps purposely for the present advantage of unionites,) that in time both the specialist and the all-around workman must be replaced with others competent to take their places. But as union rules prohibit the employment of but a limited number of apprentices to so many journeymen, where are they to come from? This is one of the reasons why the open shop must be maintained, that the independent workman and his children may have the chance in life that is his by birth. Recently fifteen mechanics in an Indianapolis shop went on strike because the firm employed a third apprentice. The concern refused to discharge the young man, and the shop is open today. In the families of those fifteen men there were twenty-seven boys. According to the limitations prescribed by the union, not one of those twenty-seven boys could go into the shop and learn the trade of his father. If other trades held similar barriers against them, what is to become of these boys? They are not fitted or constituted to take up the study of a profession. They must either become poorly paid laborers or mendicants upon the community. Such a union regulation is not fair to the members themselves, and is an instance where unionists need to be saved from themselves for the benefit of the whole community. Next to the workers themselves, the part of our population most interested in industrial training are the producers, the manufacturers, men who are, as a rule, the employers of labor. If we are to have successful manufacture in this country, if we are to produce articles which will hold their own for intrinsic value in the markets of the world, we must have skill, and skill of the highest order. Skill comes only by training; and training, both theoretical and practical, must be the basis for creating the skilled worker. Next to the man who depends on labor for a living, the manufacturer and producer are interested in industrial education.

A Lesson from Germany.

Germany has profited greatly over England through the different manner in which the two countries have handled the apprentice proposition. They have been growing first-class workmen in Germany for many years, while in England manufacturers have stood idly by and allowed the unions to make restrictions that prohibited them from turning out an adequate number of skilled mechanics, with the result that Germany is now taking away the foreign trade of England, and is even invading England itself and selling better goods for less money than the Englishmen themselves. American employers should profit by England's predicament and remedy the evil before it is too late either by looking out that boys are given a fair chance to learn trades in the old way, or by attendance upon trade schools.

Statistics show that in New York City alone there are more than 150,000 boys between the ages of 16 and 20 that have never learned a trade, have no visible means of support, and are merely loafers and parasites, while they might have been valuable citizens had they been given a chance. Out of the 8,000,000 children born in America each year, it has been shown that less than 100,000 of them succeed in securing a college education. The other 7,900,000 are turned loose upon the world with hardly any preparation for their future. So it can readily be seen that there is room for trades schools not only in all of the States, but in all of the large towns of America. The citizens of this country who are vitally interested in this subject, and almost all of them are, must take off their coats and go to work on this problem of the proper education of the American boy; for the time will come, within a very few years, when, for instance, a bricklayer, at the present rate of increase in wages, will be able to demand a dollar a minute for his work. He is already getting a dollar an hour in many places, while another pernicious ruling of the unions limits the output.

BEACH SEWER COSTLY PEST.

ay Towns Still Struggling With the Nuisance.

eptic Tanks Not All That Was Expected.

lectric Scheme and Outfall Pier in Progress.

BY C. B. IRVINE.

The efforts of the cities of the Santa Monica Bay section to satisfactorily solve the question of sewage disposal form a recital of very costly experiments.

In the early days, when there was no settlement on the southern sands where Ocean Park and Venice now stand, Santa Monica acquired the right of way for her sewer mains and at heavy expense built a 1200 foot pier into the ocean. This structure carried the outfall pipe through which the waste of the city was carried into the sea. In those days there was no annoyance to anybody—no menace to health by reason of the discharge into the ocean.

But time brought the development of the beach to the south. The sand dunes were leveled, and being laid off into town lots, were sold as sites for seaside homes. At first the outfall pipe was held in place by two rows of piling, but the municipality disposed of the pleasure privileges of the pier to the private corporation promoting the sale of the sand lots and the development of the beach resort. Other rows of piles were driven and the pier was converted into a pleasure place for fishermen. Amusement features were installed and a café and amusement pavilion were erected at the beach end of the structure.

With this nucleus a new pleasure resort was created; bungalows soon dotted the beach and a new business center was developed in the vicinity of the pier. When through accident, or the action of the elements, the outfall pipe was broken and the sewage, being discharged near shore, was floated upon the beach by the incoming tides, the outfall became a menacing nuisance and there was discussion as to plans for other and more sanitary disposition of the waste of what was now two cities. The waste sand dunes of a few months before had grown into a happy, prosperous community. Ocean Park was a reality, and three years ago t was incorporated as a city of the sixth class. Santa Monica continued to utilize the broken outfall, which served for the two cities. Farther to the south, where Venice now stands, the Short Line Beach subdivision handled their own sewage through septic tanks.

SEPTIC TANKS.

One of the first acts of the City Trustees of the new t wn of Ocean Park was to provide a sewage system. A septic tank was installed at Venice and has been operated with indifferent success. There were vile odors and every measure that sewage disposal engineers could suggest was tried in an effort to abate the nuisance. Finally a pipe was carried into the sea for the disposition of the affluent, but still the trouble was ever present. It was suggested that the septic tank was located at such a depth that the salt water which found its way into the mains interfered with the successful working of the microbes. For those mains which were known to discharge the deleterious water into the tank another outlet was provided; but still the trouble was present. Then other devices were employed for the disposition of the noxious gases and the plant operated with considerable degree of success. The ocean outfall was carried still farther out to sea, the discharge pipe was sunk beneath the surface of the water, and at this time is less complaint than has been heard since the plant was first installed.

ELECTRIC EXPERIMENT.

In a further effort to solve the troublous question, the inventor of the Harris electric system of sewage disposal is installing at his own expense a plant for the demonstration of his invention. This is being erected alongside the septic tank and will take the affluent as it leaves the tank. It is claimed for this electrolysis process that its operation is odorless; the electric currents remove all evidences of germ or vegetable life from the refuse; the liquid floats into the sea with no objectionable odors, while the solids are made perfectly dead and unfit for any purpose other than the filling of arroyos.

The septic tank was not built until investigation had satisfied the City Trustees of the futility of any effort to treat the waste by means of a sewer farm.

Meanwhile, the ocean outfall of Santa Monica never having been repaired, Ocean Park invited the older city to accept the hospitality of her septic tank and abandon the sea discharge pipe at Pier avenue. The invitation was accepted. That was two years ago, and Santa Monica nas ever since been a patron of the septic tank. Venice and Ocean Park made objection in such strenuous manner that an election for the disincorporation of Ocean Park resulted. The City Trustees of both cities were cited for contempt of court in not carrying out the mandamus to correct the nuisance. Additional time was granted, since Santa Monica had become a freeholder city and the new City Council was endeavoring to care for her own waste.

THE TREE SCHEME.

Bonds had previously been voted for the construction of a septic tank; but discouraged by the indifferent success of the one at Ocean Park, the board made haste slowly in spending the money on an experiment that promised to prove a waste of public funds. The sewer farm project was inquired into, and later an option was secured for the purchase of a tract of land upon which to grow eucalyptus trees. This land was to be flooded with the affluent from the proposed septic tank and the scheme was promised to yield a considerable revenue to the city. But opposition developed, owing to the possible pollution of the water supply, and the project was abandoned at the behest of the Board of Trade. Instead of the sewer grove, this organization suggested a 1600-foot outfall pied at the foot of Colorado avenue.

TODAY'S PLAN.

The suggestion was acted upon, with the result that bonds were recently voted for that purpose; and today the city is hurrying to expend $150,000 in building the pier to carry the outfall far to sea and in reversing the mains from the southern end of the city.

Before abandoning the septic tank project, Santa Monica sent her City Engineer to the cities of the East to investigate methods of sewage disposal. She also, at considerable expense, secured the services of A. C. Hepp, an expert from New York, who came to the beach and made a searching investigation of local conditions. In reviewing the situation he said he found

She also, at considerable expense, secured the services of A. C. Hepp, an expert from New York, who came to the beach and made a searching investigation of local conditions. In reviewing the situation he said he found that 95 per cent. of the sewage disposal plants and systems were unsatisfactory, having been contructed by engineers who had not made a study of the biological system, but had got hold of some plans and amateurishly constructed a plant that they thought should dispose of the sewage in a satisfactory manner. The failure of these plans having proven very annoying and costly, he advised that great care should be taken that the conditions be as favorable as possible before the construction of a disposal plant is begun.

HYPERION NUISANCE.

Prior to the decision of Santa Monica to employ either the units of the septic system or the long pier and ocean outfall, there had been a Utopian dream of a trunk line to Hyperion (the Los Angeles outfall below Playa del Rey.) This proposed outfall was to be designed so that it would dispose of the entire waste of all of the beach settlements, including Santa Monica, Ocean Park, Venice and Playa del Rey. But as the carrying out of the project would cost fully $250,000, and could not be accomplished without special legislation the idea was dropped even before Mr. Hepp, the eastern expert, after reviewing the situation, reported as follows relative to the project:

"In my opinion, it would be unwise to bring in the Hyperion extension as a possible remedy, and I advise emphatically against it. I have viewed the present outfall at Hyperion, and it is now a nuisance beyond compare with any I have ever observed, and to add to that nuisance is inconceivable. The time will come when Los Angeles will have to purify its sewage. To allow the nuisance to go on will eventually affect the whole beach from Hyperion to Ocean Park. The Hyperion outfall should be protested at some future day when local condition have been remedied."

HOLLYWOOD.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 2.—On invitation of P. J. Beveridge, Special Committee for the Board of Trade, the members of the Los Angeles County Highway Commission made a flying trip through and around Hollywood yesterday, with a view to familiarizing themselves with the needs of the drives between Los Angeles and Hollywood, and from Hollywood west to the beach. The country was covered from Ivanhoe to Sherman and from Wilshire boulevard to Griffith's Park, including an examination of roadmaking material in Miller's Cañon. As to the unorganized territory between Los Angeles and Hollywood, some of the visitors suggested that as the commission could only order a driveway sixteen feet wide, Prospect and Sunset avenues through that section could best be carred for by annexing that strip to Hollywood and carrying the macadamized roadways already provided for on those avenue inside the Hollywood limits, through to the east to connect with the vitrified roadbed of Sunset to be laid by Los Angeles.

After the ride, the commission, the Hollywood Trustees and the directors of the Board of Trade, lunched at Hotel Hollywood.

HERMOSA.

HERMOSA, Nov. 2.—Justice Lucien Shaw of the Supreme Court and wife left yesterday for their home in Berkeley, after a two months' visit here with their son, Hartley Shaw.

Mrs. C. H. Shurz has returned to her home in Pasadena, after a two months' visit with her sister, Mrs. Jerome Martin.

Mrs. R. E. Matteson entertained the members of the Ladies' Needlework Club of Redondo and their husbands in her beautiful home on Laclede avenue Tuesday evening. The interior of the residence was tastefully decorated with Halloween emblems.

When in Love.

Once when Abraham Lincoln (and all good stories are credited to Lincoln) was asked a difficult question, he answered that it all depended upon the point of view and gave the following illustration:

A man of middle age and a romantic-looking youth once sat side by side in a railway carriage. Presently the youth took a photograph from his pocket, looked at it, and then said to his companion:

"Were you ever in love, sir?"

The man of middle age started. He laughed.

"Was I ever in love?" he repeated, as he relighted his pipe. "Was I ever in love? Well, I don't know if——"

"You don't know?" cried the youth. "Well, if you ever had been in love, you'd know it. Why, when you're in love, your life is a sweet dream, you have no taste for food, you think of nothing but the beauty of——"

"Were you ever married?" snapped the older man.

"No, but——"

"Well, if you ever had been you'd know it. Why, my boy, when you're married your life is——"

But the youth had fled.

CHATS ON TEETH

BY THE REX DENTAL CO.

DON'T LOSE TEETH

The two things most to be feared by people with teeth troubles are: 1st—Loose teeth, usually caused by Pyorrhea; and, 2nd—decay, which may come from natural wear and tear or ignorant dentistry. The discovery of the wonderful Alveolar Method by the Rex Dental Co., which is exclusively practiced by this company, has banished the causes which are responsible for loose and decayed teeth.

That statement of itself should be enough to make any sufferer with tooth troubles come to one of our offices for an examination of his teeth, which service we perform free of any charge.

Don't wait until your teeth are about ready to fall out before you come. Give us all the assistance you can, for, while we can restore missing teeth without cumbering up your mouth with plates or torturing you with one of those so-called "bridges" that most dentists like to put in your mouth, still, we are teeth savers, and will try to save nature's teeth every time. Alveolar teeth look and feel like natural teeth, but all of us must admit that there is nothing just as good as what nature supplies.

We believe we have a perfect license to claim that the Alveolar teeth are the next best thing, and over 5000 happy people in this country who are wearing them will say Amen to that statement.

Pyorrhea is something that must be taken in time. The longer it is allowed to run the harder it will be for us to cure it.

Says-its the Greatest System on Earth.

COLTON, S. B. Co., Oct. 17, 1907.

Rex Dental Co., Los Angeles, Cal.
Dear Sirs:—I want to thank you for your Alveolar work which you put in my mouth some time ago.

I can now eat as good as with my natural teeth, can chew any hard food without any trouble. The work is alright and I am proud of it and want others to know of your valuable system. I have had numerous inquiries from my neighbors as to what your Alveolar Dental Method is, and I tell them all it's the grandest Dental System on earth, anyhow that's the way I feel about it; and I shall always be glad to do anything I can in the way of recommendations. Yours gratefully,

JOHN MARTIN, Colton, Cal.

While we do general dentistry work, our great specialty is the Alveolar Method of restoring missing teeth without the use of plates or ordinary bridge work.

In performing the wonderful work we follow nature's plan as closely as possible. We do not prefer any surgical operation. There is no boring into the gums, no implantation of teeth; nothing at all about the method that is painful or that will cause any discomfort. It is a common-sense proposition all the way through, and our charges are no higher than those asked by other first-class dentists for first-class work.

If it is impossible for you to come to our offices at the present time send for our free book, entitled "Alveolar Dentistry," a valuable treatise on the teeth. The reading of this book brings us patients from all over this country so it must be worth reading. Send for it today.

LUCKY BALDWIN.

aren't any better out here than you are in Los Angeles. You are always having fights and trouble yourselves there but you seem to be mostly worried about what we are doing out here.

THIS IS FUNNY.

"We are not going to have any worse town than we can help. We got a good new jail and when that's overflowing, I s'pose we can send 'em in to Los Angeles."

Lucky was plainly losing interest in the topic of the "Larger Morality."

"I'll tell you one thing," he said, "we aren't going to have any steeplechases on this course. We are going to cut out the jumpers. For some reason they don't know how to train them out here. Every race ends in all the horses and all the jockeys rolling around in a scramble with the jockeys underneath. Anyway, we've got a better use for the infield than that."

The old racer's eyes fairly glowed as he excitedly waved the hand with the reins in it, out toward the scraper gangs.

"I like the old way, where people come in carriages and line up on the inside. That's the way to see a race. You know every fellow tries to bring out a better looking pair of horses than every other fellow and it makes a pretty fine sight.

"They have done away with it of late years on many tracks because of the nuisance of having carriages streaking across the track.

"But," he added triumphantly, "we've thought of a way: We are going to tunnel under the track into the infield."

The talk inevitably swung onto the Baldwin racing stable.

"I did intend to bring all my horses over from the ranch stables and keep them here," said Lucky, "but so many applications are coming in from stable reservations at the track, that I may have to keep my string at the ranch, and only bring over those that I want for the day's racing.

Some one asked "Lucky" about his new crop of horses; asked him if they did not have in the rising generation at the Baldwin stables something to Christen the track with.

"The old man looked around very slyly; gave a ponderous, portentous wink—and gave a significant jab at one of his cuffs.

UP HIS SLEEVE.

"Up my sleeve," he said craftily. "The first thing they know I am going to show them something. Some of the greatest race horses in the world have been raised at the Baldwin stables. I gave them a little surprise with 'Rey el Santa Anita.' 'Americus' that I sold to Richard Croker, is now rated as the fourteenth horse in England. It won't be long until he will be the first, 'Cruzados' is over there at the stable now. Well I have got another one coming off the nest."

At the next question the old man gave a cackling little laugh. "Oh," he said, "I cannot tell you which one. If they knew which one then I couldn't make any money off it."

There is one question that should have been asked Lucky Baldwin long ago. One of the most popular later day novels—that slang classic, "Checkers"—was based upon one of Baldwin's horse races.

The book opens with a stunning description of the then unknown Rey El Santa Anita winning the Chicago Derby. Lucky was one of the characters in the novel.

"IN THE AIR."

TURKEY COST PROBLEMATICAL.

SOME DEALERS SAY PRICE WILL BE PRETTY HIGH.

Others Argue That There Is a Plentiful Supply and That the Purchaser Will Have to Pay Little or No More Than Last Year at This Time—Low Rate Rules Now.

There is a diversity of opinion as to the price of turkeys this coming season. Arguments are advanced that they will be considerably higher, while several dealers point to the price at which they are selling now and declare that there can be no increase over last year.

On the Produce Exchange yesterday several of the larger dealers offered to sell turkeys at 20 cents a pound to the retail dealer. This is exactly the same quotation as that established last year at this precise time. Then large shipments were on their way here from the East, which helped to hold prices down a trifle. More than 75,000 pounds were imported by the three largest packing-houses, but nevertheless the price jumped as high as 25 cents before the season was over.

This year the eastern turkeys, more than four weeks behind on account of the late summer, will not be sent here at all until after Thanksgiving, and Los Angeles is dependent on the California output. Opinions vary as to the size of this supply. A conservative estimate places the complete crop of gobblers in the neighborhood of 100,000 pounds.

The greatest number, which will come from Imperial Valley, already have been purchased by agents of various houses, and some of them are being shipped in at present. The average price paid the farmer has been 15 cents a pound, live weight, and 2 cents more for dressed stock. W. P. Layton of the Alloway-Layton Company says turkeys will not be any higher than last year on this very account.

"We are buying some stock as low as 14 cents right now," he said. "Undoubtedly this price will advance, and that rapidly, in the next few weeks; but I scarcely think there will be an increase over last year's quotations."

Louis Zaiser of the Zaiser Bros.' Commission Company, which handles a large amount of poultry, declared that there would be no higher prices.

"Our selling price at present is an indication of the trend of the market," he said. "It is the same as a year ago, and with the supply already on hand, and that contracted for, there can be no great or immediate changes. Thanksgiving will find us selling turkeys at 20 to 25 cents, with very few to go at the top figure."

In contradiction to these two declarations, L. L. Ryan, another poultry dealer, who has just returned from Imperial Valley, declared that turkeys this season would sell as high as 27 cents.

"There are, it is true, very many more turkeys in this section of the State than last year," he said, "but they will not supply half the demand. We are still relying on the East for a major portion of our fowls, and, as the birds back there are from three to six weeks in arrears in their growth, I cannot quite see how the price should remain as low as it was last year."

Managers of the largest packing-houses voice opinions similar to those of Mr. Ryan. It seems likely, therefore, that the bird of the Pilgrims will roost as high, if not higher, than last year.

Dr. McLaughlin

Tells How He Restores Vitality and Strength With His

Electric Belt

"You cannot possibly estimate the true import of the discovery of Professor Loeb," said Dr. McLaughlin yesterday, in discussing the scientific announcement that "Electricity Is Life."

"It means more happiness to the civilized race than has followed any discovery for years. It will bring about the general recognition of the great possibilities which exist in the application of electricity for the preservation of youth.

"We have for years contended that old age was nothing but the freezing of the blood when there was no longer sufficient vital heat in the body to keep the blood warm and the organs active. We have said that years did not cause decay, and have proven it by citing cases where some men have been made vigorous under our rejuvenating treatment at 80, while you have examples all about you of men who are old and decrepit at 60.

"G. W. Beers of Long Beach, Cal., who is 70 years old, declares he feels like as young as when 40. He says that our Belt has kept him young for several years. You ought to talk with him about it. He says he will be glad to tell any one what we have done for him.

"Now, Professor Loeb says that the animal heat is Electricity. That we know to be true. We get that heat from the chemical action of the acids and juices of the stomach upon our food. That is combustion. This combustion produces carbonic heat, and carbonic heat is Electricity. That is the basis of life in every vital organ. As long as the stomach is able to generate enough of this heat to replenish the wear and tear upon our vital energies we are strong and active. It is when the stomach finds the strain too heavy that we grow old and begin to decay.

"This is upon the same principle that an engine pulls a train of cars up hill. On level road it goes easily, but when it goes up hill the strain is heavy, and your engine, making power from the burning of coal, just as your stomach makes it from burning your food, is taxed beyond its limit, is unable to go further, and, exhausting all its steam in the effort, breaks down.

"The human body is just like that engine. It breaks down when the physical energy is overtaxed. That energy is electricity. We have here a means of replenishing the electricity of the body, and that is the basis of my treatment.

"Years have nothing to do with it. In each case it is the failure of the stomach to generate sufficient energy to supply the demands made by the vital organs.

"How quickly we fail when the stomach fails to digest the food! That shuts off the supply of energy.

"We have on record hundreds of instances where men of 75 to 90 have returned to the hard labor of their youth with a vim after having worn our applian months.

"One decrepit old man of 7 youth been a blacksmith. After appliance he took up his tools and he can work as hard as he did at says he is an old man made young.

"Another man of 72 said he had crippled with rheumatism for years. He pronounces himself cured, as vigorous as he ever was in youth.

"Another, who was a wreck at said that he had been so for twenty was cured, and three years later the severe hardships of a trip to the dike. He returned a few months said that he had stood the terrible tions better than hundreds of young

"We could cite thousands of similar cidents. When you see that we have thousand voluntary testimonials and there is not a hamlet in this country out one or more cures by our appli you will understand that our exper has been broad.

"Our treatment is a success in any where strength is lacking, whether nerves, stomach, heart, kidneys, liver any other part. Our appliance give soothing, constant electric glow, which taken by the body just as a sponge up water. It cures rheumatism in guise, as well as every other form of

A Few Facts About The McDougall

Suppose a responsible person said to you: "Deposit $20 with me! I'll give you its equivalent right now, pay back the money itself in one year, and then pay you from $20 to $30 every year thereafter."

"In addition, I'll start right now and do half your kitchen work for nothing as long as you live."

If you knew he would make good, you'd accept in about one minute, wouldn't you?

Well, here's that very offer:

Buy a McDougall Kitchen Cabinet, $16 to $38.

It more than pays for itself in one year thereafter and lasts a lifetime.

In addition, it does half your kitchen work for nothing as long as you live.

But don't expect this sort of service if you buy one of those "bargain" cabinets that fall to pieces and are a nuisance instead of a help.

Sterns & Foster Mattresses

The three essentials of a good mattress are that it shall be:

Soft, yet firm, so that the body will lie flat—not sink into a hollow.

Springy, so that it will retain its softness.

And pure!

By the perfection of special machinery Sterns & Foster have made it possible to make of cotton a mattress that has all three of these qualities—a mattress that is absolutely comfortable, never lumps, never needs remaking and that is as pure and clean as fresh linen.

OUR PATRIOTS IN CONGRESS.

President Adrian Tells of Senate Scenes.

Political Partisanship Pales Before the Flag.

Midwinter Graduation Class of Normal School.

President Adrian of the Southern California Teachers' Association, made a hit with the 2000 pupils of the Polytechnic High School last Friday. He brought close to them many dramatic incidents in the United States Senate and the lower house, incidents witnessed by himself, and reproduced with vivid life and color. He noted some of the picturesque figures in public life and compared them to the giants of old, Webster, Clay and Calhoun, and those first makers of the government with whom patriotism was a sublime passion.

Miss Hilda Smith

Miss Daisy Morrison
Treasurer
Miss Margaret Smith

The Three Graces, who rule the Class of Winter '08 at the State Normal School.

Vociferous appreciation was shown by the students. The speaker was again and again interrupted by applause. At the close he drew a striking picture of the possibilities of the patriotism of citizenship in the present day and time. He described the effect of the appearance of the mace in Congress, the visible sign of the government, that calmed a fist fight on the floor. He told them what it meant when the flag was borne in, and finally how men of every section, and every variety of opinion, were made one at the singing of the national hymn. The rousing address closed with the singing of "America" by the students, and the music rang out until the roof fairly trembled with the enthusiasm of youthful voices.

LAST MID-YEAR "GRAD."

The exercises for the last mid-year graduation that will be held at the State Normal School are already in course of preparation, and in charge of one of the brightest classes that the institution has ever possessed. An arrangement was made at the beginning of the season dividing the school year into three terms, and with the understanding that all students completing the courses should be graduated at the end of the June term.

The present class will be the last to receive sheepskins in the middle of the winter season, and the members intend to outshine all former efforts as a farewell fling from all the winter classes that have gone before. The class play will be one of the great classic dramas, and the preparations are in charge of Miss Alice Osden, whose pupils have already presented a number of histrionic triumphs.

Winter '07 class numbers about forty-five members, and officers include four of the prettiest girls in the entire school. Miss Hilda Smith is president; Miss Camille Heber is vice-president; Miss Daisy Morrison is treasurer, and Miss Margaret Smith is secretary. Nile green and white are their colors and they have chosen for a motto "Live, that you may live." Designs for class pins are now absorbing much grey matter for these ambitious young women.

CLASS JOLLY.

Friday evening the seniors had a Halloween jolly, a masquerade with costumes ransacked from all the notables of the ages. Masques were worn during the early part of the evening and later the merrymakers adjourned to the dining-room of the Normal School and ate a fitting Halloween repast. Creepy black cats looked out from every nook and corner, fearful Jack o' Lanterns grinned fantastically and red apples and popcorn all contributed to the general effect.

The place cards were tiny Jack o' Lantern cards. Miss Hilda Smith was toastmistress, and the toasts were as follows: Ruth Dennis, "Training School Teachers;" Lois Hatch, "The Faculty;" Miss Harriet Dunn, "The Class;" Miss Kate Osgood, "Why I Am Here," and Mrs. Beatrice Patten, "The Student Teacher."

FRENCH FURNISH OBJECT LESSON.

COUNTY HIGHWAY COMMISSION STUDIES FOREIGN PLAN.

On Request of Local Investigators, Consul-General Skinner Gives Report on Continental Road Building. Says Automobiles Are Destructive of Thoroughfares.

Inquiries made by the members of the Los Angeles County Highway Commission as to road-building systems in vogue in France, which is noted for its fine public thoroughfares, have brought forth a report by Consul-General R. P. Skinner of Marseilles, as to French construction methods, which are likely to be of value to Los Angeles county, in its campaign for the development of a general system of permanent highways.

Consul Skinner says that he believes the most complete road system in the world is to be found in France. He declares that French roads are good, not because of any superiority of raw materials, as the same materials exist everywhere, but because of the fact that the highways of that country are constantly under the supervision of an army of trained men, who discover within the organization opportunities for advancement and professional distinction.

The basis of the French highway administrative system, says the Consul, is the "Ecole des Ponts et Chaussees," or School of Bridges and Roads, which has developed into one of the finest technical schools in the world.

It is intended that this school shall form the engineers, who afterward take positions in the highway administrative system. Ordinary students are also accepted and graduated with the degree or diploma of civil engineer. The course of study lasts three years and instructions are gratuitous.

The system of controlling and maintaining the highway includes an inspector-general of bridges and highways; chief engineers, under engineers, principal conductors, under conductors, foremen of construction gangs, foremen of sections, and the usual clerical force.

A national route in France, like a railroad, must be first declared necessary by a special law. Estimates are prepared when new work is contemplated, and the execution is let by contract.

Consul-General Skinner says that experience has demonstrated that profound foundations and other expensive construction are far less important than a careful drainage system.

A standard roadway in France, and which it is believed could well be applied to the highways of Los Angeles county, consists of what the engineers call a box of earth, into which is deposited the hard materials of the road surface proper.

This "encaissement," as it is called, is carefully shaped and rammed, the sides or driftways being wide enough to hold the hard materials in place, and incidentally to serve as footpaths. On each side of the driftway runs a ditch, unless the special conformation of the land renders this aid to drainage unnecessary.

The French national routes are divided into three classes, having 45.93 feet, 39.37 feet and 32.80 feet as their respective widths. In exceptional cases, near large cities, these roads are 65.61 feet in width.

Within the road box, when it has been rammed and convexed, is finally deposited the surfacing materials of crushed stone, each stone being small enough to pass through a ring 2.36 inches in diameter. The depth of the crushed stone when it is firmly rolled should be 7.87 inches.

The chief concern in France is that all preliminary and necessary operations shall be thoroughly performed. Every grade railroad crossing is protected by a gate and a watchman is in charge night and day.

Consul Skinner says that the advent of the automobile, with its destructive tires, has placed increased tasks upon the French roadmakers, and that no method has yet been discovered to prevent the file-like action of the rubber tires, often steel-shod, upon the road surface.

On the other hand, the permanency of automobile traffic is recognized, and wherever dangers present themselves in this mtehod of transportation efforts are made to mitigate them.

England's Ordained Woman.

The Rev. Gertrude von Petzold, the only regularly ordained woman in England, was one of the most striking personalities who attended the fourth international congress of Religious Liberals, which met recently in Boston. Miss Petzold was born in Thorn, Prussia, the little city so closely identified with the name and fame of Copernicus, though she has spent most of her life in England and Scotland. She took her A.M. degree at the University of Edinburgh and completed her theological course at Oxford. For the last three years she has been pastor of the Free Christian Church at Leicester, Eng. Last winter by invitation she visited Berlin, and in that stronghold of Lutherism she delivered a well-attended course of lectures on "Liberal Christianity." Through the influence of the American Ambassador she received permission and conducted a German service in the beautiful American church, the first ever conducted by a woman in Berlin.

JAPS GO OUT IN HUFF.

If they desire to sell liquor they must have licenses, the same as citizens of other nationalities.

"The chief trouble seems to be that the Japs think they can live here as they did in the crowded cities of Japan, and some of them imagine their government will insist that they be permitted to live just as they did at home. Their troubles come from their failure to grasp American ideas."

While there has been nothing to give rise to even a suspicion of an outbreak, a number of overt acts that look like attempts at reprisal on the part of the Japs have been reported to the police. Restaurant Inspector Wright has been making most of the inspections of the Japanese restaurants. Wright reported Friday that he had been shot at the night before by two Japs.

ABLE TO CARE FOR HIMSELF.

Wright made no complaint to the police. He says he is able to take care of himself. Wright is a Native Son, of English parentage. When the Boers were getting the best of the fighting in South Africa, Wright went to England and enlisted in a company bound for the front. He served through the latter part of the war, and wears two medals presented to him by the English government. He says he is able to fight his own battles with the disgruntled Jap restaurant keepers.

Harry Cardell, an agent of the New York Life Insurance Company, was assaulted by Japs near his home on Burlington avenue recently and narrowly escaped with his life. Cardell started to walk around the block from his home on Burlington avenue in the early evening. He had walked but a few hundred feet when a Jap ran up to him. Cardell says the Jap called something about "you throw stones at my house." Then the brown man struck Cardell across the head with a heavy club, knocking him senseless. When Cardell recovered several minutes later he was lying in the gutter, bruised in at least a dozen places. The Jap had continued to beat him as he lay senseless on the ground and probably left him for dead. The clubbing Cardell suffered would have killed any one but a football player or insurance agent.

WORST CLASS AFFECTED.

On Burlington avenue near where the assault occurred there is a cottage which the Japs have rented for an employment agency. Late that evening the police went to this cottage and found twenty coolies there drinking saké and playing Japanese faro. Cardell was unable to identify his assailant among these and no arrests were made.

This disaffection of the Japanese concerns only the gambling and coolie classes. In the business district here are many Japanese wholesale houses, and the number of Japanese retailers is legion. The Japs who are in business make good citizens, and the little brown merchants say Los Angeles is more friendly to their people than any other city on the Coast. There has never been trouble here between the police and the Japs; laborers and merchants alike have received what the Japanese themselves call a "square deal."

Helen Hunt Jackson, the autor of "Ramona," gave to the world a great novel, but its excellency is well sustained in the beautiful villa tract that bears the name "Ramona Acres." IN BRIDGE WORK we cannot be excelled, and not even equaled. Twenty-five years' experience and constant practice in this branch is the basis of our assertion. No boys or students to practice on you. With us you are not experimenting. We have stood a 15 years' test in Los Angeles.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridge work which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and I can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "it didn't hurt a bit."
C. S. SPRECHER,

Dr. Schiffman, I consider expert. By experience I find his work painless and perfectly satisfactory.
H. C. ROYER, M.D.,
102 S. Spring, Los Angeles.

Dr. Schiffman has pust filled a tooth for me and he also put in a crown and a bridge about five months ago, all of which has given me complete satisfaction. My work was all done painlessly.
S. E. MILLS,
No. 530 Ave. 20.

I have just had a wisdom tooth extracted that three other dentists failed on. One dentist in Texas worked on it for three hours, and two dentists in Los Angeles for two hours. It was extracted here without pain. For anyone who is suffering with his teeth, I can heartily recommend him to Dr. Schiffman.
G. T. BENNETT,
136 W. Fifth st.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., H. W. Hellman Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman has filled teeth and done other work for me, and I must say that he is the best dentist that ever worked for me. The doctor is exceedingly gentle in his handling and working on the teeth. All his work on my teeth was perfectly painless. I highly recommended him to my friends.
JOHN H. SCHUMACHER,
107 N. Spring st., Los Angeles.

Dr. Schiffman extracted two worthless teeth for me and replaced them by bridgework, which was done to my entire satisfaction and without any pain whatever.
MRS. JUSTICE J. ROESE,
302 E. 49th st.

This is to certify that Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me seven years ago, and the work is as good today as it was when he finished the job.
S. J. McKENZIE, Police Officer,
1426 Essex st.

On account of seme unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth, I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain.
D. K. TRASK,
Judge Superior Court, Los Angeles Co.

Dr. Schiffman has done a large amount of bridge and plate work for me, which was done in a very satisfactory manner.

irreverent woodman, or private individual who without a permit may be fined from $10 to $100, or sent to cool himself in the City Jail.

At first the electric, telephone and telegraph companies operating in Los Angeles did not take the City Forester's office seriously, but now they are taking notice and even offering to cooperate in saving the street trees from disfigurement. Already representatives of the six companies, at the request of Forester Harper, have met for consultation, and on Tuesday another meeting will be held in the City Forester's office.

POLES GO INTO ALLEYS.

As far as possible, the poles for the wires are moved to alleys, where such exist. The different companies agree to use one pole for their wires, wherever it is practicable, instead of setting up duplicate poles. Many poles are being raised to forty feet, so that trees of ordinary height may be below the wire lines.

When trees must be trimmed to accommodate wires, all companies must apply for permits, and a list of every tree, and the exact location, even to the number of the house where the tree stands, must be stated in the application.

"Trees must be trimmed so as to preserve their symmetry," is the astonishing legend that adorns every permit.

"Of course, I know," said Mr. Harper, "that I am not going to get this done uniformly. I may have to work for years, if I remain in this office, to accomplish even a few things, but the men are beginning to notice what is written on the permits and I know that in many instances they are doing their best to follow directions."

Another safeguard has been instituted by the city forester. Whenever a permit for tree trimming is given a company, a notice is sent to the person owning the house in front of which the tree stands, advising of the necessity, and allowing a certain length of time to protest or to have it done himself; at least to be present at the exercises.

GOT TO HAVE A PERMIT.

Yes, and you cannot plant a tree in the streets without a permit from Forester Harper, because it is hoped that the streets may some day show vistas of trees all the same variety, making a stately highway, instead of a hit or miss arrangement.

"If you leave the selection to the fancy of the people, the fancy runs wild," says Forester Harper, who found five different varieties of trees within a stretch of eighty feet on West Twenty-seventh street. "Might as well leave the selection of the sidewalk to the families along the line. There would be a curious mosaic, I can assure you.

"And, for heaven's sake, plant trees and not hedges," he advises. "Why, trees are planted so near together that they have no room, to grow, and no individuality after they have grown. Most trees should be planted thirty feet apart, and never less than twenty-five feet."

Then the forester told about a man who had paid a big price for two ornamental date palms and planted them in an eighteen-inch parking, when each tree would finally spread twenty feet at least.

Among the varieties that Forester Harper recommends for street planting are a number of beautiful evergreens, such as the black, decurrens, and floribunda acacias, the carob, or St. John's bread tree, one of which may be seen at Main and Fifteenth streets, and the sterculia.

CAMPHOR A FAVORITE.

The camphor tree he favors especially, and the Catalina cherry, which does not bear cherries. A number of these trees are growing on Catalina Island. They are evergreens, and there are a few beautiful specimens in Elysian Park. The California maple, the sycamore, and the beautiful tulip tree also are recommended, but palms and peppers only for very wide parking.

Some time in the future every street tree in Los Angeles will be known by name, and a record will be kept on a card in the city forester's office, just as the card system is used to locate the books in a library. Already 5000 trees have been listed, with location and condition at the time of recording.

But the guardian of the trees has his troubles. They pour in over the telephone every minute of the day. One indignant woman called him all the naughty names she could think of because he wouldn't go out and assess damages on a neighbor's dog that had rooted up a valuable rose garden.

Another woman implored him to save a tree which she said stood on her ground and which her next door neighbor was cutting down. Said neighbor had applied for a permit because the tree was interfering with the sewer. Finally the tree man had to go out and take a surveyor, who found the tree stood just on the line between the lots.

Forester Harper told them they would have to fight it out between themselves.

There are glorious big hats direct from the nimble fingers of Parisian Artists, and for women who want this Paris style without the Paris price, here are the charming creations of our own millinery artists.

Some hats are fairly laden with huge drooping plumes, others, again, have broad bold wings, or perhaps fancy feathers or breasts. Some are bedecked with flowers, some smothered in foliage. It seems that the originality of the artists has been unlimited.

Do you wonder that the bulk of the millinery business of Los Angeles is centering at the Marvel?

Time now to think of your Thanksgiving Hat. Of course you'll come to the Marvel for it.

Where else would you go?

Main Floor

A thousand dress hats in one purchase—it surely is a great hit for the Bargain Basement. We had to take the whole lot or none, and in justice to you, and the Bargain Basement we couldn't let such an opportunity go by.

Here's the whole story in a nut-shell. A big Philadelphia retailer who had an order in for these thousand hats failed to make good financially, and after the hats were all made up the order was cancelled. The hats had to be sold to somebody—at some price—and for cash. We got them. The price we paid was ridiculously low--you can see that for yourself in the selling prices we've put on them.

This sale will fairly throng the Bargain Basement, for this is the greatest trimmed hat sale Los Angeles has seen and there isn't an ordinary hat in the lot.

It's surely a stroke of good fortune for the Bargain Basement—and for you.

ACTIVITY IN THE CANYONS

Mountaineers on the Jump Over Railroad Plans.

See Boom in Proposed Roads Down the Coast.

Movements of Gould, Burson and Mrs. Rindge.

BY CLOUDSLEY JOHNS.

Another five-mile section of the Hueneme, Malibu and Port Los Angeles Railroad Company's line has been completed, and the mysterious road now is ten miles long. One light freight car and gasoline motor comprise the rolling stock.

Never has this road been considered the mere whim of an eccentric millionaire, carried out by his widow, to connect the great Malibu ranch with two minor ports, one of which exists as a port only by virtue of the mammoth wharf built and owned by the Southern Pacific company. Indeed, an injunction suit brought by the latter company against the concern which is building the road has prevented it approaching within three miles of Port Los Angeles; but still the work goes on.

A new complication of the mystery has appeared in the application of the Burson-Russell concern, which operates a railroad between Hueneme, Oxnard and Bakersfield, for a franchise for a railway through the city of Santa Monica, in the direction of Los Angeles. Between the nearest point of the Burson-Russell line and the place where they seem to want to build another bit of detached railroad, lie the Santa Monica Mountains, beautiful in themselves but forbidding to builders of railroads, and a narrow strip of possible right of way along the beach, already occupied by the Malibu company and the Southern Pacific, which concerns are warring over the privileges.

There would seem to be not much room for Burson there.

However, it may be supposed that Messrs. Burson and Russell know what they are doing, just as surely as Mrs. May K. Rindge has her own plans based on something beyond the Malibu.

And not alone by small concerns, apparently playing at the building of railroads, have possible connecting lines been constructed. As has been mentioned in a previous article in The Times, the West Gate line of the Los Angeles Pacific Company, from Sawtelle to Santa Monica, by way of the great cañon, is constructed in a manner which seems to promise other things than the passing of an almost empty trolley car once an hour, enough to hold the franchise till the time of better things.

There was a time when real estate on the mesas and in the cañons of the Santa Monica Mountains was not "active" because no one would buy; it is not "active" now because no one will sell. Meanwhile the Los Angeles-Pacific company has acquired vast tracts in the region, and very good friends of the concern, who in the past have sold the company property for nominal considerations, own more.

So there lies the interest of E. H. Harriman and his friends.

What the Goulds know, and intend to do, is guessed many times a day by everybody who thinks of coast-line roads. It is safe to conclude that the promoters of the Western Pacific Railroad are aware of the advantages which would lie in the continuation of the road as a coast line to the Mexican boundary.

A surveyor who has been at work on the line of a purposed railway in Oregon, arrived in Santa Monica last Monday, and talked about what the people up where he came from are thinking. They think the road through their region, from Astoria to Tillamook Bay, is designed as a link in the Western Pacific system, and destined to become a part of an extension to San Francisco and on down the Coast. If the monumental plan exists, and is to be realized, the line now building across the Malibu ranch must become a part of it.

There can be no doubt that H. K. Rindge really did desire to have his own little railroad connecting his princely estate, large as more than one European kingdom, with a harbor, but it is not probable that his dream comprehended steel bridges and such roadbed as is being constructed now.

An experienced railroader who has recently made a trip over the road as far as it has been built, when asked what he thought of it, said: "The line is a fine one, and when completed will afford one of the most scenic rides to be found anywhere. The track runs close to the ocean, and as you go westward from Santa Monica and northward from Point Dume there are jutting rocks and stupendous bluffs. Beyond Dume there is a sheltered cove of crescent shape, and one of the prettiest bathing beaches in the south. Here the waters are sheltered from all winds except those from due west, and the water is stormy indeed when small boats are unable to make safe landing. The site is an ideal one for a seaside resort, with fine bath-house, tourist hotel and amusement features. Being convenient to the mountains, the resort combines hunting with the other attractions, and for that reason should be quite popular when properly developed. The railroad is well built, with substantial bridges and heavy steel. To all appearances it is more than an obscure trolley line, designed to connect the Malibu ranch, or even Hueneme, with Santa Monica."

The "cove" referred to is "Dana's Cove," named for the author of "Two Years Before the Mast," which the famous sailor visited years ago. It can make no pretensions to being a harbor, but is one of the beauty spots of the Coast.

For the sake of the splendid pictureland which multitudes will flock to see when the building of railways is done, and for a Coast line the length of three States, with all the commerce of rich sections which will be opened, the project is an alluring one.

Not Trust Butter.

A report reached the manager of the Lucerne Cream and Butter Company at Hanford, to the effect that said company is a member of the so-called "Los Angeles Butter Trust." Following is their statement:

"We haven't any desire or ambition to be so conspicuously mentioned, and feel capable of managing the business of the Lucerne Cream and Butter Company without the aid of said trust.

"We desire to state to our customers in Los Angeles and surrounding towns, that our product will continue to be placed, as it has been direct from the creamery to the retailer. The butter, from the first of November, will be sold under our own wraps, the La France brand, which is registered and recorded, and which we are determined to protect, both in the interest of our customers and ourselves. Our creamery is located in the city of Hanford, in the heart of a fine dairy district. Our output is large and is uninjured by partial churning of the cream, for we do not have to haul our cream long distances. We make but one quality of butter—doing our best every day.

"We appreciate our extensive patronage in Los Angeles and the surrounding towns, and will spare no pains or expense to retain the confidence of our many good customers."

THE ACKNOWLEDGED ADEPT AND RECOGNIZED AUTHORITY OF HINDOO PHILOSOPHY AND OCCULT MYSTERIES, MAKES A REMARKABLE STATEMENT. "YOUR GREATEST WISH CAN BE REALIZED—YOU WOULD NOT DESIRE A THING IF YOU WERE NOT CAPABLE OF ATTAINING IT."
I KNOW HOW TO CONTROL AND USE THAT POWER FOR YOUR SUCCESS AND MINE. IF YOU WISH TO SUCCEED IN ANY BUSINESS UNDERTAKING CONSULT ME. I can put you on the right road. If you desire to win in love or be reunited with one from whom some trouble or estrangement separates you, I CAN AND WILL HELP YOU TO GAIN THE DESIRE OF YOUR HEART. Are you tired of being poor and living a "from hand-to-mouth" existence? If so, COME TO ME AND I WILL SHOW YOU A BETTER WAY. Life is not half so much of a mystery as some people would have you believe. If you had studied more into nature's laws and learned the lessons there revealed you would know better WHY SOME PEOPLE SUCCEED AND OTHERS FAIL. There is a good reason, just the same as THERE IS A REASON why water will run down hill more easily than it will run up hill. I CAN EXPLAIN THAT REASON to you. I AM SUCCESSFUL MYSELF. I do not make this claim in the spirit of a braggart or egotist, but to enable you to appreciate what I can do for you. Low fee 50 cents.
THERE ARE SO-CALLED SEERS WHO MAKE GREAT CLAIMS OF WHAT THEY CAN DO FOR YOU WHEN UPON INVESTIGATION THEIR SURROUNDINGS AND EVERY ACTION WOULD CONVINCE ANY SENSIBLE PERSON THAT THEY ARE INCAPABLE OF HELPING THEMSELVES. THERE ARE ALSO COUNTERFEIT DOLLARS, IMITATIONS OF THE GENUINE. HERE ARE GOOD DOCTORS AND BAD ONES AND A FEW HONEST LAWYERS. JUST SO WITH PSYCHICS; THERE ARE A FEW GENUINE AND A GREAT MANY IMITATIONS. "JUDGE ME BY MY WORK." MY EXTENSIVE PATRONAGE AND GREAT SUCCESS ARE THE ENVY OF ALL COMPETITORS. I AM NEVER IDLE. MY MOTTO IS, "WORK AND WIN." I HELP MY PATRONS TO SUCCEED, ATTAINING THEIR VARIOUS AMBITIONS. THAT IS WHY I HAVE SO MANY OF THEM AND WHY EACH ONE RECOMMENDS ME TO THEIR FRIENDS. LOW FEE 50 CENTS.
The All-Wise Creator did not endow you with high ideas, noble inspirations, desire for happiness and return for that great love craving within your heart without at the same time placing within your reach the means of attaining these desires. If you are in trouble of any kind or not satisfied with your condition in life, come to me and I will make this clear to you. I have helped others. I CAN HELP YOU. Positively NO CHARGE if I fail to TELL YOUR NAME IN FULL, your occupation, what you called for, anything you wish to know. NO FEE IN ADVANCE AND YOU PAY NOTHING UNLESS PERFECTLY SATISFIED. MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sunday, 9 to 3.) 3

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING ST., near Third
THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.
A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that HIS REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES ARE UNPARALLELED.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, astrologers, psychics, fortune tellers, and those who, THROUGH TRICK METHODS, CLAIM TO TELL YOUR NAME, etc., etc., after you yourself have written the information—who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who, by their disgraceful readings, drag these useful sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. PROF. ALTHOUSE is not actuated by any feeling of ill-will toward any reader who may be GENUINE (for he believes all RELIABLE readers should be encouraged;) but he will—in the future, as in the past—denounce humbug work whenever and wherever he can.
A SATISFACTORY AND ABSOLUTELY CORRECT reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences, through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand and in the Horoscope, combined with large experiences, trained judgment, etc. The palm shows diseases, love, marriage, divorce, deaths, money, investments, changes, talents, travels, etc., etc., and many other things which cannot be mentioned here.
WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.
PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, THE GREAT SINGER, WHOSE HANDS WERE READ AND HOROSCOPE CAST BY PROF. ALTHOUSE, writes and says: "I was greatly surprised to find HOW MANY OF YOUR WARNINGS WERE WELL FOUNDED, and having been prepared for the same, I was not taken unawares. YOUR WARNING regarding an oncoming illness also PROVED A FACT, as not more than ten days later I was at home with a severe attack of la grippe. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."
PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted when reading my hand and horoscope. I think YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."
DR. ALEX. J. M'IVOR-TYNDALL, editor Swastika Magazine, writes and says: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides, and I feel certain that you are able, through your accurate and scientific knowledge of these sciences of human life and culture, to guide and direct to the best possible advantage, the lives of those who apply to you for advice. I wish you every success in your work."
FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "I wish to say that your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading. It is by far the most scientific I have ever had." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, David Starr Jordan, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, SOUSA, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Creatore, Caruso, Huntington, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, MME. GADSKI, Sembrich, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Anna Held, Lillian Russell, William Desmond, Blanche Hall, Paul de Longpre, and hundreds of others. These names of NOTED people are merely given because they are PUBLIC persons. It indicates the class of people being read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, together with hundreds of the very best people of Los Angeles—WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL IN EVERY PARTICULAR.
Intelligent, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED—those capable of appreciating the SUPERIOR QUALITIES OF A FINE READER.
ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.
PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast for YOU INDIVIDUALLY, from the position of the planets at YOUR BIRTH. It indicates the condition of health, all kinds of diseases, the constitution, how best strengthened, when weak; tells all about love—whom to marry and when, describing the marriage partner, shows deaths, divorce; tells about children, speculation, the best time to invest or to push affairs, and when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents, what best adapted for; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger of limbs, accidents, death, losses, troubles; also of your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future; IN FACT, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of OTHERS, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.
SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS ON ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE for present and future events up to close of life—made by these sciences—with most complete primary and secondary directions (arcs, etc.)—through the trained judgment of PROF. ALTHOUSE—will stagger the senses. BEWARE, HOWEVER, OF UNRELIABLE READERS.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.
Readings by mail; send for circular, etc.
Daily and evenings, Sunday 10 to 2.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING ST., near Third
THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.
A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that HIS REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES ARE UNPARALLELED.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, astrologers, psychics, fortune tellers, and those who, THROUGH TRICK METHODS, CLAIM TO TELL YOUR NAME, etc., etc., after you yourself have written the information—who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who, by their disgraceful readings, drag these useful sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. PROF. ALTHOUSE is not actuated by any feeling of ill-will toward any reader who may be GENUINE (for he believes all RELIABLE readers should be encouraged;) but he will—in the future, as in the past—denounce humbug work whenever and wherever he can.
A SATISFACTORY AND ABSOLUTELY CORRECT reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences, through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand and in the Horoscope, combined with large experiences, trained judgment, etc. The palm shows diseases, love, marriage, divorce, deaths, money, investments, changes, talents, travels, etc., etc., and many other things which cannot be mentioned here. WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.
PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, THE GREAT SINGER, WHOSE HANDS WERE READ AND HOROSCOPE CAST BY PROF. ALTHOUSE, writes and says: "I was greatly surprised to find HOW MANY OF YOUR WARNINGS WERE WELL FOUNDED, and having been prepared for the same, I was not taken unawares. YOUR WARNING regarding an oncoming illness also PROVED A FACT, as not more than ten days later I was at home with a severe attack of la grippe. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."
PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted when reading my hand and horoscope. I think YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."
DR. ALEX. J. M'IVOR-TYNDALL, editor Swastika Magazine, writes and says: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides, and I feel certain that you are able, through your accurate and scientific knowledge of these sciences of human life and culture, to guide and direct to the best possible advantage, the lives of those who apply to you for advice. I wish you every success in your work."
FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "I wish to say that your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading. It is by far the most scientific I have ever had." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, David Starr Jordan, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, SOUSA, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Creatore, Caruso, Huntington, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, MME. GADSKI, Sembrich, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Anna Held, Lillian Russell, William Desmond, Blanche Hall, Paul de Longpre, and hundreds of others. These names of NOTED people are merely given because they are PUBLIC persons. It indicates the class of people being read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, together with hundreds of the very best people of Los Angeles—WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL IN EVERY PARTICULAR.
Intelligent, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED—those capable of appreciating the SUPERIOR QUALITIES OF A FINE READER.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast for YOU INDIVIDUALLY, from the position of the planets at YOUR BIRTH. It indicates the condition of health, all kinds of diseases, the constitution, how best strengthened, when weak; tells all about love—whom to marry and when, describing the marriage partner, shows deaths, divorce; tells about children, speculation, the best time to invest or to push affairs, and when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents, what best adapted for; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger of limbs, accidents, death, losses, troubles; also of your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future; IN FACT, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of OTHERS, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.
SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS ON ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE, for present and future events up to close of life—made by these sciences—with most complete primary and secondary directions (arcs, etc.)—through the trained judgment of PROF. ALTHOUSE—will stagger the senses. BEWARE, HOWEVER, OF UNRELIABLE READERS.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.
Readings by mail; send for circular, etc.
Daily and evenings, Sunday 10 to 2.

ACTIVITY IN THE CANYONS

Mountaineers on the Jump Over Railroad Plans.

See Boom in Proposed Roads Down the Coast.

Movements of Gould, Burson and Mrs. Rindge.

BY CLOUDSLEY JOHNS.

Another five-mile section of the Hueneme, Malibu and Port Los Angeles Railroad Company's line has been completed, and the mysterious road now is ten miles long. One light freight car and gasoline motor comprise the rolling stock.

Never has this road been considered the mere whim of an eccentric millionaire, carried out by his widow, to connect the great Malibu ranch with two minor ports, one of which exists as a port only by virtue of the mammoth wharf built and owned by the Southern Pacific company. Indeed, an injunction suit brought by the latter company against the concern which is building the road has prevented it approaching within three miles of Port Los Angeles; but still the work goes on.

A new complication of the mystery has appeared in the application of the Burson-Russell concern, which operates a railroad between Hueneme, Oxnard and Bakersfield, for a franchise for a railway through the city of Santa Monica, in the direction of Los Angeles. Between the nearest point of the Burson-Russell line and the place where they seem to want to build another bit of detached railroad, lie the Santa Monica Mountains, beautiful in themselves but forbidding to builders of railroads, and a narrow strip of possible right of way along the beach, already occupied by the Malibu company and the Southern Pacific, which concerns are warring over the privileges.

There would seem to be not much room for Burson there.

However, it may be supposed that Messrs. Burson and Russell know what they are doing, just as surely as Mrs. May K. Rindge has her own plans based on something beyond the Malibu.

And not alone by small concerns, apparently playing at the building of railroads, have possible connecting lines been constructed. As has been mentioned in a previous article in The Times, the West Gate line of the Los Angeles Pacific Company, from Sawtelle to Santa Monica, by way of the great cañon, is constructed in a manner which seems to promise other things than the passing of an almost empty trolley car once an hour, enough to hold the franchise till the time of better things.

There was a time when real estate on the mesas and in the cañons of the Santa Monica Mountains was not "active" because no one would buy; it is not "active" now because no one will sell. Meanwhile the Los Angeles-Pacific company has acquired vast tracts in the region, and very good friends of the concern, who in the past have sold the company property for nominal considerations, own more.

So there lies the interest of E. H. Harriman and his friends.

What the Goulds know, and intend to do, is guessed many times a day by everybody who thinks of coast-line roads. It is safe to conclude that the promoters of the Western Pacific Railroad are aware of the advantages which would lie in the continuation of the road as a coast line to the Mexican boundary.

A surveyor who has been at work on the line of a purposed railway in Oregon, arrived in Santa Monica last Monday, and talked about what the people up where he came from are thinking. They think the road through their region, from Astoria to Tillamook Bay, is designed as a link in the Western Pacific system, and destined to become a part of an extension to San Francisco and on down the Coast. If the monumental plan exists, and is to be realised, the line now building across the Malibu ranch must become a part of it.

There can be no doubt that H. K. Rindge really did desire to have his own little railroad connecting his princely estate, large as more than one European kingdom, with a harbor, but it is not probable that his dream comprehended steel bridges and such roadbed as is being constructed now.

An experienced railroader who has recently made a trip over the road as far as it has been built, when asked what he thought of it, said: "The line is a fine one, and when completed will afford one of the most scenic rides to be found anywhere. The track runs close to the ocean, and as you go westward from Santa Monica and northward from Point Dume there are jutting rocks and stupendous bluffs. Beyond Dume there is a sheltered cove of crescent shape, and one of the prettiest bathing beaches in the south. Here the waters are sheltered from all winds except those from due west, and the water is stormy indeed when small boats are unable to make safe landing. The site is an ideal one for a seaside resort, with fine bath-house, tourist hotel and amusement features. Being convenient to the mountains, the resort combines hunting with the other attractions, and for that reason should be quite popular when properly developed. The railroad is well built, with substantial bridges and heavy steel. To all appearances it is more than an obscure trolley line, designed to connect the Malibu ranch, or even Hueneme, with Santa Monica."

The "cove" referred to is "Dana's Cove," named for the author of "Two Years Before the Mast," which the famous sailor visited years ago. It can make no pretensions to being a harbor, but is one of the beauty spots of the Coast.

For the sake of the splendid pictureland which multitudes will flock to see when the building of railways is done, and for a Coast line the length of three States, with all the commerce of rich sections which will be opened, the project is an alluring one.

Not Trust Butter.

A report reached the manager of the Lucerne Cream and Butter Company at Hanford, to the effect that said company is a member of the so-called "Los Angeles Butter Trust." Following is their statement:

"We haven't any desire or ambition to be so conspicuously mentioned, and feel capable of managing the business of the Lucerne Cream and Butter Company without the aid of said trust.

"We desire to state to our customers in Los Angeles and surrounding towns, that our product will continue to be placed, as it has been direct from the creamery to the retailer. The butter, from the first of November, will be sold under our own wraps, the La France brand, which is registered and recorded, and which we are determined to protect, both in the interest of our customers and ourselves. Our creamery is located in the city of Hanford, in the heart of a fine dairy district. Our output is large and is uninjured by partial churning of the cream, for we do not have to haul our cream long distances. We make but one quality of butter—doing our best every day.

"We appreciate our extensive patronage in Los Angeles and the surrounding towns, and will spare no pains or expense to retain the confidence of our many good customers."

BALDWIN,
AT THE DRAGON,
309 S. HILL STREET. 309.
LOW FEE 50 CENTS.
THE ACKNOWLEDGED ADEPT AND RECOGNIZED AUTHORITY OF HINDOO PHILOSOPHY AND OCCULT MYSTERIES, MAKES A REMARKABLE STATEMENT, "YOUR GREATEST WISH CAN BE REALIZED—YOU WOULD NOT DESIRE A THING IF YOU WERE NOT CAPABLE OF ATTAINING IT."
I KNOW HOW TO CONTROL AND USE THAT POWER FOR YOUR SUCCESS AND MINE. IF YOU WISH TO SUCCEED IN ANY BUSINESS UNDERTAKING CONSULT ME. I can put you on the right road. If you desire to win in love or be reunited with one from whom some trouble or estrangement separates you. I CAN AND WILL HELP YOU TO GAIN THE DESIRE OF YOUR HEART. Are you tired of being poor and living a "from hand-to-mouth" existence? If so, COME TO ME AND I WILL SHOW YOU A BETTER WAY. Life is not half so much of a mystery as some people would have you believe. If you had studied more into nature's laws and learned the lessons there revealed you would know better WHY SOME PEOPLE SUCCEED AND OTHERS FAIL. There is a good reason, just the same as THERE IS A REASON why water will run down hill more easily than it will run up hill. I CAN EXPLAIN THAT REASON to you. I AM SUCCESSFUL MYSELF. I do not make this claim in the spirit of a braggart or egotist, but to enable you to appreciate what I can do for you. Low fee 50 cents.
THERE ARE SO-CALLED SEERS WHO MAKE GREAT CLAIMS OF WHAT THEY CAN DO FOR YOU WHEN UPON INVESTIGATION THEIR SURROUNDINGS AND EVERY ACTION WOULD CONVINCE ANY SENSIBLE PERSON THAT THEY ARE INCAPABLE OF HELPING THEMSELVES. THERE ARE ALSO COUNTERFEIT DOLLARS, IMITATIONS OF THE GENUINE. HERE ARE GOOD DOCTORS AND BAD ONES AND A FEW HONEST LAWYERS. JUST SO WITH PSYCHICS; THERE ARE A FEW GENUINE AND A GREAT MANY IMITATIONS. "JUDGE ME BY MY WORK." MY EXTENSIVE PATRONAGE AND GREAT SUCCESS ARE THE ENVY OF ALL COMPETITORS. I AM NEVER IDLE. MY MOTTO IS, "WORK AND WIN." I HELP MY PATRONS TO SUCCEED. ATTAINING THEIR VARIOUS AMBITIONS. THAT IS WHY I HAVE SO MANY OF THEM AND WHY EACH ONE RECOMMENDS ME TO THEIR FRIENDS. LOW FEE 50 CENTS.
The All-Wise Creator did not endow you with high ideas, noble inspirations, desire for happiness and return for that great love craving within your heart without at the same time placing within your reach the means of attaining these desires. If you are in trouble of any kind or not satisfied with your condition in life, come to me and I will make this clear to you. I have helped others. I CAN HELP YOU. Positively NO CHARGE if I fail to TELL YOUR NAME IN FULL, your occupation, what you called for, anything you wish to know. NO FEE IN ADVANCE AND YOU PAY NOTHING UNLESS PERFECTLY SATISFIED. Call today.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS— AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sunday, 9 to 3.)

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING ST., near Third
THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.
A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, and who has made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that HIS REMARKABLE READINGS AND PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS IN THEIR LIVES ARE UNPARALLELED.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S readings, which are thorough and scientific, have nothing in common whatever with the fictitious readings of illiterate, unreliable humbug palmists, astrologers, psychics, fortune tellers, and those who, THROUGH TRICK METHODS, CLAIM TO TELL YOUR NAME, etc., etc., after you yourself have written the information—who scarcely know one line or mount from the other, and who, by their disgraceful readings, drag these useful sciences into the mire of fortune telling and fraud. PROF. ALTHOUSE is not actuated by any feeling of ill-will toward any reader who may be GENUINE (for he believes all RELIABLE readers should be encouraged;) but he will—in the future, as in the past—denounce humbug work whenever and wherever he can.
A SATISFACTORY AND ABSOLUTELY CORRECT reading can only be had from one who has thoroughly mastered the laws of these wonderful sciences, through years of critical study of planetary influences on the lines of the hand and in the Horoscope, combined with large experiences, trained judgment, etc. The palm shows diseases, love, marriage, divorce, deaths, money, investments, changes, talents, travels, etc., etc., and many other things which cannot be mentioned here.
WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.
PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read—FROM LIFE—more celebrated people than any other reader. He does not deceive the public in this respect. HIS READINGS, TOO, MUST IN NO WISE BE CLASSED WITH THOSE OF ANY OTHER READER NOW OPERATING IN THIS PART OF THE COUNTRY, AND HIS SKILLED WORK HAS NO COMPARISON WITH THEIRS WHATSOEVER.
MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, THE GREAT SINGER, WHOSE HANDS WERE READ AND HOROSCOPE CAST BY PROF. ALTHOUSE, writes and says: "I was greatly surprised to find HOW MANY OF YOUR WARNINGS WERE WELL FOUNDED, and having been prepared for the same, I was not taken unawares. YOUR WARNING regarding an oncoming illness also PROVED A FACT, as not more than ten days later I was at home with a severe attack of la gripoe. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."
PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted when reading my hand and horoscope. I think YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."
DR. ALEX. J. M'IVOR-TYNDALL, editor Swastika Magazine, writes and says: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides, and I feel certain that you are able, through your accurate and scientific knowledge of these sciences of human life and culture, to guide and direct to the best possible advantage, the lives of those who apply to you for advice. I wish you every success in your work."
FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained." LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "I wish to say that your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading. It is by far the most scientific I have ever had." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, David Starr Jordan, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, SOUSA, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Creatore, Caruso, Huntington, Susan B. Anthony, Nance O'Neil, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, MME. GADSKI, Sembrich, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Anna Held, Lillian Russell, William Desmond, Blanche Hall, Paul de Longpre, and hundreds of others. These names of NOTED people are merely given because they are PUBLIC persons. It indicates the class of people being read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, together with hundreds of the very best people of Los Angeles—WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL IN EVERY PARTICULAR.
Intelligent, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED—those capable of appreciating the SUPERIOR QUALITIES OF A FINE READER.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE has also given many years of critical study to, and is an experienced practitioner in, the science of MODERN ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast for YOU INDIVIDUALLY, from the position of the planets at YOUR BIRTH. It indicates the condition of health, all kinds of diseases, the constitution, how best strengthened, when weak; tells all about love—whom to marry and when, describing the marriage partner, shows deaths, divorce; tells about children, speculation, the best time to invest or to push affairs, and when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents, what best adapted for; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger of limbs, accidents, death, losses, troubles; also of your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future; IN FACT, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of OTHERS, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.
SCIENTIFIC PREDICTIONS ON ALL QUESTIONS OF LIFE, for present and future events up to close of life—made by these sciences—with most complete primary and secondary directions (arcs, etc.)—through the trained judgment of PROF. ALTHOUSE—will stagger the senses. BEWARE, HOWEVER, OF UNRELIABLE READERS.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.
Readings by mail; send for circular, etc. Daily and evenings, Sunday 10 to 2.

BUSINESS INVESTMENT DEPARTMENT, MINES & FARISH.

We have opened up an up-to-date business investment department, and are now fully equipped to handle meritorious, legitimate business investments; if you want to buy or sell a business, see

I. M. HOLLINGSWORTH,
Manager Business Investment Department,
MINES & FARISH,
315 S. Hill st.

IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.

One of the nicest, cleanest, most profitable and most desirable retail institutions to be found in the center of our business center, will be sold on basis of invoice, approximating $10,000, as the owners are preparing to engage in wholesale business, which offers employment for more capital.

A bonus has been offered for this lease, and the good will is worth thousands, though no account will be taken of either; the business is netting better than $6000 a year; in fact, the month of October netted over $1900.

Commandingly located, as it is on one of the best business thoroughfares; so thoroughly established and favorably known that a clean, handsome profit is insured every month in the year, no one contemplating engaging in like pursuit of similar magnitude can afford to overlook this very unusual opportunity. The books are open.

RARE OPPORTUNITY.

A prosperous and thoroughly established local manufacturing establishment producing a staple commodity used every day in every home, has, during the last year, netted over 100 per cent. on its capital, yet finds the need of more capital and energy with which to still further develop its business in its extensive field. This concern numbers four of our largest department stores among its customers.

A reliable and capable business man with $5000 to $10,000 can secure a substantial interest in this business, carrying an official position and a salary commensurate with services rendered. The books are open.

OFFICE MAN WANTED.

A local industrial institution of unquestioned integrity desires the services of a competent book-keeper who has about $4000 to invest. The party capable of qualifying and satisfying the management of this concern will be given a lucrative position and a satisfactory guarantee on investment. Investigation courted.

We have a number of other strictly HIGH-CLASS mercantile and industrial openings ranging from $2000 to $20,000, approximately, and covering practically all legitimate lines, that will stand the most rigid investigation, though propriety forbids specific public mention.

Should you desire to connect yourself with an established and profitable business of high character, either by outright purchase or forming partnership, it is our business to be in touch with such openings, and we can be of undoubted assistance to you.

FOR SALE—

POULTRY SUPPLIES.

AT G. A. PRICES.

For the two weeks beginning November 4, we are going to cut prices regardless of cost. These days every special sale must have a name. We notice "bankrupt," "pre-inventory," "unloading," "must have money," and all such sales, but ours is none of these. We call it our G. A. sale. That might mean Great American, but it doesn't. It simply means that we want to GET ACQUAINTED.

We have a fine, large store, full of first-class goods, and we ourselves are fairly good looking. Some of you poultrymen have seen for yourselves and we have been very glad to Get Acquainted with you, but many others will not come in just to see any of these "things." We want to Get Acquainted with you, too, and we are making this sale so that you can't afford to stay away. Just look at these sample prices and see if you can:

Beef Scraps	7 lbs. 25c;	$3.00 cwt.

None better made—carload on the way.

Meat Meal	7 lbs. 25c;	$3.00 cwt.
Blood Meal	6 lbs. 25c;	$3.25 cwt.
Willow Charcoal	6 lbs. 25c;	$3.00 cwt.
Clam Shell	20 lbs. 25c;	$1.00 cwt.
Oyster Shell	16 lbs. 25c;	$1.35 cwt.
Granite Grits	25 lbs. 25c;	90c cwt.
Alfalfa Meal	16 lbs. 25c;	$1.25 cwt.
West Coast Egg Food	10 lbs. 25c;	$2.15 cwt.

Some Egg Foods are sold per sack, which vary from 75 to 90 lbs. Get 100 lbs. in yours.

West Coast Scratch Feed	10 lbs. 25c;	$2.10 cwt.
West Coast Fat Food	9 lbs. 25c;	$2.35 cwt.
Egg-More	4 lbs. 25c;	$1.60 per 25-lb. pail

The biggest seller on the market today. If you haven't tried it you ought to, and this is your chance.

The above are but samples of our cut rates. The prices of everything in the store are cut in the same way. Some of our cut prices are just cost, some less than they would cost now, and others are really less than actual cost. But this sale is regardless of cost. All package goods are cut 20 per cent. Our regular prices have been as low as the lowest, and on some articles lower than elsewhere. So it will be after this sale.

Now we do not want our "friends" to take advantage of this sale and act as emissaries of our competitors for the purpose of getting any of these goods for them, but we will sell you all you want for your own legitimate use. We do not care for our regular customers, with whom we are well acquainted already, to buy at these prices, but, of course, we can make no discrimination and they will be welcome to take advantage of this sale. As usual, purchases of $1 or over, will be delivered anywhere in Los Angeles.

Our object, as we have stated, is to Get Acquainted, and so we hope you will come in and see us. But if this is impossible, let us Get Acquainted by mail or 'phone. Send in your orders, but they must reach us within the two weeks named, for positively this sale

WILL CLOSE NOVEMBER 16.

During these two weeks, however, for the accommodation of busy men and women, we shall keep open store until 9 o'clock, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. Doubtless during this sale you may go to some other store and our prices may be met. Please silently thank us at the time and come around and tell us, for we want to Get Acquainted whether you buy of us or not. And remember, too, that we have no special goods for this special sale, but they are our regular goods, as good as anybody's goods, and some better.

Are you going to buy an incubator or brooder for this season? This is your chance at from 10 to 15 per cent. discount. Not old, second-hand machines, but new, up-to-date stock, manufactured at our well-equipped factory in Pasadena. The is as good as can be made. Come and see them in operation and examine carefully. Also the Pacific Combination Brooder, for indoors and out, can't be beat. Or if you can't come, send for catalogue, describing them, with testimonials. We also make the "Business" incubators and brooders, which are built for business and they do the business every time. No mahogany, no frills, no furbelows, but just business—100-egg capacity, $10, regular, but $8 now. And we are working on a 300-egg "Business" that will be all right and priced right.

Remember, 707 S. Spring, and if you don't find that "Headquarters for Poultry Supplies" for two weeks, at least, just come and tell us where headquarters is.

A COMPANY OWNING AN EXCEPTIONally rich gold-silver Mexican property, officered by well known men of ability, integrity and standing, and owning the property absolutely by purchase, there being no debts or encumbrances of any nature whatsoever, having developed two ore bodies of high value and now being ready to place the necessary pumping and hoisting machinery upon the property, desire to sell a limited amount of the treasury shares to secure the necessary funds for this purpose, and to continue the development work. Attorney-General of Colorado Begins Action to Dissolve Coal Dealers' Combine.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

DENVER, Nov. 2.—Suit to enjoin the retail coal dealers' combination from continuing its present high scale of prices, and to force its dissolution as a combination in restraint of trade, was filed in the Denver District Court today by Atty.-Gen. W. H. Dickson. Eighty coal companies, including the Colorado Fuel and Iron Works, one of the largest concerns in the West, are named as defendants in the action.

Where Forestry Is Profitable.

Forest planting in the Ohio Valley offers many opportunities for profit. In Eastern and Southern Ohio and Southern Indiana much of the land is hilly and unfit for agricultural crops, and the native forest has been largely cut out, leaving a stand of worthless trees and brush. Land has been cleared on steep slopes, and has now become so badly washed and gullied by the rains that it no longer serves for good pasture, and is being overrun with sassafras and briers. It is on this class of land that forestry will prove most profitable. The native trees already on the ground should be pruned and thinned and waste corners which bear no forest growth should be planted to commercial trees.

In Southern Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky it will pay to devote small areas of agricultural land to the production of a crop of posts, telephone poles, railway ties and other forest products. There are many trees suitable for this purpose.—[American Forestry Association.

Why the Pudding Failed.

In one family where a Jap was employed as a cook, their rice pudding had grown more or less famous, and had been promised to a number of friends as a dessert at quite a large dinner party. The hostess, on going through the kitchen, found that the cook was measuring the milk for the pudding by the mouthful! Needless to say, that ended not only the rice pudding for that occasion, but for all future time, and it was necessary to tell the story to the assembled guests to explain the absence of the dessert, which they had long been looking forward to.—[Suburban Life.

Husband a Good Provider.

"Though Mrs. McKinley," said a Canton clergyman, "left an estate of about $200,000, she was one of the most charitable women in Ohio. Her experiences in charity work were interesting. I used to like to hear her talk of them.

"She once told me about a colored widow, whose children she had helped to educate. The widow, rather late in life, married. A few months after her marriage, Mrs. McKinley asked how she was getting on.

" 'I'se a-gettin' on fine, thank ye,' the bride answered.

" 'And is your husband a good provider?' said Mrs. McKinley.

" 'Deed he is a good providah, ma'am,' was the reply. 'He got me five new places to wash at dis las' week.' "—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Attorney-General of Colorado Begins Action to Dissolve Coal Dealers' Combine.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

DENVER, Nov. 2.—Suit to enjoin the retail coal dealers' combination from continuing its present high scale of prices, and to force its dissolution as a combination in restraint of trade, was filed in the Denver District Court today by Atty.-Gen. W. H. Dickson. Eighty coal companies, including the Colorado Fuel and Iron Works, one of the largest concerns in the West, are named as defendants in the action.

Where Forestry Is Profitable.

Forest planting in the Ohio Valley offers many opportunities for profit. In Eastern and Southern Ohio and Southern Indiana much of the land is hilly and unfit for agricultural crops, and the native forest has been largely cut out, leaving a stand of worthless trees and brush. Land has been cleared on steep slopes, and has now become so badly washed and gullied by the rains that it no longer serves for good pasture, and is being overrun with sassafras and briers. It is on this class of land that forestry will prove most profitable. The native trees already on the ground should be pruned and thinned and waste corners which bear no forest growth should be planted to commercial trees.

In Southern Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky it will pay to devote small areas of agricultural land to the production of a crop of posts, telephone poles, railway ties and other forest products. There are many trees suitable for this purpose.—[American Forestry Association.

Why the Pudding Failed.

In one family where a Jap was employed as a cook, their rice pudding had grown more or less famous, and had been promised to a number of friends as a dessert at quite a large dinner party. The hostess, on going through the kitchen, found that the cook was measuring the milk for the pudding by the mouthful! Needless to say, that ended not only the rice pudding for that occasion, but for all future time, and it was necessary to tell the story to the assembled guests to explain the absence of the dessert, which they had long been looking forward to.—[Suburban Life.

Husband a Good Provider.

"Though Mrs. McKinley," said a Canton clergyman, "left an estate of about $200,000, she was one of the most charitable women in Ohio. Her experiences in charity work were interesting. I used to like to hear her talk of them.

"She once told me about a colored widow, whose children she had helped to educate. The widow, rather late in life, married. A few months after her marriage, Mrs. McKinley asked how she was getting on.

"'I'se a-gettin' on fine, thank ye,' the bride answered.

"'And is your husband a good provider?' said Mrs. McKinley.

"'Deed he is a good providah, ma'am,' was the reply. 'He got me five new places to wash at dis las' week.'"—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Those who area of the city is excessive perty in select environs outside of the city will long go begging for actual settlers to purchase it should secure forthwith an atlas. Take the maps of the large cities of the country, from New York down through those of lesser population, until we reach those of our own class or even of a class below ours, and observe the area embraced by these municipal sites. In cities of about the size of Los Angeles, five, seven and more miles from the business center are not considered excessive distances for high-class and popular residence districts. Those of us who remember Los Angeles a scattered and ill-built city of 11,000 population twenty-seven years ago and make an extended tour through its different districts in fifty directions today cannot fail to be much astonished to see how population has spread and to what a very great distance dense population has been built up. The growth of these twenty-seven years is about 270,000. That is but little more than a quarter of a million. Who, with any knowledge of the past or foresight into the future will doubt that eventually Los Angeles will be a city of a round million souls? Multiply the present population by three and it will then be considerably short of even 900,000, but vacant lots through the perimeter of the city at any point will then be very rare.

—o—

Not Intended to Boom.

Now the present slow condition of the market because of the temporary money difficulties is not going to last. Therefore a timely word of warning to those of rash disposition may not be out of place even now. In saying that the population of Los Angeles will ultimately reach a million people, do not let the idea run away with you that that will be by the next census, or sooner than the second decennial census in 1920. If the writer's unbiased opinion were asked he would put the date about midway between the second and the third next taking of the census.

As to Farming Lands.

Every word said of the most optimistic character with regard to city property in Los Angeles will apply with equal force to agricultural lands, according to the uses they may be put to in all parts of Southern California. Remember, good farming land is becoming scarce all the way from the Bay of Fundy to the Bay of San Francisco. All through the New England and what are known as the Middle States, farms that have been abandoned for years are being taken up and reclaimed. By scientific treatment the United States Department of Agriculture aided in the work. Out in the Middle West farmers are paying more attention to agriculture, putting more skill, brains and expense into farming, than ever before. It is worth while to realize that wheat sells in the Los Angeles market at from $1.85 to $1.90 per hundred; that hay is worth $20 a ton. We import large quantities of butter and eggs and the consumer is paying 85 to 90 cents for a two-pound roll of butter and a half dollar a dozen for eggs. The orange growers of Southern California marketed a crop worth in Eastern markets a total of $34,000,000 during the season ended last Thursday at midnight. Some investigator has estimated that the grape crop of the Southern California district for the past year was worth $7,000,000. People with small patches of five to ten acres of good lands are selling sugar beets which pay a gross return of $100 an acre for the crop. It may seem excessive to some that orange groves in the best condition in every respect and in the best situation would bring $1000 to $1500 an acre. But when we realize that the crop sells from such groves at from $500 to $1000 an acre, the cost price seems small. It is hardly saying too much that never again will good farming lands anywhere in the southern half of California be as cheap as they are today.

FOR GENERAL GOOD.

APPORTIONMENT OF CATTLE KING'S RANCH.

Two-Million-Dollar Estate to Be Thrown Open to Small Buyers. Thirty-one Thousand Acres of California's Richest Land.

THE facts with regard to the biggest land enterprise of the year—and the most interesting, have come out.

F. A. Blythe, before taking the Owl last night for his home in Central California, gave The Times information that the famous Big Field Ranch in Northern Kern county is to be thrown open for public entry, in order to carry out the public-spirited wishes of its former owner, a wealthy cattle king and one of California's oldest pioneers.

The deceased had a hobby that his vast holdings should be kept out of the hands of speculators, and instead of being sold to a syndicate and afterwards resold to the public at a profit, should be apportioned to individuals at a low price, similar to the land distributions by the United States government.

As the official representative of the trustees, Blythe did not divulge the exact plan of allotment, but he said that his visit to Los Angeles was for the purpose of making arrangements for public subscriptions and a public land drawing and that he had completed all the preliminaries.

In order to guard against speculators getting hold of the property the small homeseeker will have first consideration, he says, and should the land be oversubscribed, the larger subscriptions will be cut down.

The Big Field Ranch is one of the most valuable properties in California, worth at present prices nearly $2,000,000. It has come down intact from the early days when a few wealthy barons owned nearly all the desirable land in the State. The idea of disintegrating the ranch and promising to let the little fellows in on the ground floor instead of the big ones, is a surprise party, for it is known that one of the great railroad interests has been trying to get the property for years.

All told there are 31,000 odd acres, something over forty-eight square miles, rich soil and nearly all level. It is one of those vast deposits of silt resembling the historic basin of the Nile; and if one were permitted to select land in any portion of the State, this Big Field Ranch in the San Joaquin Valley would be one of the first pieces to choose.

A water plain is reached a few feet below the surface, giving the land unusual commercial value; for under a system of inexpensive irrigation, there is said to be no such thing as a dry year.

ONE MORE LINK.

This undertaking will doubtless add another link to the strong chain that is being welded between the San Joaquin Valley and Southern California. Millions of capital from Los Angeles have been invested in Fresno and Kern counties the past two years. This section was once considered a province of San Francisco and a source of great wealth to the northern metropolis. It is now generally conceded that this district belongs to Southern California and almost every day business connections are being made between houses there and here.

The San Joaquin Valley will eventually be one of the most thickly-settled portions of the State. Already it produces the bulk of the State's wine, raisins, prunes, dairy products, corn and grain. Many large colonies have been established which have been remarkably successful. As a result of the influx of people, land values have steadily advanced until prime land, well located, brings as high as $200 per acre.

When asked at what price the Big Field Ranch would be allotted, Blythe said that probably there would be two divisions, depending on proximity to the railroad, but that in both cases, the price would be so nominal that one fair crop in a single season would more than pay for the land outright. Furthermore, the intention is to make a small first payment so that people of small means can easily locate on the property and establish themselves comfortably and successfully.

In following the government method of distribution, no distinction will be made between raw land and that containing improvements. There are several artesian wells on the property, each worth $2000 or more, and these will fall to the fortunate applicants as an extra bonus. There are also at least one hundred pieces especially valuable for one reason or another, each of which will represent a snug fortune.

While the government has several times sold larger tracts, it is asserted that no other land allotment quite equaled the Big Field Ranch in quality. In fact, government land is usually more bad than good and the Big Field Ranch is unquestionably as rich as any soil in California and in the near future will command as high a price as any agricultural property in the State.

THE PROGRAMME.

While forty-eight square miles sounds big, big enough for everybody to get a slice, lest the public count its chickens before they are hatched, it might be well to do a little figuring.

In the first place, out of the 31,000 acres, 6000 acres will be reserved, the object being to give the public the chance to select the cream of the property and after 24,000 acres have been chosen, the remaining 6000 acres will be kept for other purposes. This leaves a little over thirty-seven square miles for disbursement.

Thus, out of a total population in Southern California of 500,000 people, there can only be 600 fortunate winners providing each of the 600 gets a forty-acre farm, leaving 499,400 individuals to bewail their fate. If divided into 100-acre farms, there will be only 240 lucky ones.

Doubtless each of the 80,000 colonists who have arrived in the last few months will write home that California is all that it is cracked up to be, and that the finest land in the State is being handed out as though it were desert sand. But hold, ye colonists! Thirty-seven square miles may be a lot of land in Connecticut, but in California, where provisions are raised for the rest of the country, it is only a speck on the horizon. If it were divided equally among the 80,000 there would be less than one-third of an acre for each individual.

Maybe there will be some disappointments, but nevertheless the apportionment of this great stretch of fertile land will add much to California's wealth and will give independence and support to several hundred families.

While in the city, Blythe enlisted the services of Percy H. Clark in the Hellman building, who has had a good deal of experience in establishing successful colonies, and the public allotment will take place as soon as facilities can be arranged for handling such an extensive undertaking. Blythe is anxious to provide means for the public to visit the property so that selections can be intelligently made.

ON EAST FORTY-SIXTH.

The Cornell Realty Company has sold for Anna M. Wilson to Dr. Charles F. Miller the property at No. 1230 East Forty-sixth street for $3500. The lot is 50x142 feet, and is improved with a six-room residence. Mrs. Wilson takes as part payment a lot on Forty-ninth street, near Central avenue.

GOING, GONE!

NEW METHOD MAKES HIT.

RED HOT SALE OF LOCAL LOTS BY AN AUCTIONEER.

Crowds Attend the Auction Each Day and the Money Receipts Are Large—Special Cars Take Out the Curious, Who Become Buyers—Experiment Works Well.

That there is plenty of money to buy good real estate is made evident by the record turned in by the Winton & McLeod Co., of an auction sale at Corinth Heights. Fifty-five lots to bona-fide buyers having a total valuation of $27,385, is the record. This sale was the result of a new and unique method employed by the Winton & McLeod Company in selling the property at auction, the past week.

Advertising special premiums and cars to the tract, and taking a crowd of between 250 and 400 people out there every day—many of whom went out in curiosity, and returned property owners—that was the method. Special auctioneers, trained to the business of selling real estate by this method do the work, getting right on the property being sold. The crowd of people caught by The Times photographer at yesterday afternoon's sale, while the bidding was at its height, shows the new way. Premiums of real worth, given out by a sort of raffle accompany each sale. The car tickets have coupons which are detached, and drawn out by a little girl. The holders of the lucky numbers get the prize.

Corinth Heights is located on Vermont avenue, on the highest crest of land south of the city, and is about six miles from Fourth and Hill streets. The San Pedro and Redondo car lines, via Gardena, pass in front of the tract and reach the place within thirty-five minutes. All the lots are quarter acres, and the greater part of the street work is completed. The sales have averaged about thirteen lots a day for the last four days. Prices have ranged from $250 to $750, or about 30 per cent. under the original price of the lots. The average price per lot was about $435.

ALTHOUSE BROTHERS' SALES.

Long List of Transactions in Completed Houses and Choice Building Lots Reported.

The following sales have been made through the agency of Althouse Brothers:

D. T. Althouse has sold to Laurence Stevens, a two-story, ten-room, stone and frame residence at No. 1525 Western avenue. The house has just been completed, contains every modern improvement and is finished in Flemish oak, mahogany and white enamel. There is a large basement, with furnace, laundry, etc. The ceilings are beamed and the walls are paneled and covered with imported tapestry and Spanish leather. Mr. Stevens has bought this place for his home. The lot is 50x135 feet. Consideration, $10,250.

S. E. Wilson has sold to W. E. Everest, a two-story, eight-room, frame residence at No. 2718 Kenwood avenue. Los 50x135 feet. Consideration, $5500. This was bought for a home.

Mrs. E. L. Blanchard sold to Henry Wilckens, an unimproved lot, 120x150 feet, on the northwest corner of Western avenue, and Linden avenue. Mr. Wilckens is a wealthy manufacturer from Nebraska, and will erect a two-story, twelve-room frame residence to cost about $14,000. Consideration $5000.

The large, cheerful dining-room, with walls paneled 5 feet high with oak, has a specially-designed built-in buffet with heavy glass doors and hand-carved oak trimming. In the pantry in the rear bountiful shelf, bin and drawer room is available. GEORGE J. COTE.

$3500 buys the most complete bungalow in Los Angeles. This bungalow is different in plan and details from any house you have ever seen. Very wide across the front, it gives more porch room than most houses twice its size. Artistic living-room, reception-room and dining-room run across the house and can be opened up in a manner to make entertaining very convenient. Hardwood floors of the finest quality with stained woodwork, many little things being built in, such as bookcases and window seats make it take little money to furnish it. The two bedrooms which communicate through a bathroom fitted with the most up-to-date plumbing, are prettily tinted and painted in white enamel. Large closets and many places to put things make this an easy bungalow to keep house in.
The price only $3500. Seems very low when you consider it is built on a 50-foot lot on a wide street in a rapidly-growing neighborhood in the southwest.

$4500.

ARLINGTON AVENUE.
ARLINGTON AVENUE.

Only $500 cash needed, balance rent; new and modern; strictly down-to-date 6-room bungalow. This bungalow is typical, and must be seen to be appreciated. The foundation, the porch and abutments on which the house rests are made of cement, assuring an everlasting foundation. The rooms are large and the finish is extra fine. The lot is large.
If you are looking for anything on high ground in the southwest, investigate at once, as this snap won't last long.

CHEAPEST COTTAGE IN THE CHAS. VICTOR HALL TRACT.

Solid, well-built throughout, only the best selected wood and plaster; in fact, all materials used go to make up a compact and much better-built cottage than any in the tract. The exterior has pleasing lines, having artistic bay window and comfortable porch; if you see it you will want it. The inside finish is all you would expect to find in a house of double its price; the arrangement of the three bedrooms, sitting and dining-room is perfect in every respect; large closet room and many cupboards, with plenty of places to put away things, makes housekeeping a pleasure. The lot, which is 50x133 to alley, is situated on a wide street, near one of the fastest car lines in the city; the many beautiful homes and lawns being terraced above grade on this street gives a very picturesque appearance to this locality.

A QUESTION FOR YOU TO ANSWER.

DO YOU WANT TO LIVE ON THE WEST ADAMS HILL, ON A WINDING, 100-FOOT DRIVE, LIGHTED BY NUMEROUS STONE AND WROUGHT-IRON ELECTROLIERS, WITH PETROLITHIC PAVEMENT, CEMENT SIDEWALKS, SEVEN FEET WIDE, TWENTY-THREE FEET FOR TREES AND LAWNS BETWEEN CURB AND PROPERTY LINE;

WHERE LATER YOU CAN TAKE A SUBWAY CAR AND GO TO THE BUSINESS CENTER IN 7 MINUTES;

WHERE YOU HAVE NOW CHOICE OF TWO CAR LINES;

WHERE YOU CAN DRIVE OR MOTOR FROM THE BUSINESS CENTER WITHOUT LEAVING ASPHALT PAVEMENT;

WHERE LOTS ARE SO LARGE THAT BUILDINGS WILL NOT OBSTRUCT THE SUPERB VIEW;

WHERE YOU CAN GET A BUILDING SITE 60x140 FEET FOR $1800, AND WHERE THE LARGEST CORNERS COST, NOW, LESS THAN $3000;

WHERE IN THREE OR FOUR YEARS FRONTAGE WILL BE WORTH $100 TO $150 PER FOOT;

WHERE NEAR-BY PROPERTY NOW BRINGS THE LATTER PRICES;

WHERE YOUR HOME WILL BE SITUATED IN A SPACIOUS PRIVATE PARK;

IF YOU WANT THESE AND OTHER ADVANTAGES, TELEPHONE US FOR AUTOMOBILE APPOINTMENT TO SEE VICTORIA PARK, OR SEE MR. F. E. ATWOOD, ON THE PROPERTY.

The best and safest savings bank I know of is a good close-in lot at a bargain price. It cannot burn, no one can walk away with it, and it cannot fail. In a large growing city like this it is always increasing in value and produces much larger dividend than a bank can pay. You can buy it on a small payment down and a little every month and when you are ready to build your home your lot will be ready to receive it, or if you prefer to sell it at a handsome profit you can do so. Then there is the satisfaction of owning your own lot. I have a very fine lot on a slight elevation, on a 5-cent car fare and two car lines, a short distance from the Courthouse, with all street improvements paid for and with a view of the ocean, mountains and valley and can never be shut off. It costs only $300 and I will take $10 down and $10 monthly, or if you should prefer to pay cash I will give you 5 per cent. discount. I would like to have you see it as soon as you can before it is sold. Come to my office and I will be glad to show it to you.

FOR SALE—

470 ACRES.
CHOICE ORANGE LAND
With an abundance of free water.
$45 AN ACRE.

This tract is admirably located for Valencia, as well as navel oranges, being frostless and protected on all sides. It lies east of Porterville, and surrounded by groves from which they are picking ripe fruit at this time, samples of which we have in our office. Water is free and in abundance, the property having a constant flow of 100 inches. Packing houses only half a mile. This locality is in a class by itself, as the fruit ripens fully six weeks ahead of any other section in the State. Under these conditions it is hard to say what this property will be worth in a few years, for its earning capacity is ahead of any other section, and the available orange land in this locality is all taken up. There is about 210 acres of this tract ideal orange land, and located as it is, having free water, would be cheap at $200 an acre. There are 100 acres of rich sub-irrigated bottom land that would cut 10 tons of alfalfa hay per acre, and would be a bargain at $150 an acre, and 170 acres producing an abundance of feed would make a good cattle ranch. We have personally inspected this property, and do not hesitate to recommend it as a real bargain. The place would be cheap as a whole at $150 an acre. The owner needs money, and we can deliver the property for $45 an acre.

If you are not getting good service from your broker, go to the "Wizard," the best trader in the United States, the man who knows how and who does things while you wait. GIRL MAKES WORLD TRIP.

Miss Curran Has Adventures in Many Lands.

Los Angeles Teacher Brings Rare Flowers Home.

Kindergarten Principles Are Planted in East.

[illegible] os Angeles [illegible] ped foot [illegible] a tour [illegible] she [illegible] very [illegible] she [illegible] ven- [illegible] the [illegible] rth- [illegible] om; [illegible] here [illegible] ad in [illegible] st the [illegible] entally [illegible] Honora- [illegible] least, she [illegible] sticks. [illegible] several years a successful teacher, and a popular worker in the Los Angeles College Settlement, but she felt the wanderlust in her veins; the lure of other lands was upon her, and more than all she heard the East and its temple bells a-calling. Now the salary of a kindergarten teacher in Los Angeles is hardly sufficient to allow for globe trotting, but the plucky California girl was not to be daunted. She dealt in Los Angeles real estate and found the goose that laid the golden egg. Eighteen months ago, with a leave of absence in her pocket, she sailed away to see the cherry blossoms blooming in Japan.

WHERE ROMANCE DWELLS.

There are a number of English schools in Japan, and Miss Curran taught in several places, but found her greatest joy in Sendai, a northern missionary center, and a great native university town. It is also the scene of Onota Watana's fascinating story, "The Heart of Hyacinth." In a little sampan she went out on that wonderful bay of Matsushima, where "Miss Purple Eyes" had gone before her—but past the little pine-clad islands from which the bay takes its name, and along whose shores lie the tombs of those great and famous "Lords of Date."

"Theater Street" in Sendai was a great entertainment to the Los Angeles girl, as well as the Japanese. She attended a performance at one of the theaters, and found her private box heated with a little charcoal stove. Cakes and tea were served during intermission, and Miss Curran thought this a great improvement over the American custom of going out "to see a man" between acts.

Miss Curran found no anti-American sentiment in Japan. She was treated with greatest respect in her travels, either when alone or with a companion. Her greatest difficulty in traveling from a hustling American standpoint was the singular habits of the Japanese, no two of which were set alike.

With a friend she visited in Vladivostok, and then took the Siberian railway and spent sixteen days in crossing that vast extent of Siberian country. She was astonished at the palatial aspect of the trains on this line of travel. They are furnished with libraries, baths and the most luxurious appointments. She and her friend found on that trip how sweet it sounds to be called an angel, even in a language one does not understand.

COMFORTING ANGELS.

An old woman hugging to her heart a poor, pale little baby boarded the train at some dreary out-of-the-way station. She was taking the little one to the nearest town where a doctor could be found. But death called the precious grandchild and relieved all its earthly ills. Hurriedly the two American girls went to comfort the old Russian woman. They made a little shroud out of their own clothing, and bought food for the weeping survivor, who called them angels and asked all the saints of heaven to have them in keeping. Everywhere in that country of blood and terror, the travelers found the people themselves gentle and full of kindness.

Instead of the stock souvenirs that people bring back from foreign tours, Miss Curran has gathered wild flowers, and when she arrives in Los Angeles about December 1, she will have a collection to show that is absolutely unique, each delicate specimen marking a point in her journey, and fragrant with its associations. The flowers, carefully pressed and preserved, will also be of great botanical interest. There are bits of fern from here and there, so like and yet so unlike our own, the elusive edelweiss of the Alps, and the beautiful blossoms of the Campagna, that Boticelli once loved to paint.

Miss Curran took in all the main points of interest that people usually visit on the continent. In Paris, where she spent three weeks, she and a friend took rooms near the American Girls' Club, where they intended to go for their meals. This club is an interesting institution, located right on the edge of the Latin quarter.

REFERENCE TO EAT.

"What are your references?" was the leading question asked by the polite woman in charge at the club when the newcomers went for their first meal. "References?" they gasped. "That was the first they knew of references being required." Muss Curran remembered a letter of introduction she carried from the Rev. Calvin R. Pattee of Los Angeles to his son, E. E. E. Pattee, at No. 125 Boulevard Mont Parnasse. She showed the letter, and the woman unbent immediately, saying: "Oh, yes, we know Mr. Pattee, he is just round the corner from us." So all went well, and the girls found the club a pleasant center of American life.

They presented the letter to Mr. Pattee, who is one of the art lecturers in the Louvre, and is regarded as an authority on technique. Miss Curran visited at his residence, which is a real old French chateau, full of rare art treasures.

Miss Curran is now in New York City, and after visiting in Chicago and other places will arrive in Los Angeles about the first of next month.

BEWARE OF THE BACKACHE

A NOTED AUTHORITY TELLS WHAT TO DO TO PREVENT SERIOUS KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Gives prescription to take for relief of Kidney disease and says Lame Back and Urinary trouble are the danger signals. Mix this recipe as it is also splendid for Rheumatism.

More people succumb each year to some form of kidney trouble than any other cause. The slightest form of kidney derangement often develops into Bright's kidney disease, diabetes or dropsy. When either of these diseases are suspected the sufferer should at once seek the best medical attention possible. Consult only a good first-class physician, leave patent medicines alone.

There are many of the lesser symptoms of kidney trouble which can be treated at home is stated by a well-known authority. For some of these, such as backache, pain in the region of the kidneys, weak bladder, frequency, (especially at night) painful scalding and other urinary troubles, try the following simple home remedy: Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple ingredients are harmless and can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy and any one can mix them by shaking well in a bottle. The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and again at bedtime.

There is no better general remedy known to relieve all forms of rheumatism either, because it acts directly upon the kidneys and blood. It cleans the clogged up pores in the kidneys so they can filter and strain from the blood the poisonous uric acid and waste matter which if not eliminated remain in the blood, decompose and settle about the joints and muscular tissues, causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.

Backache is nature's signal notifying the sufferer that the kidneys are not acting properly. "Take care of your kidneys," is now the physician's advice to his patients.

RAILROAD LINES POUR IN BIG CRUSH OF COLONISTS.

Thirty Hundred Travelers Set Foot on Los Angeles Soil, Coming on Many Special Trains, and Horde Is Expected Today, Tomorrow and Tuesday.

Scenes at the railroad stations yesterday would have done any wandering pessimist a world of good, for he would have seen a total of nearly 3000 new would-be citizens of Southern California filled with the enthusiasm of reaching the goal of their long and varied trips from all parts of the country to participate in the prosperity of Los Angeles and the surrounding country.

At almost every hour of the day some train or section of a train was rolling into a depot, discharging its living freight and piles of baggage, and then pulling out to make room for the next. Schedules were shattered because of the rush and nearly all trains, even the regular ones, were late all the way from thirty minutes to five hours.

As for the baggage, it simply overflowed into the streets and over the sidewalks, while frantic transfer men dug out those pieces for which they held the checks. In fact, it was a busy day all around for the railroad men of Los Angeles terminals and lasted until a late hour last night.

One of the noticeable things about the influx of colonists yesterday was the fact that they all seemed to be well-to-do. They were for the most part representative Americans of all classes, all anxious to get settled as soon as possible, and for this purpose the advertising columns of The Times will be scanned with even more intentness than ever today in a search for rooms and houses to rent, or places for sale.

The trains which left Denver yesterday are due here tomorrow. It is expected that over 4000 colonists will arrive over the Southern Pacific, Santa Fé and Salt Lake. Tuesday will probably be the banner day for arrivals, as eight trains from Kansas City, which left there Friday and yesterday, are scheduled to reach Los Angeles. Then the special trains from Denver, Omaha and via New Orleans by way of the Southern Pacific will get here and the special sections of the regular trains over the Salt Lake, each a special train all by itself, will reach this city.

This rush of colonists at the very last of the season's colonist rate is proving a surprise to railroad men all over the country. Los Angeles and Southern California are looming large in the eyes of traffic managers throughout the United States.

HIS PASSING MOURNED.

Many Attend Funeral Services and Memorial Exercises for Late Prof. George S. Beane.

The funeral services and memorial exercises of the late Dr. George S. Beane, professor of physics and head of the department of electrical engineering at the University of Southern California, were held at the University Methodist Church yesterday afternoon. A large assemblage of college mourners and friends gathered to honor for the last time their beloved professor, and the various resolutions of sympathy and addresses voiced by the different speakers all bore generous testimony to the sterling character and beautiful life of the departed.

Representatives from the faculty of the College of Dentistry, the Y.M.C.A., and the board of trustees of the university were present, and the entire faculty of the College of Liberal Arts occupied a reserved section. The student body also was largely represented, while a goodly number of friends and acquaintances in addition filled the church auditorium.

Prof. W. F. Skeele of the College of Music opened the exercises by rendering in low and plaintive strains that grand selection, Chopin's "Funeral March." Miss Robbins and Miss Letitia Williams then sang in sweet soft notes "Rock of Ages," after which John Nicholson, pastor of the Garvanza Methodist Church, read from the scriptures, followed by prayer by Rev. Alfred Inwood. President G. F. Bovard of the university next spoke of the life and accomplishments of the deceased professor, and later read the resolutions of regret and sympathy from the faculty of the university and from the student body. Rev. Dr. E. A. Healy gave a short sketch of the early life and plans of the professor, and mentioned especially his work at Toronto University, where Dr. Healy knew him personally.

Quite a large number of friends went to Rosedale Cemetery, where the final service was in charge of Dr. Bovard, Dr. Healy and Rev. Inwood. Pallbearers included Messrs. Knoles, Denniston and Nye, from the college faculty, and Messrs. C. J. Lipe, John Douglas Walker and Walter Hoff Seeley, representing the University Masonic Temple, of which the deceased was an active officer.

EASTERN STAR BAZAAR.

The ladies of Loyalty Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, held a bazaar in Blanchard Hall yesterday afternoon, followed by a dance last night. A number of booths were constructed around the sides of the hall, where fancy needlework, candy and other articles were sold, fortunes told, and a number of other schemes worked to innocently part guests from their money. Last night a large number of ladies and gentlemen engaged in the dancing. The proceeds were for the relief fund of the order.

SUPREME IN TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES

20 Minutes From the Huntington Depot—and Water Costs Nothing

No other suburb of Los Angeles enjoys such convenient railway facilities. Five electric lines with cars every 5 minutes, and a steam railroad. No other suburb posseses such boundless free water. It costs nothing piped to the door. No other suburb has such proven productive soil. Berries, vegetables and fruits reach perfection there. No other suburb combines so many beautiful scenes. The mountains in the distance lend an added enchantment. No other suburb is so easily accessible. The running time to the Huntington depot is 20 minutes. No other suburb offers such great values at such low prices. A whole acre of this land may be purchased now for $650.

$20 Down Will Secure a Full Acre

Belle Vernon is right on the new Long Beach Boulevard, extending from the city to the sea. The trend of rapid growth is straight out that way. The present price is lower than the raw acreage is now. High and graded schools, churches, stores, banks and every city convenience close at hand. Streets are graded and oiled. Every forward step of Los Angeles is reflected in Belle Vernon values. When land becomes too valuable for home and garden it can be cut up and sold for more money per lot than the whole acre costs today. Now is the time to get it before prices advance beyond reach of the average home-seeker or investor. The acres are selling fast. Large capitalists are buying all the land they can secure in that vicinity. You will hear some news soon.

Free excursions every 5 minutes all day Sunday. There never will be another opportunity like this.

The accident occurred at Third and Rose streets. Jensen was riding a bicycle at the time. Jargstorff placed the injured man in his automobile and took him home. Later Jensen became ill, and was sent to the Receiving Hospital. It is feared a blood-clot has formed on his brain, and this may result seriously.

WE WILL ACCEPT CHECKS ON THE banks, and if you have some loose money there, why not in these troublous times buy good bonds to net you 6 to 8 per cent. interest, if held, and several times this income if you wish to sell in a year or two. Or buy dividend paying stocks, which at the present liquidation prices promise great profit when the clouds blow over. If you prefer to loan your money for six months or a year at high interest, with gilt-edged collateral, or for longer periods, on real estate security, I can furnish such loans. Interviews solicited.

A Residential Beauty Spot

Home Lots Commanding the Glories of Land and Sea

Crestmont has been aptly termed "the Smiley Heights of Los Angeles." Though lower than Smiley Heights beyond all comparison, it is still high enough to afford the grandest views possible from any residential portion of Los Angeles. The scene embraces an area from the ships at sea to the gardens of the San Gabriel Valley, from the quiet environs of Hollywood to the teeming streets of Los Angeles. From the green fields of the Cahuenga Valley to the orange groves of Pasadena and an inspiring sweep of snow-capped range from Mt. Hollywood to San Jacinto.

Sunset Boulevard, the great automobile driveway to the coast, passes Crestmont on its way. The Hollywood and Colegrove cars afford rapid service at 5-cent fare. The Harriman subway line will pass within a block.

Every Modern Improvement Accentuates the Natural Beauty

The crescent drives and avenues follow the graceful contour of the elevation. Beautiful shade trees dot the landscape. Stone copings form sightly terraces. Handsome columns with ornamental electroliers decorate the corners. Every modern landscape effect is utilized in beautifying Crestmont and rendering it a paradise for home lovers.

ROYAL OFFSPRING.

KING TO GIVE CONGO TO CHILD.

RULER OF BELGIUM HAS ATTRACTION IN CHATEAU.

He Is Said to Be Making Preparations to Secure Free State for an Infant Which Is in Charge of Chatelaine Who Is Established at the Chateau de Larmoy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Truth's Paris correspondent reports that tongues are now busy with the King of Belgium, who is booked to have left Larmoy by the grand gate a few weeks ago to return by a more private entrance, and to be making preparations to secure the empire of Congo for an infant, which is perambulated there under the eyes of the lady whom he has appointed chatelaine.

The morganatic union does not exist in Belgium, and the present dynasty is too young to have formed precedents that might limit the King's choice in taking a second wife. However, there can be no doubt as to His Majesty's unlimited personal power in the Congo Free State.

I described to you not long ago the Chateau de Larmoy and the security it affords for complete privacy. But for the quarrel between the chatelaine and her chef and her statements before a justice of the peace, and to interviewers, there had been no indication of the domestic felicity the chateau shelters. The lady who adorns this residence has appealed against the judgment, which is altogether in favor of the culinary artist, one Garrigue, a very South of France name. The appeal will be heard at Corbeil, and it will be as much as possible confined by counsel for the appellant to technical grounds. Garrigue's bill is thought so reasonable that he has been offered much better places, though not any in which an all but royal state is kept up.

He had but 200 francs ($40) a month—rather meager pay for a chef. His gains on the marketing could not have been great, as he spent but 1200 francs ($240) a month, and he had to go daily to Paris for his supplies.

MISSING MAN JOINS FAMILY.

CINNATI BUSINESS MAN OFFERS NO EXPLANATION.

President of Fabian Manufacturing Company, Who Mysteriously Disappeared in August, Returns from Europe, Where He Says He Spent Several Weeks in Hospital.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Seward Heidelbach, president of the Fabian Manufacturing Company of Cincinnati, manufacturers of women's suits, who mysteriously disappeared from this city August 26, and for information concerning whose whereabouts a reward of $1000 had been offered, arrived from England today on the steamer Lucania. His wife and two friends were at the pier, and he was hurried into a carriage and driven away.

Members of the family said today that, after leaving New York, Mr. Heidelbach went to Philadelphia and Boston, thence to Europe, where he became ill and was obliged to spend several weeks in a hospital.

No explanation was offered for his disappearance, save he felt he had been kept under too close surveillance by physicians and nurses.

On account of Mr. Heidelbach's disappearance, the Fabian Manufacturing Company went into the hands of a receiver September 3.

CIRCUMNAVIGATES.

GIRL MAKES WORLD TRIP.

Miss Curran Has Adventures in Many Lands.

Los Angeles Teacher Brings Rare Flowers Home.

Kindergarten Principles Are Planted in East.

Miss Pauline Curran, a Los Angeles kindergartner, has just stepped foot again on American soil, after a tour which has circled the earth.

An artist and lover of flowers, she gathered star-eyed blossoms in every land where her feet have strayed; she met strange people and queer adventures; she taught the children of the missionaries in one of the most northerly points of the Mikado's kingdom; she visited the kindergartens where the bead-eyed babies of Japan, clad in bright kimonos, learn to interpret the principles of Froebel, and incidentally to sing "Good Morning to the Honorable Sun." Last, but not least, she learned to eat with chop sticks.

Miss Curran was for several years a successful teacher, and a popular worker in the Los Angeles College Settlement, but she felt the wanderlust in her veins; the lure of other lands was upon her, and more than all she heard the East and its temple bells a-calling. Now the salary of a kindergarten teacher in Los Angeles is hardly sufficient to allow for globe trotting, but the plucky California girl was not to be daunted. She dealt in Los Angeles real estate and found the goose that laid the golden egg. Eighteen months ago, with a leave of absence in her pocket, she sailed away to see the cherry blossoms blooming in Japan.

WHERE ROMANCE DWELLS.

There are a number of English schools in Japan, and Miss Curran taught in several places, but found her greatest joy in Sendai, a northern missionary center, and a great native university town. It is also the scene of Onota Watana's fascinating story, "The Heart of Hyacinth." In a little sampan she went out on that wonderful bay of Matsushima, where "Miss Purple Eyes" had gone before her—but past the little pine-clad islands from which the bay takes its name, and along whose shores lie the tombs of those great and famous "Lords of Date."

"Theater Street" in Sendai was a great entertainment to the Los Angeles girl, as well as the Japanese. She attended a performance at one of the theaters, and found her private box heated with a little charcoal stove. Cakes and tea were served during intermision, and Miss Curran thought this a great improvement over the American custom of going out "to see a man" between acts.

Miss Curran found no anti-American sentiment in Japan. She was treated with greatest respect in her travels, either when alone or with a companion. Her greatest difficulty in traveling from a hustling American standpoint was the singular habits of the Japanese, no two of which were set alike.

With a friend she visited in Vladivostok, and then took the Siberian railway and spent sixteen days in crossing that vast extent of Siberian country. She was astonished at the palatial aspect of the trains on this line of travel. They are furnished with libraries, baths and the most luxurious appointments. She and her friend found on that trip how sweet it sounds to be called an angel, even in a language one does not understand.

COMFORTING ANGELS.

An old woman hugging to her heart a poor, pale little baby boarded the train at some dreary, out-of-the-way station. She was taking the little one to the nearest town where a doctor could be found. But death called the precious grandchild and relieved all its earthly ills. Hurriedly the two American girls went to comfort the old Russian woman. They made a little shroud out of their own clothing, and bought food for the weeping survivor, who called them angels and asked all the saints of heaven to have them in keeping. Everywhere in that country of blood and terror, the travelers found the people themselves gentle and full of kindness.

Instead of the stock souvenirs that people bring back from foreign tours, Miss Curran has gathered wild flowers, and when she arrives in Los Angeles about December 1, she will have a collection to show that is absolutely unique, each delicate specimen marking a point in her journey, and fragrant with its associations. The flowers, carefully pressed and preserved, will also be of great botanical interest. There are bits of fern from here and there, so like and yet so unlike our own, the elusive edelweiss of the Alps, and the beautiful blossoms of the Campagna, that Boticelli once loved to paint.

Miss Curran took in all the main points of interest that people usually visit on the continent. In Paris, where she spent three weeks, she and a friend took rooms near the American Girls' Club, where they intended to go for their meals. This club is an interesting institution, located right on the edge of the Latin quarter.

REFERENCE TO EAT.

"What are your references?" was the leading question asked by the polite woman in charge at the club when the newcomers went for their first meal. "References?" they gasped. "That was the first they knew of references being required." Muss Curran remembered a letter of introduction she carried from the Rev. Calvin R. Pattee of Los Angeles to his son, E. E. E. Pattee, at No. 125 Boulevard Mont Parnasse. She showed the letter, and the woman unbent immediately, saying: "Oh, yes, we know Mr. Pattee, he is just round the corner from us." So all went well, and the girls found the club a pleasant center of American life.

They presented the letter to Mr. Pattee, who is one of the art lecturers in the Louvre, and is regarded as an authority on technique. Miss Curran visited at his residence, which is a real old French chateau, full of rare art treasures.

Miss Curran is now in New York City, and after visiting in Chicago and other places will arrive in Los Angeles about the first of next month.

FLOCKING IN BY THOUSANDS.

RAILROAD LINES POUR IN BIG CRUSH OF COLONISTS.

Thirty Hundred Travelers Set Foot on Los Angeles Soil, Coming on Many Special Trains, and Horde Is Expected Today, Tomorrow and Tuesday.

Scenes at the railroad stations yesterday would have done any wandering pessimist a world of good, for he would have seen a total of nearly 3000 new would-be citizens of Southern California filled with the enthusiasm of reaching the goal of their long and varied trips from all parts of the country to participate in the prosperity of Los Angeles and the surrounding country.

At almost every hour of the day some train or section of a train was rolling into a depot, discharging its living freight and piles of baggage, and then pulling out to make room for the next. Schedules were shattered because of the rush and nearly all trains, even the regular ones, were late all the way from thirty minutes to five hours.

As for the baggage, it simply overflowed into the streets and over the sidewalks, while frantic transfer men dug out those pieces for which they held the checks. In fact, it was a busy day all around for the railroad men of Los Angeles terminals and lasted until a late hour last night.

One of the noticeable things about the influx of colonists yesterday was the fact that they all seemed to be well-to-do. They were for the most part representative Americans of all classes, all anxious to get settled as soon as possible, and for this purpose the advertising columns of The Times will be scanned with even more intentness than ever today in a search for rooms and houses to rent, or places for sale.

The trains which left Denver yesterday are due here tomorrow. It is expected that over 4000 colonists will arrive over the Southern Pacific, Santa Fé and Salt Lake. Tuesday will probably be the banner day for arrivals, as eight trains from Kansas City, which left there Friday and yesterday, are scheduled to reach Los Angeles. Then the special trains from Denver, Omaha and via New Orleans by way of the Southern Pacific will get here and the special sections of the regular trains over the Salt Lake, each a special train all by itself, will reach this city.

This rush of colonists at the very last of the season's colonist rate is proving a surprise to railroad men all over the country. Los Angeles and Southern California are looming large in the eyes of traffic managers throughout the United States.

BEWARE OF THE BACKACHE

A NOTED AUTHORITY TELLS WHAT TO DO TO PREVENT SERIOUS KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Gives prescription to take for relief of Kidney disease and says Lame Back and Urinary trouble are the danger signals. Mix this recipe as it is also splendid for Rheumatism.

More people succumb each year to some form of kidney trouble than any other cause. The slightest form of kidney derangement often develops into Bright's kidney disease, diabetes or dropsy. When either of these diseases are suspected the sufferer should at once seek the best medical attention possible. Consult only a good first-class physician, leave patent medicines alone.

There are many of the lesser symptoms of kidney trouble which can be treated at home is stated by a well-known authority. For some of these, such as backache, pain in the region of the kidneys, weak bladder, frequency, (especially at night) painful scalding and other urinary troubles, try the following simple home remedy: Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. These simple ingredients are harmless and can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy and any one can mix them by shaking well in a bottle. The dose for adults is a teaspoonful after each meal and again at bedtime.

There is no better general remedy known to relieve all forms of rheumatism either, because it acts directly upon the kidneys and blood. It cleans the clogged up pores in the kidneys so they can filter and strain from the blood the poisonous uric acid and waste matter which if not eliminated remain in the blood, decompose and settle about the joints and muscular tissues, causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.

Backache is nature's signal notifying the sufferer that the kidneys are not acting properly. "Take care of your kidneys," is now the physician's advice to his patients.

HIS PASSING MOURNED.

Many Attend Funeral Services and Memorial Exercises for Late Prof. George S. Beane.

The funeral services and memorial exercises of the late Dr. George S. Beane, professor of physics and head of the department of electrical engineering at the University of Southern California, were held at the University Methodist Church yesterday afternoon. A large assemblage of college mourners and friends gathered to honor for the last time their beloved professor, and the various resolutions of sympathy and addresses voiced by the different speakers all bore generous testimony to the sterling character and beautiful life of the departed.

Representatives from the faculty of the College of Dentistry, the Y.M.C.A., and the board of trustees of the university were present, and the entire faculty of the College of Liberal Arts occupied a reserved section. The student body also was largely represented, while a goodly number of friends and acquaintances in addition filled the church auditorium.

Prof. W. F. Skeele of the College of Music opened the exercises by rendering in low and plaintive strains that grand selection, Chopin's "Funeral March." Miss Robbins and Miss Letitia Williams then sang in sweet soft notes "Rock of Ages," after which John Nicholson, pastor of the Garvanza Methodist Church, read from the scriptures, followed by prayer by Rev. Alfred Inwood. President G. F. Bovard of the university next spoke of the life and accomplishments of the deceased professor, and later read the resolutions of regret and sympathy from the faculty of the university and from the student body. Rev. Dr. E. A. Healy gave a short sketch of the early life and plans of the professor, and mentioned especially his work at Toronto University, where Dr. Healy knew him personally.

Quite a large number of friends went to Rosedale Cemetery, where the final service was in charge of Dr. Bovard, Dr. Healy and Rev. Inwood. Pallbearers included Messrs. Knoles, Denniston and Nye, from the college faculty, and Messrs. C. J. Lipe, John Douglas Walker and Walter Hoff Seeley, representing the University Masonic Temple, of which the deceased was an active officer.

EASTERN STAR BAZAAR.

The ladies of Loyalty Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, held a bazaar in Blanchard Hall yesterday afternoon, followed by a dance last night. A number of booths were constructed around the sides of the hall, where fancy needlework, candy and other articles were sold, fortunes told, and a number of other schemes worked to innocently part guests from their money. Last night a large number of ladies and gentlemen engaged in the dancing. The proceeds were for the relief fund of the order.

TO BEAUTIFY THEIR DISTRICT.

Charles Mulford Robinson, the landscape architect, will be present at the meeting of the Sunset Boulevard Improvement Association, which will be held tomorrow evening at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on Sunset Boulevard. Mr. Robinson will take part in the deliberations, and will furnish any suggestions desired regarding methods for beautifying the northwestern part of the city. The Temple Street Business Men's Association and the Belmont Heights Improvement Association have been invited to take part in the meeting.

STRUCK BY AUTO.

Louis Jensen, a laborer, living at No. 330 South Alameda street, was run down and seriously injured yesterday afternoon by an automobile driven by C. W. Jargstorff of No. 712 South Broadway. The accident occurred at Third and Rose streets. Jensen was riding a bicycle at the time. Jargstorff placed the injured man in his automobile and took him home. Later Jensen became ill, and was sent to the Receiving Hospital. It is feared a blood-clot has formed on his brain, and this may result seriously.

THE STORY OF CARBON.

The California Academy of Sciences offers an interesting and valuable entertainment on next Monday evening in Symphony Hall, at 8 o'clock, under the title, "The Story of Carbon." Prof. W. L. Watts, formerly of the State Mining Bureau, will speak on the various forms carbon assumes in the inorganic world; Prof. J. Z. Gilbert of the Los Angeles High School will treat of carbon as an essential element in all forms of plant and animal life, and William H. Knight will speak of it from an astronomical standpoint.

THE IMMIGRATION PROBLEM.

The first of the series of "Current Events" lectures, which has been arranged by the Educational Committee of the Young Women's Christian Association, will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Prof. Tully C. Knoles of the University of Southern California will be the speaker, and his topic will be, "A Discussion of the Immigration Problem."

ROMAN VIRTUES.

THE SORELLE SARTO.

Something of Home Life of the Pope's Sisters—Live in Seclusion Near Vatican and Find Joy in Little Offices for Their Brother.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"THERE go the Sorelle Sarto," said a Roman monsignor to a group of waiting Americans in e of the Vatican antechambers one y last month. "They are going into e garden and when the Holy Father s finished his work for the after- on he will join them, and they will lk together and chat and eat some the peaches and grapes. Sometimes ey sing the old Venetian songs, the ndoliers' ballads, for the Holy Father es those old melodies, and now he ars them only when he and his sis- rs are together."

Maria Sarto. The Pope's sister

Margherita Sarto, Mother of Pope Pius X.

ree elderly Italian women passed black-robed as nuns and wearing inevitable veil partially concealing r features. They had been to make r week-day visit to their brother, affairs of state had kept him ned in the office. By and by he ld join them in the garden. So passed through the inner court, known to all suppliants for papal ences, and went down the stairs h lead into the vast inclosure d the Vatican gardens. Presently Americans were called up higher, after going through numerous nbers gorgeous in crimson silk, came to the small audience cham- where the Supreme Pontiff receives ial visitors. He is a benign and le pontiff, this Pope, who is the hundred and sixty-fourth succes- of St. Peter, the vicar of Christ arth and the bearer of many other s of tremendous significance in tual and temporal realms.

MAN BEHIND THE PONTIFF.

t in the midst of the awe which y one must feel in the presence of ugust a personage, came the vision n old man sitting in the garden his sisters and singing the songs is exiled home. That is the pic- of Pius X which must appeal most bly to those who study the per- l side of great men. Somehow an pontiffs have always seemed so from all human ties. One could ly imagine them in a domestic en- ment. Pope Pius X is the glorious ption. Visitors to Rome, and es- lly Americans, feel as interested e sisters as they do in queens or en associated with courts and the rnment of nations. Needless to they are not permitted to satisfy curiosity, unless they have per- l introductions.

e Sorelle Sarto in their modest of apartments in the Piazzo Rus- cci, just at the foot of the grand nade of Bernini, guard their pri- as carefully as the Queen in palace on the Quirinal Hill. They as attendants two faithful lay rs from a near-by convent, and unauthorized visitor can hope to e their vigilance. These sisters laid aside their conventual at- and are robed like the general an house servant. Twice a week go to the Vatican, always on lay, to hear the mass which the iff says in his private chapel, and ome appointed time during the . They avoid publicity in every ner possible, going and coming out the slightest ceremony and nking from strangers with the ity of country children.

e can understand the depth of acter in the pontiff by a very t knowledge of his sisters. All world knows how they begged the title of "Countess" should not in accordance with papal tradition be conferred on them, and how they love to be known simply as the sisters of the Holy Father. Their door plate bears the simple inscription, "The Sorelle Sarto," and within reigns the simplicity which their illustrious brother has evolved for his living-rooms out of the magnificent apartments in the Vatican. Their sitting-room is an imposing apartment, with pale green walls and ceiling, and a somewhat pretentious suite of furniture, relics of the former grandeur of the historic palace. But the sisters, like all Italian women of the humbler classes, divide their time into three parts—one for labor, one for prayer, and one for sleep.

WANTED TO MEND POPE'S LINEN.

The sisters never think of such a thing as sitting down with their hands folded. They invariably carry scissors at their sides and wear working aprons. In their first Roman days they begged to be allowed to mend their brother's linen and to perform those little offices for the man they love, which make up the happiness of all good women. They had always attended to these things since the brother had one by one taken the sisters from their humble home in Riese to act as his home keeper. But the Vatican etiquette is strict, and the honor of doing such august services as mending the pontiff's apparel is one of the perquisites of a powerful religious order. So Pius X followed the rule of his predecessors, to the deep sorrow of his sisters. But they find abundant other things to do, and they delight in mending the vestments or sewing for the poor.

Rosa is the eldest of the pontiff's three unmarried sisters, and is a personage of much importance in the household. She is very fond of her young niece, Ermingilda Parolin, the daughter of the oldest of the six sisters, Theresa, who married the groceryman of Riese. Ermingilda spends much time in Rome, and she gowns herself very modishly, and is learning French and music at the Sacred Heart Convent. Doubtless her good aunts hope that she will marry suitably, a man who can give her more comforts than they or their great brother knew. "He gave us all our marriage portions," said one of the sisters, Luisa, who still resides at Salzano, in talking of her brother shortly after his election, "and when it became apparent that Rosa and Anna and Maria did not have the vocation to marry, he brought them to his home and has cared for them tenderly ever since."

HE IS "BEPPI" TO THEM.

To his sisters the Pontiff is only Beppi, the name he loves best, for so his mother used to call him. He is still the devoted brother to these old women, to whom he seems almost divine. He tells them all the things about his visitors which he thinks will interest them. He gives them such personal presents given him that will be appropriate in their humble home. A bishop from the Rocky Mountains recently presented the Pontiff with a magnificent bearskin rug, and this handsome gift occupies the place of honor in the sitting-room of his sisters. He gave them also his most cherished possession, which they show only most reverently and on special occasion—the jeweled and gorgeously illuminated album, which contains all the signatures of the Venetians, sent after the election. Over the mantel in the sitting-room is a portrait done in oils of the little peasant mother, she who worked at dressmaking in order to make the extra money required to keep her talented boy at school. A similar picture hangs in the Pontiff's bed chamber.

The Sorelle Sarto use bright red handkerchiefs, and their ways of living are as plain as when they lived in Riese. They have a horror of any kind of extravagance, and only their brother's command induced them to keep the lay sisters to attend to their housework. They should have preferred to do it all themselves, "for," explained Maria, the youngest and most modern-looking of the sisters, "our brother has less to give us now, for has he not the poor of the entire world to think about? Before it was only Venice."

If one is so privileged as to see the ruler of the Catholic world in his private apartments in the Vatican, many traits of his sisters are apparent. On his desk lie a pair of steel-rimmed spectacles. Dozens of personages have offered him gold-rimmed glasses, but he clings to his steel spectacles, the friends of his early manhood. He has had the lense renewed several times to meet exigencies, but he refuses such an extravagance as gold affairs. His snuffbox is not the gold and jeweled affair which historic descriptions of such articles would lead one to expect. It is a battered affair of tortoise shell, the gift of a dead friend, and he used it for twenty years. On the Pontiff's desk, a wide, plain affair of dark wood, stands a little bottle of sand, for in this primitive way does he dry his ink. His pens are quills, and his inkwell, of brass and crystal, is quite within the reach of the most modest clerk.

DISCONCERTS THE VATICAN OFFICIALS.

Just in front of the Pope stands a statuette of the Cure d'Ares, that venerable French parish priest whom the head of the church reveres above some more pretentious saints and doctors of the faith. He never fails to speak of his admiration for the good Cure if he sees the eye of his visitor wandering to his ornament. He rates the parish priest highest in his estimate of the working body of clerics. Just behind the desks in the Pope's office are some cabinets, and in these he keeps little gifts, which he makes specially favored guests. Invariably when he wants these souvenirs he walks briskly around his desk, and swings open the doors for himself. This habit of waiting on himself is rather disconcerting to the Vatican officials, who are always on hand to perform these little offices. His gifts are modest, always being mosaics from the Vatican manufactories, medals, pictures, and rosaries which he has blessed. In making a gift he invariably requires the recipient's promise to say a daily prayer for him. He is quite insistent about these prayers. A well-known Sulpitian priest recently a resident in Rome, purchased 500 small photographs of the Holy Father, which he took with him to have blessed at his farewell audience. The Pontiff was quite interested in the fact that the priest intended these as gifts for his countless students and friends in every part of the country. "Tell your friends to whom you give these pictures," he admonished, "to put them in their prayer books and when they see my face to say a little prayer for me—to say a prayer every time they look upon my pictured face, for I need prayers always and many of them."

Just as simple as the office, eminently a working office, piled high with letters and neatly folded papers, is the tiny chapel where the Pope says his daily mass. In the office there are no decorations and few pictures. The chapel is so tiny that forty people feel themselves uncomfortably crowded, and the chamberlains rarely allow more than half that number the privilege of attending the holy father's mass. The room is lighted by one window, curtained in cream lace and red silk brocade hangings, like all the others in the suite. On week days only the chaplain attends the mass, but on Sunday there is more ceremony. The secretaries and others close to the person of the Pontiff assist at the service. At the conclusion of the mass Pius seats himself on the left of the altar and hears a mass of thanksgiving said by his chaplain. After this he has his frugal breakfast.

NEVER TAKE AMEAL WITH HIM.

It is often said in Rome that his sisters share this meal with him, but this is not the fact. Frequently the Sorelle Sarto have the simple Italian breakfast served them in a small dining-room with the chaplain. They have never taken a meal with their august brother since his elevation to the papal throne, a feature of his rank which is not an unmixed joy for them. At the Vatican it is current gossip that the holy father, on his elevation, tried not to shock the susceptibilities of the Roman court, and he observed the papal etiquette requiring the Pontiff to take his meals alone. But after three days he was forced to ask concessions. He simply could not enjoy a mouthful. Now his two secretaries, Venetians of long and tried friendship, Mgrs. Bressan and Pescini, sit with him, and all three chat and laugh like schoolboys. The sisters in Palazzo Rusticucci sit down to their dinner at exactly the hour when the Pontiff is dining. This, at least, they can do, and they invariably tell him through their 'phone what they have for dinner, and frequently they inquire if he has enjoyed his meal, and if the chef is up to their mark in cooking the dishes which he used to like in Venice. The second sister, Anna, is a famous cook, and many a dish is smuggled into the Vatican kitchen which has been prepared across the way in the small rooms in Palazzo Rusticucci. But the brother is seldom in that secret, and his good sister finds her reward when she asks him about his meal, if he mentions the dish and remarks, as he sometimes does, that it was almost as good as if it were prepared in Venice or Riese.

TELEPHONE A COMFORT.

The Pontiff is fond of talking over the phone, and a day seldom passes without a little chat with his family in Riese and with some of the clergy in Venice. It is his one solace for not seeing his beloved Venice to hear the voice of his people. Last year a Venetian prelate, knowing the Pope's preference for the gondolier songs, ordered a specially constructed music box in which all the street ballads were finely executed. But, like all those who love good music, this arrangement did not appeal to the Pope's artistic sense. Gondoliers' songs in this form, he remarked, was like canned fruit—good, if the fresh is not procurable. He preferred not to hear them at all if not in the form he relished. The music box, however, is a comfort to the Sorelle Sarto, and it takes a prominent part in the entertainment of their friends.

But the chief feature of the sisters' rooms is their collection of paintings, photographs, and sketches of their brother—their great brother. For there was a younger brother who spent much time with the Pontiff and who made the somewhat neglected grounds of the Vatican bloom like the hanging gardens of Babylon. A beautifully tinted photograph representing the pontiff stepping into the gondola, when he set out on that last momentous journey to Rome, hangs in a gorgeous frame over the sofa in the sitting room. A transparency of the Pope giving his first blessing to the public hangs in the bedroom of the eldest sister. Each sister has her own little collection, each the gift of her brother and each having his autograph. They will descend to certain nieces and nephews and cousins, according to the wish of the Pope. All his gifts to his sisters are destined ultimately for his nephews, for it is a foregone conclusion that a Pope who gives to the poor all and more than he can spare from the ready money of the Vatican, cannot make large bequests to his family.

HER ONLY VANITY.

Anna is proudest of an old watch which her brother used as Bishop of Mantua, and which was replaced by another when he went to Venice. This watch with a gold chain is the only vanity of which this sister of the Pontiff is guilty. It will go to the eldest nephew. The sisters speak only their own tongue, the Trevisan dialect, though they have learned the Roman dialect, and, of course, were familiar with that of Venice. Their intercourse with the world is much circumscribed even in Rome, where the ways of Riese are as the ways of foreigners. One of the lay sisters who attends them speaks French and a few words of English. But conversation with the Pope's sisters, unless one comes from their country, is limited. They possess that elegance and stateliness of manner which seems the inheritance of the most humble Italian.

Those who have talked with them familiarly say that they barely comprehend the greatness of their brother, that he is the Pope, who is to restore all things in Christ, and to reform the church along the most practical lines attempted for many a century. They take his position as the natural consequence of his grand virtues and exalted learning. It should be an encouragement to all youths wrestling over Caesar and the classics to know that the Pope's sisters attribute his transcendant piety, his broad humanism, his goodness of heart, his learning, and his wisdom all to the fact that "he was from the very beginning so good a Latin scholar."

PARASITES REMOVED MANY AN OPERATION SAVED BY MY SIMPLE TREATMENT

Stomach and Bowel Troubles, Convulsion

Tape Worms, Stomach, Intestinal, Thread Worms, and all other parasites which infest the human body, which are the cause of so many Chronic Troubles, can be removed without inconvenience of fasting.
Worms afflict all ages of the human family, from the oldest person down to the youngest infant. These pests kill more children, directly or indirectly, than teething, scarlet fever and croup combined.

Children and grown people, when troubled with worms, have more or less of these symptoms—sallow complexion, with white or livid circles around the mouth and eyes; whole or partial loss of sight; lower and upper lids are sometimes swollen; unnatural looking tongue, covered with whitish-looking fur, others drooling from the mouth, with a foul, offensive smelling breath; rubbing or picking the nose; restless at night and grinding of teeth; at times very feverish, ending in cold sweats, which will go and come, accompanied with great thirst; the cheeks flushed, then again pale as death; the stomach hard and swollen, sometimes sore to the touch; bowels irregular, first obstinately costive, then at times ending with gnawing or short, cramping, colicky pains and a looseness of the bowels; also discharges of slime and mucus; tickling cough, changeable appetite, sickness of stomach and vomiting; convulsions, fits or spasms; nervous affections, and much general languor.

Passing of Mucus Is An Important Symptom

Dr. Mettochnikoff of the Pasteur Institute declared in Paris lately that the taking of vermifuge medicine had been sadly neglected by the people of late, that observation had demonstrated not less than forty-five species of dangerous microbes domiciled in the large intestines, and that to them most diseases were due.

In the past six months I have cured over 500 cases of so-called stomach trouble, and have absolutely cured eight cases of epilepsy. I diagnose and tell you whether you have any of these parasites or not. All charges are moderate.

MUSICIAN PASSES BEYOND.

Talented Violinist of Riverside Dies in This City After Illness of Short Duration.

Charles G. Gorenflo, a well-known violinist and leader of the Glenwood Hotel orchestra for the past five years, died Friday morning at the Westlake Hospital in this city after a brief illness of one week. He had come up to Los Angeles for the grand opera season, when a trifling ailment developed into meningitis, and he passed away.

Charles R. Gerenfle, talented violinist of Riverside, who died in this city Friday.

He had been engaged in teaching every winter in Riverside and near-by towns, and numbered his friends by the score. The regular visitors at the Glenwood this winter will feel a sharp pang of regret when they hear of his passing, for music was the heart of his life, and his violin had spoken a language of exquisite beauty and consolation to people from every part of the earth.

His death seemed especially sad, as he had planned to go to Switzerland at the conclusion of the present season for two years of study under one of the master violinists of the world.

His body was sent to his former home in Erie, Pa., for interment.

HENRY WINS HONORS.

Defeats Gowan at Tennis in Three Straight Sets and Plays in His Best Form.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] T. C. Henry today won the title of singles tennis champion of the university, when he defeated A. J. Gowan in three straight sets by scores of 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. Henry played in the best form he has ever shown here, and forced the play throughout the match. He was very accurate and forced Gowan into the back court and kept him there, cutting off his returns at the net. The winner showed up especially well in his serving, sending the balls over fast and accurately, and nearly always made the first ball good. He has a good chop stroke, which he used to advantage, as Gowan was forced to play from the back of his court.

The defender of the title did not seem quite up to his best form, though. Henry's extreme accuracy kept him on the defensive and prevented any spectacular work. Gowan's old backhand stroke was used in a way that brought cheers from the spectators. Both men are from Los Angeles. They represented the Cardinal in last year's intercollegiate match, Henry winning his singles match and the team winning the doubles.

Rich virgin soil, bountiful water, glorious climate, uplifting scenery and bumper fruit crops spell ease and independence for you at Beaumont. Beaumont fruits hold the world's bronze medal accorded to Thomas F. Mellen, an humble farmer of Beaumont, who carried off the honor against the whole world at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago for the best dried Hungarian prunes. Pears, apples, prunes and all other fruits that grow in this zone, reach their greatest perfection at Beaumont. Large, juicy grapes, rich in true alcohol are grown upon the high altitudes, attaining a strength and flavor surpassed nowhere else in California. Fifteen hundred acres of vineyard land await the call of the viticulturist at Beaumont, besides vast areas of fruit land.

HEALTH AS WELL AS WEALTH.

Hundreds of old residents testify to the healthful climatic advantages of Beaumont. At an elevation of 2560 feet, the mountain airs are laden with an aromatic balm from their vine-clad slopes. Only eighty-one miles east, the sea breeze sweeps the area by night. Serious cases of asthma, bronchitis, catarrh and other pulmonary troubles have been entirely removed by residence there. The situation alone is a dream of landscape beauty and a constant source of inspiration. Beautiful snow-capped mountains tower above it to the north and east. Rippling mountain streams murmur down from rock to canyon, to find their level in the wooded valley beyond the growing city.

Present owners purpose conserving all the water going to waste for years. Contract was let yesterday for the first unit of a great water system. The work was awarded to F. K. Simonds & Co. of Los Angeles. It provides for 35,000 feet of piping. The work will begin immediately and the contractor promises to have the first carload of pipe on the ground within the next few days.

Marvelous Opportunities in the Rejuvenated City

ITS RAILROAD FACILITIES ARE SUPERIOR.

It is eighty-one miles east of Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific Railway. At the apex of the grade, divisional facilities must be maintained there forever. The monthly wages of seventy-five men, employed there now, aggregate $6000. New roundhouse and other improvements now contemplated will cost the company $50,000, the great bulk of which will be spent there. Every business in the city will be benefited by this expenditure, as as the wage scale will be permanently increased also, this great revenue will vitalize the commercial interests for all time to come. The growth of the country districts, now that the bank has deeded Beaumont and its surroundings to the present company, will be rapid and substantial. Buyers are coming from every section of Southern California and letters of inquiry are daily received from all sections of the country throughout the North, East and South.

THE DEMAND FOR CITY LOTS IS UNPRECEDENTED.

Every calling and business may find opportunity there now. New business and mercantile openings are being established. Many Los Angeles business men and others have appreciated the openings made possible by the reawakening of Beaumont. Nearly every avenue of business will require representation there. No matter what your line may be, you should visit Beaumont and see for yourself the opportunity it presents.

BIG EXCURSION GOES TODAY.

The tickets were all disposed of several days ago, far in advance. There will be another excursion next Thursday. Come in and see about it at once.

NOTICE TO ALL INTENDING PURCHASERS.

Please do not forget that, as announced a week ago, the advance in prices made necessary by the cost of the water system as well as by the fact that prices at Beaumont were out of all proportion to the real values of the property.

WILL TAKE EFFECT THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1907, AT 10 P. M.

All who have been quoted prices should decide upon their selection by that date. As a concession, in view of present conditions, parties who are financially inconvenienced and have not the cash at hand, will be granted ten to fifteen days' option on payment of 5 per cent. of the purchase price.

This is your real opportunity if you can but realize it.

There is only one Beaumont and there never will be another. It is just like dropping down the opportunities of twenty years ago among the people of today with all the present advantages and at the old, old prices.

MERRY SEASON FOR SOCIETY.

Mrs. Roosevelt a Hostess and Guest of Honor.

Foreign Diplomats Prominent in Festivities.

Bon Voyage Parties Numerous, Also Weddings.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—October went merrily out to the tune of wedding bells and invitations to theater parties at the nation's capital.

Mrs. Roosevelt set the fashion by being both a hostess and the guest of honor at a box party the same week. Others beginning the fall season in this way are the Russian Ambassador and Baroness Rosen, Capt. and Mrs. Hooker, who have as their special guests at this time the latter's sister, Mrs. Leonard Wood; Admiral and Mrs. Dewey, who are entertaining Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Ludlow; Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Newberry, who have Bishop and Mrs. Scadding of Portland, Or., and Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Richardson of Pittsfield, N. J., as house guests, and the Swedish Minister and Mrs. Lagercrantz, who sail this week to spend some time in Stockholm.

During their stay in Sweden, Minister Lagercrantz will present their eldest daughter at court, preliminary to introducing her to society in Washington, later in the winter.

ANOTHER DEBUTANTE.

Baroness Elizabeth Rosen, daughter of the Russian Ambassador and Baroness, is also nearing the "coming-out age," which means that her parents will soon be returning to St. Petersburg, in order that she may follow the Old World custom and be presented at the court of her native land before making a formal boy to society in a foreign clime.

Baroness Elizabeth has developed into womanhood since coming to America three years ago, and has entered into the spirit of the age with all the zest of her American classmates.

She speaks choice English and is the champion girl swimmer in Washington social circles. She is just the age of Miss Ethel Roosevelt, and their friends are wondering if history will repeat itself to the point of creating as close a friendship between them as existed between the latter's elder sister and Mlle. Cassini daughter of Baron Rosen's predecessor as the Czar's representative in this country.

This fondness of the daughters was one of the sensations of the day, and lead to an intimacy between the White House and the Russian Embassy, that was not good for Japan's peace of mind, while she was preparing for the Russo-Japanese War.

MISS ROOT'S WEDDING.

The Russian embassy was at that time established in the house on Scott Circle, now occupied by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Elihu Root.

It has an outlook on two of the city's finest avenues, and that it is spacious enough for even a semi-official wedding company, such as will assemble there November 27 for the marriage of Miss Root and Lieut. U. S. Grant, U.S.A., was amply proved on the occasion for which it was leased by Ambassador Cassini—i. e., the marriage of his daughter's chum, Mlle. Pavlow, of St. Petersburg, and the Russian Minister to China.

The festivities attending this marriage were the crowning social successes in the picturesque career of "La Petite" Countess in Washington, and will be the standard for similar events here for some time to come.

That the union was one of convenience rather than of affection is another story, but it will no sooner be forgotten by the polite world invited to the ceremony than will be the gorgeousness of the Greek marriage service then celebrated in Washington for th first time, or the charm of the occasion as a social event.

WHITE HOUSE DINNERS.

The President had scarcely unpacked his grip and shaken hands with the men in his private office after his trip South and West before he and Mrs. Roosevelt renewed their hospitable custom of entertaining a few friends daily at luncheon.

Among their first guests were the Japanese Ambassador and Viscountess Aoki, invited to meet whom were Miss Elizabeth Oliver, daughter of Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Oliver, whose engagement to F. K. Stevens of New York has just been announced; Miss Maude Adams, the original "Peter Pan," and United States Civil Service Commissioner John H. McIlhenny of Louisiana.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt also invited a small company of intimate friends to hear the General Staff Band of the Mexican army, which came to Washington, after spending some weeks at the Jamestown Exposition.

The occasion was as informal as anything at the White House could be, and as tea was served after the concert, the ladies of the inner circle enjoyed their first opportunity to exchange greetings over the "nation's cups" since the return of Mrs. Roosevelt from Oyster Bay. It also proved a chance to compare travel-notes with Mrs. and Miss Root, and to extend many good wishes to the latter for her marriage to Lieut. Grant, the date of which had just been announced.

MOST TRAVELED WOMEN.

Next to Mrs. Root, the most traveled woman in the Cabinet until the return of Mrs. Taft, is Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, wife of the Postmaster-General, who has visited every European country and lived in two of them—Italy and Russia—as the wife of America's Ambassador.

With her two daughters, the Misses Alice and Julia, Mrs. Meyer is now established in Washington for the winter, and indications point to a lively race between her and Mrs. "Jimmie" Garfield for leadership as a Cabinet hostess. The palm is now accorded Mrs. Victor Metcalf, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who has ever been popular in officialdom, since her advent here when her husband represented the Third California District in Congress.

In these days for changes in the diplomatic corps, farewells are being said on both sides of the Atlantic, and soon new faces will be seen in the haunts of the diplomats' family. Maj. Von Korner, the German military attaché at Washington, and Mme. Von Korner are among those whose regret at leaving friends here is softened by the fact that their going away means that a promotion is in store for the former, who, upon arriving in Berlin, will be placed on the general staff of the Kaiser's army. Capt. Von Livonius, his successor, like Maj. Korner, will be accredited to both the United States and Mexico.

The Korners came to this country soon after their marriage about two years ago and have since occupied a prominent place in official society. Among those giving them farewell entertainment was Mrs. J. Franklin Bell, wife of the United States Chief of Staff, who gave them a dinner of fourteen covers at the Chevy Chase Club. In the absence of Gen. Bell, who is at the Muldoon farm, Mrs. Bell was assisted in receiving by her cousin and house guest, Miss Field of Chicago.

Consul-General Bonzon of France and Harvey H. Wentworth of the American colony in Buenos Ayres are the most distinguished visitors of the week, not included in the long list of Masons attending the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite for the southern jurisdiction of the United States.

During his stay in Washington M. Benzon is the guest of the French Embassy, where a dinner and luncheon were given in his honor early in the week by Ambassador and Madame Jusserand. He was also entertained at the White House.

The legation of Salvador is established at a local hotel, and there the Salvadorean Minister has recently been entertaining Señor Gallagos and Señor Roderiquez, who were delegates with him to the peace conference of the Central American republics. Washington, in general, is pleased with this distinguished trio, and heartily believes that if more of their countrymen were of their type the world would not so frequently be entertained with accounts of revolutions in Central America.

A PRETTY WEDDING.

One of the prettiest weddings of the month took place on Wednesday at the home of Secretary and Mrs. Charles D. Wolcott, when her sister, Miss Sydney Stevens, became the bride of Harry S. Williston of Northampton, Mass. The ceremony, performed by Rev. Dr. Eccleston of Baltimore, was witnessed only by a small company of relatives and intimate friends, but was followed by a large receptionw hcih enabled the circle of the bride's family acquaintance in official, scientific and resident circles to congratulate the young couple.

Miss Gertrude Brown, daughter of the late Sevellon and Mrs. Brown, followed the custom of many autumn brides, and chose Saturday, the wedding day of our grandmothers, for her marriage. Miss Brown is a member of the famous Brown family, whose record for the year is "three weddings, a christening and an opera." She was given in marriage by her brother, Phelps Brown, at whose wedding to Miss Catherine Cullom Ridgeley she was a bridesmaid last Thursday, and her fiancé, George Lewis Huntress, Jr., of New York, was an usher.

The Congressional set will have a bride this year in the person of Mrs. T. Eugene Harding, whose wedding to Representative-elect Harding was a recent society event in Middletown, O., witnessed by many people prominent in Washington during the season. Mrs. Harding will succeed Mrs. James E. Campbell in the Ohio delegation, her husband having defeated ex-Gov. Campbell at the last regular election in the Third Ohio District, and being both young and rich, she may be counted upon to keep up her end of the social scale, with her friend, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, for a coach when necessary.

"KID" BERRY DIES.

Young Pugilist Who Shot Himself Succumbs to Injury—Expressed Sorrow for Act.

Frederick ("Kid") Berry, aged 21 years, the young pugilist, who attempted suicide Wednesday morning by shooting himself through the stomach, died at the Clara Barton Hospital at 9 o'clock last night.

He was conscious from the time of his injury and bitterly regretted his act. Opinion as to his real condition was kept from him, and Berry talked cheerfully of what he intended to do when he should recover.

"I wanted to be a prize fighter," he said yesterday. "I wanted to get to the head of the business, but I fell down. Instead of working myself up, slowly gaining knowledge of the game as I went, I was used as a chopping block for prize fighters. I was beaten horribly many times, the blows on my head hurt me very much. Finally, everything semed to look different to me, and I became despondent. Then it was that I thought to rid myself of all the pains in my head and of all the rest of my troubles. So I shot myself. I am sorry I did it, but it is too late to be sorry now."

Berry said his elder brother committed suicide several years ago in New York. The brother was a contractor and failed to deliver a contract in proper shape. He shot away the top of his head.

Castle Building.

We wandered down the deep ravine
When sunset fires were redly glowing,
And all the vale with purple sheen
And golden smokes was overflowing.
The mountain slopes were still ablaze,
The tree-tops burned like waving torches,
And rainbow arys of rosy haze
Were flushing all the woodland porches.

Beyond we saw the sunset skies,
With gates, and walls, and turrets builded,
Embattled piles that semed to rise,
Tier after tier, with glory gilded.
Oh, look, my love! what mansions bright!
How rich and grand each climbing story!
Look up, my love! I'll build tonight,
For you and me, a House of Glory!

So, hand in hand, we rested still,
And upward looked through sunset splendor;
So, heart in heart, in loving thrill,
Grew mute beneath the glamour tender.
And thus we built, with painted mist,
Our castles grand, from floor to coping,
Until the last low sunbeam kissed
The gay ravine, and left us—groping.

Ah me, my love! the darkness falls
Full soon to shroud our brightest dreaming;
And golden roofs and crystal walls
Are based too oft on cloudy seeming;
But, hand in hand, and heart with heart,
We twain abide the twilight hoary,
And wait until the shadows part
That hide from us our House of Glory.

GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Hubert Henry Davies has hit it off again; there is no doubt of that. You know all about Davies, of course. He is the young Anglo-American dramatist who learned his trade in the United States and won his spurs there, and who is known to fame as the author of "Cousin Kate," "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace" and "Cynthia."

Now, after an interval of almost two years, he gives us another sparkling little play, "The Mollusc," which positively captivated the first-night audience at the Criterion, this week, and is sure to be seen in America sooner or later. Sir Charles Wyndham, who has produced it, tells me that his plans are uncertain, but if he decides to cross the Atlantic again this winter it almost certainly will be with "The Mollusc," which gives him and his leading woman, Mary Moore, even better chances than they had in "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace." They were playing the last-named piece in the United States, it will be remembered, when the veteran actor and former surgeon in the American army was knocked down by a cable car and compelled to cancel his tour.

Should Wyndham decide not to take "The Mollusc" to America, however, it certainly will not be because of a too heavy salary list, for the newest Davies company contains exactly four parts. It is just about the shortest cast on record for a three-act play, but this is emphatically a case of much in little.

What, by the way, is a "mollusc?" It proves to be a kind of jelly fish, which as the man from Colorado (not Missouri) in Davies's play explains, "clings obstinately to its rock and expends a vast deal of energy in resisting the pressure of the waves." Nothing moves the mollusc's ingrained passivity, and in this respect it is resembled strikingly by Mrs. Baxter, the heroine of this new "comedy of four." Limpet-like, this lady sticks to her sofa or bed, and her entourage one and all find that it is easier to give in to her than to combat her. Even her energetic brother, fresh from the "States," who is determined to wake her into action is worsted throughout two acts, and only in the last scores a point. Then he succeeds in making Mrs. Baxter jealous of her pretty governess (who really is engaged to him) and thus rouses her to a temporary activity. "Once a mollusc, always a mollusc," however, and at the finish Tom Kemp gives up his sister's reformation; goes away with his bride, and leaves the future domestic economy of the Mollusc's home to take care of itself.

Truth to tell, the plot of this comedy is difficult to put on paper; there is so little of it. The young playwright's triumph lies in the cleverness of his "lines" and the subtle study of the Mollusc herself; even a defter study than he gave us in "Mrs. Gorringe." Mary Moore has had no such opportunity since "The Tyranny of Tears," which, by the bye, "The Mollusc" somewhat resembles. Wyndham too, as the philosopher from Colorado, has a part after his own heart, and both these artists are admirable. If they take "The Mollusc" to America, they will score a big hit; if not, there are its parts in view for four fortunate American players. And in any event, heavy royalties for a young dramatist who must have taken a rabbit's foot away with him when he left America.

Aside from Davies, the old stagers in the playwriting business over here are rather in the background just now, the limelight of popular interest being focused instead on a group of brand new dramatists. Prominent among them are two who need no introduction to American readers, both of them, Julie Opp and Robert Barr, being generally claimed as products of the United States, though that claim is not wholly justified. Neither the actress nor the novelist is in London, at present, and details regarding their respective contributions to dramatic literature must come later, but oddly enough they have found a common producer in Martin Harvey, and will be given, one in front of the other, in Dublin next month.

Barr's play is called "The Conspirator," and has been written in collaboration with Lewis Ransom. It is in four acts, and will have Miss Opp's piece as a curtain raiser, the title of the latter being "The House of Pierre." Its scene is laid in France, and there are parts for both Harvey and his wife, but no further particulars are given in the official communication sent me.

Of the other new dramatists who are to the fore, just now, perhaps the most interesting is Edward Garnett, the young author of "The Breaking Point," by reason of the tussle he has been having with the British Stage Censor. That egregious person we have heard little since he distinguished himself by forbidding "The Mikado," but feeling has been aroused against him once more and indignation at the autocratic power which he wields, owing to the glaring inconsistency of his action in the case of "The Breaking Point." This time, Mr. Redford's victim has not taken his medicine in silence, but has appealed to Caesar by publishing in book form the piece which the Haymarket management was restrained from producing. And though "The Breaking Point" unquestionably deals with a delicate subject—the subject of an unmarried girl who, fearing that she is to become a mother, destroys herself—the treatment is lofty and dignified, which cannot be said of the handling of a similar theme in a piece by Thomas Hall Caine, which the Censor approved and which is now packing the Lyceum.

From another new dramatist has come "Irene Wycherley," the piece at the Kingsway," which has divided the London critics so hopelessly. Anthony P. Wharton is the name which appears on the play bills, but this is said to be a nom de plume, and the author is described rather vaguely as holding a responsible position in the commercial life of Dublin." Certain it is, however that there is power in many of the scenes of his new play, with which Lena Ashwell reöpened the Kingsway, though many reviewers condemned the piece flat-footedly because of its brutality.

[illegible] much of "Irene Wycherley" [illegible] is, but it seems to have [illegible] notwithstanding and may be [illegible] by Lena Ashwell when next she [illegible] her luck on the other side of the Atlantic. The story is of a wife [illegible] beast of a husband. He has [illegible] her, and she has left him, [illegible] a weal on her face, but she [illegible] that he has been injured in a [illegible] accident and thus is induced [illegible] back to him again. It proves, [illegible] that the man has been blinded [illegible] terribly scarred and that his natural brutality has increased ten-fold. [illegible] wife shrinks from his caresses and [illegible] he invites an old mistress of [illegible] the man who has married her [illegible] ignorance of her past to [illegible] his house while his wife is [illegible]

[illegible] a tragedy is inevitable. The [illegible], discovers who the woman [illegible] the woman's husband discovers the relations that have existed between her and Wycherley. He had [illegible] suspicious before; had, indeed, [illegible] responsible for the "accident." [illegible] he makes no mistake. He [illegible] in Africa and holds to the [illegible] an eye for an eye. He shoots [illegible] lover and then himself, and the play ends. Norman McKinnell, [illegible] Miss Ashwell in America [illegible] "The Shu[illegible]ite" and played the [illegible] taken [illegible] part of Wycherley [illegible] Kingsway and gives a powerful performance. The star herself rarely has done anything better than her Irene Wycherley, whom she makes a creature of real flesh and blood. Thus her opening venture at her new theater looks like a success, and she is not likely to need her American plays, "Clothes" and "The Under Current," for some time to come.

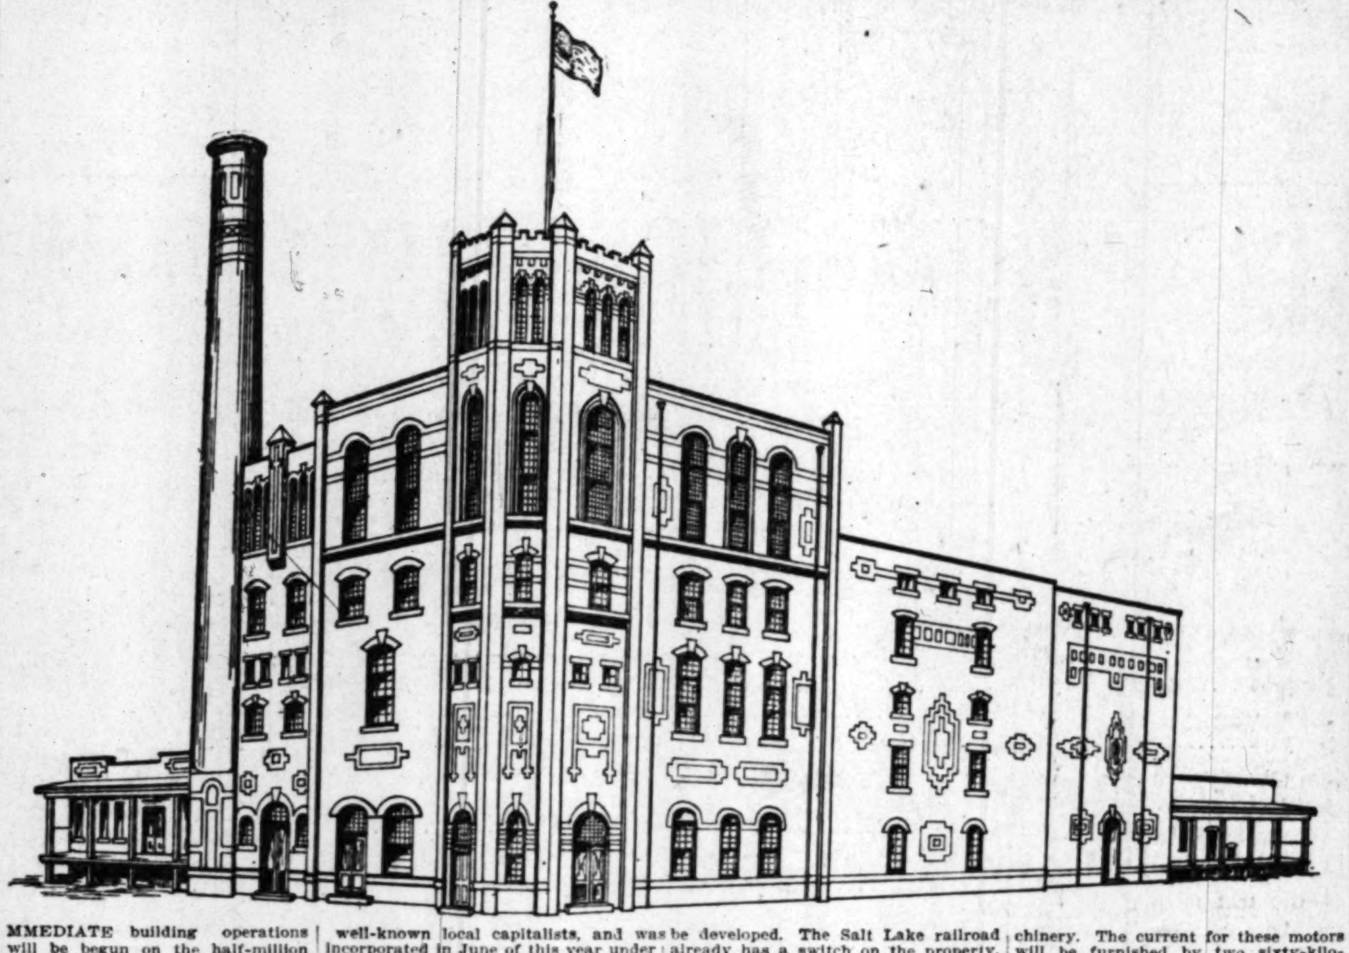
DUQUESNE BREWERY PLANT WILL REPRESENT A LARGE INVESTMENT.



IMMEDIATE building operations will be begun on the half-million dollar plant of the Duquesne Brewing Company at Albion and East Main streets. Ground will be broken for the foundations some time this week, and the plant will be in full running order within eight months. The contract for the construction work was awarded to Bollinger Bros., contracting engineers, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Representatives of this firm are in the city at present, and as the concern has constructed eleven other brewing plants of a similar type, there will be no delay over this one, nor will any mistakes be made in the work. The plant will be built on the most modern lines and equipped with the largest improved machinery.

The company is composed of several well-known local capitalists, and was incorporated in June of this year under the laws of this State with a capitalization of $500,000. Callaghan Byrne is president, Eugene Germain, vice-president; Ralph Moss, secretary, and D. R. Trueman, treasurer. A. K. Martle is superintendent. Mr. Martle was at one time president of the Eagle Brewing Company of Duquesne, Pa., and also was connected with the Duquesne Brewing Company of Pittsburgh, so that he is well qualified to take the responsible position.

The property of the company is on the Salt Lake tracks. It is a little more than an acre in area, and was purchased about two months ago. As it lies near the river, wells will be sunk, and water in sufficient quantities to supply the plant, will be developed. The Salt Lake railroad already has a switch on the property, which will help construction because of the ease in shipping in material.

The plant will consist of a brewing building, bottling house, power plant, office building, refrigerating plant and stables. The buildings will be the most improved fireproof construction, and will be of brick, steel, stone and concrete.

The brewery will be equipped with improved machinery, consisting of one 175-barrel copper steam brewing-kettle, a steel mash-tub, steel hot and cold water tanks of several sizes, a steel rice and grain tank, and malt bins of 2000 tons capacity of the same material. There will also be a closed beer cooler. Direct connected electrical motors will be used to operate all machinery. The current for these motors will be furnished by two sixty-kilowatt direct connected generators driven by automatic engines. Refrigeration and ice-making will be accomplished by two ice machines, one of sixty-five tons capacity and one of forty-five tons.

The bottling plant will have a daily capacity of 36,000 bottles, and the brewery will have a manufacturing capacity of 50,000 barrels per annum.

There are three breweries in Los Angeles at present, but as they are inadequate to supply the demand of the Southwest, the promoters of this project are confident that this plant is needed. The investment in the buildings alone will amount to $250,000 and the cost of equipment and the initial cost of the land bring the investment up to nearly $500,000.

SELLS HANDSOME DWELLING.

Robert Marsh & Co. reported last week the sale of a two-story ten-room mission style plaster residence at No. 672 Bonnie Brae street to Mrs. M. P. Doran for $12,500. The grantor is J. E. Marsh. The lot is 50x150 feet, and is on the west side of the street between Orange and Seventh streets.

A TRADE.

Santa Barbara Partly Improved Property for Los Angeles Lots, Vacant, on Boyle Heights.

G. W. Burton has consummated through the agency of James Menzies, a trade in which he transfers to C. C. Hunt of Santa Barbara a parcel of property there for eight lots on Boyle Heights. These lots lie on the south side of Fourth street, just west of Estudillo avenue, close to the Indiana car line. They are only a block or two from the corner of Fresno street where the Traction line passes. The lots are each 45x125 feet.

The Santa Barbara property consists of a piece of land ninety feet on Valerio street, near Bath, and 110 feet on Islay street, the two parcels joining at their inner edge, the total depth being 450 feet. On the Valerio frontage is a house of seven rooms, built many years ago, but in a good state of preservation.

The value on which the trade was made was $5000, both parcels being clear of incumbrance.

The history of this Santa Barbara lot shows that things have not been at a standstill in the Channel City. Four years ago the grantor of this piece of land in this trade traded an equity in a Los Angeles property which a year before had cost $6000 for $3000 cash and some property in Santa Barbara. Shortly after he sold one piece for $1000 cash and later a second slice for $600 cash, Thus he had back $4600 of the $6000 he had paid in Los Angeles. The Santa Barbara home was paying $20 a month rent and continued to do so until very recently. This paid taxes and other expenses, and a fair interest on the actual cost, which as appears above was only $1400.

The trade now for eight lots with something near the trade basis, makes the deal a good one.

Mr. Hunt, who lives in Santa Barbara, sees use for his acquired home and big lot.

WESTCHESTER PLACE HOME.

Magnificent Dwelling at West Twelfth and Westchester Place—Will Cost Fifteen Thousand at Least.

The residence of Mrs. J. D. Mercereau, which is to be built on the lot at the southwest corner of Westchester Place and West Twelfth street, having a frontage on Westchester Place of 120 feet, and on Twelfth street of 150 feet, is illustrated on this page today.

The first floor is arranged with a central hall and dining-room on one side, and living-room on the other. A den opens off the side of the hall, and also into the living-room. There is a conservatory and an aviary back of the dining-room, with kitchen, maid's room and bath in the rear, connected to the main building by a separate rear hall, and a serving pantry. All conveniences, such as an additional kitchen, pantry, screened porch, etc., also are provided. The laundry will be in the basement.

The second story has three main bedrooms, with two baths and a dressing room connected with the principal bedroom. There will be a combination sewing and sitting room, with built-in cupboards, etc.

The finish of the living-room and hall and den is to be of selected grain Oregon pine, while red birch will be used in the dining-room. White enamel is the finish employed on the second floor. Oak on the first story and maple on the second, will, with tile, be the flooring in the principal bathrooms.

The exterior of the house will be finished with shingles and rough timber, and will be stained. There will also be a garage, with accommodations for two machines, a man's room and a bath. Hunt & Eager are the architects. The house will cost between $15,000 and $18,000. As the lot cost $15,000, this will represent an investment of fully $30,000.

A new edifice for the Methodists is being canvassed for in Altadena. It was decided at a recent meeting of the members to erect a chapel building that would accommodate the membership until a building was finished. About $10,000 will be expended.

An additional story with eighteen guest rooms, parlor and three bathrooms will be added. About $6500 will be expended.

The Open Season for Ibsen.

Opera glass gunning for the stage highflyers of weight and profundity will commence this week. There will be some new targets in the flock for the markswomen of society.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

Why is Ibsen?

Doubtless his most ardent admirers couldn't tell you—exactly.

To the soulful young actor, he is a heaven-sent opportunity for personal expression; to the young bud, he is the chance for a new thrill; to the grand dame, he is a function; to the sanctimonious but worldly-wise manager—money.

It has come to pass, in this city, that Ibsen is a financial possibility far above Shakespeare. And this, in spite of the infinitely smaller appeal of his works.

What is the reigning charm of Ibsen's best plays? Is it not simply their keen analysis of human nature, their sharp, vivid snapshots of real human souls?

And that's the charm of Shakespeare, save that, instead of bleak Norwegian skies and innate Scandinavian melancholy, we have our human nature in familiar quantities—in the hearts and upon the lips of Anglo-Saxon men and women, like ourselves, or else in the foreign scenes and historical subjects that Shakespeare was so wont to take up.

Add to the Ibsen subtlety for human nature his positive genius of play construction, and you have the whole of him. Where was ever another man who could take two people and a conventional scene—and no action— and hold interest breathless for an hour? There's Ibsen—all of him, body, soul and spirit.

Save those qualities of personal analyzis and dramatic skill, he has no appeal for us. His scenes are not our scenes. He worked under clouds, seldom in sunshine. Even his bright moments are only transitory flashes. Peer Gynt, the most complex of his creatures, is Hamlet in a different guise, and the singulary calm and blissful ending of the play is its best moment. Hamlet? Yes, for Hamlet is the most singular figure in the whole world of drama; had Shakespeare continued him in another act, he might have made him a villian.

To come right down to cases, one feels sorry for Ibsen on seeing any of his plays.

What would Ibsen have done, had he been born and reared into a life of more vigorous material action, a life of brightness and companionship with the rest of the world? One can't help feeling his isolation.

What would he have done with modern Germany—or, nearer yet, with the puzzling conditions we have right here at home?

I don't think Ibsen, in Germany, would have waited for Harden to ferret out court rottenness. He would have had it in a triology, with an introductory epic poem, while Harden was preparing his ammunition.

Every once in a while you'll hear some literary enthusiast moan: "Oh, for an Ibsen to immortalize the big men of our current affairs."

That's exactly what Ibsen would not have done, had he lived in the United States. Ibsen was a dramatizer of conditions, not of people—although he has left a good personal picture or two.

Ibsen would not have put Augustus Heinze in three acts, nor John D. Rockefeller in four, nor Willie Hearst in a farce and Bryan in a tragedy—but, considering all of them, emperor and romancer and jester of finance and politics together, he would doubtless have created a new figure, a figure of reality and futurity, sired by probability and mothered by actual circumstances.

For a man of Ibsen's tremendously analytical mind, America would have been the widest and most productive of fields.

But, however true or nonsensical all these idle philosophizings may be—the real fact is that Ibsen is again looming portentiously upon the horizon, and the first pearly drippings of the intellectual rainy season are scheduled for next Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Mestayer, of course, is the Ibsen patron saint.

Ibsen is popular with Mr. Mestayer, for it brings him on annual pilgrimages from the land of obscurity. When Mr. Mestayer was selected some years ago to play Oswald Alving in the road production of "Ghosts," he became hopelessly infected. The disease left scars on him for life.

The popularity of Ibsen, however, does not extend quite around the circle of Mr. Mestayer's fellow-actors. Bill Desmond, who is probably the only genuine Ibsen immune in Morosco's company, thinks Ibsen a joke. John Burton is nearly as improbable as Bill, and he laughs, too. You could no more interest Bill and John in Ibsen than could you enthuse a Chinaman for grand opera.

But the rest of the aggregation are not quite so hopeless, so their cue is to act busy, skittish or incompetent. Some of them actually succeed in breaking away.

I notice that Mr. Beaseley has been caught in the Mestayerian net, and, as he is a good actor, almost always, I've no doubt that he will be turned to very good account in the coming productions.

Mr. Mestayer is in full charge of these productions. They are not Mr. Morosco's. Mr. Morosco may take the money, but all the glory is to the producer.

This column slipped recently, and said that the author of "The Judge and the Jury" is doing it. He is not; far from it. This is an apology.

The Ibsen series this time is to be more extended than ever, and will include plays of the Norwegian master never yet presented in the West. Among the novelties are "Rosmersholm," "The Wild Duck," a rather gloomy personal expression of Ibsen's, and "The Pillars of Society"—a really powerful modern play, in which men as well as women should be interested.

On Wednesday afternoon of this week "The Doll's House" will be presented. Mr. Beasley and Miss Hall will have prominent parts.

THE DRAMATIC WEEK.

William Faversham, in "The Squaw Man," will occupy the stage of the Mason Operahouse the first three days of this week. Faversham is one of the best-known leading men in this country, and acceptable support is promised here.

The story of "The Squaw Man" has for its hero Capt. James Wynnegate of England, who, loving his cousin's wife, Diana, and finding that his cousin has misappropriated some of the regimental funds, decides to shoulder the blame himself, in order to save Diana from disgrace. He flees to the cow country of Wyoming.

There he is found in the second act in the guise of Jim Carston, a ranchman; he has gained more than ordinary popularity with his fellows, and has achieved a fair measure of success. Into this country the Overland Limited brings a party of tourists, among whom are Diana and her husband, the Earl of Kerhill. The party is witness to a quarrel Jim has with a local bad man, one Cash Hawkins, and after the train has pulled out, Hawkins makes an attempt on Jim's life, and is shot down by an Indian girl, Nat-u-ritch. Jim, in gratitude to her, marries the girl, and becomes in the eye of the country a "squaw man," and later, a father. By the death of his cousin, he naturally comes into the earldom, and the family lawyer searches him out and implores him to go back to England and resume his proper position. Loyalty to his Indian wife keeps him back, and in the end he arranges to sacrifice himself once more, and sends his 6-year-old son back in his stead to take the place he himself must vacate.

But Nat-u-ritch grieves so over the removal of her child that in despair she kills herself, and by this means leaves the road clear for Jim's return to his native land, and—we are to suppose—to Diana herself.

"In Old Kentucky" will be seen during the second half of the week.

"The Other Girl" will be played this week at the Belasco. It is an Augustus Thomas comedy in which Lionel Barrymore appeared with considerable success under Charles Frohman's management in the East. In the Belasco production Lewis Stone will have the Barrymore role—that of "Kid" Sheldon, obviously drawn from "Kid" McCoy, a young champion pugilist, who is engaged to superintend the physical exercises of a young minister whose nerves have gone back on him. Sheldon not only does this, but at the same time he falls very much in love with a charming young girl whose interest in the "Kid" is more in the nature of curious attention than any real affection. There is an elopement planned, which is stopped by Sheldon's automobile running over a man, an arrest, a trip of the "Kid" and the young girl to the police station, and no end of subsequent complications.

Following "The Other Girl," "The Heart of Maryland" will be revived.

The new bill at the Orpheum boasts three attractions which might compete for headline honors. They are Elfie Fay, "Ye Colonial Septette," and Julia Herne and her company.

Elfie Fay, "the Belle of Avenue A," needs no further introduction to vaudevillians who have had the habit for several years. Her imitations and individual style are well known.

The Colonial Septette comes opportunely with a musical sketch called "An Olde Tyme Halloween."

Julia Herne is the daughter of James A. Herne. With a company of four she will produce her own playlet, "Between the Acts." Miss Herne is quite widely known as a playwright, being the author of a serious, Ibsen-like drama called "Richter's Wife."

Four dainty dancers from the Paris Hippodrome will be seen in a novelty act.

Bartholdi's cockatoos, Ladell and Crouch, Charlene and Charlene, and the Teddy Trio remain for another week.

A musical production with a comedian of considerable contemporary fame is heralded for the Los Angeles Theater tonight. The piece is "The Rollicking Girl," and the comedian Snitz Edwards in his original creation of Schmaltz, the wigmaker. Lila Blow will play Ilona, and the company will have a well selected chorus and a generally effective cast of principals.

Some years ago Mr. Edwards went to Europe wit hthe Hanlon brothers to play in their famous pantomime, "Le Voyage en Suisse," and spent three years on the continent, during which time he played in France, Germany, Italy and Spain. His experience gave a touch of broad color to his acting. During the period he played for six months in Vienna, and as "The Rollicking Girl" is laid in that city, he should be enabled to inject a good amount of local flavor.

Ben Hendricks's annual visit to the Grand begins this afternoon. This season Hendricks has returned to his first play, "Yon Yonson," which he deserted to less capable hands seven years ago. The piece is the best of the Swedish character comedies, and has made its owner and interpreter a great deal of money.

In a recent article on actorial wealth Hendricks's fortune was estimated at about half a million dollars.

"Sky Farm," Edward E. Kidder's rural romance, is to be given at the Burbank today by Morosco's stock company. The management is wise in selecting dramas of the class which is so specially adapted to the company's talents.

The piece is by the author of "A Poor Relation," and possesses an interesting story replete with legitimate comedy.

As announced elsewhere, the Ibsen performances will begin this week.

Dramagraphs.

Viola Allen is to produce a play called "Her Greater Love."

The Shuberts are to give Eddie Foy a new play, an adaptation from the German.

George M. Cohan is said to be writing a play in which he will have the part of a Japanese valet.

Channing Pollock is about to begin work on a new play, to be called "The Right to Happiness."

George Fuller Golden, the monogolist, has broken down with lung trouble and has been taken to Saranac Lake.

Giacomo Puccini is looking into American folk-music. In connection with his setting of "The Girl of the Golden West," he has written inquiring about the songs that were in vogue here in 1850.

Gustav Mahler, who will arrive in New York about the middle of December to begin his engagement at the Metropolitan Opera House, is said to be dreading the sea voyage. It will be his first.

Another play by Henry Bernstein, author of "The Thief," is promised by Charles Frohman. Last week he acquired the rights for America and England of "La Foudre," M. Bernstein's latest play, which is to be produced this week for the first time in Paris.

For her next starring venture Margaret Wycherly has acquired the rights of a new play being written by Eugene Walters, author of "The Undertow," and "Paid in Full." There will be but four characters in the play, which has not yet been named.

David Belasco has called rehearsals of the new piece in which Frank Keenan and Miss Charlotte Walker will be the featured players. It is expected to be ready for production about the middle of next month and when in shape for its metropolitan premiere will succeed "The Rose of the Rancho" at the Belasco Theater, New York.

E. H. Sothern has commissioned Frank Stayton to write a play for his use next season. Mr. Sothern will produce a play by the same dramatist during his New York engagement this season. It is to be called "Two Pins," and will be done by Oscar Ashe at His Majesty's Theater, London, next month.

When "The Squaw Man" reached Dallas some of the occupants in the gallery of the operahouse took exception to the way some of the players dressed and acted as cowboys. One man went to the manager and demanded the return of his money on the ground that he wasn't putting up to see a tenderfoot try to do something which a real cowboy would be ashamed of. He was allowed to depart in peace. When Mr. Royle heard of the incident, he remarked that it was impossible to please everybody.

At present there are 161 stock and repertoire companies of consequence in the country. A few of these remain for the season in the big towns, but most of them travel, east or west, or north or south, playing for a night or a week in one place. Some of them have plays of their own, but the majority are contented with the old favorites. These repertoire companies keep the classics of the stage alive. They play "Hamlet," or "The Ticket of Leave Man," or "The Lady of Lyons," with equal impartiality. As a rule, they can draw better crowds with an old play that is known to be good than with a new play that theatergoers know nothing about. Most of these traveling companies do not pay royalties. A few years ago they would work over and adapt the popular successes in the big cities. They would give the plays of Hoyt under a different name, perhaps, with scarcely more change in the lines and scenes than was necessary to adapt them to a smaller company. But under the new copyright law there is too much risk in stealing plays, and the minor repertoire company contents itself with the old favorites.

Alfred Hertz, conductor of the German music dramas at the Metropoliton Operahouse, who returned from Europe last week, has been pleading with Heinrich Conried to remove the ban on "Salomé." As it will be impossible to give the Strauss work in the Metropolitan Operahouse, Mr. Hertz, who still preserves his enthusiasm for the opera, has a plan to organize a company and present it in New York and on the road as soon as his duties as director at the Metropolitan cease in the spring. "I can see no reason why 'Salomé' should be discontinued," said Mr. Hertz, a few days ago. "It will be easy to obtain a hall in New York, and there are large theaters in most of the cities of the United States. Several performances could be given in Chicago, at least two in Boston and Philadelphia, and one in Kansas City, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Cleveland. There is no new German work of any interest," the conductor continued. "In fact, I don't think there will be until Strauss produces his 'Electra.'"

A few theatrical people know what the followers of the stage and the admirers of actors will be surprised to learn, namely, why McIntyre and Heath are to retire from the stage after the present season with "The Ham Tree," the coming week. Three years ago nearly two thousand acres of land was bought up by the boys at $34 an acre. Since that time little by little they have disposed of several building plots 25x110 feet each for $378 a plot. Several plots more than double that amount. They still hold 1500 and odd acres in close proximity to the new subways and third-rail trolleys, their value increasing fabulously. In fact, they are already rated over a million, and, as they have been working together on the stage as partners for thirty-one years, both intend to retire together.

The demand for their public appearance in vaudeville has resulted in an offer being made them of $100,000 for forty weeks and refused. Both being married and very domesticated declare that as they cannot spend legitimately what they now possess they see no reason why any offer should tempt them from their homes at their time of life. Mr. Heath is located on the water front and is a great lover of yachting, and he will have no difficulty in getting the unemployed actors during the summer to make up jolly yachting parties. As for Mr. McIntyre, he loves dogs and hunting and has already arranged a kennel which will occupy over one acre.

Mme. Calvé is in a general mix-up with her cook, the railroads and other things, including W. R. Chapman, the Bangor and Portland Wagner. The cook has resigned. The Boston and Maine Railroad is sarcastic, Chapman is insulted, and Calvé is triumphant, according to the Morning Telegraph. It is all on account of the private car. The moment Calvé got her private car she determined to lock everybody out of it. She locked J. Saunders Gordon out of it. She locked out every member of her company, save Chemet and his wife. She locked a man with a bill from the Boston and Maine Railroad out of it. The man wanted to collect a bill for transferring the car from one railroad to another. "Va, t'en," cried Calvé, "that addition goes to M. Cort. A bas the railroad of Boston and Maine. It is an imbecile." Cort is trying to persuade Calvé that she ought to pay it. He can keep trying. The first Calvé storm occurred when Chapman, the aforesaid Kennebunkport Wagner, entered the car jauntily and gracefully and murmured ever so sweetly and gently the word "rehearsal." He didn't mean it. But somehow or other he said it. There were alarms and explosions, furies, infernos, volcanics, fearful detonations of that high explosive Calvéite, of which Conried knows something. The cook then entered to take Madame's order for dinner. She rattled it off in French. "Soupe a l'oseille, eperlans frites a la St. Amour, filet de boeuf, chateaubriant, petits fours a la Riche." The cook blinked his eyes confusedly and, grabbing wildly at the vaguest possibility of eggs, said hesitatingly, "Will you have them done on one side or both, Miss?" The porter has also become restive. He hears that Mme. Calvé does not tip more than $10 at a time.

Charles Frohman's proposal to give theatrical entertainments of a regular order in theaters to be rigged up upon some of the liners that cross the Atlantic evokes no surprise in those actors and actresses who are familiar with the many strange places in which they are called upon to do their acting. Not all of the acting that is done in this country is done in the theaters—that is, in those theaters which are dedicated ostensibly to plays and players. The line of vaudeville has been so far advanced that it now takes in many playhouses in which prior to this year only dramatic attractions and musical pieces appeared. A great deal of regular acting of the old and recognized brand is done in vaudeville theaters, but there are six pieces of church property in the United States in which professional theatrical companies regularly appear. And there seldom is a night in the theatrical year upon which at some place in the United States actors are not acting in hospitals, jails, insane asylums, shelters of one kind or another, social settlement houses, clubs, hotels or private houses. Lillian Russel has turned down an offer of $1000 made to her to sing three songs in the drawing-room of a society woman in New York. It was only a couple of seasons ago that an entire theatrical company was transported from the Casino Theater in New York to the palace of a rich New Yorker in Newport ,and there gave its regular Broadway entertainment without a cut.

William Faversham.

noted leading man who will appear in Los Angeles during the coming week in his rather unique play, "The Squaw Man."

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

This letter has come to The Times musical desk:

"To the musical editor: I notice that each Italian opera company visiting Los Angeles has a lot of skinny old women for chorus 'girls;' that the ballet 'girls' are ghastly antiques and chromas; the costumes of the principals are shabby, and the stage properties childishly absurd. I don't know how it affects others, but it spoils the opera for me. I akm told that it has something to do with the enormous expense of importing grand opera. I can't see why it is any cheaper to have a bunch of old relics whose faces would turn back the tide. Please enlighten me."

There seems to be a general misapprehension on some of the vital matters pertaining to grand opera's maintenance and support.

To begin, kindly correspondent, you are right in your surmise of appalling expense. Nevertheless, even expense cannot account for some of the funny things that we see in current grand opera presentations.

As compared to an operatic organization, even the so-called "all-star" cast in the dramatic field cannot be compared in any way to the singing company for heart-breaking expense.

In the theatrical field you have—say—an actor and an actress of costly prominence, and in support of these several very good players at possibly more than average salaries. Or you find once in a great while probably half a dozen monetary gems in a single company—people whose names always have to be prefaced with the managerial dollar sign; there you have Mrs. Fiske's justly celebrated aggregation, the finest dramatic body in this country.

And there, beyond royalties, you can figure the outlay for that production, not so large after all, considering probable receipts.

Now turn to grand opera. In any company above the shoddiest barnstorming bunch, a triple cast is a necessity, for grand opera singers have never yet been found with throats able to stand the strain of singing every night. Two-thirds of your principals, therefore, are always idle—but they must be paid, and their salaries average far more than an actor's.

But in dismissing your principal-cost you've only counted the first item of a formidable list. Lambardi's principals alone aggregate more than most dramatic companies, but he has an even larger group of chorus people—an absolute necessity, of course.

Then comes the orchestra. Dance hall musicians and mere fiddle-scrapers will not do for the interpretation of the classics. Good men—not geniuses, necessarily, but finished musicians—are a compulsory requisite, hence in our own opera orchestra, during the past week, we have seen no less than three well-known conductors sitting subservient to Jacchia's baton. Such men as these do not appear nightly for a hall room and sinkers and coffee.

A necessary mechanical force and cruel railroad fares eat up what is left of your little profit. A special train is almost required to move an opera company.

As to price, the American public is not inclined to support any opera save that in New York at prices which cannot be called popular—from $1.50 to $3 per seat.

So much for income and expense, and expense compounds with the prominence of your stars and the novelty of the productions. Mme. Padovani, for instance, receives about half a thousand dollars for each appearance. And in [illegible] to anything save the early [illegible] nuts and the relics of Donizetti, Rossini, Bellini and others of those days, your tribute must go straight to the coffers of the Ricordi or Sognzongo families in Italy.

A whole story might be written on the business deftness and worldwide artistic power of that great Ricordi house, which absolutely controls two-thirds of the Latin operas of the world—but of that more at another time.

There is a reason for the antiquity of the chorus "girls," though it remains a mystery as to their prevalent type of distinctly unbeautiful countenance. Every chorus woman in these companies which visit America must have a very extensive repertoire, and that is only gained with years. And as the majority of Italian women of the chorus class are rather slow in learning, complete maturity of physique and art usually come at the same time. It may be imagined that the handsome chorus women get better salaries and prefer to remain in Italy. Save at every corner! Chop your expense account! Those are the slogans of the man who would bring a grand opera company 6000 miles to us.

There is no reason, however, for an awkward and homely and ill-costumed ballet. Such an absurd exhibition as that in "Mignon," last Monday night, is absolutely unnecessary. A French ballet of good-figured, neatly-dressed, graceful girls—none of them necessarily stars—could be had for a reasonable price. Henry Russell's dainty little ballet in his productions here last year is exactly in point. Nothing sadder could be imagined than the probable performance of this flock of ostriches in the superbly magnificent "Dance of the Hours," from Ponchielli's "Gioconda." But there is no danger of such a calamity. This company can't sing "Gioconda."

As to costuming, I differ with you very much. You have evidently missed Mme. Padovani's several pints of diamonds and her Parisian gowning of Violetta, Arcangeli's Brummelian Scarpia, Signorini's orientally regal Radames, Ferrabini's picturesque and dainty Tosca. And where, in any American actor, do you find a superior to Wulman in his striking and genuinely appropriate disguises?

But if you have lighted only upon Bertozzi's singularly fortissimo apparel, or the ever-garish illumination from the bizarre chorus, you are to be pitied.

In summing up, I would say that this rapt attention to musical art, to the frequent neglect of accessory arts, is a patent Italian trait. Music occupies such a preëminent place in the Italian soul that it is only through the dramatic realities of Ponchielli, Puccini, Mascagni and Leoncavallo—not forgetting the aged Verdi—that the operatic patronage of that country ever realized the libretto absurdities of their earlier composers. In this respect they must unconsciously acknowledge a debt to Richard Wagner, who first insisted upon the trinity of music, poetry and painting—not music alone. Opera in Italy is a national pastime. It is a greater thing than the American baseball, for women are equally interested. Even the street gamin would hiss a singer for misphrasing "Che gelida manina," or flatting the high C of "Salve dimora"—but it is doubtful if costumery and scenic accessories get such rigid inspection.

The ideal company for the presentation of Latin opera, as has been proven, is composed of Italian singers and players under the general management of an experienced and musically versed Anglo-Saxon.

Thus, if Henry Russell's business sense but equaled his artistic intelligence, he would be the greatest impressario the world has ever seen.

School Girl Revolutionists.

Schoolgirls of Montenegro are taking an interest in public questions these days. In Cettinje, Montenegro, there is a college for girls founded by the Czaritza Maria Alexandrova. In the room of the sixth grade, the highest class, there was hanging a picture of Prince Nicholas. The fathers and brothers of these girls had most of them, joined the new National Democratic party and thereby brought upon themselves the sharp condemnation of the Prince. The girls held a class meeting and sat in judgment on the Prince. They decided that because he had proved himself opposed to parliamentary rule he was not worthy to have his picture in a school of Montenegro. They took the photograph down, tore it to pieces and danced upon it. The government ordered the chief of detective force to investigate the matter. When he arrived at the school, much to his surprise he found the thirty girls waiting for him in their best dresses, and they solemnly presented him with a beautiful bouquet. Vastly pleased with the attention, he thanked the girls and raised the bouquet to his nose. He was attacked with a violent fit of sneezing which he could not stop. Tears came into his eyes and his dignity was a thing of the past, when the girls added to his discomfort by calmly advising him to go to a hospital and have his nose cut off so that in the future he might not get into a similar position from thrusting it into other people's business.

A Unique Well.

There is a blowing well near Raymondville, Texas county, Missouri. This well, which is on a hill, was drilled in 1899 to a depth of 187 feet. Soft water was struck at the bottom and rose seven feet in the well. In a dry time, especially in the winter, the well becomes dry. In drilling it a cave three feet high was struck at a depth of 100 feet. When the well is dry, if there is a long prevailing wind from the north, a current of air rushes from the pipe strong enough

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

From "Ode to Autumn."

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness!
Close bosom friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that 'round the thatch-eaves run;
To bend with apples the moss'd cottage trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
And still more, later flowers for the bees,
Until they think warm days will never cease,
For summer has o'er-brimmed their clammy cells.

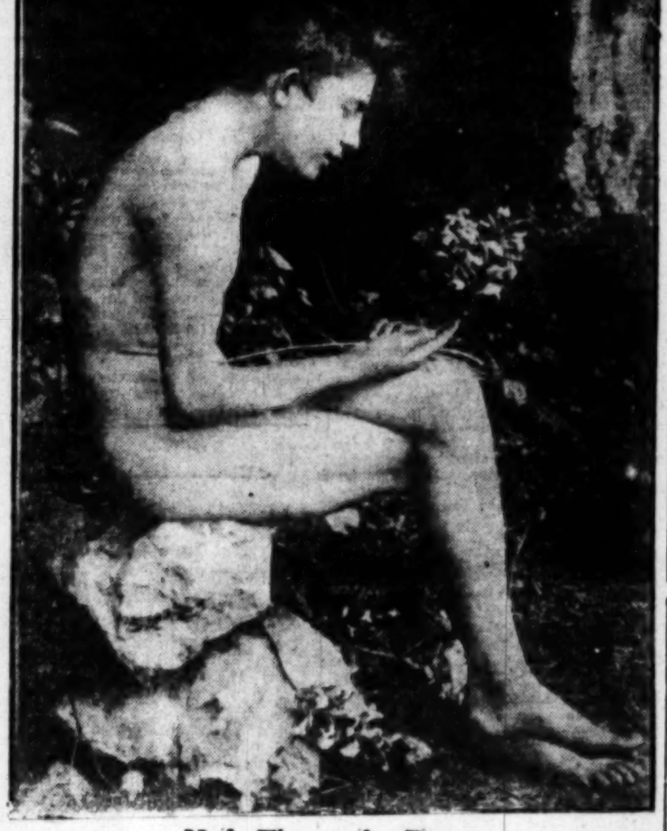
Joseph Greenbaum's Exhibition.

Joseph Greenbaum.

No matter how academic a painter's training in art may have been, he cannot remain long in Southern California without packing his tools into a sketch box and sallying forth to paint outdoors. The call o fthe open is too poignantly sweet and insistent to be ignored. He is glad to forget, for months at a time, how many "heads" go to make up the full measurement of the human figure. He is fain to leave the cold, pale north light of the studio for the warm, glowing south light of the living sun. He becomes, almost before he is aware of the transformation, a language painter, though once, in his foolish pride, he may have vowed and declared that the human face and figure were the only things in the visible world worth painting.



Nude Figure of a Boy.

Photograph from life.

For, as "eyes were made for seeing," and as the artist is always in search of beauty, he cannot for long pass by the magic wonders of Southern California's charming vistas. He sees them on every hand, he loves them—and then he is compelled perforce to try to interpret them for others. He comes to believe, after a time, that there is no other landscape in the world quite equal to ours. Perhaps he is not far from being right in his preference. A well-known Los Angeles landscape painter—born and bred and trained in the East—recently visited Illinois and Wisconsin, both beautiful States, but on his return he declared that he could no longer do any painting there. After California, the landscape of the East seemed colorless to him, "flat, stale and unprofitable."

Joseph Greenbaum, whose exhibition of recent work is now being shown in Steckel's gallery, is a portrait painter who has turned, as the magnet to its pole, to landscape since he arrived in Southern California. At first he began in a somewhat timid and tentative way, to be sure, as one might woo a coy and unknown maid, but he has gained mightily in boldness and freedom during the past year, and he no longer treads on terra incognita. He is becoming known to art lovers as a painter of landscapes and seascapes, as well as of men and women. All this, notwithstanding the fact that he teaches from life every day of the week in an art school.

The change in Mr. Greenbaum's field of work may be due in part, of course, to the fact that some people who ought to have their portraits painted don't seem to realize the necessity, but I think the most potent factor is the lure of our out-door nature. He has felt it strongly, and, being an artist, has responded with joy to the call.

Consequently, we see only four portraits in the present exhibition of twenty-five canvases. Three of these, to be sure, are among the largest and most important of all the pictures, and certainly among the most beautiful. They are all portraits of women, graceful, handsome and distinguished members of our own community. Mr. Greenbaum paints the American type of woman unusually well, and there can be no cause for wonder that the most of his sitters are of the gentler sex.

The three portraits are all painted with cool, sylvan backgrounds, a modern revival of the methods of Gainsborough and Sir Joshua. Two of the sitters, indeed, are crowned with the black-plumed picture hat. Both are seated. The other, "Portrait of Mrs. F. B.," shows a woman standing with a fur boa thrown negligently over her bare shoulders.

The landscapes and marines give us lovely glimpses of Los Angeles and Catalina Island. Santa Catalina has yielded up many of its choicest secrets to our painter, so we have no cause for surprise that he has called one of his canvases—the largest—"The Enchanted Isle." Another is named "Our California Capri." A third, "Treasure Island." All these are suggestive and captivating titles.

in more detail. will be given in next week's Art and Aritists.

Classic Photography.

Exhibits of the classic in picture taking are found all over the world, and none illustrated the remarkable development of the art more strikingly than did the Royal Photographic Society's show in London, which has just come to a close.

A remarkable fact in connection with all these photographs was their absolute purity. Scarcely one of the nudes could give offense to the veriest prude, so absolute was the artistic effect which pervaded each example, and so thoroughly was the mere physical aspect banished by the photographer who had caught the inspiration.

There were hundreds of prints made on the lines laid down by the old masters. Lovely figures which suggested Michael Angelo, Tintoretto, or Raphael, were reproduced in gray, white and brown, by cunning hands and eyes who knew how to manipulate the "little black box," and how to make the most of light, shadow and expression.

Misty harbors showed sails fading from sight in the dying day, calling to mind Turner's masterpieces. Gay cavaliers, with fierce mustaches and sweeping plumes, suggested Rembrandt. Still others recalled Gainsborough, and here and there were landscapes, groups of human figures, or still life, all reproduced from model to glass, and from glass to paper, counterfeiting in the twentieth century what great wielders of the brush and palette did at the easel in other days.

Then, too, there were modern examples, recalling to those who attended the exhibit the great names of the world of art today. Modern Venice, basking in sunshine or mirroring gondolas from its canals, was well represented. Stately cathedrals reared their spires in many a print while the desert, the plains and the sea all figured conspicuously.

ART NOTES.

The exhibition of Joseph Greenbaum's pictures will continue till the fifteenth of the month. C. A. Fries, a strong landscape painter from San Diego, will then occupy the Steckel gallery with thirty or forty of his recent canvases.

The Little Corner of Local Art, East Avenue 41, sold two pictures last week—one a landscape from the brush of Carl Oscar Borg, the other a water color by Norman S. Clair.

Frederick Mortimer Clapp, of the University of California, has begun a series of twelve lectures on Italian art, in the Woman's Club House. Among the subjects he has chosen are: "Siena and Sienese," "Giotto and His Contemporaries," "Painters of the Early Renaissance," "Raphael and Michael Angelo," etc.

Hobart Bosworth, who has at last come to the wise conclusion that he has got to paint, is converting his stable on East Avenue 41 into a handsome and well-lighted studio. A saddle horse is good—but paints and brushes are sometimes better.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

Christmas week will be a busy one for Cupid. Functions of the most elaborate kind are being planned for almost every afternoon and evening. The center of all this flutter will be the debutantes, who have all selected the pretty frocks in which they will appear.

Among interesting gayeties of the past week was the children's party given Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jared Hixon of No. 2727 Menlo avenue, for the benefit of the Children's Hospital.

Tuesday announcement was made of the engagement of William J. Galbraith, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Galbraith of this city, to Miss Lucy Sothern, daughter of the late George H. Sothern of Springfield, Ill. That day Miss Rose Cook and Dr. Loren Hollingsworth were married in the Westlake Methodist Episcopal Church.

On Wednesday Mrs. George A. Ralphs of Arapahoe street entertained with a five hundred party, and that evening two important weddings were solemnized, when Miss Hazel French and William L. Kuehn were united in marriage at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Louise French Beane, of Beacon street, and Miss Myrtle A. Davis and Harry Underhill were also married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Emma A. Davis. The same day Miss Adele Brodtbeck of Wilshire Boulevard entertained with bridge whist in compliment to Miss Elsie Laux and Miss Inez Moore, two of this month's brides.

The charity ball given by the members of the Los Angeles Chapter, U.D.C., at Kramer's Hall, Thursday evening, attracted a great deal of attention, as also did the dinner party with which Dr. and Mrs. Guy Cochran of Loma Drive entertained at the California Club. This event was a courtesy to Miss Irene Sabin of San Francisco. Another large event of Thursday was the garden fete given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philo Beveridge of Hollywood, under the auspices of St. Catherine's Guild of St. Stephen's Church.

Miss Brodrick to Be Hostess.

Miss Francisca Brodrick, the young daughter of Mrs. W. J. Brodrick of No. 1936 South Figueroa street, will entertain with an informal afternoon tea during the holidays. Important Wedding.

The wedding of Mrs. Grace Westover Carrillo, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Westover of Santa Monica, and sister of Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, to John D. Fraser, which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, was of interest to a host of friends. The service was read by the Rev. Mr. Webster in the garden beneath a huge Japanese umbrella, which was covered on the top with [illegible] [illegible] nite satin ribbon and fastened with a large butterfly bow. The entire grounds were screened with a fishnet, which was entwined with asparagus plumosus and purple lilies. The bride's table was aglow with violets and maidenhair ferns. The music was in charge of Mrs. L. I. Plummer, who sang "Beloved, It Is Morn." Mr. and Mrs. Fraser will make their home in Sacramento. One day last week Mr. and Mrs. Plummer of Hotel Bellevue Terrace entertained with a dinner party in honor of the young couple. The table was ornamented with a heart-shaped centerpiece of red carnations, and places were marked with hand-painted cards. Covers were laid for the groom's mother and sister, Mrs. Fraser and Miss Jane Fraser of Sacramento; Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Westover of Santa Monica,

Our showing of French models is unequaled anywhere in the Southwest.

Of course the imported hats are rather costly, yet not priced prohibitively high.

If a copy will suit, we can give you the same beautiful Parisian effect at a much lower price.

Big Purchase Lingerie Undermuslins

"A LITTLE UNUSUAL, BUT HERE'S THE REASON."

The unusual part is the purchase just at this time of the season. A prominent maker of fine lingerie accepted orders for, and had made up, several thousand garments for merchants in the smaller cities. These merchants, alarmed at the conditions of the money market and afraid they could not command a ready sale for such high-class garments, canceled their orders. Our local buyer, who is in the eastern market with plenty of "ready cash," bought the entire lot at nearly 33 1-3 per cent. less than for which they were made to sell. We will feature the entire shipment Monday.

Danderine
GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR AND WE CAN PROVE IT
The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor.

That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

The following is a reproduction of Miss Lewis' last letter:

January 3, 1905.

Dear Doctor Knowlton:—

You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach much below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid.

I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it.

Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. per bottle

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

Couzins is quite as eloquent her reasons for the loss of she was in the days when that her sisters were en- to the ballot, and that if al- to vote they would put politics higher moral level than it had attained. The abandonment of the rage cause by the woman who moving figure in securing for recognition at the World's Co- Exposition in 1893, and was of the board of lady man- who participated in the cam- of 1896, and has made political in all the western States, is which will be severely felt suffragists.

that moral uplift which was expected of them, they have even added to its demoralization in States where they have been given the ballot.

OUT OF PLACE IN POLITICS.

"The reason for this lies in the women themselves. They haven't the necessary stamina for public life; they can't stand up under it as men can. Nature hasn't endowed them with the needed nervous force. Then they cannot look at public questions impersonally; they persist in confounding personalities with principles. In all movements requiring organization woman is a failure. In philanthropy, art, literature, charity, women are all right; but when it comes to politics they are distinctly out of place.

"The religious fanaticism of women must also be reckoned with, and the fact that they are largely dominated by clergymen, both of the Protestant and Catholic churches. Let a well-known clergyman espouse any cause, and the women of his flock will follow him unreasoningly, even if his ideas are opposed to the public welfare. This fanaticism leads women to seek to impose their religious views on the community. Once give them the franchise, and religious despotism will run rampant.

"We have had two examples of that right here in Washington. Although our form of government absolutely divorces church and state and gives people the right to their own religious opinions, we have the women of the country attempting to exclude from the Senate a Mormon apostle, for the sole reason that he is such, and forcing the government to expend $30,000 to hear his case. Religious freedom would be impossible with woman suffrage.

DISREGARD VESTED RIGHTS.

"Women also exhibit a disregard for vested rights and for law. As an instance, take the temperance agitation of last spring, when hundreds of women, who enlisted the services of young children and half-grown girls, marshaled by a number of clergymen, marched upon Congress, notwithstanding that the law prohibits such gather-feminine suffrage passed the California Legislature in 1896, the W.C.T.U. boasted that they would, if it became law, end the manufacture of brandy and wine, two of California's great industries. This they did, notwithstanding the fact that the suffrage fight had been financed by Mrs. Jane Stanford, whose income was largely derived from wineries.

"Does the participation of women raise the moral tone of politics? No, What do women do with suffrage when they get it? Well, as a class, they will not vote contrary to the political views of their husbands, fathers, sons, and sweethearts. Among the enfranchised women of Colorado there is great apathy on political questions. The vast majority of American women do not care for suffrage.

"As an evidence of the working of suffrage just take Colorado. Gov. Waite, the best Governor Colorado ever had, succeeded in obtaining the franchise for women, without their making a fight for it. In the following campaign, the hard-fought battle of 1894, they voted en masse for his opponent, a man far inferior in every respect to Gov. Waite.

"There were several reasons for this. One is the fact that the woman voters of the working class were frightened by the English syndicates into voting against Gov. Waite, although he was everywhere regarded as the friend of the laboring man. But the large smelting industries threatened their employés with discharge if they voted for Waite, and the women of their families flocked as a unit to the opposition. The reckless use of money in that campaign was as demoralizing to the woman voters as to the men. Women are no more moral in politics than men. They can be depended on to vote for their own selfish interests just as the men can.

"Another startling fact in Colorado was that many women of unquestioned social position sent their carriages into the worst slums of Denver and conveyed to the polls some of the lowest denizens of the streets, in order to secure votes for the ticket they were supporting. This shows, to my mind, that participation in politics is demoraliz-

CHAPTER VI.

THE HEALTHY FAMILY.

Vida Bryan had one great friend, besides old Abraham, the gardener at Gorm House. This was Miss Nunsby, the local music teacher. Her father was a man by no means popular in the district. First he was an Englishman and prided himself upon the fact. By "Englisher" the Kirktown pitworker meant someone not a "Geordie," which meant from Newcastle way—not a "Lanky," which in addition to Lancashire included Yorkshire—to the disgust of casual natives of the county of the Three Ridings. "Scotties," "Geordies," and "Lankies," were, however, more or less on an equality, because there were pits in all these places, and also owing to the respect bred by ability in bargain-making. But Mr. Nunsby was a south-country man, an "Englisher" pure and simple, without shame or excuse, for whom there was nothing to be said, no extenuating circumstances. The popular verdict was "Guilty," without a rider.

Besides, what was worse, he fetched and carried for James Kahn.

Arthur Nunsby had been a man of a certain position. He had been educated for the office of national schoolmaster. But he had the misfortune to quarrel with his vicar, and from that moment for him there was no return. Hope had abandoned him, and he hope. He grew bitter, as he saw himself far past the meridian of life and still depending for daily bread on a man whom he hated and despised. It is small wonder that his saturnine humor increased and his tongue grew more and more caustic.

As he must always have some one to practice upon he made the little "slavy" the immediate butt of his sarcasms. For on this account Rose Nunsby secretly cherished the girl, affording her many privileges and never for a moment suspecting that Leebie Callum cared no wit for her father's sarcasms, considering him mentally afflicted, but on the whole innocent, and, indeed, callous to human speech of every sort, so long as there remained to her the inalienable freedom of cupboard and pantry.

Rose Nunsby had been very lonely before Vida came to Glebe End Cottage. Her father was making sufficient money to keep the two of them in comfort. So that it was more for something to do than from necessity that Rose had begun to give lessons on the piano and violin to the children of the shopkeekers and pit superintendents about the Kirktown of Inchgormach.

Just as many perfectly harmless insects imitate wasps and stinging flies, the innocent Rose Nunsby had taken on something of her father's manner. But, within, her nature was mild as milk, and her heart even as a honeycomb. She had taken Vida to it at once, and from the first hour had loved her as a sister. She had taught her all she knew, watched over her by day, warned her of dangers, rejoiced in her springing beauty, and now at last she had found in her a companion after her own heart.

Every afternoon Vida Bryan went to 32 Dudley Gardens, where a piano was waiting for her, and also, for the space of one hour, a very emphatic and stern mistress. After that, little Miss Nunsby began to spread a table. "The Callum" was summoned, all jam as to her mouth and coaly as to her fingers, from her secret afternoon lair. Life to the Callum was one protracted surreptitious meal. She had always been hungry all her life before. So since she came to 32 Dudley Gardens it is small wonder that the Callum regarded not the most polished arrows of Mr. Nunsby's wit.

After tea, Miss Nunsby walked back to Glebe End Cottage, with her friend and pupil, and there she stayed till it was time to go home for her father's dinner hour, which was often a late one, on account of his never being able to get away from the Incubus Offices before Mr. Kahn.

Rose Nunsby was a frail, pale, almost dwarfish creature, with a strange twist to her neck, a high white brow, and her father's abundant dark brows, from under which looked out, incongruously enough, a pair of the mysterious gentian-blue eyes, which only the fairies and the good hunchbacks have upon the earth.

As usual, the girls talked books and music, but every now and then they became more personal, condescending lightly on the topics of the Kirktown—the pits, the possible strike, Mr. Romer, the church choirs, the preaching qualifications of the several ministers, their personal merits or defects—and Mr. Kahn. These subjects are arranged in order of interest as conversational topics—reading backwards.

"Rose," cried Vida, so suddenly and after so long a pause that little Miss Nunsby discontinued stroking her friend's head, "I hate him."

"So do I, dear," said Rose Nunsby, promptly. Proper names are mostly superfluous in the intimate converse of women. With delicate voice intonations they differentiate their pronouns with severe classic accuracy.

In this case both understood that James Kahn was the object of their dislike. Yet his name had not been mentioned, and Vida was thinking of something else. Perhaps this peculiarity originated in a natural precaution against eavesdropping.

"Why, then, do—some other people like him?" Vida asked of her friend, the music mistress.

"My father—because he has got to," snapped little Miss Nunsby, almost as sharply as that gentleman himself, "yours because he is so simple that he knows no better."

"Yes," said Vida, with slowly deepening pucker, which ran across her brow when she was thinking, "yes—poor old Daddy—he is simple."

"What a blessing that we are so wise and see so much more clearly," said her friend, quaintly. "I am sure of it whenever you make that wrinkle between your eyes. Do you know whom you look like then?"

"No—who?" said Vida, innocently.

"Why, old Mr. Romer," said the little music teacher, laughing aloud at Vida's discomfiture. "You're younger and a girl—prettier, too, some would think—but it's the identical same frown. I wonder everybody doesn't notice it?"

By this time Vida was learning self-command, and though the red came slowly to her cheek and brow, it might only have been mere annoyance at being likened to a man of an ancient angry crab-apple countenance like Mr. Jacob Romer.

Now just over the cottage wall, in a wide enclosure and with ample house room, dwelt the "Healthy Family," so every one called them, and they were their father's best advertisement. He was the parish doctor, or at least the chiefest and oldest established of these.

CHAPTER VII.

THE CALMONTS, FATHER AND SON.

The Calmonts were generally called the Calmucks, though their cast of countenance was anything but Mongolian. Dr. Hugh Calmont was a huge man of a ruddy countenance, who brought an almost offensive atmosphere of health and well-being into the sick room. He was not popular in nervous cases. Dyspeptic ladies and valetudinarian gentlemen who liked a droopy practitioner to sympathize with them and tell them how similarly he had been afflicted, had been known absolutely to loathe Dr. Calmont.

But there were few of these in the neighborhood of Kirktown, and "the Doaktor" was personally of an extraordinary popularity. Literally he enjoyed it—that is the word. He knew himself to be popular, and on the strength of it, he bullied the neighborhood—genially, even jovially, he bullied it. But still he bullied it. Careless miners, flighty wives, silly girls, possibly prodigal young men were threatened with the "Doaktor." And they became "good" on the spot.

His wife seemed hardly the helpmeet for him, that is, to judge by the law of probabilities. Mrs. Calmont was a languid woman, tall and dark, rather silent, of a quite, invincible good humor, careless of things domestic, and her numerous family had apparently fatigued her. It, the Healthy Family, had been brought up, dragged up, kicked up, in the midst of the most inexpressible hugger-mugger.

The Healthy Family lived in an elastic house. It possessed unnumbered friends, and no one was surprised when two or three of these appeared in the evening with the obvious intention of staying the night. Nor was there ever the least difficulty. Shakedowns appeared and disappeared, as by magic. The peculiarities and capacities of every sofa in the house were known—those which needed chairs in rows to keep you from rolling off them, and the others which, with the family photograph album under one leg, did very well when merely turned face to the wall.

Special corners of the dining-room and drawing-room where the boards were notably soft had also their devotees. Four boys and three girls, who considered themselves more or less grown up, composed the sum total of the Healthy Family of Kirktown.

They came into this story over the wall of the Doctor's orchard. An empty cube sugar box did for a spring board, and both girls and boys prided themselves on the flying leap with which they were wont to enter the garden of Glebe End Cottage. Neither Vida nor the little music mistress were at all surprised to see them. They were often thus interrupted. Only Miss Nunsby, who held greatly her talks with Vida Bryan very near her heart, somewhat resented the frequency of the infliction.

"Hallo, Calmucks!" said Vida.

"Hallo yourself! and see how you like it!" cried the Twin Infant Phenomena Willie and Wilhelmina Calmont, going off as quick as a "rip-rap" cracker. They were still at school, but the fact was considered to be under the rose. It was not polite to allude to it.

"We have come to see you!" said Jean and Jessica, the two elder girls, fanning themselves with rhubarb leaves—a luxury the whole family had thoughtfully provided itself with en route.

"Good," said Aaron and Herbert (commonly called Hur,) the two elder boys, both home from college, "have some, girls! No end useful and ornamental! Suck one end and fan yourself with the other!"

But the third son, Phil Calmont, though he had taken the flying leap into the garden with the others, hung back a little, scarcely raising his eyes from the rose graftings to look at Vida and her friend, the little music mistress.

The rest roosted like crows anywhere about, the Twins occupying the corner of a wall where they made room for Vida between them. She had given up her place on the summer seat to Jean and Jessica, who having wedged little Miss Nunsby tightly between them, now propitiated her by offering her the contents of their "skirt pockets." The girls of the Healthy Family all carried "skirt pockets"—that is pockets tied round the waist under the outer skirt, and filled with various treasures.

"Grandmother did," they said in excuse, "and she was a minister's wife for forty years, and died without a shadow on her character. Why shouldn't we?"

When the Healthy Family girls ran they did not hold up their dresses. Of that there was no need. If a dress impeded the wearer in a race, or a heel caught in a flounce, Jessica instantly produced a pair of scissors and shortened the offender to convenient proportions, while Jean "basted" the new hem, the needle following hard in the wake of the clipping blades. It was the work of a minute. Then they ran on again, holding their skirt pockets. These were heavy, and quite naturally so. Jean's contained household necessities, "hussives," and balls of twine—Jessica's scissor, in wooden nests, and all the apparatus of first aid for the wounded (Jessica was her father's favorite and even lent a hand at minor operations.) Wilhelmina, or the She-Twin, possessed a "skirt pocket," too, but it contained nothing save a few very way-worn sweets, hoary chocolates, and stones to catapult Jack with. Jack was a fox terrier who went rabbiting, refusing to come to heed when so commanded.

"Now, Infants," said Vida, laying a hand on a shoulder of each of the Twins, "do keep your feet still. If you want to stay where you are, don't damage my ivy plants."

"I say," cried Willie, the He-Twin," "Vic Morris has got a girl!"

"I wish, Master William Calmont," retorted his sister, "that you would speak the King's English. You mean, I presume, that Mr. Ludovic Morris has engaged himself to be married."

"I mean nothing of the sort, and you know it," sneered her brother, trying to snatch a somewhat fresher rhubarb-stock out of her hand. "I mean Vic has got a girl and is going walks with her. I saw him. All our girls here are mad about it!"

With one voice his sisters denounced to the company the absolute unconditioned falsehood of Little Willie's statement.

"Mr. Morris," observed Wilhelmina, serenely, "has a sister, who has doubtless come to visit him. She stays with friends over at Garvie, and walks here through the Gormach woods. It's a wonder you have not seen her, Vida!"

"Sister—rubbish!" cried the He-Twin, shrilly, dominating the conversation. "I know sisters—I ought to, I've got three, haven't I? Little Willie doesn't look at sisters that way—no, nor put ties fresh and fresh every evening when we take them out to walk! Do we, brothers glorious?"

"Not much!" said Aaron and Herbert together, with their eyes fixed on Vida, to the absolute disregard of mere sisterly relationships.

"Why," said Wilhelmina, "you've all got your Sunday ties on now, and you were only coming over the wall with us!"

There fell a sudden silence after this remark. Aaron and Hur became interested in a fly-casting round Hur's hat which he held on his knee and turned round and round. The little music-mistress relieved the situation by asking when Aaron and Hur were going back to college. But before there was time to answer, the sound of a gong at the farther side of the doctor's wall caused the Healthy Family to rise and, with hasty unanimous fluttering, vault back over at the angle where the worn foot-holes were. Clump-clank they went on the cube sugar-box.

They bade no adieus. Apologies were not thought of. "By Jove, look sharp, I say," cried Wilhelmina, poking her twin to mount more quickly; "if you dally with our fate like that, father will have wolfed all the boiled mutton and new potatoes before we get there!"

"My favorite dish!" cried Willie; "why didn't you tell me. I will bound like a Barbary steed—

"My beautiful, my beautiful, that standest meekly by—" he sang as he got into position.

"That I just won't! Not when it's mutton with caper sauce! Stand meekly by yourself, Master Willie!"

And the whole conclave were gone in a swirl, like a flock of migratory birds that had alighted for a while on Vida's wall and garden-seat.

"Oh, thank heaven, they're gone!" said the little music-mistress, sinking back, "they were giving me a headache."

"They always give me a headache!" said a quiet voice from behind the trellis on which Old Abraham's tropeoleum was beginning to put forth its dainty crimson petals against the background of dark moss-green. "Yes, all the time!"

The two girls started up, and as they looked round, they caught sight of Philip Calmont, tall, lissom, and imperturbable—the least overpowering of the Healthy Family.

"Why, Phil, what are you doing there?" said Vida, "why haven't you gone to share in the mutton and caper sauce? They will eat it all up."

"I know they will," said Philip, resignedly, as he seated himself on the grass and nursed his knee, outlining the cap, and squinting with one eye to see how far it was off the straight. "And I don't care. They are always eating. It tires me, and then father is never the same two days running. We have got to have dinner at all sorts of hours, whenever he turns up off his 'round'!"

"Won't they miss you?" murmured the music teacher, gently. She had a weakness for all the oddments of the world, being herself one of the misfits and selvages of society.

"Miss me!" said Phil Calmont, looking down the long lean perspective of his leg to a rather shabby boot in the distance, "not while there is anything left to eat!—And I rather hoped—" he went on and then stopped.

"What did you hope, Phil?" Vida was smiling at him encouragingly.

"That you would give me some tea quietly, after the cormorants were out of the way. I knew they wouldn't stay long.

"Of course, Phil!" said Vida, gladly. And she moved toward the cottage. "Dick Fennan will be home in a quarter of an hour and you can have it with him!"

"Better give him a cup out here with us," said the music teacher, kindly. For she had seen Phil Calmont's face fall at the suggestion of Dick Finnan, which, however, Vida had made in all innocence.

"Oh, thank you!" said Phil, gratefully, in a low voice as Vida went to the cottage. "She's wonderful, isn't she?"

"Not so wonderful as I am!" said the little music mistress.

"Why?" asked Phil, looking up with wide, vague blue eyes, startled in her tone.

"Because I also am a woman and not jealous!"

BITS OF VERSE.

Why Shouldst Thou Fear?

If the sun has hid its light,
If the day has turned to night,
If the stars refuse to shine—
  Heart of man, lose not thy hope;
  Door, there's none that shall not ope;
  Path, there's none that shall not clear;
  Heart of man! why shouldst thou fear!

If for years should be thy quest,
If for years thou hast no rest,
If thou circlest earth and sea,
If thou worn and weary be—
  Heart of man, lose not thy hope;
  Door, there's none that shall not ope;
  Path, there's none that shall not clear;
  Heart of man' why shouldst thou fear!

—[Frederic Dewhurst.

Within This Heart of Mine.

Within this heart of mine a garden lies—a sere
  And sunless close
  Wherein from year to year
No blossom is of lily pale and tall, sweet rose
  Or violet mere;
But yet where one like me may grieve an hour, and pray,
  Perhaps, for kinder day;
  Or in some wakeful tide
Keep vigil 'twixt the sunset red and dawnlight gray,
  And dream of years forgotten, and abide.

—[James E. Richardson, in Everybody's Magazine.

The Last Word.

Creep into thy narrow bed,
Creep, and let no more be said;
Vain thy onset! all stands fast
Thou thyself must break at last.

Let the long contention cease!
Geese are swans, and swans are geese;
Let them have it how they will;
Thou art tired; best be still.

They out-talk'd thee, hiss'd thee, tore thee;
Better men fared thus before thee;
Fired their ringing shot and pass'd;
Hotly charged—and sank at last.

Charge once more, then, and be dumb!
Let the victors, when they come,
When the forts of folly fall!
Find thy body by the wall!

—[Matthew Arnold.

At the Ford.

When the rose means nothing but a rose;
  When storms are storms—not clouds on blue,
And rain means naught but cold and chill,
  Not tears of angels drifting through;
When grief means grief and nothing more,
  When sorrow's kiss is like a blow,
And when there is no hope of spring
  Beneath the earth's baptism of snow—
It will be age—not faithlessness,
  That stills the music in my throat.
Forget not how, when I was young,
  I knew my song and trilled each note.

IN the bogs of Ireland is often seen a glimmering light which dances here and there—and—disappears when people try to reach it.

They call that light the "Will-O'-The-Wisp."

You chase your "Will-O'-The-Wisps" in this country, Mr. Reader.

For instance when you buy a suit—

Very often you think to get Style—Fit and Shape permanence in that Suit—

It looks Good the day you try it on—it Fits nicely—But when you've worn it a week or so—you find it a Will-O'-The-Wisp Suit.

The shapeliness disappears—You have a Suit that has been improperly cut and tailored and that has had a shape and style merely pressed in temporarily by the Hot Flat Iron—Old Doctor Goose.

Isn't there some sign by which one can discriminate between Garments that act that way and those that Fit well—look stylish and hold their shape permanently?

There certainly is—and the easiest way to tell the difference is to see the label "Sincerity Clothes" in the Garment you buy.

For in "Sincerity Clothes" the shape and style and fit are permanently tailored into each garment—not merely pressed in temporarily.

It doesn't matter how much you wear them. "Sincerity Clothes" hold their shape—their style—as long as you'll want them to look right.

Yet they don't cost any more to buy than the ordinary—elusive "Will-O'-The-Wisp" style of a Garment that proves so disappointing.

Just see "Sincerity Clothes" at your better class Clothes Shop—see that the label below is in the next coat you buy. That label insures style, service and satisfaction.

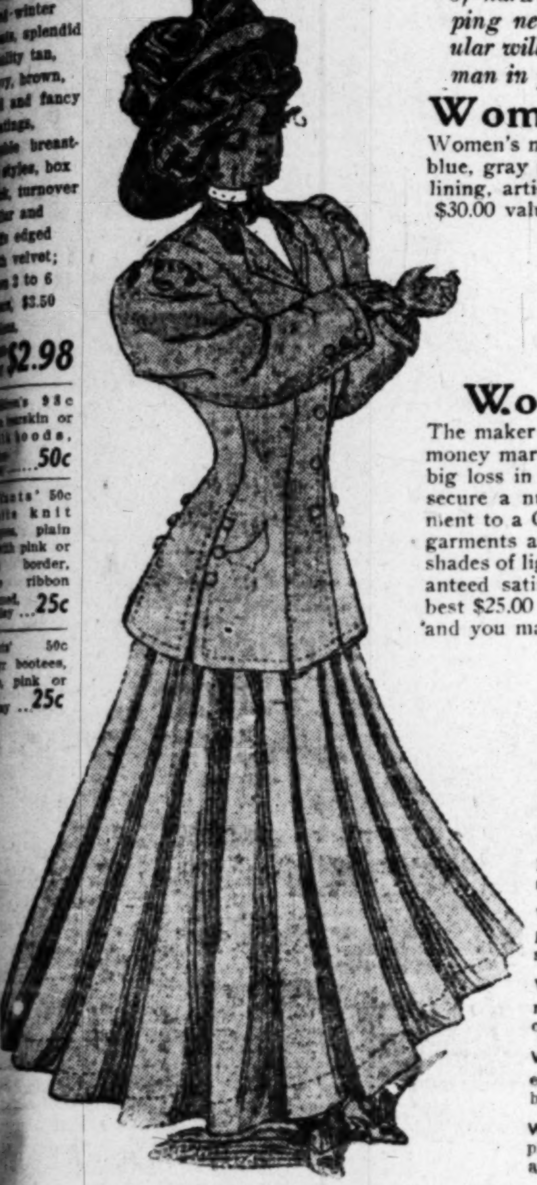
Never Before Was Such an Opportunity to Buy Suits, Cloaks and Furs

The pleasure and pride which attend the announcement of news so important as this, are given only on those seldom occasions when by dint of hard work, persistency, skill and good fortune is accomplished something truly remarkable, really great. In presenting this page of shopping news we reveal the results of months of conscientious labor, of irresistible endeavor to gather fall and winter stocks that, in every particular will excel. Embracing as it does nearly all sections of this favored store, this advertisement will be read with interest by every woman and man in position to take advantage of purchasing opportunities such as were never offered before.



Women's $30 Tailored Suits $22.50

Women's man tailored fall and winter suits, latest Prince Chap styles in rich blue, gray and brown suitings, coat with velvet collar and guaranteed satin lining, artistically designed and skillfully made, actual $30.00 values, Monday at $22.50

Womens $37.50 Tailored Suits $29.00

Women's man tailored fall and winter suits, three-quarter length fitted coats in cutaway style, lined with satin or taffeta silks, skirt plain or trimmed with folds. Materials are fancy serge and Panama in green, brown and blue. $37.50 values Monday at $29.00

Women's $25 Evening Coats $18.50

The maker of these coats became frightened at the recent excitement in the money market, thought the country was on the way to the dogs, and took a big loss in order to turn his stock into cash. We were fortunate enough to secure a number of his choicest evening coats which were awaiting shipment to a Chicago house that advertises this line as a leader at $25.00. The garments are made from splendid quality broadcloth in white and beautiful shades of light blue, brown and biscuit. They are lined throughout with guaranteed satin and richly trimmed with silk braid. They are probably the best $25.00 coats in the country. Our saving is yours, and you may choose for $18.50

Sample fine natural squirrel scarf, lined with brocaded satin. Worth $7.50, sample price $5.95.

Also a representative showing of fine fox and mink scarfs, ranging in value up to $95.00, all at one third less than regular price. It should be remembered that sample furs are subject to the inspection of the most critical fur buyers and consequently both making and selection of skins receive attention to a degree not often given regular lines. There are only one or two of a kind and the values are such that the entire lot will probably be closed out Monday. We urge every woman who anticipates the purchase of a fur scarf to examine these offerings as soon as possible.

PEOPLE. Interesting Men and Women and Their Doings the World Ove

HEREABOUTS.

MRS. CHARLES MULFORD ROBINSON has accompanied her noted husband on his trip to Los Angeles, and is receiving cordial attention from the club women of the city. She is a personality of decided interest, and her faith in the result of her husband's work for Los Angeles is a beautiful thing to encounter.

Among the visitors who are making a Mecca of Los Angeles are Prof. and Mrs. Herbert W. Gleason, who have met with royal attention in a social sense. Prof. Gleason's pictures of the mountains of the Coast are a liberal education, revealing the naturalist as well as the artist and the mountain lover. Mrs. Gleason is an old friend of Maude Powell, the violinist, who said yesterday that Los Angeles had afforded her the happiest evening of her life, when the representatives of the Celtic peoples offered her their poetic and graceful homage.

John C. Austin, the architect, left last week for New York to be gone several weeks. Mr. Austin went to meet his wife and family, who are on their way home from Europe after a visit of eight months on the continent.

Frank Sentous, who has been touring Europe, is on his way home and is expected here some time this week. Mr. Sentous has been away since spring.

Mrs. Thomas Catron of Santa Fé paid Los Angeles a brief visit last week. She departed after a two days' stay for Seattle, whence she sails for the Orient on a journey around the world. She will be joined at Hongkong by her husband, who for many years has been prominent in New Mexico politics and long represented that Territory as a delegate to Congress.

Harry J. Burdick of St. Louis arrived in Los Angeles yesterday. Mr. Burdick will spend several weeks here as a guest at the home of relatives on West Twenty-fifth street.

Frank Haines of Denver is in Los Angeles on a business visit. While here Mr. Haines will make a study of some of the manufacturing methods employed in the local iron and steel foundries.

Walter Davis of No. 2632 Hollenbeck road left yesterday for an extended tour of the East. Mr. Davis will spend the winter with friends in New York and probably will be gone a year.

Alfred Trident returned yesterday from Cananea. Mr. Trident has been engaged in inspecting the work on a railway line being rushed through that section of the country.

Henry Burris, who for many years was connected with the wholesale grocery trade at Arizona points, has allied himself with one of the prominent wholesale concerns of this city, and left yesterday for a tour of the principal towns of Arizona.

O. W. Stratton of the merchandise brokerage firm of Fuller, Leighton & Stratton, has returned from a business and pleasure trip throughout the eastern States.

W. P. Chase of the firm of W. P. Chase and Company, merchandise brokers of this city, will leave next week for an extended trip through the eastern States.

C. M. Bose, general manager of the Western Salt Company's business and plant at San Diego, has been in Los Angeles the past week. He states that the demand for salt from his concern has kept the plant running at its full capacity, and that there has been no opportunity to accumulate any surplus stock.

Rev. Paul Dillon, a native of Ireland and formerly of Washington, D. C., is a visitor at the cathedral of St. Vibiana. He will remain here for some time, and probably take up a parish on the arrival of Bishop Conaty.

Rush Bronson, editor of the Grizzly Bear, the official organ of the Native Sons, is away on a pleasure trip to San Francisco and other northern points.

C. B. McGehee of this city will sail next week from San Francisco on the steam[illegible]ia for Japan. He will tour Japa[illegible] then proceed to China and Manc[illegible] before his return to America. [illegible]s to spend three years in the Orient.

Dr. P. Stebbings of Kankakee, Ill., is here visiting his sister, Mrs. Huntington, and her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Bellows of No. 441 West Fifty-seventh street. The doctor will probably purchase residence property in the city and occupy it in early spring.

General Passenger Agent T. C. Peck of the Salt Lake is an author and his latest successful literary output is "Riverside, the City Beautiful." Author Peck sets forth the attractions of Riverside primarily for the purpose of inducing visitors to Southern California to go there, but at the same time he waxes enthusiastic over the beauties of the charming city and works in an amount of sentiment and romance which stamps him as an expert in railroad literature and a rival of Frank Miller of the Glenwood as a poetic raconteur.

A. W. Ryan, vice-president of the Central Trust Company, is an optimist as to the financial situation in Los Angeles. Speaking yesterday of present conditions he stated that he firmly believed the crisis is over and that it is now only a matter of a few days when perfect public confidence will be restored. The banks of Los Angeles, he said, are sound and well able to meet their obligations, and nobody has any reason to worry.

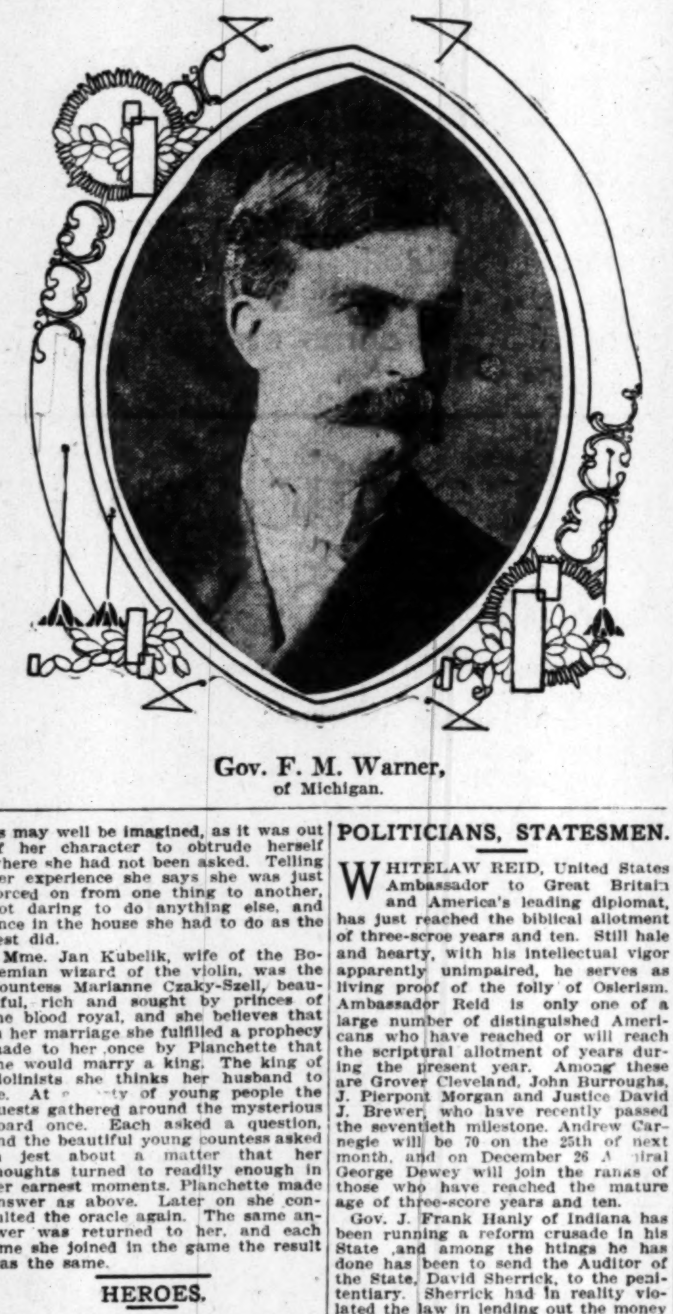
M. G. L. Todd of the King Brokerage Company and G. J. Gamble left today for Ventura county, where they have large interests in the bean and walnut business. They will be gone for about a week.

James McDermot of Denver, Colo., was a visitor on the Los Angeles market on Friday. He is closely connected with the large produce interests of Colorado and is investigating conditions existing in the fruit world here.

BEAUTIES.

MISS MIRIAM GILL, one of the belles of Brooklyn, N. Y., had a remarkably interesting experience in London this summer. While awaiting the time to attend a reception to which she had been invited, she called a cab and visited St. Margaret's Church. Entering the sacred precincts she seated herself to enjoy the beautiful interior, and in a few minutes noticed ushers in holiday attire escorting people up the aisles, several being shown into her own pew. At last royalty itself appeared. The King and Queen of England came forward, attended by obsequious ushers, and took a seat not far from our heroine. Promptly advanced the wedding party—a beautiful bride, a manly bridegroom and bridesmaids galore. In a few minutes, all was over, and the guests began to get into their carriages. Leaving the church her cabby took it for granted she was to go to the wedding reception, and drove in the regular line to the residence of the bride. Here, trembling, but determined to go through her difficult part without wavering, she mounted the steps and passed in the procession before the wedding party. Fortunately, she had her visiting card, and she knew that her clothes were all right. Down the line she moved with the other guests, shaking hands with the King and Queen among the rest. There was a fine collation, but Miss Gill decided that the sooner she could get away from these strangely-made new friends the better she should feel. Therefore she ate nothing. Once in her cab again, and driving to the house of the old friend she heaved a sigh of relief, as may well be imagined, as it was out of her character to obtrude herself where she had not been asked. Telling her experience she says she was just forced on from one thing to another, not daring to do anything else, and once in the house she had to do as the rest did.

Mme. Jan Kubelik, wife of the Bohemian wizard of the violin, was the Countess Marianne Czaky-Szell, beautiful, rich and sought by princes of the blood royal, and she believes that in her marriage she fulfilled a prophecy made to her once by Planchette that she would marry a king. The king of violinists she thinks her husband to be. At a party of young people the guests gathered around the mysterious board once. Each asked a question, and the beautiful young countess asked in jest about a matter that her thoughts turned to readily enough in her earnest moments. Planchette made answer as above. Later on she consulted the oracle again. The same answer was returned to her, and each time she joined in the game the result was the same.



Gov. F. M. Warner, of Michigan.

HEROES.

TO SAVE the lives of a score of men who were with him in a turret of a battleship during the target practice of the North Atlantic squadron off Cape Cod, Lieut. William Pigott Cronan of the Connecticut jammed his right hand into the breach of an eight-inch gun just as the block was being swung into position. The forefinger was cut off above the first joint and the rest of the hand badly mangled. Lieut. Cronan's presence of mind and his bravery prevented grains of powder that had sifted through a small hole in one of the bags of the charge that had been rammed into the gun from igniting after the block was screwed into place. Had the grains ignited the charge would have been exploded prematurely and the block hurled back into the turret, possibly killing or maiming every man there and imperiling the ship.

Within a few days, John Fone, a young American seaman now confined to his bed in the Naval Hospital, Baltimore, will leave for Washington, whence he will be presented with a gold medal personally by President Roosevelt as a reward for his remarkable bravery, which prevented the blowing up of the turret of the battleship Georgia, thus saving hundreds of lives. His face is badly disfigured and scarred from burns received while committing this heroic act. As it was ten lives were lost in the explosion that occurred on July 15 last, during target practice in Cape Cod Bay. Although partly stunned and badly burned by the explosion, Fone crawling on his hands and knees through sheets of fire and flame and smoke, succeeded in closing the breech of the left eight-inch gun, an act that prevented the blowing up of the entire turret, as the breech was open. When rescued from his horrible position, Fone's ears were nearly burned off and his body was in large parts without a particle of skin covering. Graftings were made from the bodies of physicians at the Chelsea (Mass.) Hospital and relatives to save his life.

EDUCATORS AND AUTHORS

DR. BASIL LANNEAU GILDERSLEEVE, professor of Greek and senior member of the faculty of Johns Hopkins University, has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his appointment to the professorship of Greek at the University of Virginia.

A result of Miss Hallie Rives's marriage to Post Wheeler, third secretary to the American Embassy at Tokio, and her residence at the Japanese capital, is to be a book from her pen dealing with the people of Japan. When Mrs. Wheeler went to the Flowery Kingdom she was tendered a wonderful reception at the Japanese capital.

Dr. P. J. Lennox, professor of modern literature at the Royal University of Ireland, who has received the appointment of professor of English literature at the Catholic University at Washington, is on the way to this country. A deputation representing the higher education and social circles of Dublin presented to him a farewell address on his leaving.

Thomas Nelson Page, the Virginia writer, has, it is announced, decided to go into the raising of mules on an extensive scale on a 1000-acre plantation near Beaver Dam, Va. The mule business will not interfere with his literary efforts.

Prof. William P. Brooks, director of the experiment station at Amherst, Mass., is doing excellent work for the benefit of the farmers of his State. He is at the head of a bureau of information on agricultural topics, to which the farmers have free access, and the station last year sent out 12,000 letters in response to queries.

Edmund Clarence Stedman has reached his seventy-fourth birthday, and the only obvious token of his somewhat advanced age is the fact that he is writing his reminiscences.

Prof. McMillan Brown, ethnologist, holds that the future Australian people will, in all probability, be black. The Polynesians, he said in a lecture at Sydney, came originally not from America, as has been supposed, but from Asia. They were whites and changed color just as the future Australian may do as the centuries go on, at least in the tropical regions of the north. The violet rays of the sun will turn him black in course of time.

POLITICIANS, STATESMEN.

WHITELAW REID, United States Ambassador to Great Britain and America's leading diplomat, has just reached the biblical allotment of three-scroe years and ten. Still hale and hearty, with his intellectual vigor apparently unimpaired, he serves as living proof of the folly of Oslerism. Ambassador Reid is only one of a large number of distinguished Americans who have reached or will reach the scriptural allotment of years during the present year. Among these are Grover Cleveland, John Burroughs, J. Pierpont Morgan and Justice David J. Brewer, who have recently passed the seventieth milestone. Andrew Carnegie will be 70 on the 25th of next month, and on December 26 Admiral George Dewey will join the ranks of those who have reached the mature age of three-score years and ten.

Gov. J. Frank Hanly of Indiana has been running a reform crusade in his State, and among the htings he has done has been to send the Auditor of the State, David Sherrick, to the penitentiary. Sherrick had in reality violated the law in lending out the money of the State, but he had followed the example of many predecessors, and his action had never been classed in the criminal category. Every dollar of the public funds was restored, and yet Sherrick had to go behind the bars. Dan Storms, Secretary of State at the time, was forced out of office and threatened with Sherrick's fate, but he also made good and migrated to Nevada, where he has been lucky enough to make a fortune in the gold mines, and has a prospect of being elected a Senator from his adopted State. None of the acts on the Hanly programme has sufficed to make a Joe Folk of him, and he will go out of office a very unpopular man."

The coming retirement of Enrique C. Creel as Ambassador to the United States from Mexico is confirmed by the Mexican State Department. Ambassador Creel has recently been elected Governor of the State of Chihuahua.

There is no question in the minds of people in Washington that former Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa, and now of New York, is one of the best after-dinner speakers in the country. He doesn't mind interruption and when on his feet is able to take care of himself in a way to command respect. On one occasion he was telling about life in his home State and how everybody there knew him so well that they called him by his first name. One of the guests sought to bring ridicule upon the then Secretary by shouting loudly: "Kiss me, O, kiss me, Leslie." Before the rest of the assemblage recovered from the shock caused by this familiarity the Secretary retorted: "There are some faces at which I draw the line."

Gov. Warner of Michigan and sixteen opposition Senators who constituted half the membership of the upper house had a hot wrangle. The Governor sent in a message vehemently criticising the opposition for defeating the legislation he had recommended. The opposition Senators, after paying half a dozen city policemen $5 each to round up a quorum, adopted a resolution scoring the Governor for "a startling misconception of his relation to a coördinate branch of the State government." The Governor's message was characterized as "a gross, unmanly and disingenuous attempt to use his constitutional power to get before the people a cheap political stump speech."

EXPLORERS.

THERE sailed last week a party of two determined men who have made up their minds to cross dark Africa from Zanzibar to the mouth of the Congo River. Peter MacQueen, the correspondent and writer, is leader of the party. He takes with him one of the most skilled outdoor photographers in the world, Mr. Peter Dutkewich. Mr. Dutkewich, MacQueen's companion and photographer, has perhaps seen more wild life and dangerous photography than any man now living. His experience at the monasteries of Thessaly were exciting, but tame compared to those he met in Thibet and Siberia hunting tigers. And these latter were ordinary routine alongside of the difficulties he encountered photographing the sacred elephant in the garden of the King if Siam, when he had to get the King's own brother to assist him in entering the domain. The bushmen in Australia gave Mr. Dutkewich good kangaroo hunting, but when he went to New Guinea the cannibals tried to eat him and use his camera as wood to do the cooking. He was saved only by producing dynamite, which the natives understood and feared. In the Philippine wars, in the Boxer rebellion and with Kuropatkin in the Russian army, Dutkewich did photographic duty that would have appalled the bravest soldier.

Maj. H. B. Hersey is an enthusiastic aëronaut. He was assigned by the United States Weather Bureau as meteorologist in the Wellman polar expedition and has only recently returned from the frozen north. He also aided Lieut. Lahm to capture the Bennett European airship trophy last year, snatching it away from some of the most experienced aëronauts of Europe. Maj. Hersey has been for twenty years in the service of the Weather Bureau. When the Spanish War broke out he joined the rough riders and was made junior major. His squadron, however, did not reach Cuba until just before the surrender of Santiago. He is in the prime of life and is of athletic build.

ARTISTS.

JULIAN STORY, the artist, has arrived in Philadelphia for the winter. During the past summer he has been in Europe, spending a portion of the time in Paris, where he has a house, and at his country home at Vallombrosa, near Florence. As soon as his studio is put in order he will begin work on a number of portraits of prominent Philadelphians.

The American painter, John S. Sargent, clings fast to his American citizenship, notwithstanding the fact that his name occasionally gets onto the voters' lists in the English community where he lives. It is understood that Mr. Sargent would have been knighted some time ago had he consented to expatriate himself.

Arthur Matthews, who has been at work for some months on a series of paintings for the Oakland Free Library, has recently completed the fifth panel, which he calls "The Soil," to be placed in the reading-room. There are eight in the series, and Matthews has pust commenced the sixth, named "The Harvest." These panels will be hung on opposite sides of the library, four in the reading-room and four in the reference-room, the latter group occupying spaces of eleven by twelve feet. "The Soil" will be hung in about ten days. Matthews expresses the opinion that the only proper exhibition of art is within a library, or small private gallery. He decries the large galleries and so-called museums of art for their oftentimes bizarre collections and chronological arrangement for the mere purposes of history.

Miss Mariette Cockton, an American artist, who lives in London, is at present in Paris and is engaged in painting a portrait of the famous sculptor, Auguste Rodin, which as soon as it's finished, will be exhibited in New York.

M. Rodin, the famous sculptor, has been at work on a bust of Bernard Shaw, the English dramatist, and on another of Mlle. De Munster, daughter of the ex-German Ambassador to France. These busts are in marble, as is also a fine bust of Napoleon I, which M. Rodin is executing for G. W. Simpson, the well-known lawyer of New York, but which is not yet finisred. M. Rodin has also just completed a bronze of M. Leygues, the well-known ex-Minister of the French colonies. The splendid new statue of Victor Hugo, by Rodin, who knew the poet in his later days, is for the Luxembourg Gallery. It represents the poet as a demi-god.

OVER THE SEA.

PRINCES VICTORIA, the only daughter of the Kaiser, who will marry Prince Leopold of Battenberg, is known as "the spoiled child" and "boss" of the Emperor's house. Last year she was stage struck.

Sir Gilbert Parker is only forty-five years of age, having been born in Canada in 1862. He is in its best sense a cosmopolitan, a man of the world, for he is not only familiar with America and Europe and Egypt, the South Sea Islands and Australia, but has studied the people of those lands with sympathy and insight. He first attracted attention in the early '90s by some short stories of marked and distinctive quality, located in the Canadian Northwest, a region with which he was personally familiar; and good judges declared then that he was destined to go far and rise high. A novel followed, then another; and then came the tremendous success of "The Right of Way," and it seemed evident that Gilbert Parker's place in literature would be permanent.

King Alfonso of Spain is very fond of the sea. He and Queen Victoria Eugenie find one of their greatest pleasures at San Sebastian in the long daily swim. Both are perfectly at home in the water, the young Queen having early acquired the art of swimming in Solent waters.

The Duke of Argyll possesses a curious avenue of trees on his estate near Loch Fyne. Every one has been planted by a distinguished person and bears an inscription as to when and by whom it was set in the ground.

The Hon. Henry Coventry, who, according to the cable dispatches, has just become engaged to Mrs. E. Kip McCreery, daughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Lawrence Kip, of New York, niece of the late Pierre Lorillard, and divorced wife of Richard McCreery, of San Francisco, is the third son of Lord Coventry, and his principal claims to distinction thus far are the fact that at the age of twenty-four or thereabouts he took part in the Jameson raid into the Transvaal, added to which he has achieved fame as a cricketer, as a master of the hounds, and as a tennis champion. Moreover, two of his brothers, Lord Deerhurst and the Hon. Charles Coventry, have married Americans, Lady Deerhurst being the daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Bonynge, of San Francisco, and niece of Gov. Stephens of Missouri, while Charles Coventry has as wife the daughter of Fitzhugh Whitehouse of Newport and New York.

King Edward has a great liking for Sir Edward Campbell-Bannerman and recently paid him the distinguished compliment of sending him an invitation, written entirely by his own hand, to spend a week with him on Deeside, and it is understood that the Premier has accepted the invitation and will be one of the King's first visitors.

HUMBLE WORKERS.

MISS ROSE L. FRITZ of New York, who has successfully defended her title of champion typewriter against Paul Hunter of Chicago, made a record for one hour's copying from manuscript of 5619 words, which, with 81 errors, each one of which counted five words off, gave her a net score of 5214, or an average of 87 words a minute, one word a minute better than her previous record. Mr. Hunter's net score was 3573. He had many errors, and an average of 60 words a minute. Carl Schenck of Chicago, finished third with an average of 59 words.

J. N. Wilber, master mechanic of the Burlington shops at Hannibal, Mo., has tendered his resignation, effective January 1, 1908. Mr. Wilber has been connected with the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railway for fifty years. He entered their employ on December 1, 1857, and has since served in various capacities.

A few days ago David Pingree, of Salem, Mass., bought several hundred thousand acres of the "wild lands" of Maine, thereby becoming possessor of a tract of land larger than the entire State of Rhode Island. It is the best hunting ground in the eastern part of the United States.

John O'Neill, track elevation expert of Chicago, has resigned his $5000 job. The reason given by O'Neill was that he was getting too old to work longer. He was 75 at his last birthday. John O'Neill was known as the "father of track elevation in Chicago." He introduced in the Council the first track elevation ordinance, that for the Illinois Central just before the world's fair, and afterwards was the champion of track elevation in the Council until in 1896 the position of track elevation expert was created and Mayor Swift appointed him to the place. He has held it ever since. He has been in public life in Chicago for thirty years. His first office was that of county commissioner, and then he was elected alderman from the old Thirty-fourth Ward, comprising Pullman and Kensington. He left the Council to take the place he has quit.

SPORTING.

AS A rule, when Queen Alexandra is in Denmark she and her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, with Princess Victoria, all go on great fishing expeditions to Lake Esrom. The Queen always uses a small light rod and the smallest fly, while Princess Victoria uses a heavier one. The more practical Princess Royal uses a hickory-wood rod, and she has designed an excellent fishing lure, which she has named the Mar Lodge fly. The Princess is the most expert angler in the royal family, and beats even her father, the King, and the Prince of Wales in playing a salmon. Her favorite ground is just above the Linn of Dee, where she lands salmon which usually weigh from ten to twelve pounds each, but her finest record was two or three years ago, when she creeled two salmon weighing together over eighty pounds.

Mme. Camille du Gast, who has long been in French eyes the most complete woman of sports in the country, is about to add another attempt to her former achievements. She lives in a beautiful house in the Rue Leroux, off the Avenue du Bois, and in the stable adjoining her house she is having built an aëroplane, with which she expects to surprise Parisians next spring. Mme. du Gast, who has just returned from a government mission to Morocco, first attracted attention two years ago by driving her own car in the Paris-Vienna automobile race. Next, she built a balloon, fitted with a parachute arrangement which covered the entire gas reservoir. By pulling a cord the balloon was made to collapse, and the monster parachute would cause the car to descend gently to the earth. Several times she amused herself by enjoying the sensation of dropping 3000 feet. Her next achievement was to pilot her motor boat, the Camille, in the race across the Mediterranean. The boast was swamped, and she was rescued in a fainting condition by a French cruiser. Last spring she started off for Morocco to fulfill a mission given her by the French Ministry of Agriculture. Her report is said to be awaited with interest, for she went where no white man, much less a white woman, has gone, and collected much valuable material in regard to the possibility of establishing French farms in Morocco. She has brought back with her herds of goats and sheep, which now roam within the confines of the Jardin d'Acclimation, in the Bois de Boulogne. Already possessing the Palmes Academiques for her literary efforts, her latest exploit has brought her a second decoration, that of the Merite Agricole.

STAGE FOLK.

ON KUBELIK'S recent English tour he was booked to give a concert in a town not many miles from Manchester. Weeks before, every seat in the vast hall had been sold. On the day and time of the concert, Kubelik walked onto the platform to give his opening number, when he was greeted with remarkable enthusiasm, the applause lasting fully five minutes. Immediately behind Kubelik was a vast orchestra, holding 750 people, which was packed to its utmost capacity. Kubelik started to play, and continued for a space of a couple of minutes, when he heard some one at the back of him fall. He immediately turned round, to find out the cause of the noise, and a curious sight he viewed. On the ground at his feet lay a pretty little girl, apparently about 6 years of age, and it would appear that, owing to the crush on the orchestra, the child had been forced onto the stage. Kubelik took the situation in with a glance, and, with his characteristic charm, he immediately laid his violin down on the piano and stooped down and picked up the child, which was none the worse for her little mishap. Not content with this, Kubelik took the flower out of his coat and handed it to the little stranger, and, with courtly manner, conducted her to her seat. He then took up his violin and tried to resume his playing, but the audience would not allow him to continue until they had shown their appreciation of his kind act.

The fame of William Vaughn Moody is spreading. Arrangements are pending for the presentation of "The Great Divide" in Paris, Berlin, Madrid and Rome. The four translations are well under way, and plans have been finished for the appearance of Henry Miller and Miss Margaret Anglin in the work in London in the spring. Miss Anglin accordingly has abandoned her projected tour of Australia and New Zealand. The coming one will be her first appearance on the London stages.

Doris Keane, who jumped into great popularity in London through her portrayal of her original role in "The Hypocrites," sailed from that city for New York last Wednesday on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Almost immediately upon her arrival in New York Miss Keane will begin rehearsals of an important role in a new comedy by William Gillette, which Charles Frohman is to produce in December.

HUMANITARIANS.

COUNTESS ADA VON BOOSFARRAR, the Swedish peeress, has formed a club, composed of prominent New Yorkers, who will build a home where the children of criminal parents will be trained and educated until they are of a self-supporting age. She means to pass a large portion of her own time in personal contact with the inmates of the home, and, with that life work in view, is making a study of the actual lives and needs of the children in the slums, learning their environment and conditions. These influences she intends to counteract by personal associations, as the moral training in the home will be entirely in her hands. She has spent much time in New York visiting the lowest quarters of the city in the study of the conditions of children. The Countess is a young woman under 30, of tall, commanding presence, with dark hair and bright eyes, and a smile that readily wins the children to her. Her manner toward them is one of frank comradeship, and there is not one trace of the grand lady in the simply dressed, friendly young woman on her slumming expeditions.

Nathan Straus of New York has offered the municipality of Liverpool a pasteurizing plant for the preparation of milk for infants, and the same has been accepted with gratitude. The plant will cost $2000, and besides defraying this expense Mr. Straus has arranged to have his medical adviser visit Liverpool to superintend the installation. It is not yet known what the decision of the Dublin City Council will be in regard to a similar offer made by Mr. Straus through Richard Croker, who, in communicating the proposal, described Mr. Straus as one of the greatest philanthropists in America.

Prince John of Liechtenstein, who likewise rejoices in the singularly appropriate Christian name of Placidus—appropriate because he never troubles or disturbs in any manner his 9000 subjects, who form the population of his sixty-four-square-mile sovereignty—has just turned over to the Order of St. Vincent de Paul a beautiful building which he has caused to be constructed, together with the large park in which it stands, in one of the most picturesque portions of Styria, for use as an institution for the care of incurable cases of cancer until death brings relief from suffering. He has likewise given a large sum of money for the endowment and maintenance of the institution, which, differing from hospitals, where people go to be cured, is in reality a home for the dying. This is only one more to a long list of similar philanthropic establishments which owe their creation and existence to his initiative and generosity. In fact, it is doubtful whether there is any reigning sovereign in Europe who has a greater number of deeds of charity and for the relief of suffering, to his credit, than Prince John of Liechtenstein.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

WHILE Alfred Du Pont, vice-president of the powder company of that name, is at Fontanet arranging to rebuild several hundred houses for the residents of that stricken town and settling the claims of the injured or the persons dependent upon the thirty-one who were killed on the day of his wedding in Wilmington, Del., his bride is visiting the hospital in Terre Haute and cheering the thirty patients there. The Du Ponts had planned a wedding trip in a motor car, but when the young husband learned of the disaster he went directly to the scene. Mrs. Du Pont knew no one in Terre Haute, but she has plunged into the work of comforting the injured and bereaved with a will, and aside from luncheon at the Country Club she has accepted no social invitations.

Mrs. Ida Webster of Pratt county, Kansas, has harvested 8000 bushels of wheat and 3000 bushels of corn from her 800-acre farm this fall. The place was cultivated under her personal supervision and twelve men worked for her all the year around, with many more in harvest time. Her husband died twelve years ago and left her the place and its mortgage. Since then she has paid off the mortgage and is now supposed to be worth $50,000.

Mrs. Chester Griswold of New York is planning "a replica of that most luxurious bath of ancient Rome," for the pleasure and comfort, it is stated, of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Le Grand C. Griswold. As Nero's bath was supplied with salt water from the sea, so Mrs. Griswold will pipe for salt water in the bay. Her bath is to be of "marble and onyx, with gold and silver trimmings, and jeweled lamps."

FRESH LITERATURE.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY A TIMES REVIEWER.]

A Modern Epic.

THE TEDDYSEY. By Otho Cushing. Life Publishing Company, New York. (Price $1.)

Otho Cushing, the well-known artist and illustrator, has embodied some of the most salient episodes of President Roosevelt's meteoric career in a little book of sketches and text entitled "The Teddysey." Taking Homer's Odyssey as his model, Mr. Cushing has made the President, instead of Ulysses, his hero, and in artistic line drawings, classic in style, has pictured such events as the President's early hunting exploits, the battle of San Juan Hill, the victorious return from the Cuban war, and his election to the Presidency.

Mr. Cushing's drawings are caricatures, of course, but they treat their subject with the dignity due his office and his distinguished personality. They are funny, but the fun is entirely good-natured. The President's countless admirers will welcome this artistic addition to the literature created by him and about him.

Short Stories.

LAID UP IN LAVENDER. By Stanley J. Weyman, author of "A Gentleman of France," "Under the Red Robe," etc. Longmans, Green & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Mr. Weyman's short stories of modern life are by no means as entertaining as his historical novels, though these, too, have plenty of incident. The tales are told with a certain directness that will doubtless appeal to those who care for a story for its own sake, but the man in search of a finer and more subtle art will be disappointed. Mr. Weyman is never in the least analytical. Why these particular stories should be "laid up in lavender" is somewhat problematical. Certainly, no particularly delicate aroma of delight has been made to cling to them.

Biblical Literature.

THE SOUL OF THE [illegible] By Ulysses G. B. Pierce. American [illegible]tarian Association, Boston. (Price [illegible])

This is a book of considerable interest and importance in the field of Biblical literature, and contains selected passages from the Old and New Testaments and the Apocrypha arranged as synthetic readings in Biblical order. It is edited and arranged by Ulysses G. B. Pierce, and contains an introduction from the pen of Edward Everett Hale.

To those who wish correlated parts of the Bible, and parallel or similar lines of thought represented in a single reading, in which is presented unity and coherence of thought, these selected passages will supipy a long-felt want.

Each reading is a literary unit, dealing with but one subject, and calculated to make a definite religious impression. In each selection the whole Bible is drawn upon as needed to develop the subject. Isolated passages are brought into natural relation with the larger thought of which they are gene[illegible] parts, thus utilizing many short passages of great beauty and power, which would otherwise be neglected because of their fragmentary character.

The book is provided with a list of its readings suitable for various occasions, an index of the more familiar religious topics, and with a general index. The selections are representative of what is best in the Bible, and the method of selection adopted is such as to reveal to the reader "the soul of the Bible."

[illegible] a Better Religion.

A PROPHET IN BABYLON. By W. J. Dawson. The Revell Company, New York. (Fowler Bros., Los Angeles. Price $1.50.)

One does not have to read more [illegible] a few pages in this book before [illegible] experiences the pleasant sensation [illegible] a well-written story gives. The [illegible] writes with unusual literary [illegible] and his characters are clear cut [illegible] vivid. He is what George Ade [illegible] a good describer; all that and [illegible], for he writes of a theme that [illegible] moved and quickened his own [illegible]. Scathingly he denounces the [illegible] and methods of many of the churches of today. But where he tears down and denounces, he is also ready to build up, and passionately advocates "The union of all who love in the service of all who suffer."

"A Prophet in Babylon"—a challenge of today and a vision of tomorrow, is the story of a clergyman, told by a man who was one himself. John Gaunt, the hero, is a brilliant young minister, who, for seven years, has preached to his own satisfaction and that of his large congregation. The story opens at the time when, for several reasons, the congregation is growing smaller and the deacons of the church are met to look into the matter of empty pews and small collections. The author shows an intimate knowledge of such gatherings, and has had dealings with just such men as he describes—the wizened, penurious Deacon Roberts, whose cry is "Reduce expenses; we must [illegible] our clothes according to our [illegible]," and Deacon Hocking, "a large [illegible] whose bluff manners covered an [illegible] bareness of sentiment." Lastly, Deacon Small, who gives the keynote [illegible] his character when he says: "This [illegible] always been a church for the [illegible], and it changes its character [illegible] are many of us who will not care [illegible] in it."

[illegible] outcome of this meeting is to [illegible] John Gaunt declare that he will [illegible] longer be a "seller of rhetoric—a paid preacher of literary ser[illegible] for the rich." Thenceforth he [illegible] under a new banner, "The [illegible] of Service," its emblem a [illegible] with a child in her arms. [illegible] he succeeds, how his wife, whom [illegible] did not expect would be with him [illegible] new movement, proves a most [illegible]thetic helper, makes a story well [illegible] reading. There is a charming love story woven in the plot, [illegible] the main point is for a better and [illegible] religion than we have at [illegible]. "The church of the future [illegible] be found outside the churches," [illegible] "It will not be called a [illegible]. It will have neither creeds [illegible] nor subscriptions. Its laws [illegible] freedom; its conditions, service. [illegible] unite all men who love hu[illegible] in the common service of hu[illegible]. It will be a society of equals. [illegible] worship Christ, but neither as [illegible] man; rather as a Living [illegible] in all men. It will be in[illegible] pitiful, so pitiful that the life [illegible] bruised will be certain of its [illegible]."

Adventurous Story.

[illegible]TLEMAN OF FORTUNE. By H. C. [illegible] D. Appleton & Co., New York.

[illegible] Raoul de Tout le Monde, as [illegible] facetiously called himself, was a [illegible] the Dutch and Spanish wars [illegible] sixteenth century. "Your good fortune, Peter Minor, marry her in a mask."

"Look you, sir, look you," the alderman's voice rose high," this is not a jest, it is an affair of business."

"Oh, fiery love," sighed Raoul.

"And I come to you and I ask what do you advise, for you—"

"Advise? I advise, corbleu, that Peter Minor content himself with the life of virginity. So shall it be best for some woman and the world."

The book abounds in satirical sayings about marriage, and women, and life in general. The hero falls in love many times, always to his sorrow, until finally he rescues a fair and wealthy maid from the tortures of the Spanish Inquisition, and escapes with her to England where they are wedded. All in all this story is well worth reading.

Worth Reading.

HIS WIFE. By Warren Cheney. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)

This is a powerful story of bitter trials suffered by two innocent people. The scene is in Alaska, and the opposite Siberian shore prior to the Seward purchase, and the characters are Russians, employés and dependents of a great fur company. Laboring under the delusion that his suddenly-deceased wife is not really dead, but gone from him temporarily, Luka Strukof leaves Cook's Inlet for Siberia in search of her. There, in the person of Lisa, his brother Egor's betrothed, he believes he has found her. Lisa, who never loved Egor, and was to marry him merely to please her parents, falls in love with Luka and agrees to clandestinely depart with him for Alaska. At the very moment they are starting, the brother appears, and in the ensuing fight he is stabbed and left for dead, and Lisa, putting the unconscious Luka into the waiting carriage, starts with him for the coast. At a village forty versts away the pair are detained for many days, and when the wounded man comes to his senses he is also in his right mind, and does not know his nurse. When she finally explains all that has happened, it is an awful moment for both. He did not love her; even if he did the fact that he had slain his brother would always stand as a barrier between them; but the woman could not go back, and it was agreed that they should live together as man and wife in name only. Even marriage rites, they felt, were denied them.

All the time Lisa loved him with all her heart and soul—and in time he returned her affection in full, but still that awful death of his brother held them apart. Then in that desolate region to which they went, one Ivan Ignatich, Egor's former clerk, finds Lisa and forces her to meet him clandestinely and pay him from time to time to keep still about what he knows of the past. Her sufferings are doubled, and Luka's heart is torn with jealousy and doubt of her purity. But the reader shall have the pleasure of learning for himself the outcome of their awful trials. The reviewer ventures to predict that the story will be dramatized, and in that form also add to its author's fame and profit.

Religious Quackery Satire.

COMRADE JOHN. By Samuel Merwin and Henry K. Webster. The Macmillan Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

This is the third story collaborated by Messrs. Merwin and Webster, and it is a good one. Two of the three important characters in the book are altogether attractive and sympathetic; but the third, and in some respects the most important and striking of the three, while a no less interesting personage than the others, is vastly less likable. In the first pages of the book Herman Stein is set before the reader in no uncertain light: a heavy, determined man, who, after innumerable failures, has achieved fame as the author of a book and the founder of a religious cult. Stein's immense determination and a kind of personal magnetism have enabled him to use the brains of better and cleverer men for his own advancement. This is precisely what he tries to do with young John Chance, an architect, who is not in altogether good standing with his associates in the profession, but who has done wonderful things in the kind of ultra-modern architecture represented by such places as "Luna Park," at Coney Island. The third character in the trio is a young woman whom John sees for the first time when he rescues her from a mob in Paris, and whom he meets next as a disciple of Henry Stein, with whom he has also become associated.

The story centers around the struggles between these two men, equally determined and audacious, for the possession of the woman. The scene of the struggle is in the religious community which Stein has brought together and for which Chance has provided—at an enormous price—the outward setting. The whole thing is actually a satire on the religious quackery so common these days, and the satire is all the more effective because it is all indirect, and, so to speak, oblique. Apparently the only intention of the authors has been to tell an interesting story, and in this they have succeeded. In novelty of subject, ingenuity of plot and incident, this is one of the best stories of the season.

Readers of Owen Wister's "The Virginian," remember as one of the curious facts in relation to that book that the heroe's name was never mentioned. So also in this religious community the members are known only by their first names, prefixed by the title "Comrade." The heroine is introduced as Comrade Cynthia, and it is not until the end is reached in this story that one realizes not only that the reader has not heard her last name, but that Comrade John himself, on his way to marriage with her has not heard it, and the book closes before the secret is divulged.

A Soul Affinity Story.

THREE WEEKS. By Elinor Glyn. Duffield & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

In her preface to this American edition of "Three Weeks," the author tells us that in England the story was not only misunderstood, but scathingly denounced by the narrow-minded public. She believes that we will treat it differently, and agree with her view of certain social questions. This is the story: A queen, wife of as dissolute and beastly a man as ever lived, falls in love with a young Englishman, a fresh, clean, healthy youth, and he becomes deeply in love with her. They live together for three weeks in Switzerland and Italy, and then for reasons of state she is obliged to return to her kingdom and palace. A year later the youth receives a letter from her announcing the birth of a beautiful son to them, and appointing a meeting at a certain time and place. Just as the young lover is about to land at the rendezvous, the drunken king stabs her to death. The child lives and in him the all but broken-hearted father finds his consolation.

The author takes the stand that a woman, irrevocably wedded to a man so low and beastly that he is an object of loathing, has every right to love, and live with, some other man whom she can love and esteem. As to that the reviewer has no opinion to give, except to say that it would be without doubt better for young readers had the story never been written.

In War Days.

THE WELDING. By Lafayette McLaws. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.50.)

In following the eventful career of the hero, David Twiggs Hamilton, the ambitious son of a Georgia cracker, who receives his education through the generosity of Alexander H. Stephens, the author deals with many events of historical interest and gives life-like glimpses of such notable men as Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Daniel Webster, Jefferson Davis, Stevens, Greeley, Lincoln, Grant, Lee and others of the period of the Civil War.

Beginning with graphic pictures of southern life before the war—cotton picking, camp meetings, slave auctions—the story deals with the Fugitive Slave Law debate in Congress, John Brown at Harper's Ferry, Daniel Webster's 7th of March speech, Alexander H. Stevens's anti-secession speech, the South Carolina convention, election of Jefferson Davis, President Lincoln's inauguration, the firing at Fort Sumpter, Lincoln's call for troops, Robert E. Lee's decision, the first battle of Bull Run and the flight to Washington, the Emancipation Proclamation and the South's reply, the battle of Gettysburg, the fall of Richmond, the surrender at Appomattox, and ending with the assassination of Lincoln.

The author notes and studies those elements in the beginnings of the republic that developed and made inevitable the friction and disruption culminating in the Civil War; shows the strength and weakness of conflicting sectional interests in national politics, and finally pictures the welding of those interests into the promise of a united nation. She has taken a large view of the question, and the book has the vigor and life that come from a vital personal interest in the subject, such as the daughter of a prominent Confederate general should have.

Throughout the story runs an interesting and exciting love tale, which, with the graphic description of David Twiggs's trials and struggles to rise from the lowly place in which we first find him, makes this, all in all, a very entertaining as well as an instructive contribution to recent literature.

Seven Short Stories.

MORTMAIN. By Arthur Train. D. Appleton & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

There are several fair stories in this collection of seven. The best is perhaps the first one, which gives the volume its title. Sir Richard Mortmain has an accident requiring the amputation of his hand, and on the stump is successfully grafted another one, bought at great price of a man who dies from the loss of it. This places Mortmain in a bad situation, for it is in law a murder. Also, the man who sold the hand was a criminal, a much-wanted one, and the police have a record of his thumb print. One does not see how Mortmain can possibly escape the consequences of this, and another charge of murder, done by the seller of the hand; but the author, who is a lawyer, relieves our feelings by turning the whole thing into a nightmare.

Perhaps the best of the other stories is "The Little Feller," the tale of a little Jewish sweat-shop worker, who loved his still smaller brother and made heroic sacrifices for him.

A Strong and Tragic Story.

THE MEDIATOR. By Edward H. Steiner. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Los Angeles, Fowler Bros. (Price $1.50.)

This is the story of a Jew and his people in the Old World and the New, and it centers around Samuel Abraham, son of a Jewish rabbi, and destined by his father to the same calling. The faith of his fathers does not appeal to the lad, and he begins studying for the Roman Catholic priesthood, to the utter horror and despair of the stern old rabbi.

When nearly ready to take orders he leaves the convent under very unhappy and tragic circumstances, and is persuaded by his old nurse's husband to go to America and try his fortunes there. This Pavel gives his views of us and our customs quite freely: "Over in America we can get married so fast we don't know what has happened," he tells Samuel. "Why, over there a man sees a woman on the street, and if he likes her he says to her: 'Will you marry me?' She looks him over, he jingling the money in his pockets, and she will say: 'You bet your boots I will.' So they go to a man called justice of the peace, but he is responsible for more war than the Sultan of Turkey."

Whether it is such descriptions as this that are responsible for Samuel's departure for America, we don't know, but go he does. His experiences from the time he leaves Russia until he succeeds in winning the love of Jane Bruce, a handsome and noble young woman, are soul stirring, pathetic, tragic. The story has little or no plot, and is rather a series of vivid descriptions of a man striving to do right as he sees the right, and of the Jewish people. Prof. Steiner understands the emotional nature of the Jews, and has keen sympathy for their sufferings. His descriptions of the people at work and at play, loving and dying, and in such a variety of places—in Russian peasants' huts, in the streets, dance halls, hospitals and slums of New York—are particularly true to life. We predict a wide reading of his book.

A Nation Eulogized.

POLAND, THE KNIGHT AMONG NATIONS. By Louis E. Van Norman. The Revell Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

Mr. Van Norman is associate editor of the American Review of Reviews and an able student of world politics. When he went to Poland to study conditions there, and the people, he straightway fell in love with, and married, the daughter of one of her distinguished patriots. Therefore, in love and seeing things through his wife's eyes, it is no wonder that unwittingly his judgment has been warped and in his book of 360 pages he has given us an idealized account of the country and its inhabitants.

Poland has had her patriots and other great men—Kosciusko, John Sobieski, Chopin and Sienkiewicz—whose stories the author retells, and she has had others to whose doors most of her misfortunes can be laid. Her real story is one of stupid dissension and incompetence, except when at rare intervals a strong man was in the saddle.

We have within the borders of the United States 2,000,000 Polish Jews, the least attractive branch of the Jewish race. Perhaps that is one reason why we cannot see Poland with Mr. Van Norman's eyes, nor feel much interest in his subject. On the other hand, Mme. Modjeska, who writes the introduction to the volume, after congratulating us upon being the first to "discover" Sienkiewicz, informs us that "it is so clear, so interesting, so pleasantly written, so fair and discriminating, that one does not want to put it down until he has read the whole book."

Fifty Thousand Years Ago.

THE GREAT PYRAMID JEEZEH. By Louis P. McCarty. Published by the author at San Francisco. (Price, cloth, $5; red leather, $6.)

For thirty-five years the author has used all his spare time in the preparation of this interesting and original book of 588 pages. Interesting not only to antiquarians, Egyptologists and scientific students, but to the general public as well. It is not a book, however, to be read by any one in a few hours, or even a few days, for one has to don his thinking cap and keep it on, from the first to the last line. Mr. McCarty asks for what purpose the pyramid was built, by whom it was built, and for what purpose it was built, and answers the questions to his own satisfaction, at least. Readers who differ with him as to his conclusions will at least have acquired much valuable information regarding the great structure.

We are informed that it was built not 4000 years ago, but 50,000; more accurately, 55667 B.C., when the star "A Draconis" was in a direct line with the Pole and looked straight down the (present) passageway on the north side of the building. These occurrences only take place every 25,800 years; the last occurrence, and the only one during our present civilization, was in 2170 B.C.; the next one will occur in 23630 A.D.

The massive structure was built by a race of people that preceded our race, or any race now on the face of the earth, our author says, which was swept away by the last cataclysm. They exhibited a knowledge so much superior to the wisest of our present population that a comparison can scarcely be made between the extremes of intelligence and ignorance on the face of our globe today. Nor will we attain, as a race, to their standard of scientific knowledge, until such time has elapsed as will equal the past genealogy of this lost race, which was most certainly thousands of years.

The pyramid was built, he concludes, as an initiatory asylum from which all "secret orders," and especially the Masons, are partial imitations. He claims that the builders had a higher knowledge of mathematics than we, and that it would be impossible, with all the combined knowledge and skill of existing nations, to duplicate the building in its entirety. Even if we could prepare the different parts, we could not place them in their present perfect condition by any known process.

Mr. McCarty is a well-known Californian. For thirty-five years he has published the "Statistician and Economist" in San Francisco. We commend his book to our readers and hope it may meet with the success it deserves.

The Housekeeper celebrates its thirtieth anniversary by issuing a double number. In fiction there is a long Thanksgiving story by Edith Livingstone Smith and short stories by Emily Ruth Calvin, F. J. Splitstone and Mary Wheaton Vorse. One of the most interesting pages is a reprint of short extracts through the thirty years, the references to antiquated styles and fads being of special interest to women. There are several excellent cookery pages devoted to the celebration of Thanksgiving festival and the other departments of the home are amply covered.

"Rubber Is Death."

Herbert Strang's new book, "Fighting on the Congo" (The Bobbs-Merrill Co.) gives the story of a boy's adventures in Congo land, where the natives under King Leopold's terrible and extortionate rule, have the proverb that "Rubber is death." It is designed to foster the spirit of chivalry in our youths, and at the same time it gives us a very clear idea of the terrible butcheries and unspeakably cruel outrages to which the helpless people have been subjected by the white men. Some of them are almost unbelievable, yet the Rev. J. H. Harris and wife, for several years missionaries on the Upper Congo, vouch for their truthfulness.

The author's descriptions of the African forest are good, and we are made acquainted with the queer little pygmies who inhabit a section of it; dwarf men but prodigious eaters, one of them devouring fifty or sixty bananas at a meal with perfect ease and avidity. Jack, the hero, had many adventures with the wild men and animals of the country, and with King Leopold's officials, but he outfought and outgeneraled all of them. We can recommend the book as a safe and interesting one for our young people, and of interest to grown-up readers also.

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

The public has a deep-seated interest in Gertrude Atherton. "Gifted with a strong individuality, a large capacity for taking pains, a fund of keen observation and quick understanding of character, an alert insight and brilliant imagination, and a vital and vigorous literary expression, she has won her way into the foremost ranks of living American novelists, and compelled the highest respect and admiration of the literary world of two continents. She has written so many novels so well that a new book arrives with blessed assurance in the midst of the usual mass of mediocre fiction. "Ancestors" is, therefore, certain to be welcomed with relief, and expectancy by the great critical public.

Haji A. Browne, whose book on "Bonaparte in Egypt and the Egyptians of Today" has just been imported by the Scribners, died on the eve of its publication. He had an unusual career. This adventurous Irishman was the only man from the British Islands who ever saw the throne of the Caliph Haroun Al-Raschid in the temple at Meshed. Disguised as a Turk, he made the pilgrimage to Mecca as a Mahommedan among Mahommedans. It was thus that he got his title of Haji. He knew Egypt well. The spirit of his book may be inferred from this note in the preface:

> "For over thirty years I have given of all I have had to give for the promotion of two objects—first, that Pan-Islamism, which I conceive to be the true interest of the Islamic world, and secondly, the development of friendly relations between the Moslems of the East and the British Empire."

In the book he gives an idea of Egypt and the Egyptians unequaled by any book in English.

George E. Woodberry, whose new book, "The Appreciation of Literature," has just been published with the Baker & Taylor Co.'s imprint, issued his first book twenty-four years ago. A graduate of Harvard, he was professor of English at the University of Wisconsin, but later he became professor of comparative literature at Columbia University. Mr. Woodberry is the author of eleven works and editor of the complete works of Shelley and Edgar Allan Poe (with Edmund C. Stedman.) Prof. Woodberry is now living in Beverly, Mass., engaged in editorial and literary work.

The fates interfered in an almost fiendish way with Mrs. Burnett's work upon her great novel, just published by Stokes, and yet as Mrs. Burnett confesses now, they were working for the book's good. Eight years ago it was started, and illness, family sorrows, and untoward events of all kinds put themselves in its way, "but," says Mrs. Burnett, "had I finished the book when I first hoped to it would have been purely a love story. The big idea of the shuttle that underlies it came only after years of waiting, and I believe it is that idea that gives the book what real importance it may have."

The new edition of Sidney Lanier's poems, "Hymns of the Marshes," is beautifully illustrated by reproductions from photographs of scenes taken especially for the work on the Marshes of Glynn. The photographer spent many days in and around the marshes photographing them at every hour of the day and in every phase. Some of his most successful work was done in the neighborhood of Jekyl Island. His views bring vividly before us the inspiration of the poems. The demand for Sidney Lanier's poetry is increasing, and his position as one of the foremost of our American poets is now very secure.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. announce that they have gone to press with a new edition of Ralph Waldo Trine's "In Tune With the Infinite," completing 100,000 copies. This is a remarkable record for a work other than fiction, and is surely an encouraging sign of the reading times. To date over three hundred thousand copies of the Trine "Life Books"—to which the above volume belongs—have been issued in this country and England; while several translations of them have also been made.

The anonymous author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress," and now of "Emerald and Ermine," again refuses her name to the title page of her novels. It is noteworthy that this author has remained anonymous for an unusual space of time. Some seven or eight books have come from her pen during as many years, and the secret of her identity is still undisclosed.

Under the curious title, "The Dancing Mouse," the Macmillan Company is publishing the results of a remarkable psychological and physiological study carried on by Dr. Robert M. Yerkes of Harvard. The subject of this study is the so-called dancing mouse which is found in China and Japan, an animal which goes through a series of movements, whirling and circling, which have all the appearance of calculated dancing. For the study of hereditary tendencies and the relations of anatomical structure to intelligence, this animal is an instrument ready made for the psychologist, and Dr. Yerkes's careful and exhaustive study has been pronounced of the utmost scientific value. The book is the first of a series of works on financial behavior.

Octave Thanet is one of the few lucky enough to receive praise for her work from President Roosevelt. At a speech in Michigan, he said: "You will learn as much sound social and industrial doctrine from Octave Thanet's stories as from avowed sociological and economic studies." "The Lion's Share," this brilliant author's most recent novel, amply bears out the President's judgment. It is a story with all the excitement and unfailing interest that have heretofore characterized Miss Thanet's work, but as background there are sociological and industrial situations handled as part and fiber of palpitating life itself.

Masuji Miyakawa, whose book, "Life of Japan," was published this month bw the Baker & Taylor Company, was, curiously enough, the attorney for the Japanese school children who had been expelled from the public schools of San Francisco. There is a certain curious significance in now finding his "Life of Japan" so evidently inspired by a friendliness for things American and expressing so great debt of gratitude on the part of the enlightened Japanese toward this country. The book is ably written and may, in point of fact, be called special pleading in favor of a greater friendship between the two countries.

John Lane Company announces a valuable art work entitled "French fiffiArt from Watteau to Prud'Hon," complete in three royal quarto volumes, edited by J. J. Foster, F.S.A.

James Montgomery Flagg, the author and illustrator of "If" and "Why They Married," has just returned from a stay in Europe, where he has been gathering material for his forthcoming work, "The Rise and Fall of the Mother-in-Law Joke."

The Macmillan Company is publishing this week the following new books: "My Merry Rockhurst," by Agnes and Egerton Castle; "The Convert," by Elizabeth Robins; "The Rate of Interest," by Irving Fisher, Ph.D.; "The Dancing Mouse," by Dr. Robert M. Yerkes; "New Theology Sermons," by Rev. R. J. Campbell; "The Lakes of Northern Italy," by Richard Bagot; "The Man-Eaters of Tsavo, and Other East African Adventures," by Col. J. H. Patterson; "Celebrated Crimes," Vol. I, by Alexander Dumas; "The Letters of Dean Hole;" "Vagino-Peritoneal Operations," by E. Wertheim and Th. Micholitsch, translated by Cuthbert Lockyer, M.D.

Who Is Robert Hichens?

Miss Marie Corelli has often been accused of being a literary syndicate, but the suggestion that she is responsible for the books of Robert Hichens is certainly new. Frederick A. Stokes Company has just received the following letter:

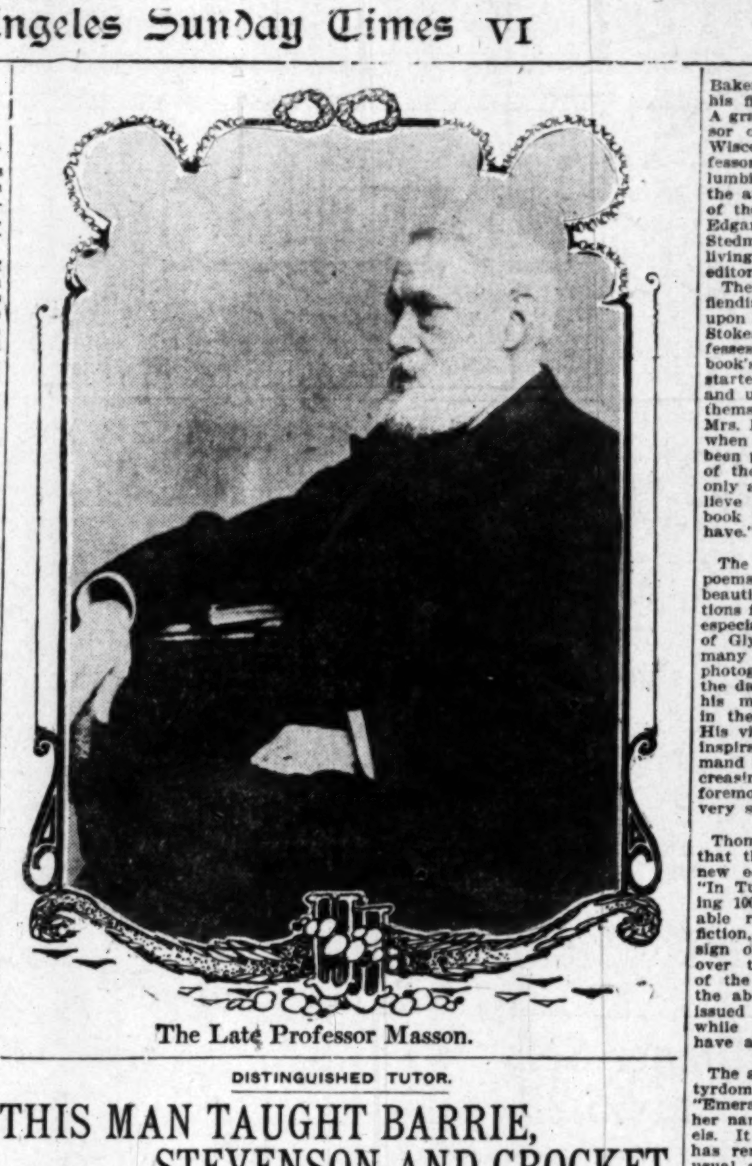
"Are you at liberty to tell me who Robert Hichens is? I have just finished "The Garden of Allah," and I have an intense curiosity to know something of the author. The style is so like that of Marie Corelli that I am tempted to believe that she has assumed a new name through some caprice, and has started to make a new fame for herself. If you can tell me I shall be greatly obliged."

Luckily the publishers were able to give the necessary information.

"ONE OF THE PEOPLE"

This book is a photograph from life of three-quarters of a century of American adventure, humor and heroism, of the commonplace that suddenly takes on the colors of romance when you come to know it. Its almost unconscious directness of Saxon reminds one at times of Franklin's autobiography. American boys will recognize themselves in its boyhood, American men quote themselves like it in their manhood, and the student of American social existence during the period which it covers will consult it when more pretentious histories are forgotten.

BIG BOOK STORE, 252 S. Spring st., L.A.



The Late Professor Masson.

DISTINGUISHED TUTOR.

THIS MAN TAUGHT BARRIE, STEVENSON AND CROCKET.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

EDINBURGH, Oct. 19.—Prof. David Masson, the distinguished Scotch historian, whose death has just been announced, undoubtedly will go down to fame as the author of "The Life and Times of Milton," the monumental work which scholars regard as almost a classic. To Americans, however, Masson is perhaps most interesting as the former professor in English literature of four writers whose fame is world wide, Robert Louis Stevenson, J. M. Barrie, S. R. Crockett and Dr. John Watson ("Ian Maclaren.")

All these novelists studied at Edinburgh University, where Prof. Masson occupied the chair of English literature from 1865 to 1895. Stevenson and Barrie were members of his classes in the early '70s, while among other pupils were William Archer, the dramatic critic, and Lord Roseberry.

Of all these, however, perhaps the one who bears the deepest testimony to Masson's influence is J. M. Barrie, who once declared that he made up his mind to go in for literature one day when he saw the professor rummaging over a second-hand book stall with $1500 in bank notes bulging out of his pockets.

A whimsical "thumb-nail sketch" of his old pedagogue by Barrie is worth quoting. It comes in a series of recollections of the novelist's college days, the "Edinburgh Eleven," and is as follows: "Masson always comes to my memory first, knocking nails into his desk, or trying to tear the gas bracket from its socket. He said that the Danes scattered over England, taking such a hold as a nail takes when it is driven into wood. For the moment he saw his desk turned into England; he whirled an invisible hammer into the air, and down it came on the desk with a crash. No one who has sat under Masson can forget how the Danes nailed themselves upon England. It was when his mind groped for an image that he clutched the bracket. He seemed to tear his good things out of it. Silence overcame the class; some were fascinated by the man; others trembled for the bracket. It shook, groaned and yielded. Masson said another of the things that made his lectures literature; the crisis had passed, and everybody breathed again."

It was in 1895 that this rugged, picturesque literary veteran, so long a familiar figure in Edinburgh street, resigned his chair, to live out his days in retirement. He had been called to the University thirty years before to succeed the famous ballad scholar, Prof. Aytoun, and twelve years before that he had taken the vacant place of the poet, Clough, as professor of English at University College, London. At 19 he was editor of a religious magazine in Aberdeen, his birthplace, and at 25, when he went down to London, he was one of the best-known magazine writers in Scotland. Before he became a professor, he was the first editor of Macmillan's Magazine, which, curiously enough, issued its last number this month, and has died with its first great editor.

It was in these days that Carlyle, one of his intimate friends, warned him not to fritter away his talents on little things, but to concentrate them on something big. The result of this was his masterl, "Life and Times of Milton," in six volumes, the great work of his life, which occupied all the leisure of twenty-one years. More brilliant is the smaller "Life of Chatterton," and the fourteen-volume edition of De Quincey's works, the outcome of a long and intimate friendship with the famous opium eater, whose life he contributed to the English Men of Letters series. There are many people in Great Britain today who feel that in "Davie, a real, kindly Scot," Edinburgh has lost her most distinguished citizen.

CHRISTINE TERHUNE
HERRICK,

WHAT MAKES CHAPTERS SUCCESSFUL?

FOR a good while I have wanted to talk to you girls about several of our chapters. There have been so many things on hand, however, that this especial topic has been crowded a little to one side until now.

To begin with, you know what are some of our most successful chapters conducted by correspondence: the Invalid Help Chapters, the Domestic Science Chapter, the Fancy Work Chapter, the Young Mothers' Chapter and one or two others.

All these are correspondence chapters almost entirely. Some of their members meet occasionally, but when they do it is rather exceptional, and, as a rule, letters do the work of meetings.

Now, the fact that these are flourishing, and that they are not new things, but chapters which have been in existence for many months, and that they have grown and increased, shows the power of success in chapters of this sort, which are conducted with no meetings, no social encouragement to help them on.

The point which has been engaging my thoughts for some time is this: Why do these chapters go on as steadily and encouragingly as they do when there are others with apparently as much reason for life in them, which are small and seem without the strength for growth?

STIMULATE ENTHUSIASM

I have pondered on this very seriously, and I wish all of you girls would go into the pondering business, too, for a while and see if you cannot think of something to stimulate some of the chapters which lack enthusiasm.

Let us take, for instance, the Mother-Petting Chapter.

You may recollect that this chapter was rather a pet with me from the first. We secured a chairman for it without difficulty, and for a while it went well.

There were plenty of girls who wished to join it; they exchanged letters often and discussed ways in which they could do more to make the lives of their mothers easier and happier, and the reports of the chapter and of the girls appeared on the page.

Then the first chairman was forced to resign, by a pressure of circumstances, and suggested another girl she thought would answer admirably for the position. I thought so, too, for I had had a good deal of correspondence with her, and I supposed she would take up the work and go on with it.

But the members and the chairman, also, seem to have weakened in interest. No reports are sent to me. Once in a while word comes from some one who once belonged or from some one who would like to belong now. But of official reports, I have none.

Why not? Are not our girls as eager as ever to make life pleasanter for the mothers and to brighten their way? Then why do they not work in their chapter?

Another chapter in which I have been interested is that for pyrography. That, too, began well, and we had a good chairman for it. But nowadays no one seems to do anything in the chapter.

"Will you make it worth while to keep the chapters going?"

We have new workers in pyrography coming into Each and All constantly; they write about exchanging patterns; they ask for help; they offer it; and yet they don't seem to care to band themselves together in the chapter.

Again, why is this?

Then there is the Stamp Collectors' Chapter.

The chairman of that is a good worker, and interested in her specialty. She keeps the chapter together, and once in a while she reports a new member.

Yet on the page you may see frequently that this or that girl is interested in stamp collecting and wishes to exchange.

Why doesn't she join the chapter and put herself in the way of getting and giving stamps?

The chairman would be delighted to bring her in touch with other members with the same fad.

Why don't you make yourselves heard from as a body, you philatelists?

Our Quilt Brigade is another chapter which possesses a good chairman; and if I may judge from the letters which come to me, there are scores of our members eager for nothing so much as to exchange quilt pieces.

Then, why on earth don't they do it through their chapter?

By means of this they could work with far more ease and profit. I am all the time urging them to write to the chairman, and through her get a chance to exchange pieces for the quilts concerning which they are so eager.

Why don't they do it, then? What hinders them from availing themselves of this easy way of getting into communication with those seeking the same end as themselves?

Then there is our Stenographers' Chapter.

How that flourished at first! One of our best girls was at the head of it until poor health obliged her to stop work.

OPPORTUNITY FOR GOOD WORK

Then the girls seemed to lose interest. There is just as much place now as ever for such work as could be done by this chapter, and my mail is full of letters from girls in this line anxious to help others.

Why do they not work in their special chapter?

Our Esperanto Chapter, too—what of that?

For a while our girls were enthusiastic about the new language, and we have a good many yet who have kept it up.

Why do they not work through their especial branch and help themselves and one another?

And our Animal Aids.

"Or do you think you work better for Each and All alone?"

That chapter keeps on its way, but it hasn't enough members. Why do not the girls who of animals and write to me of their love for dum tures and their eagerness to do something for th to me for the address of the chairman and be on her list?

It would be a good thing all around if they w this. Why don't they?

The Travel Chapter!

Where are the girls who started out with th were planning to do great things? Have they fa fallen by the way? Is their interest less kee was at first, or are they careless about reporting

You see, that is one thing I cannot know.

When I have to keep in touch with a chapter through letters, and none of the members write it leaves me in a position of helpless ignorance.

Won't you let me hear from you, girls?

And why does not our Librarian Chapter grow?

It began well. What stopped its growth? Wh you, librarians? Why don't you get together and work, too?

There are others.

Our Art Chapter, which has done good work, more members. There are plenty of girls inter art. Why don't they join it?

NEED VIGOROUS WORKERS

Our Trained Nurses' Chapter, our would-be W Chapter, our Literature Chapter—there are all th many more which need vigorous workers.

If there were no girls in Each and All, or only who cared for these different interests, I would ha wonder on the matter.

But here are the girls, writing to tell me th wish to do all these things, begging to be put in with other girls who do the same sort of things, not uniting with the chapter by which they cou be helped and encouraged.

Again I ask, Why don't they join these chapter

Don't think I am scolding, girls. I am not, al I may sound like it.

I am simply asking in plain language for an ex tion of a contradictory state of affairs. Can any solve for me any of the problems I have stated?

If so, pray do it as soon as you can, and as fu clearly as you can. I will be grateful.

There have been suggestions of a Father- Chapter. The Anti-Gossip League had a number o bers join it who never report progress. Some asked for an Anti-Slang Chapter.

What shall we do about these things, girls?

Will you make it worth while to keep the c going, or do you think you work better for Each alone? Write and tell me all about it.

Christine Terhune

OBJECTS AND AIMS OF EACH AND ALL

PERHAPS some of you, seeing this page for the first time, wonder just what the Each and All Society really is; what there is about its aims and objects to create so widespread an interest among "young girls of all ages."

The society was founded in February, 1905, with Christine Terhune Herrick for its president, and with an almost instant membership of girls in nearly every state in the Union and in Canada.

Its object is to help girls help themselves by developing their talents into something the world wants; to solve difficult problems—the sort a girl wants a calm, unbiased, out-of-the-family opinion upon—and to promote the exchange of general help.

Any girl may belong. There is no red tape about it. The sending of your name for membership gives you the range of every opportunity the society boasts. And Mrs. Herrick stands ready to welcome, to advise and to help.

Experiences of the Many Workers

Christmas Books for Children

ARE there any mothers in Each and All who are thinking of Christmas?

I have been making ready for the children's day of days by making cloth scrap-books which will not tear. I have never sold any of them until recently, but have given them as Christmas and birthday presents to some of my little friends, who were greatly pleased with the idea that the books would not tear.

There are twelve pages, 9 by 12 inches in size. No advertisements are on the pictures, and the pages have scalloped edges.

Do you think 25 cents too large a sum for them?

Mrs. F. W. R. (North Dighton, Mass.).

This price seems very reasonable, and I hope the books may be bought by many mothers of young children.

The Page Offered

Will you please give my name and address to an Each and All girl who is unable to get our page?

I will gladly send it to her every week, and also pay the postage. I have a few duplicate stamps from all over the world. I could exchange with the girls.

GIRLIE (Philadelphia).

These offers should both be accepted promptly.

Ready to Help

My daughter and I are very much interested in embroidery. We are ready to help any one in any way. I will send postcards to "shut-ins"; also write to them.

I have plenty of magazines to give any person who wishes them or help in any way.

Mrs. E. F. (Olean, N. Y.).

Such willingness as this to be of service is sure to find a chance for exercise.

French and the Page

I would help any girl to speak French.

I am an American-born girl and help in housework. I would be glad to send the Each and All page, or the whole of the paper, if any one prefers, in exchange for postals, and would tell a lonely girl how to be happy and merry during the day.

D. B. (Saxonville, Mass.).

Will some girl make this exchange?

From Our Reading Girls

Here are some words from the book-loving girls:

As I look through the page and find some girls telling you of their favorite writers, such as Roe, Churchill and others of that class, it makes me feel very sorry for them.

There are so many young girls now wasting their best years on the popular trash, which perhaps gives them a momentary thrill and then leaves them no broader or deeper than if they had never seen a book.

They cannot see that all these books harp on the same chord, the man lovesick, the girl spurning him—and all the silly adventures he must go through till he wins her.

The things stated in these books are not the real conditions of these times; no man has time now to bother about sentimental love. He needs a helpmate, a practical woman, not one who pines away with love for him.

Don't think I would wipe away all love; it is the big, natural, all-understanding love that appeals to me, not the simpering sentiment that is found in novels of today.

If the girls only knew the harm they are doing by buying those books they would be horrified.

They are making the publishers cater to their whim, and so, if he must make money, he has to reject much good work submitted to him—all because the matinee girl wants the books I have described.

They are the girls who usually make the marriages of convenience and end their days with their heads buried in the "six best sellers," trying to hide from the real facts staring them in the face.

A PHILLIE GIRL (Philadelphia).

I am a great reader, but do not like all kinds of reading. I don't care for adventure, especially on the sea.

I have read, or, rather, do read, Dickens, Thackeray, Scott, Wilkie Collins, Charles Reade and others, and enjoy them so much, too. Mrs. L. M. A. (Philadelphia).

What other girls agree with these Philadelphians?

Who Wishes This List?

I wonder if any of the girls have read the "Elsie Books," by Martha Finley.

There are about twenty-five of them. I have read nine of them, and they are very good. If any one would like a list of them, I will send it to them.

LOTTIE (Brockton, Mass.).

It is probable that some of the little girls of our membership may like this list.

Report of Work

Several interesting reports of personal and chapter work have been turned in.

My monthly report is letters, souvenir postals, clippings, handkerchiefs, sent to invalids.

We are slowly filling our Christmas box. The girls are very busy in the high school now.

I think it would be nice for each department of Each and All to have its separate flower. The members of our chapter wear the pansy whenever they can. They always wear a pansy to the chapter meetings.

A HOME GIRL (Ventura, Cal.).

Last month I devoted one afternoon to sewing for a bazaar, and I also made some aprons for it and spent an afternoon and evening at the sale. I helped a neighbor who is not used to sewing by fitting a dress for her little girl and showing her about it.

I have given clothing to three families, and fruit and vegetables to those who had none, and I try to make myself generally useful. I have also had the pleasure of lending old-fashioned clothing for a party; also a valise, spy-glass, wheelbarrow, rake, rattrap, garden hose, magazines, books, freezer, medicine, butter, sugar, vinegar, coffee, and I don't know whether that is all or not. I have borrowed nothing.

I don't know why it is, but most of the neighbors come to me for things instead of going to others.

I think it must be because I usually have what they want. PEGGY (Manchester, N. H.).

You asked me some time ago what I am doing for the club. I have not been doing much, as my family is large and I do all the work and sewing, beside some outside sewing for girls who cannot afford to pay high prices.

The last week I have made over three dresses for a girl of 12, and will give them to her. Then I have found an Each and All through the Postcard Exchange who has a sick husband and two little children to take care of; the little girl is 3 years old.

I shall try to make and give her most of her clothes during the next winter. I am also ready to help fill Christmas boxes of any kind, and don't think it is any too early to begin right away.

SADIE (Worcester, Mass.).

You ask about "doing for others."

I tried this year to make a note of things I did in that way, but it was too much work.

Not that I did so much, but the things were so little.

Of course, much of my correspondence comes under that head. If I am away, I send postals to many that never write to me, but on whom I try to call once in a while, just to keep in touch with them.

Then there is the regular sending of papers, magazines and special pages to different ones who cannot get them.

Perhaps it is some errand done, meaning two or three trips to do one. I took notes of Bishop Hall's retreat last week, and shall make some extra copies for acquaintances who I feel sure will appreciate them.

So it goes: it becomes second nature to think and act in that way, though I suppose there are lots of things I overlook. MARION L. F. (Boston, Mass.).

I correspond with five girls; three are invalids, while the other two are lonesome.

I have sent recipes to one of the young married members, and I have made birthday presents and sent to some of the others. BESSIE E. C. (Philadelphia).

It gratifies me to print these notes, and I thank the girls who sent them to me, for such reports are fruitful suggestions to other workers.

A Helpful Poem

I came across this poem, that I think will be helpful to Each and All:

LIFE'S MIRROR.

There are loyal hearts that are spirits brave;
There are souls that are pure and true.
Then give the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

Give love, and love to your life will flow,
A strength in your utmost need.
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

Give truth, and your gift will be paid in some kind,
And honor will honor meet;
And your smile that is sweet will surely find
Another smile just as sweet.

This poem was sent to me by my mother, who sent it as a help; and, as it did help, I will pass it on, hoping it will be a help to some one.

I hope that I will hear from some of the members. I am going West, and I do not know whether I will return to the East or not; but I will be glad to hear from the members, and I am sure it would make my surroundings wherever I am very much more pleasant.

I. G. (Leominster, Mass.).

I hope pleasant letters will follow this member westward.

Magazines and Patterns

If any one cares for magazines or plain sewing and embroidery patterns, I would be glad to send them some.

L. M. W. (Avalon, Cal.).

There is always a call for such things.

Of Interest to Teachers and Pupils

Having been a teacher earlier in life, I can say I loved my chosen profession much, because I saw in it a wider field for more usefulness than any other, and I was only too sorry to leave it.

I loved the children, and sought their confidence, first, before I taught them lessons, hence I felt my responsibility; and when a child was obstinate or stupid, I took it alone out of school hours and sought to win it over and out of these ways. It can be done.

Even when I had forty pupils, I devoted some time in this way.

Many children are easily moulded, hence the example that must ever be before them. In the presence of children one should live up to all that is noblest within one's self, for children are such imitators.

In reminiscing, I find there were teachers who influenced me much more than some others, and left an impress, both ethically and intelligently, which is not obliterated and has been of life-long service to me.

I loved them. They have passed away, but their teachings have remained with me, and among the most pleasant recollections are my closing school days, ere I became a teacher.

All the children I met after my days of teaching, now past, touched me with their tender, thoughtful respect.

I felt I had done them some good, which I sought to do, and that comfort remains with me and ever will.

EACH AND ALL MEMBER (Bedford, Mass.).

This is a very interesting letter, and I would like others in the same line, both from teachers and from pupils.

How have you helped and been helped in school?

Work and Vacation

You ask me what I intend to do to live up to my pledge. If I could do any good, I would just love to, but I can't do much.

I would like to be like Florence Nightingale, or do some temperance work, but I'll never be strong enough, so I am going to try and make some factory girls I know happier. They have few good times, and I have had them at my house several times last winter.

My mother is a perfect darling, and entertains so that we have splendid times. Would you like me to tell you about the last "good time" we had?

I hope all the girls in our society (how proud that "our" makes me feel!) had as splendid a vacation as I did. If there was room, I could write a good many adventures that I had, but I was most interested in Hannah Dustin's monument.

It is on the Dustin Island, and the island is situated where the Merrimac and Contoocook rivers meet, not far from the Penacook Station, Penacook, N. H. Hannah Dustin was captured by the Indians and carried to this island, with her baby and nurse, in the spring of 1697.

Assisted by a lad from Worcester, she secured a tomahawk, and herself scalped nine Indians and escaped with her companions. This statue, or, rather, monument, was raised in memory of her by the states of Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Perhaps you would like to hear of our Easter offering, for I am a Sunday school girl, and every year we earn money. Last Lent we earned $400.

LILLIE BELLE (Newton Upper Falls, Mass.).

An interesting letter from a girl who not only enjoys her vacation, but finds time, while it lasts, to plan for more work.

I think her idea of helping the factory girls is fine, and I am glad she has such a mother to help her.

More on the Servant Question

One of our girls mentioned that doing housework was degrading; at least, that was the idea I had from reading her letter. She is in Los Angeles. Her initials have slipped my memory.

Let me say to her if girls would only look upon the duties of a servant in the home as her employer does, she would never envy his stenographer or his bookkeeper. Both are useful to him, but she is much more important than either. Often the reason why the employer, in a measure, looks down on his house servants is because so many of them are very ignorant and have but little pride about them.

Many of them care only for pretty clothes and a jolly time. I wish girls would look upon service as a profession, like that of the office worker, the trained nurse, the doctor. They are all useful. Who would, after all, dare to say that the work of a nurse is more pleasant than that of an ordinary servant?

The servant, as a rule, does not work much over ten hours per day, while the nurse is on duty all hours of the night, often getting little sleep. Besides that, the wages of a good girl is $25 up to $40 per month, and, with room and her board, actually amounts to more than a nurse at $25 per week, because she must rest at times.

JENNIE C. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

I am always glad when something is said to show the advantages of service, although the hours in California are, perhaps, easier than in eastern cities.

Yet we have had pleas for domestic service from New England and the middle states, too. I wish some of our working girls would write and tell me their objections to domestic service as a means of self-support.

For Tired People

I HOPE these verses will help some one who is as tired as I am:

THE LAST WORD.

Creep into thy narrow bed;
Creep, and let no more be said;
Vain thy onslaught; all stands fast;
Thou thyself must fall at last.

Let the long contention cease;
Geese are swans, and swans are geese;
Let them have it how they will—
Thou art tired, best be still.

They outtalked thee, hissed thee, tore thee?
Better men fared thus before thee;—
Fired their ringing shot and passed;
Hotly charged—and sank at last.

Charge once more, then, and be dumb:
Let the victors, when they come,
When the Forts of Folly fall,
Find thy body by the wall!
—MATTHEW ARNOLD.

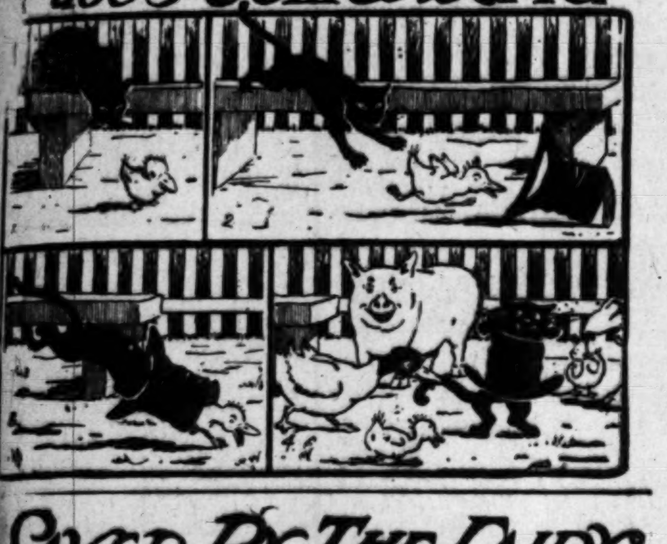
Pussy Comes to Grief



SAVED BY THE FAIRY

“WOE is me!” lamented the weaver, gazing mournfully around his bare cell. And yet 'twas not for himself that he had the greatest anxiety; 'twas for his little daughter, who now had no one to save her from hunger. No, the weaver feared death not at all, but rather would he have suffered a thousand deaths than have the least harm come to his little Mary.

From this you will imagine that, even though he had been thrown into the dungeon for theft, the weaver really wasn't such a bad man, after all. Indeed, had it not been that he had been unable to obtain work and that his daughter was starving, he would never have stolen. But Mary must have food or she would die, and his only regret for having taken the six loaves of bread from the baker was that he had been caught.

And now he must die! The judge was a cruel man. When the weaver had been brought before him and had told the pitiful tale, the judge sternly commanded that he be imprisoned in a deep dungeon, that the stolen loaves of bread be the only food given, and when they were eaten he was to die. The prisoner wished he could be put to death immediately, but somehow he felt that he would yet be free and be able to care for little Mary. So he ate his bread very carefully, making the supply last as long as ever he could.

One morning the weaver awoke and slowly raised himself from the rude bench to eat his little portion of bread, when, to his dismay, he saw that nearly all his remaining store had disappeared. Then he heard a little squeak, and before him stood a mouse.

“Oho! there is the villain who has stolen from me!” cried he, rushing forward to capture the intruder. Wildly grabbing, he caught the mouse in his hand.

But when he saw how frightened the poor little thing was, his heart relented.

“After all,” thought he, “it is but natural that mice should be hungry, and this is their way of obtaining food. Perhaps, too, there are little mice at home who are starving, and that this mouse has stolen bread for them—just as I stole bread for little Mary. No, I cannot punish the small creature as severely as I have been punished.”

Gently releasing the mouse, he seated himself sorrowfully on the bench. Now that his food was almost gone, he must surely die. Then his glance happened to wander to the floor. To his amazement he saw that the little mouse remained just where he had placed it. Then, before his very eyes, a wonderful fairy appeared on the very spot the mouse had occupied a moment before.

Smiling sweetly at him, the beautiful fairy said, “Since you have proved your kindness, I, in turn, will prove my friendship. Be of good heart!” With these words she vanished.

Greatly marveling at this strange occurrence, the weaver sat dumfounded. But soon he began to think of his approaching death and again relapsed into despair.

The next day the weaver was led forth to be hanged. Bravely he went to meet his doom.

But no sooner was he left hanging than the rope parted. Another rope was furnished, but as soon as it was put in place a little mouse quickly gnawed it in two.

“By my soul!” lustily cried the judge, when he was made known of this remarkable happening, “the man deserves to be freed after having made such a gallant fight for his life.”

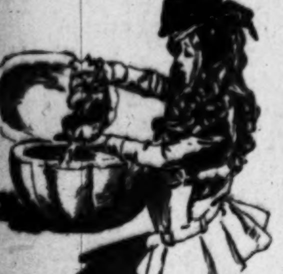
So the fairy, in the form of a mouse, had saved the life of the weaver. He was released at once and was joyfully greeted by his little Mary, who had been taken care of by kindly neighbors.

The Prize Pumpkin

EVER since she could remember, Grace had wished for a little kitten—a nice one, with pretty eyes and a soft, fluffy coat. But she had never been mistress of a clever cat.

And just about this time Grace was almost too occupied to think about kittens. For the prize pumpkin kept one busy watching. This pumpkin, planted by Grace's father, had become so big that neighbors came from great distances to see it. Some said it was the biggest in the county. Besides the pumpkin, there was her birthday to think of.

Grace's birthday came, and with it the multitude of nice gifts that every one liked to bestow on such a lovely little girl. But the greatest surprise was yet to come.



“WHEN GRACE REMOVED THE TOP”

Late that evening her father brought in the immense pumpkin and placed it on the table. Grace clapped her hands and laughingly thanked her father, all the time wondering what she should do with the pumpkin. Then she noticed that there was a cut all around the top of it.

“Lift it off, my dear,” urged her father.

Then, when Grace removed the top of the pumpkin, what do you suppose she saw? Why, the nicest, dearest, sweetest kitten you ever saw!

“Just to think, pussy had to come in a pumpkin! Sounds like a fairy story, doesn't it?” exclaimed the pleased little girl, as soon as she was able to speak.

Jap Balancing Toy

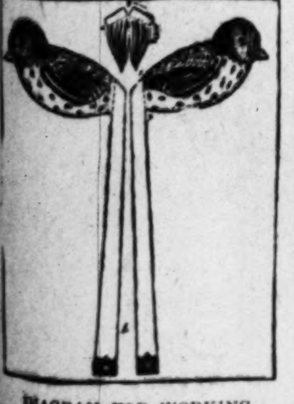


DIAGRAM FOR WORKING

THIS is a graceful little Japanese toy, quite easy to make.

Paste the design shown herewith on a piece of thin cardboard. Then bend the halves of the bird and paste them together, with the exception of the long white plumes. These should be bent around your finger so as to fall in a curl.

Under the plumes place the little tail as shown in Fig. 2.

If the work is well done, the bird will easily balance itself on a little trapeze or rod held in the air.

Trials of a Newcomer

“SEEN the folks who've moved into Nobles' house on the hill?” mysteriously remarked Skinny.

“No, what are they like?” came in chorus from the rest of the “Bloody Robbers.” Thus far the meeting in the loft of the corner shop of Billy Mumford's uncle had been rather uninteresting. Since the memorable celebration on Halloween very little had happened to occupy the attention of the band. But Skinny's question had thoroughly aroused their curiosity.

Skinny leisurely kicked his heels against the sides of the barrel upon which he was perched, and remained silent for several moments.

“Well, can't say that they look like much,” he murmured at last, when every one had become desperate to learn the news.

“There's an old lady and there's a boy,” he went on. “The lady's as fierce looking as Aunt Abbie Harn, and the fellow's a bow-legged little chap, who looks as though he'd scare at a mouse. Was waitin' for my papers that come on the evenin' train, and before I started to serve on my route I waited at the station for a while. So I saw the lady and the fellow come from the train, get in the bus and drive for Red Hill.”

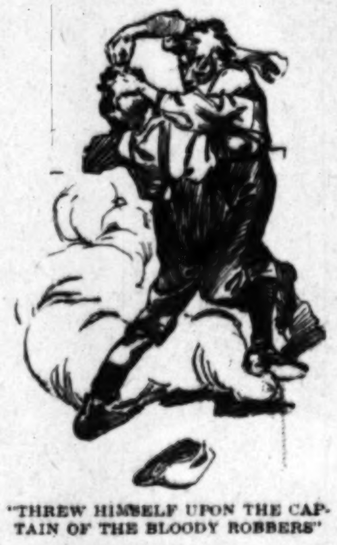
In truth, Mervin Johnson's entry into Homeville had by no means been of a triumphant nature. Thoroughly tired by the long ride, with his face streaked with coal dust and eyes full of cinders, he had been meekly led forth to the bus by his energetic aunt. But “Shorty,” as he had always been called, had been a person of great importance in his home town. And Homeville was soon to learn that he was not to be despised. As for being “scared,” those who came to know Miss Johnson grew more afraid of her than ever Mervin had been.

A few weeks passed, and then at another meeting of the “Bloody Robbers” the problem of the “new chap” came up again.

Skinny, as usual, introduced the subject that was uppermost in all their minds. “Say,” he began, “that fellow Mervin Johnson doesn't seem such a very bad sort. You know he's got a dandy pony cart, an' while I was comin' from the spring the other day he came along in back of me, an' I'll be jiggered if he didn't ask me to drive the rest of the way with him. He's got lots o' nice things, besides—things that'd come in pretty good for the 'Bloody Robbers' if he was a member.”

“Naw, we don't want 'im,” growled Billy; “he's too blamed stuck up.”

“There's where you're not givin' him a chance,” returned Skinny, quickly. “He's treated you cool-like because you've been mighty chilly to him. I tell you it's pretty hard to get into a strange town, where you ain't got no friends, and nobody wants to be friends with you. I went away for a month once to a place where all the fellows lived in fine houses that they called 'summer cottages,' and blamed if every one of them prigs didn't cut me dead. Say I wasn't glad to be back here. For myself, I think this 'Shorty' is all right.”



“THREW HIMSELF UPON THE CAPTAIN OF THE BLOODY ROBBERS”

Billy, however, had his way, and it was at last decided that Shorty must prove his worth before he could become a member of the famous band of outlaws. Already Billy looked upon Shorty as a rival, and he took every opportunity to annoy the newcomer. Things progressed in this way until one day Shorty discovered Billy throwing stones at one of his pet pigeons.

“What are you doing there!” cried the angry Shorty.

Billy's reply was prompt. “None of your business!”

“You'll see whether it's any of my business or not!” retorted Shorty. Before Billy had time to collect his wits the other had vaulted the garden wall and thrown himself upon the captain of the “Bloody Robbers.” The other “Robbers” had come up by that time. A ring was formed about the contestants, who were favored with as fierce a battle as Homeville had ever seen.

Of course, no one would admit that Billy was getting the worst of it, but if the sheriff hadn't appeared and put all to rout it might readily have happened that the hitherto invincible Billy would have been defeated. As it was, honors were about even.

Shorty won his membership in the “Bloody Robbers.” Billy himself was the strongest advocate of the newcomer. But after such a fight no one could have kept him out. Shorty proved a most valuable addition, too, as those of you who read the further history of this terrible band will soon find out.

Birds Used the Wood.

A family had a great open fireplace in their house. Before going away, as was their custom each year, they placed a great bundle of brushwood in the fireplace for use upon their return.

But when they got back there was no sign of the wood. You can imagine their astonishment when they found that the birds had carried away every twig, with which to build nests in the chimney.

TRADING DOLLIES

IT isn't every one, you see,
I'd give my dolly to,
But Margey's been so nice to me
I'm sure she'll like Bazoo.

I love my dolly awful well
And hate to give her 'way,
But, best of all—now don't you tell—
I love kind Teddy May.

The Chimney Swift

THE chimney swift is one of the most interesting of birds. It has the distinction of being the speediest bird on the wing. Flying mostly in the early morning or at evening, it can go great distances without fatigue.

In appearance the bird is about the color of a sooty chimney. Its legs are short and the toes project forward, so that it can retain its hold only on vertical walls or tree trunks. The ten tail feathers end in spine-like needles, which also aid the swift to cling to surfaces upon which it alights. So keen is the sight of the bird that it can see very well in the darkest caverns where it may build its nest. While the bill is small, the mouth opening extends back almost to the eyes. With such a great opening it has little difficulty in catching insects on the wing. This is the ordinary way of feeding.

Early in June the bird lays from three to five eggs, elongated in shape, in a hollow tree or chimney. More than one brood is rarely hatched. The nest of the chimney swift is made by gluing together twigs gathered during its flight by means of a sort of mucus secreted by the mouth of the bird.

The chimney swift is found in almost every warm country, with the exception of New Zealand. A variety of the bird, called “swiftlets,” because of their small size, is found in Madagascar and the Polynesian islands. These swiftlets build nests, which the Chinese and French delight to eat. As many as three crops of nests are gathered each year. It does seem a shame, doesn't it, that this industrious little bird should work so hard at nest-building, and all to no purpose?

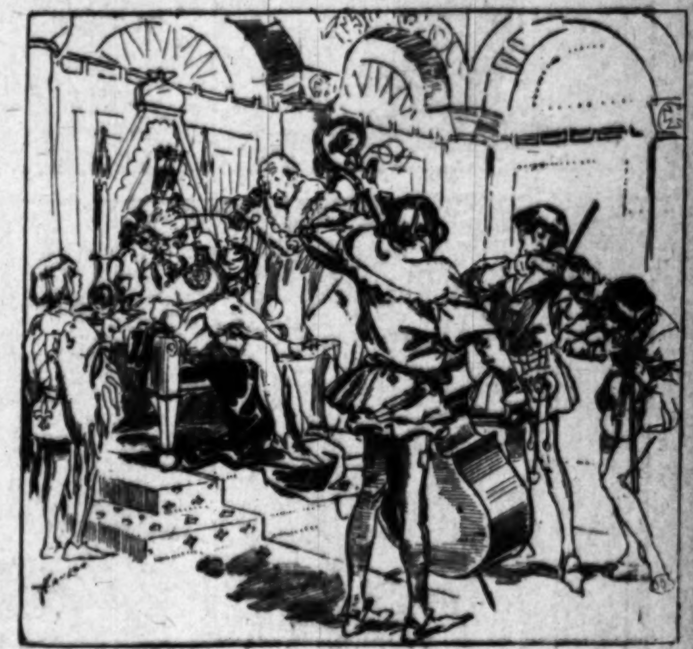
The Usual Way.

A groom had brought a horse around to the stable of the man who had just purchased the animal. After battering on the door, and receiving no response, he asked of a lad nearby:

“What shall I do with this horse; I don't believe any one's in?”

“Just shove it under the door,” replied the boy, offhandedly.

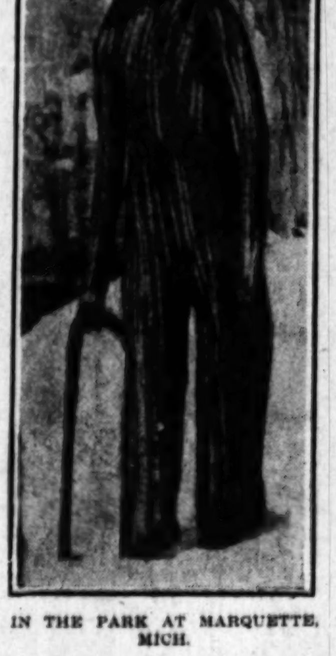
Picture to Paint.



It has been a good while since Polly Evans has given you a picture to paint, so she is sure you are ready for another one. Here is a very nice one to color. Let all you artists get to work and do the very best you can. Polly Evans would be pleased, indeed, to see your pictures after you have colored them.

A Man Tree

AT first glance, you would say this was the picture of a man, wouldn't you? Yes, and perhaps after a second look, too. In reality, it is a tree. The photograph was taken of it just as it stood.



IN THE PARK AT MARQUETTE, MICH.

You've seen animals that look almost human, but have you ever heard of a tree stump resembling a person?

Rapid Wear.

“Henry, did you eat that piece from the top of the pie?”

“No, ma; I never touched it.”

“Then how did it happen?”

“Don't know; p'r'aps it was just worn in.”

Buffy's Mistake

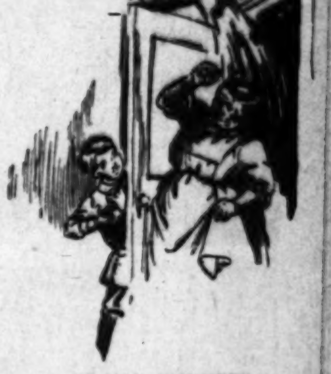
BUFFY pressed his pudgy little nose against the window. Not that he could see out; it was much too dark for that. Indeed, Buffy wasn't trying to see anything. Buffy was thinking, and putting his nose against the window pane helped him to think a great deal better.

Of course, Buffy wasn't his real name; but he had always called himself that instead of Arthur, and though now he was all of five, the name still clung to him. Sometimes it was “good Buffy”; quite often it was “bad Buffy.”

Now he hadn't really meant to be bad today. Neddy, across the street, had told him what fun it was to put a pail of water above the door and watch it fall on the one who opened it. So Buffy had tried it. That was just what was the matter with Buffy. Whenever he heard of any feat, he must try it for himself right away.

Now, Buffy was ready to own that he had made a mistake—and a big one at that. For, you know, it doesn't take a great deal to make Cook angry, and the pail of water that fell on her made her very, very cross, especially when she saw the little chap dancing with glee over the success of the plan. Yes, he had “tried it” and “it had worked.”

So Buffy had been locked in his room all the day with nothing but a tiny luncheon, and then he didn't have what he liked. And now it was almost 5 o'clock. Yes, again he told himself that he had made a big mistake. He should have tried the trick on some one else—some one who didn't guard the pantry.



“IT HAD WORKED”

Could that be Cook coming up the stair! Just such a step had he heard many a time when goodies were smuggled to him while he was being punished in his room. No, it surely couldn't be; why, he had upset the water on Cook!

But it was Cook, after all—and oh! she had the nicest sort of supper. Buffy threw himself upon her.

“Cooky, Cooky!” he whispered, tearfully, “you're just the nicest that ever was—and I didn't mean to go to do it, really I didn't!”

“There! there! darlint,” whispered his old-time friend in reply, “it's all right; only ye must promise Cooky not to do what every one tells ye to do.”

Buffy promised. He is now content with seeing his chums doing “stunts,” without trying to do all of them himself.

No Chance to Return.

Harold had waited patiently for the visitor to go. At last, looking thoughtfully at her, he said:

“Mrs. Jones, I'm afraid you won't come again.”

“Why, of course I shall, my boy. Why not?”

“'Cause, if you don't ever leave, how can you come again?” argued Harold.

What Do They Do?

Mary and George, after their return from Sunday school, were talking together seriously.

“What are we here for, anyway?” asked George.

“To help others and make them happy,” sweetly responded Mary.

“But then what are the others here for?” was George's unanswerable reply.

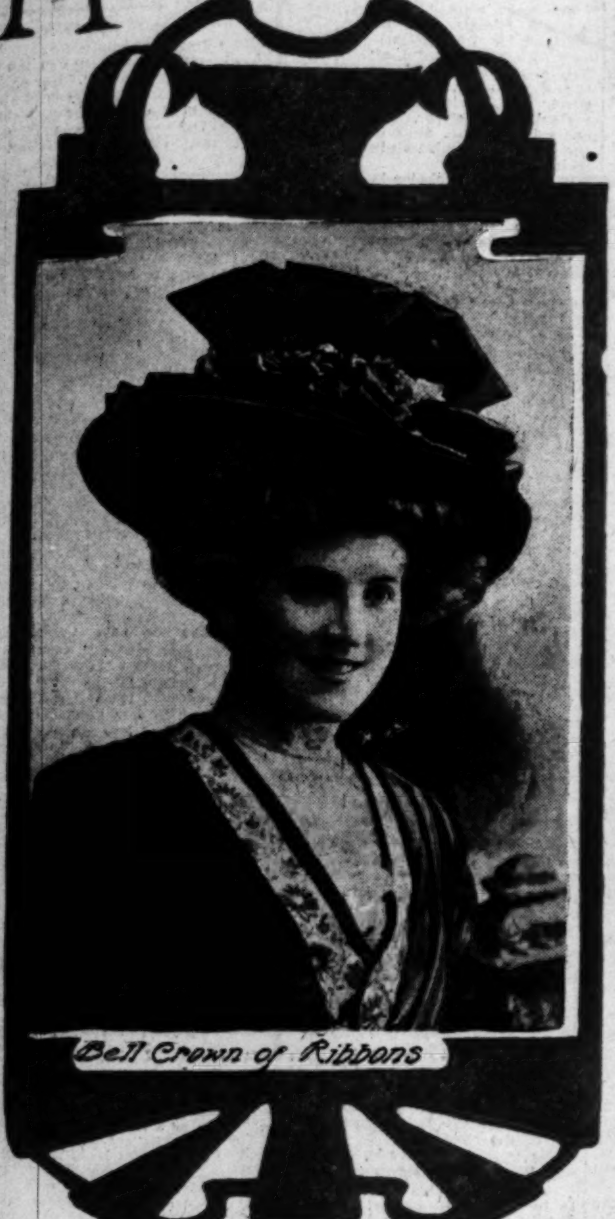
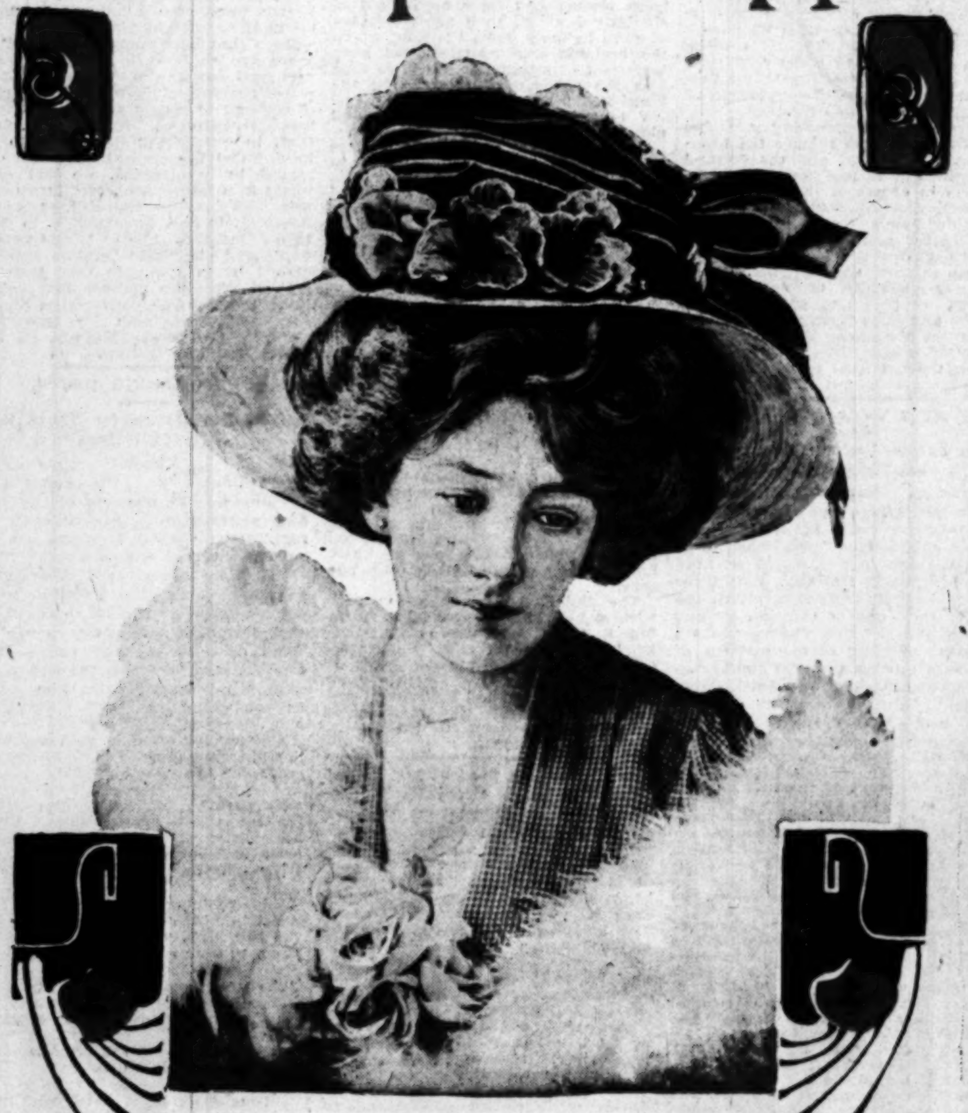
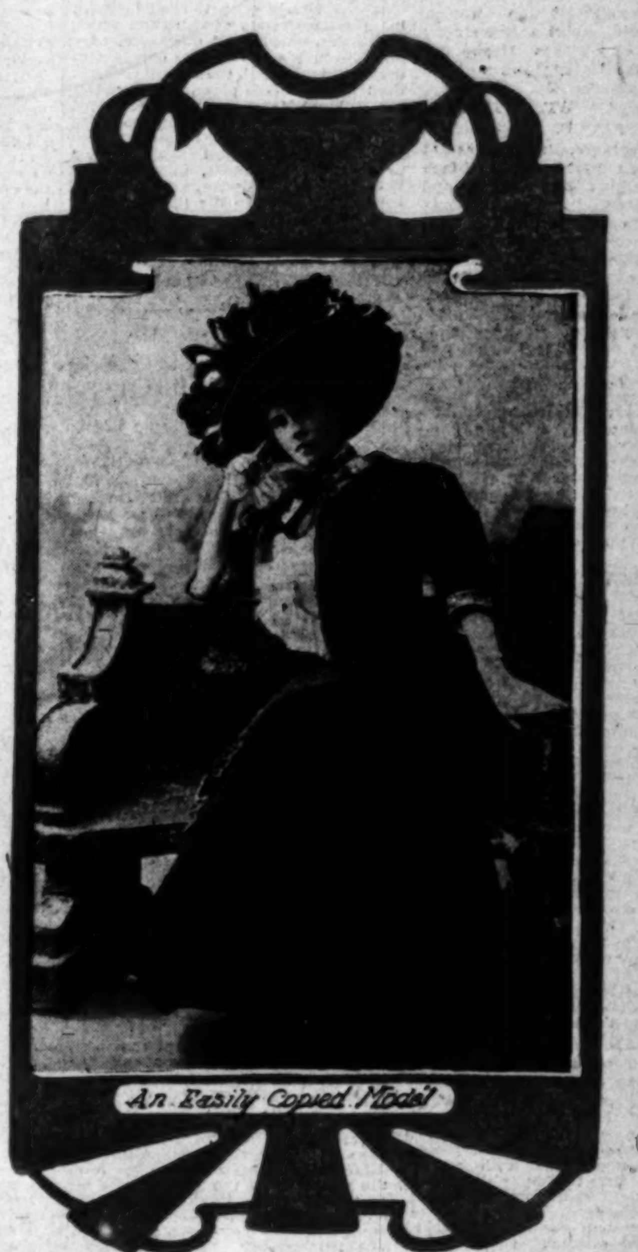
HOW TO MAKE A PARIS HAT FOR $4



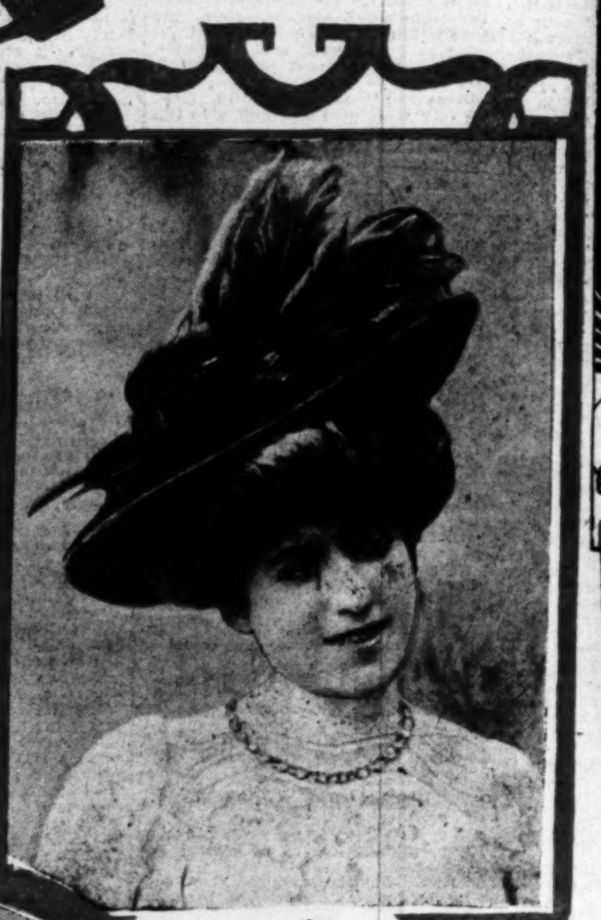
Bell Crown of Ribbons



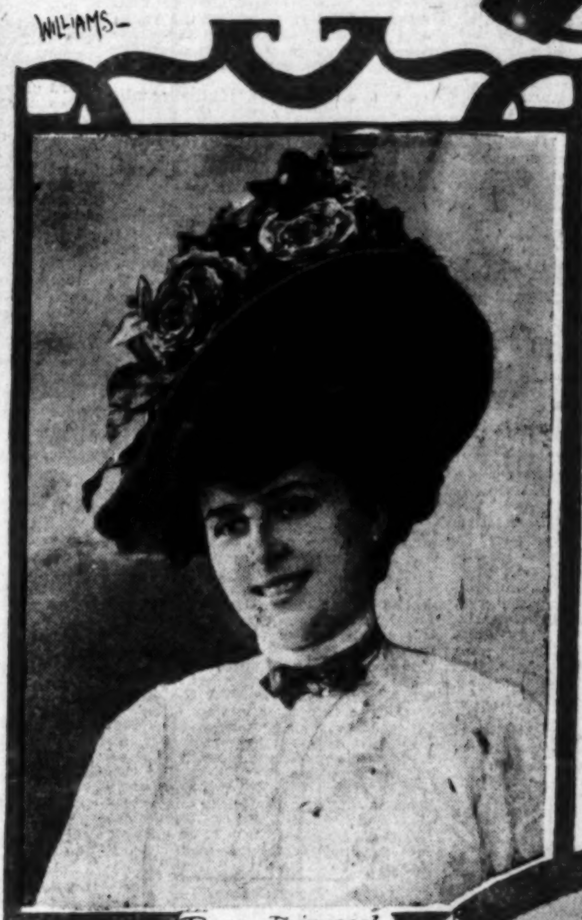
Folded Velvet Bands with Flowers



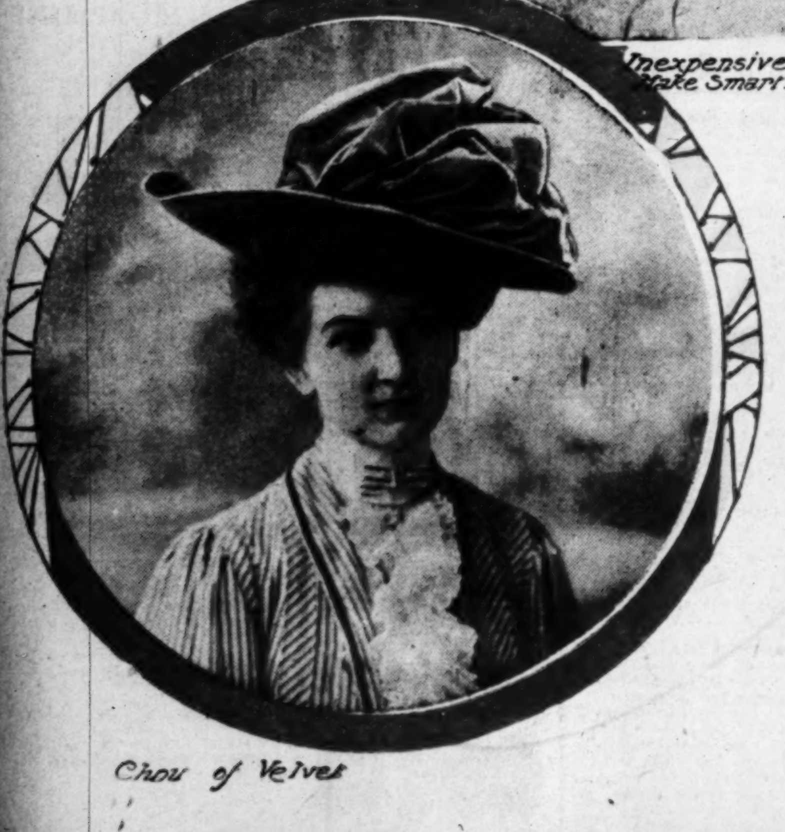
An Easily Copied Model



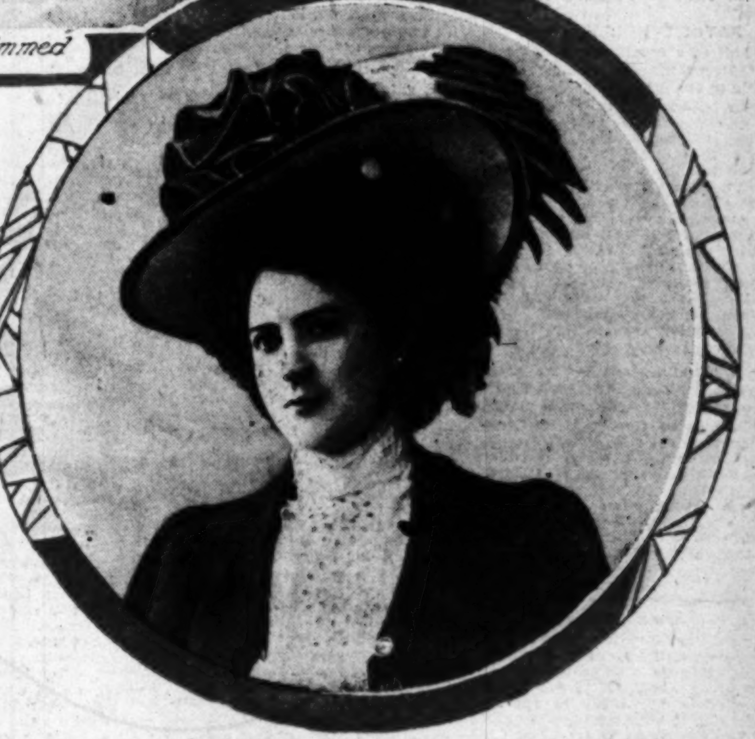
Inexpensive Wings Make Smart Trimmings



Rose Trimmed Hat



Chou of Velvet



In White and Black

A PARIS hat for four dollars!

This seemingly impossible thing may easily be accomplished by any woman who can use a thread and needle and thimble.

Rarely in the history of millinery has there been a time when so many styles were prevalent as at the present moment.

Each of the modes is radically different from its neighbor. And what will be offered during the coming months is simply a modification of the styles already existing. Novelties in detail, trimming and, to a small extent, shape, rather than any abrupt departure from the current fashions, will be the rule.

The Paris models offered this season are trimmed very simply, the whole style or smartness of a hat depending entirely upon the placement of a harmonizing pair of wings or the correct arrangement of a chou.

The inexpensive wings, which are so freely displayed on the counters, make an exceedingly smart trimming for a hat. They come attached to long pins, which are to be run into the hat wherever the wings are to be placed. Thus the sewing them on is done entirely away with and their adjustment takes only a moment or two.

These wings may be purchased for from one dollar up. A very fair quality of felt hat may be purchased for two dollars, leaving one dollar for maline and ribbon to adorn the under rim. Or, if desired, very attractive shapes may be purchased as low as one dollar.

Both very large and very small hats will be worn. The Rembrandt hat, as the new large shape is called, will be the dressy picture hat of the winter.

In smaller hats, toques, turbans, round hats and semi-derby effects will be popular. In most of these hats either one or both of the sides turn up, and the crowns are rather high. All are simply trimmed, making them very copyable for the amateur milliner.

A favorite form of trimming is two large choux. These are made by cutting velvet in circular pieces the size desired, and gathering the outer edges of the piece together and tacking loosely on the front or side or back of the hat, as is preferred.

Another thing that is most favorable to the amateur milliner is the great amount of ribbon that is used on the new models. Ribbon, made in loops, bows, festoons and all sorts of soft effects, is lavishly employed. The ribbon is in medium width in soft liberty and taffeta weaves, though a great deal of velvet ribbon is also used.

With a shape which may be purchased in the latest model for about two dollars, and several yards of this ribbon, which may be purchased for 20 to 30 cents a yard, and a few moments of time, any of the Paris ribbon-trimmed hats can easily be duplicated at home for four dollars.

In regard to ornaments, both rhinestone and jet buckles and pins, which have been such a feature of the last season's hats, will be again used this winter.

A great variety of blue shades in hats is now being shown, from the lightest tones to the nattiers, royals and navies. In brown felts and velvets there is also a wide range to choose from, starting at the light champagne shades and running up through the tans, beige and leather colored into the mordore and tabac shades.

The eggplant shades are also enormously fashionable. However, they are in absolutely new tones of purple. They are the exact tint of an aubergine, or eggplant, and some of the tones are almost like magenta.

Flowers and foliage have by no means passed their glory. Among the dressy hats the rose-trimmed type is frequently shown; velvet roses, with white foliage, are the height of novelty and style.

The general contour of hats is quite the reverse of last year, however, as they are worn well down on the head; in fact, the brims are so deep in the back and worn so far off the face that little, if any, of the back hair shows.

Some Matters of Special Interest to the Women.

For Luncheon.

DISHES DELIGHTFUL, DELICATE AND DAINTY FOR MIDDAY REPAST.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"And above all, let the women pretty and plain, married and single, study the art of cookery. If you are an artist in the kitchen you will always be esteemed."

MACARONI LOAF WITH TOMATO SAUCE.

Drop one heaping cupful of macaroni which has been broken in half-inch pieces, into boiling, salted water and cook until tender. Drain, and mix with it one cupful of boiled ham chopped fine, one-half cupful of grated cheese, one heaping tablespoonful of finely minced onion, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of paprika, two beaten eggs and one cupful of milk. Turn into a round, well-buttered mold, set this into a dish of hot water, and bake in a moderate oven until the mixture becomes firm. Turn out onto a hot plate and serve with tomato sauce made as follows: Brown one tablespoonful of minced onion in two tablespoonfuls of fresh butter, and blend with this one heaping tablespoonful of flour. Stir constantly until the flour is lightly colored, then add one cupful of clear, rich broth, the same amount of strained tomato, a seasoning of salt and paprika, and cook until smooth and creamy.

LAMB CUTLETS IN BORDER OF GREEN PEA PUREE.

Put a generous pound of breast of lamb twice through a meat grinder. Add one heaping tablespoonful of cracker dust, one tablespoonful each of melted butter and thick, sweet cream, the yolk of one egg, a half-teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Form into small cutlets, pressing very firmly into shape, roll in crumbs, beaten egg, and again in crumbs, and fry delicately in olive oil or sweet butter, lightly browning on both sides. Serve in a border of green pea puree, made as follows: Put three heaping cupfuls of green peas to cook in sufficient boiling water to just nicely cover them. Add one teaspoonful of sugar and half that quantity of salt and simmer until tender. Drain, and press through a sieve. Have ready a hot custard, consisting of one cupful of cream, one heaping teaspoonful of cornstarch, one-half teaspoonful of butter, salt and white pepper, cooked until thick and smooth, and whip into the puree with a fork.

CREAMED QUENELLES IN PASTRY CUPS.

Two heaping cupfuls of cold cooked chicken or other delicate meat which has been put through a meat grinder, one-fourth cupful of cracker dust, one tablespoonful of melted butter, salt, pepper, and sage. Bind with yolk of one egg and form into balls the size of small marbles. Steam one-half hour. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, and add to it one-half cupful of blanched and shredded almonds, stirring until their color rises delicately, then blend with them one heaping tablespoonful of flour, add two cupfuls of milk, salt and pepper, and cook until smooth. Drop the quenelles into this, allowing them to simmer for a moment, then arrange in shallow cups of pastry, serving immediately.

POTATO SOUFFLE WITH CHEESE.

Three cupfuls of mashed potato, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, the same quantity of sweet cream, a half teaspoonful of salt and a little white pepper, beaten light with a fork. Fold in the stiffly-whipped whites of two eggs, place in a buttered baking dish, cover with a half-inch layer of grated cheese and bread crumbs mixed in equal proportions, dot with butter, and bake. Serve immediately.

CURRIED EGGS.

Chop one onion fine and cook quickly to a delicate brown in one generous tablespoonful of butter. Blend with it one heaping tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of curry powder and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Add two cupfuls of rich milk and cook until smooth, then simmer in it for two minutes six hard-boiled eggs quartered lengthwise. Serve in a border of hot, steamed rice.

CHEESE CRISPS.

One cupful of grated cheese, two-thirds of a cupful of cracker dust, a half teaspoonful of salt, the same of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of milk and a dash of paprika. Set the dish holding the above ingredients into pan of hot water and cook until the cheese is melted and the mixture becomes smooth and thick. Remove from the fire and beat in the yolks of two eggs and the well whipped white of one, turn into a buttered dish, having the mixture not quite an inch in depth, and bake in a moderate oven until firm. When cold, cut in thin strips, dip in beaten egg, then crumbs, and fry to a delicate crispness in olive oil or fresh butter. Serve hot.

SAVORY ROLLS.

Brown half of a small, minced onion in one tablespoonful of butter, and blend with it one heaping tablespoonful of flour. Add one cupful of consommé, one cupful of cold meat chopped fine, two hard-boiled eggs, also chopped, salt, paprika, bits of parsley and simmer for a moment. Have ready a rich biscuit dough, from which break off pieces the size of an egg and roll out as for dumplings. Place a spoonful of the above mixture on each, adding a plump olive and a seeded raisin, roll into oblong shape, pinching securely together, place in a buttered baking dish, pour over them a large cupful of consommé, and bake in a rather quick oven.

DEVILED RICE.

Butter a medium-sized baking dish and place in the bottom an inch layer of steamed rice. Cover this with thinly sliced, ripe tomatoes, sprinkle with chopped green pepper, salt, mustard, paprika and dot with butter. Continue in this manner until the dish is filled to within an inch of the top. Cover with grated cheese and bread crumbs, pour over it one cupful of meat broth to which has been added one beaten egg, and bake in a moderate oven.

LOUISE TABER.

Exhaustive Work of Teaching.

Teaching is exhaustive work. The comparison with the actor is apropos, only we have to think of an actor with a repertoire of about 200 plays, which plays are constantly being readjusted and improved. Thoughtful people and those who have tried their hand at amateur theatricals know full well that the stage appearance is not the sum total of the actor's work, though it is the most trying ordeal of the day. The teacher has his daily preparation to make, he must take stock of each day's results, he must by reflection and visits improve his understanding of his individual pupils, he must rest to replenish his stores of vitality, and must do many things besides to keep himself efficient, not to speak of chores imposed by the less exalted considerations of keeping solid with the powers that control the job. The latter point is by no means a minor one. It places the teacher on a level with the average clergyman, whose labors for the kingdom of God must be circumscribed by thoughts of the good-will of the trustees. He shares with the clergyman, too, the uncertainty of valuation which his critics, official and otherwise, may place upon his work. The opinions of the school principal, the superintendent, the trustees, of the parents, yes, and of the children, form the usual standard of estimate. The only thing for the teacher to do under the circumstances is to be guided by the light of the best professional experience, and to cultivate tact in his dealings with everybody. This adds to the list of out-of-school duties the reading of profesional periodicals and books, as well as visits to other schools, conferences with other teachers, participation in educational meetings.—[Ossian H. Lang in the Forum.

TRADES FOR WOMEN.

Facts to Be Brought Out at Industrial Convention to Be Held in Chicago.

[New York Tribune:] When a woman must go to work in a mill or factory, to what occupation had she better turn? Which lines are the cleanest, which the most sanitary, which offer the best chances of advancement? Few working women are influenced by these considerations. They go to work in this or that factory because they have a friend working there, or because they live near by, or because it gives them better pay than they could get elsewhere at the start. If there were a more general knowledge of the conditions in various industries, many a working woman would be engaged in an occupation better suited to her physique than the one she now follows. And an important step toward diffusing that knowledge has just been taken by the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education, which is to hold a convention in Chicago the first week in December. By way of forerunner the society has sent out an exhaustive report, prepared by a special committee, upon the best fields for women wage earners.

The report undertakes to deal only with industrial occupations in the narrow sense. The great groups of agricultural and professional service, of which the first employs 15.9 per cent. and the second 8.9 per cent. of the 4,833,630 women of 16 years of age and over engaged in gainful occupations in the United States, are omitted. Domestic service is omitted, to., and so are all occupations in trade and transportation businesses except that of the saleswoman. Stenography and typewriting and book-keeping are considered commercial occupations, and so not within the lines of this report.

In the first place, the report defines a desirable industry. It is one which pays a living wage, which does not deaden the natural powers or reduce the individual to the position of a mere machine, which develops the sort of efficiency which will be of value to the woman as a home maker, and which is not detrimental either physically or morally. The industries which, measured by these tests, are considered least desirable for women are paper mills, cotton mills, cordage and twine mills, confectionery and paper-box plants and packing of all kinds. And these industries swallow up 19 per cent. of the wage-earning women in manufactories in the United States. Occupations which are bracketed as of doubtful desirability are work in hosiery and knitting mills, woollen and worsted mills and silk mills. About 8 per cent. of the wage-earning women in manufacture are in these occupations.

It is encouraging to note that the proportion of women in occupations which promise opportunities is large, 64 per cent. of the entire number in factories. Such occupations are the making of clothing from cotton, woollen and silk goods—when carried on in factories, or strictly high grade workrooms—and the manufacture of boots and shoes, gloves, straw hats, jewelry, and printing and publishing.

A few industries not included in these three groups employ women in certain parts of the work, but only in the lowest paid and most unskilled parts. The report gives a long list of industries in which no women are employed. In the manufacture of arms and ammunition, for instance; in building, light and heat, electricity, carriage making, glass leather, lumber, machinery, metals, patterns, musical instruments, print and dye works, shipbuilding, stone tools and wooden goods—in none of these need men fear the competition of women at present, though there is no telling what may happen in the future.

It is a discouraging tale the report tells of conditions in the occupations included in the first group. Cotton and cordage and twine claim large numbers of women and young girls, the latter especially, and they fail to meet any of the designated requirements for a desirable industry. The wages in cotton mills never reach $10, and at least three-quarters of the employés earn less than $7.50. In cordage and twine work the wages are even further below the living point. Packing has one virtue; it is clean; but in regard to the rather important considerations of wages and of opportunities for development there is nothing to say for it. It is as bad as mill work. Candy dipping generally allows a woman from $5 to $7 a week. If she becomes very expert she may rise to the dizzy height of $10 for six days' hard work.

Then comes the next great group of industries for women—manufacture of woollens and silks. In these the pay is a little better, as a rule, but they do not stand the wage test for desirable occupations. But they are by no means to be condemned. The character of the work is not so disagreeable as are the occupations in the group just mentioned, and the quality of labor is superior. Also, it is hoped that with the improvements in the manufacture of woolens and silks in this country a quality of goods may be produced which will offer better wages to employés in those lines. Persons who have studied these things indulge the hope that woollen and silk industries will be affected favorably by industries education, which as it spreads may elevate the industry as a whole, or else may stimulate individual workers to get into more desirable occupations.

The third group—the manufacture of clothing—appears to be the best hope of the woman wage earner. A good many women are employed in shoe factories, chiefly in stitching and finishing. A personal investigation was made of shoeworkers, and it appeared that nearly one-half earned $10 and upward, and perhaps one-fourth less than $8 a week. The remainder received more than that, and a few get as much as $20 a week. In this work, too, the operative has a chance of advancing into more lucrative trades, as the making of gloves or straw hats or fancy waists. In the manufacture of fur, skilled operatives receive from $14 to $18 a week, but the work is unwholesome, because of the dyes in the fur, and the flying fuzz, which is bad for the lungs. The glove-making trade is a promising one, because for some reason there are never operatives enough.

The industry of clothing machine operating presents some difficult problems. It employs an enormous number of women, and the proportion constantly increases. It stands representative of the movement from home to factory. Formerly it was distinctly a home industry, today it is conducted largely in factories. Yet it is often attacked, and always under suspicion, partly because of hostility to the factory, partly because of a widespread dread of sweated industry.

Millinery and dressmaking are the two branches which require the highest grade of ability, and the demand for workers in these lines is so great, so much in excess of the supply, and the employers so dependent on the less skilled help as a source from which to fill higher positions, that no working girl makes a mistake who goes into one or these trades.

The manufacture of flowers and feathers, of gold and silver articles, printing and publishing, and salesmanship—these are among the undeveloped trades for women. There may be a future in them, but at present they offer few opportunities.

THE NEW WOMAN IN CHINA.

A Too Daring Author Taken to Task and Charged With Heresy.

It is generally allowed in the West that "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." In China, however, "the East is East," and we need not be surprised, therefore, that there is a distinctively definite revolt on the part of the lords of creation against the adoption of this foolish western aphorism, by some of the maidens of the South of China, writes the Hongkong correspondent of the North China Herald.

Not long ago, a daring native writer who wanted a sensational subject with which to attract readers bethought him of the topic of marriage. What new and striking thing could be said respecting marriage in China, for the whole thing is so prosaic? There was, however, one aspect of it—novel, indeed—that might be more attractive, to the feminine mind. The author at once created a sensation by asserting that, as in the West, so in China, the time had arrived when Chinese ladies should be allowed individual freedom, so that they could exercise the right of choice in regard to their future husbands. It was not urged that women should propose, and men dispose; but only that maidens should be allowed the privilege of a little "flirting" and "courting." This would form an attractive pastime, and cause the youth of China to enjoy life. It was, of course, an interesting theme.

The venturesome author learned what returned coolies had to impart of the ways of the West. With these data at his disposal, and an uncurbed imagination, the reformer painted a charming picture of the doings and flirtations of youthful ladies in western lands, of their presents and bracelets, and of the love and devotion that glowed between themselves and their swains. The normal life of the young people of the West, of both sexes, appeared even more attractive than the lives that the Chinese lived even in the golden age.

It was not difficult, if the painter were determined, to paint the opposite to this, using the materials suplied by current Chinese life. He, therefore, sketched a black-haired maiden, secluded in a dingy room, listening, whilst a garrulous go-between, whose springtime had long passed, and who could have little sympathy with the aspirations of youth, arranged for her marriage with some man whom she had never seen, nor wished to see, in return for a sum of silver.

This two-sided picture was sketched and made permanent by Chinese hieroglyphs. The one side was found very attractive by its seductiveness to those maidens who had lately learnt "to explain characters," and the idyllic life of their sisters of the West charmed them with its attractiveness and its promise of happiness. The girls of China began to ask their parents and guardians some astonishing questions, which filled their elders with amazement and awe.

It is found that "impracticable ideals" propagate themselves in China, as in England (among the suffragettes, for example,) and a revolt on a small scale was anticipated with horror and indignation. The officials heard rumors of what was going on, and it was decided among the powers that be that the Empress Dowager must be apprised of this astounding revolt of women. She was an experienced hand, and her advice could be relied upon.

The Empress Dowager and her horrified advisers have notified the officials of Canton that such heresy cannot be tolerated even for a moment. Her Majesty was wrathful beyond words, and there is a general commotion. The author who wrote, the bookseller who sold, and the maidens who read are, in turn, lashed and thrashed, and threatened with appalling penalties unless the poisonous upas tree is at once uprooted and destroyed—even to its leaves.

Good Dishes.

Sausage rolls—Make pie paste, not rich, roll as for pie crust, cut pieces four inches square, and lay one pork sausage link, which has been skinned, on the squire; draw the sides up so they just meet on top, gently press together, and close the ends. Bake a good brown in a dripping pan.

Potatoes baked in milk—Pare and cut in thin slices crosswise one dozen potatoes; slice two large onions, and add about one-half cup of finely-chopped parsley. Put the whole into a granite pudding dish and cover with milk, putting pieces of butter on top. Bake in a hot oven for one-half hour. Salt and pepper should be added when served, as the milk is apt to curdle if it is added before cooking. This recipe is also good if canned tomatoes are used instead of milk.

Mock cherry tarts—We had some very delicious tarts, which my hostess kindly told me were made with "mock cherries," made out of cranberries and raisins, cooked together with sugar and water until sweet and tender, and then poured into pastry forms. She said this also made a good filling for pies, or was most acceptable as frozen fruit, water ice, sherbet, etc.

Filipino beef—One and one-half pounds of beef cut from the lower round, one-half pound lean, fresh pork, one onion and two green peppers, all chopped fine. Mix thoroughly with one cup of dried bread crumbs and salt to taste. Knead for five minutes, form into a roll and place in the baking pan. Lay three slices of bacon over the top and pour over the whole a can of tomatoes. Bake in a steady, slow oven for one and one-half hours. Remove the meat to a hot platter, add a little hot water to the tomatoes, thicken and flavor, strain and pour around the meat. This is good sliced cold, also.—[Good Housekeeping.

Autumn Fashions.

In the long-skirted cloth costume for afternoon wear, a desirable style of trimming was executed with soutache braiding, the design edging the bottom of the skirt, then rounding up at the sides, so as to meet at the middle of the waist line in front. The same design is seen across the foot of the skirt in front, having been wrought from the rounding curve without disturbing its upward trend. A basque bodice to match had its cloth surface entirely covered with a soutache braiding in a small diaper design. The long sleeves had their upper halves similarly braided, then came a space of cloth halfway down the arm, where the braiding was resumed, and gave the effect of a gauntlet glove, so long was the sleeve, almost touching the knuckles. This costume was in Louis XV blue, the braiding jet black and glossy.

Another visiting costume of a more imposing character was of velvet in a verd antique shade of great distinction. Its long skirt was braided with a silk soutache in two widths. This border was extremely wide, its straight bottom edge set up on the skirt for nearly eighteen inches, its top edge in broken lines inset effectively upon the cloth. A large coat of the same velvet, its open skirt untrimmed, had its body fitted with enormous arm openings. It folded over in front, allowing a V neck point, and closed very low at the waist, like a vest, with two large black satin buttons for fastening. The arm openings were trimmed with a two-inch bias band of black satin. A wide velvet sleeve covered with the same braiding seen upon the skirt border had also a match band of black satin with an outer edge of the coat velvet showing below and reaching more than half-way down the arm. It was also trimmed with black satin buttons and the coat finish in the back at waistline was two pairs of black satin buttons.

The lining, of cream white satin with a narrow gold lace gimp forming a small design, was extremely lovely as the coat skirt was turned over. The lace chemisette with its jabot of the finest Flemish order, when sable stole shall be dropped over the shoulders, will give that perfect ensemble required for costumes of this character.—[Vogue.

Planning the Library.

The library—of all portions of the house the most intimate, the most personal and the most sacred, an unassailable fortress, a kingdom of one's own! Is there a single room that so distinctly and entirely belongs to the house owner himself as his library? Cosiness, warmth and seclusion should here be aimed at. The room should be dignified without being ceremonious; sedate, without stiffness. Here may one curl up in a comfortable chair and gobble a book as serenely as Dr. Johnson used to gobble his dinner.

If there is not a sufficient number of books to run to the ceiling, fill out the walls with warm, brown chestnut or walnut or cypress or oak panels. They will enclose and warm it, even during the dreariest of snowstorms. If as expensive a material as wood cannot be employed for the covering of the walls, use a non-committal burlap of one uniform tone, with perhaps merely a texture or weave or surfacing, just to keep it from looking licked and bodiless.

The bookcases are a difficult question and should, if possible, run directly to the ceiling. If the owner has not a sufficient quantity of books to make this feasible, he may run them one-third or two-thirds up the sides of the room. A half-way subdivision in an eleven-foot room is never pleasing. Whether they be high or low, do not make the lower part of the room a library and the upper part a picture or chromo gallery, and, above all, avoid a knick-knack collection on the upper shelves. Busts or medallions of authors may, however, be introduced in a dignified manner.

The width, depth and length of the shelves are all of importance. Shelves should be placed on movable strong metal pegs, in order that they may be at any time varied. They should be made of strong material in hard wood, one or one and a quarter inches thick, and not over three feet long. Eight inches deep, instead of ten or twelve, as is generally the case, will suffice for most books. As a rule, in calculating the requisite space required for the housing of a library, eight to ten volumes to the running foot should be adequate. The provision for expansion should naturally be considered in all libraries, if one is not to be driven to such expedients as De Quincy, who finally kept his choicest volumes in the family washtub. Roughly speaking, a thousand volumes require from eighty to one hundred square feet of floor measurement.—[John A. Gade in Indoors and Out.

Legendary Wedding Gowns.

Wedding gowns, whose gleaming satin or silky crepe de Chine folds picture some ancient legend or romance, will be one of the pretty fancies of the autumn and winter bride.

Society brides, before selecting the material and style of their frocks, will search the family archives for some tale of love or war, which can be woven in silver threads or embroidered in glittering sequins on their wedding dress.

The fashion was started this year by a Scotch bride, who is a direct descendant of Robert Bruce. She chose, as the trimming for her bridal robe, the legend of her great ancestor and the spider.

Her white gown was embroidered with delicate silver spider's webs, glittering with miniature moonstones. The same design bordered the tulle veil.

"The legendary wedding gown is one of the prettiest ideas we have heard of," a well-known court dressmaker said to an Express representative yesterday.

"Brides all over the world will welcome a new idea in bridal toilets, because no dress in the trousseau is more difficult to select. Everybody is so thoroughly tired of the conventional white satin.

"A pretty family legend will be embroidered on one of our bridal gowns this winter. The story tells how a lord of the house was riding out to fight for Bonnie Prince Charlie.

"As he and his retinue rode over the drawbridge, a poor girl came forward and offered him a sprig of white heather. This he promised to wear as his talisman. The legend goes on to say that in battle the white heather shone like fire, and so blinded the eyes of the enemy that its wearer was preserved from harm.

"The bride's gown, of white crepe de Chine, is to be embroidered with sprays of white heather in silver sequins, and a coronet of real white heather will replace the conventional crown of orange blossoms."—[London Express.

The Selection of a Husband.

Because it is the duty of every woman to marry some man, it by no means follows that she is deprived of the privilege of making acute discrimination; on the contrary, to fulfill her mission as completely as possible, she should exercise the greatest care in selecting a mate. Time was when she had no say in the matter, and in some countries she has little or none today; but in this happily civilized land she still possesses, and will undoubtedly hold, for all time, the right first to choose and then ensnare. It is a noble prerogative—one, in our judgment, that should be appreciated and cherished above all others. And yet, as we have observed, it should be exercised with caution. Let nothing be left to chance, as Plato would have had it when he decreed that pairing should be done by lot; while not over-nice, but at least particular, in order that the one chosen may feel honored by the distinction conferred upon him, and so be the more readily induced to show his undying gratefulness.

Much that was thought and written years ago on how to choose a wife was good enough for the time, but the recent reversal of the relative attitudes of seeker and sought renders it valueless. Nevertheless, despite the fact that, in considering the points to be heeded and the precautions to be observed by womankind, we find ourselves in a fallow field, certain general principles may be regarded as established. It is best for example, to capture a husband while he is still young, docile and plastic. Preferably, also, he should be in love. He may then be trained after the manner best calculated to serve the convenience of her for whom thenceforth he must and should toil.—[George Harvey, in The North American Review.

DRESSMAKING HINTS.

Helpful Suggestions for Those Who Do Their Own Work.

[Washington Star.] If annoyed by the dust-holding qualities of the ordinary petticoat ruffle, as well as by the rapidity with which it wears out, try cutting the next one in circular form.

Use two yards of yard-wide taffeta, cut two circles a yard in diameter, then cut a smaller circle from the center of each, leaving a ruffle a foot in width.

Cut open the circular ruffles on a straight edge and join the two pieces with felled seams. Hem and attach as you would any ruffle. When the hem frays, cut it off and rehem.

This method offers no fold or creases in which dust may settle, and thus prolongs the life of a petticoat.

Be sure to get dead white mohair for the white mohair skirt. Cream color destroys the beauty of the lingerie blouse. Sun pleat it, or if that is too difficult, put it in tiny pleats.

When joining a bias piece of material to a straight piece, always keep the bias piece underneath, as this prevents it from stretching.

Prepared dyes are used at home with complete success and they make possible a wonderful amount of doing over. Everything will dye black that will dye at all, and a black dress is always useful and unobtrusive.

In making a shirt waist most people bunch the fullness too much, both in the back and front.

In the back the fullness should extend five inches, while that in front occupies a space of seven and a half and eight inches.

This applies to slender figures as well as to stout, for the object is to have the fullness fall straight from the shoulders, giving the square effect.

Where the material is a yard wide, such a shirt waist can be made from less than two yards, and sheer wash cottons and heavy linen will make up very well, indeed, according to this plan.

Before the shirt takes its trip to the laundry, run a basting thread in the Marie Antoinette frill which may adorn it, to hold the pleat in place.

If a skirt is of heavy material or the facing is of cloth, the upper edge may be bound with a bias strip of lining or seam binding.

Then stitch along the top of the hem or facing, to avoid extra thickness, or turn in edge of cloth after the hem or facing of skirt is completed.

Most of the walking skirts are now finished with braid bindings, so as to protect the bottom of the skirt, and the braid should be allowed to extend one-quarter of an inch beyond the edge of the skirt.

Skirt seams should be opened and pressed, the raw edges of the lining and the outside material put together and tacked, if a separate drop skirt is to be used.

The edges are overcast in an unlined woolen skirt, the seams pressed open and the silk lining bound with bias strips.

The lower part is hemmed invisibly, turned up, pressed and bound as the material demands.

The velveteen binding is run on after the hem, turned and then hemmed down, or the new binding that requires one sewing is used.

In either case the binding should project an eighth of an inch below the edge.

Sew the hooks and eyes three-fourths of an inch apart on the front of a tight-fitting waist and back from the edge, so as to prevent any gaping.

Run a whalebone up each front edge to the top of the darts to keep the edges of the waist firm. Cover all but the extreme edges of the hooks and eyes with a strip of seam binding hemmed down.

If a waist has been carefully basted, it will be easy to stitch the seams straight. The stitching, except on a wash gown, should be done with silk, and with a very easy tension on the machine.

The stitching should be done just outside the bastings to allow for the bonings.

Finish the edges of the seams with overcasting, or seam-binding, or turn them in and run them together.

Use a small iron for pressing seams, and open all seams. Velvet or cloth seams are finished by standing an iron with a small end up and running the seam over it quickly using a bit of thin crinoline between the goods and the iron.

Where there is pleated front fullness laid upon the shoulders of a waist, the fronts being open, use small buttons for the trimming of the pleats.

There are usually three pleats on the side of each front.

On the first and second pleats frame the front opening of the bodice, and, starting at the top of the shoulder line, place a vertical downward row of buttons. Upon the third pleat next to the sleeve place but four buttons.

Upon each upturned cuff place two vertical lines of buttons. Considering these as enamel buttons, their effect upon a silk or woolen waist is pleasing and simple.

The flat-lined skirt, as it is called when skirt and lining are made in one, is scarcely ever seen. Its return has been rumored, but it seems hardly likely to receive much favor, as a skirt of this sort is always heavy.

It is true that so much cloth and so much lining have probably the same actual weight, whether made together or separate, but the unlined skirt worn over the foundation petticoat is apparently much lighter, and certainly more graceful.

Zoological Umbrella.

It behoves every woman who respects her autumn hats and gowns to lose no time in buying a smart and serviceable umbrella. There is no reason why it should not be both, for even the innate ugliness of that very necessary article can be redeemed by a tasteful and pretty handle.

This year there is a very distinct fashion, and every umbrella with the smallest pretension to style boasts a top carved in the likeness of some bird or animal.

The swan's head and graceful neck are old friends—that neck was predestined for the purpose—but this year owls, ducks, parrots, pheasants, and half a dozen other birds are added to the list, and very pretty they look either in plain carved wood, gold, malachite or silver, but best of all enameled in soft dark colors, as near the hues of the bird's plumage as possible.

In animals the choice is even larger—there is the lucky black cat, with tail arching over his back, elephants and bears, monkeys in every imaginable state of contortion, a snarling tiger, kangaroos and foxes, and, above all, dogs and rabbits.

Many of these umbrella tops are works of art in their way, and one which an Express representative saw was a perfect marvel of delicate workmanship. From a thick gold rim rose a slender column of the palest pink quartz, and on the column was perched a little schipperke dog with emerald eyes. The dog was beautifully carved in white quartz, and round its neck—the last touch of dainty realism—was a tiny gold collar set with seed pearls. The price was 8 guineas!

Far less expensive, and almost as pretty, was an umbrella topped by a crystal rabbit with sapphire eyes, his long ears stretching out behind his head to form a crutch-handle, while the quaintest design of all was a small gold fox terrier gazing intently into the horn of a silver phonograph, in bold imitation of a well-known advertisement.

Of course, there are all sorts of other styles as well as the zoological, but to be really in the fashion this winter your umbrella top must be some bird or beast, and though the dog holds pride of place as first favorite, "Brer Rabbit" runs him very close.—[London Express.

Earrings Becoming Fashinoble.

The wearing of earrings is becoming fashionable again, and these dainty ornaments have for several months been growing in length as well as in favor. We are threatened with an earring that will hang down to the wearer's shoulder.

The earrings most affected are the pendants of our grandmothers, but whereas, the long pear-shaped drops that adorned their ears were, in spite of their beauty, heavy in make and pattern, those of today are made only in the lightest and most elegant design.

There is little demand for plain gold or even filigree work, although occasionally a pair of genuine old Maltese earrings will find a customer. The jeweled variety is, however, the fashion of the moment.

Pearls and diamonds, or diamonds and light blue sapphires, are the favorite combinations. The dark sapphire is too heavy in appearance for these dainty works of art. Amethysts and pink pearls are in favor, and of the less costly stones the peridot and tourmalines, both pink and green, are the most worn.

The very newest and most original design is called the "double-drop." It consists of two little chains of small diamonds or pears in an invisible setting, and each finished with a larger pear or diamind drop. The longer chain of the two is fixed in front of the ear, the shorter at the back, so the effect when worn is of a chain of stones drawn right through the lobe of the ear.

For those not liking the somewhat barbaric suggestion of the "double drop" there is the "single drop," in a variety of charming designs. Some have a tiny diamond bow, from which the jeweled chain hangs an inch or more long, finished with a pearl or sapphire or a larger diamond. Another design has the little bow in the middle of the chain, and all are as slender as possible, and of the most delicate workmanship.—[London Express.

The Fashionable Coiffure.

There certainly never was a time when more bought hair was used than at present, and yet the aspect of the modern coiffure is absolutely natural. All the best milliners work hand in glove with the coiffeurs and so design the headgear they sell that puffs, curls and plaits are essential items of the general scheme.

That very pretty amalgamation, the Roman bind, or plait, and the cluster of Empire curls, is extremely fashionable now. The shape of the face and the contour of the head must determine where the plait and the curls are placed. One very pretty type, as seen from the front of the face, has a cluster of curls over the left temple, while the hair in the center is draped in a heavy loop off the forehead, and the plait stands at the right above another display of hair.—[London Daily Mail.

Set the Right Value on Trifles.

"I have two words of counsel and suggestion that I think worth your consideration," says Margaret E. Sangster, to her thousands of girl readers in the November issue of the Woman's Home Companion. "The first is, be careful lest you underrate little things. In the scheme of life as it affects the well-being of the home nothing is trifling. The pretty stock that sets off the dainty toilet, the trim belt and the modish buckle, the becoming method of arranging the hair, the neat gloves and shoes that are accessories of a girl's costume, are of more value in setting off her beauty than are rich stuffs and gowns in the height of the fashion. Following out this idea, the tact that sets people at ease, the unobtrusive helpfulness, the readiness to divert a fretful child or comfort a disappointed one, ap pear trifling, but they reveal and are indicative of sin nobility in womanhood. Do derestimate little things

"The second word is, before gauging anything mere financial return. Thousands of not in actual need are ma mistake of fancying that the of money is the most desira the period has to offer. Belie is often the least reward in which a girl can engag daughter at home on whom obligation to earn her ow should feel herself in no way to her friend whose duty it is her place among the paid l the world."

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS.

The one the Tiny Tads have found will neither kick nor bite.

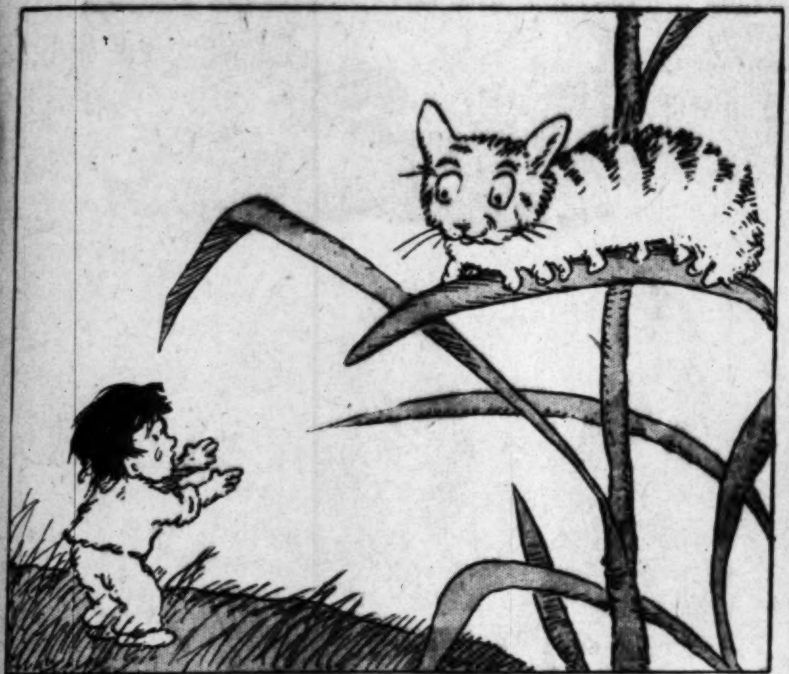
3.—"I've lost my comrades now," he moans, "and don't know what to do.
The Spiderbies will get me—hist! I thought I heard a 'mew.'"



4.—It is a Pussycaterpillar, sitting on some reeds;
She lets him climb upon her back, so earnestly he pleads.

They think they'll overtake the beast, but, goodness me, they can't!

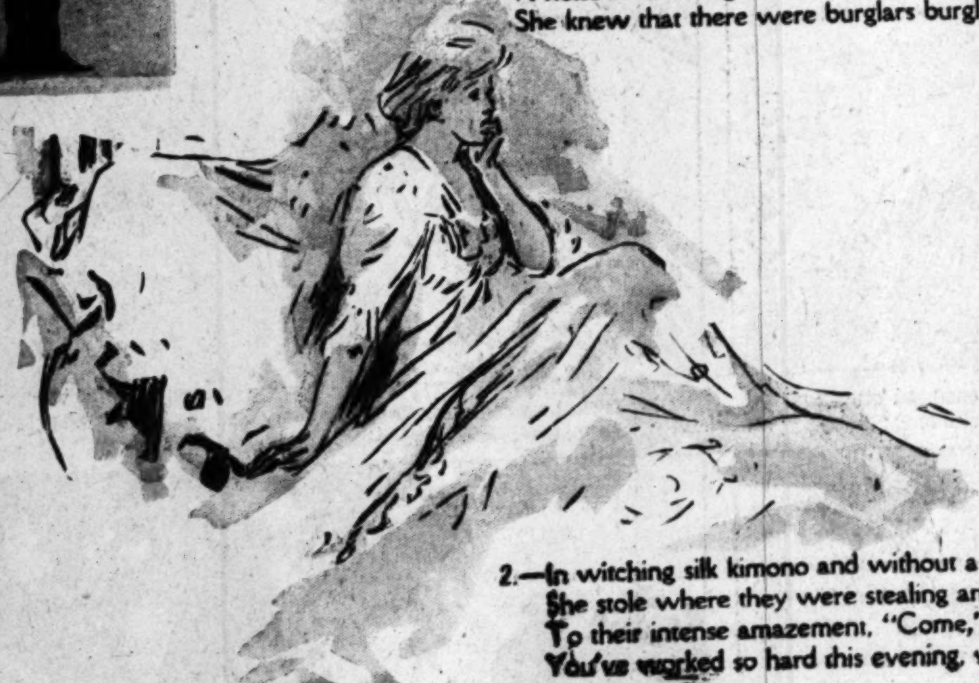
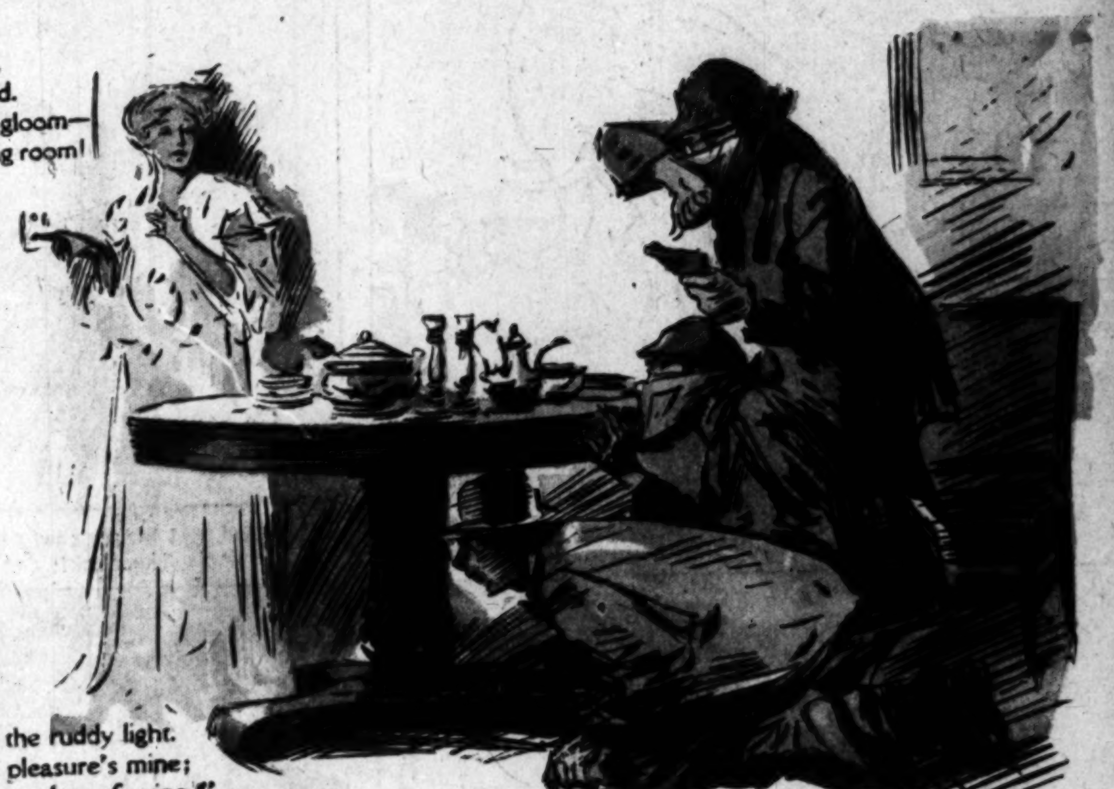
FLUFFY RUFFLES

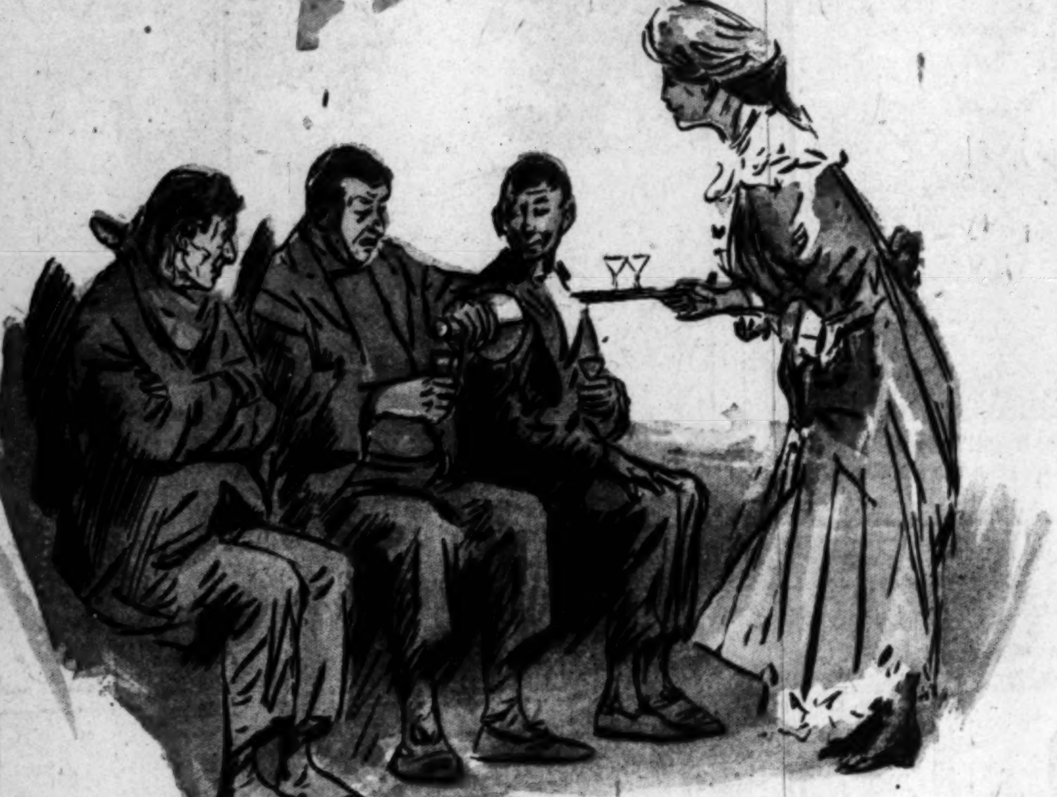
Drawings by WALLACE MORGAN.

1.—On Hallowe'en, as Fluffy slept, her cheeks all rosy red,
She wakened with a start and sat bolt upright in her bed.
A noise of chinking silverware came softly through the gloom—
She knew that there were burglars burgling in the dining room!



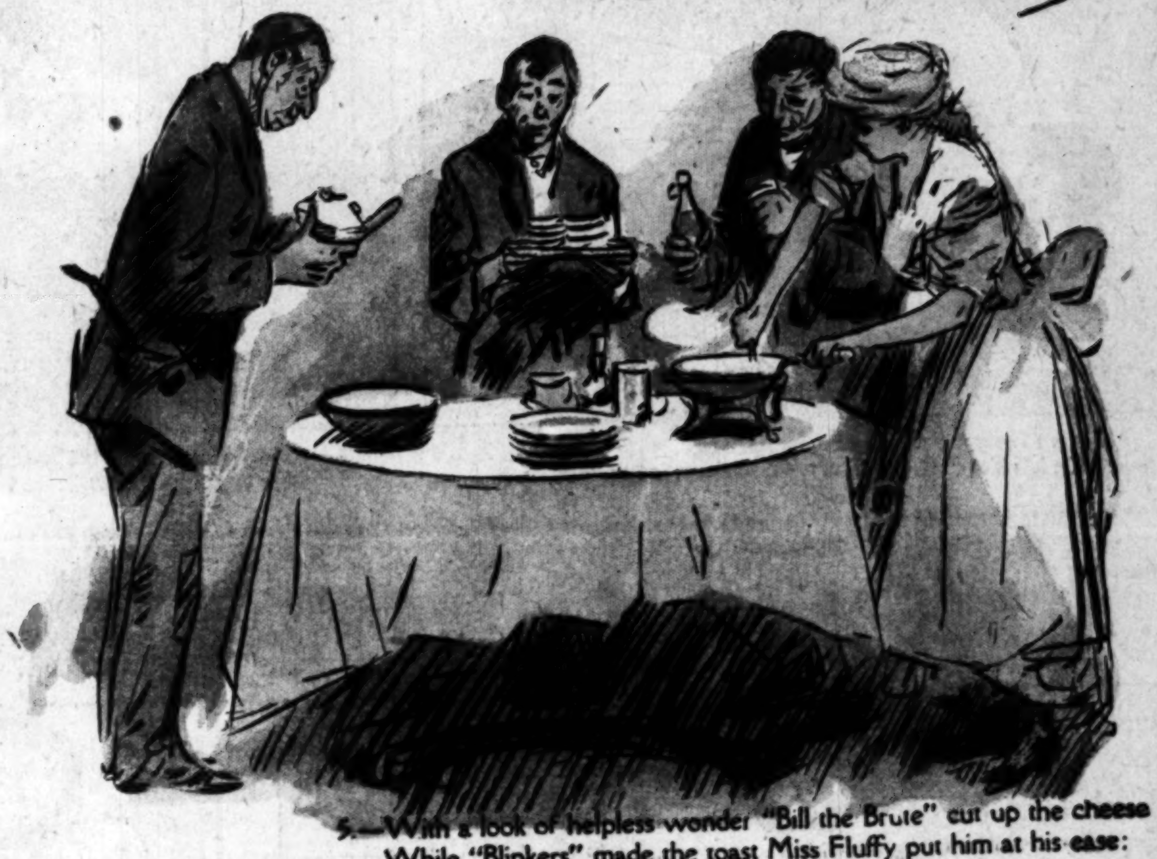


2.—In witching silk kimono and without a trace of fright
She stole where they were stealing and switched on the ruddy light.
To their intense amazement, "Come," she said, "the pleasure's mine;
You've worked so hard this evening, won't you have a glass of wine?"



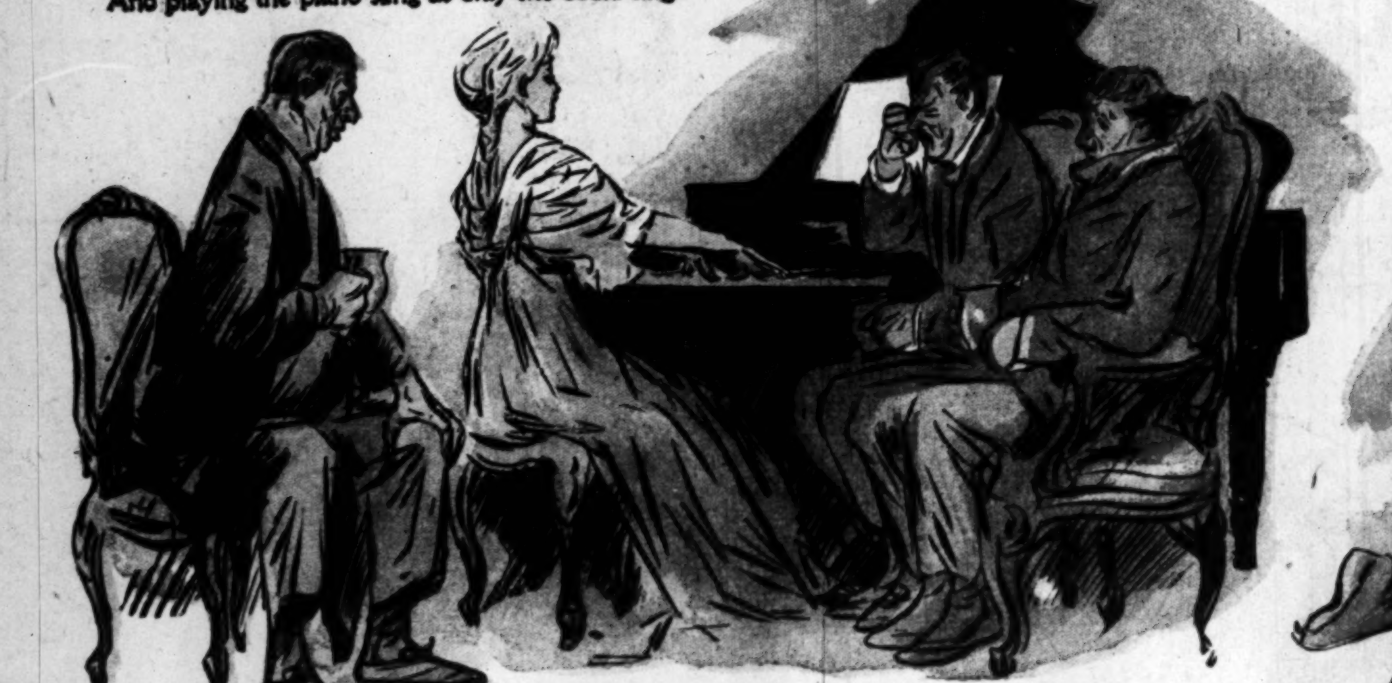
3.—
So she handed round the sherry (it was old in '68!)
And declared they must have supper ere they carried off the plate.
Said she, "I think a rabbit with a mug of ale or two
And a bit of Finnan haddie'd be about the thing, don't you?"

4.—So resistless was the magic of her sweet, imperious way
That those genial desperadoes couldn't find a word to say;
And the way they did her bidding and the way she bossed the job
Would make a graven image grin and robbers cease to rob.

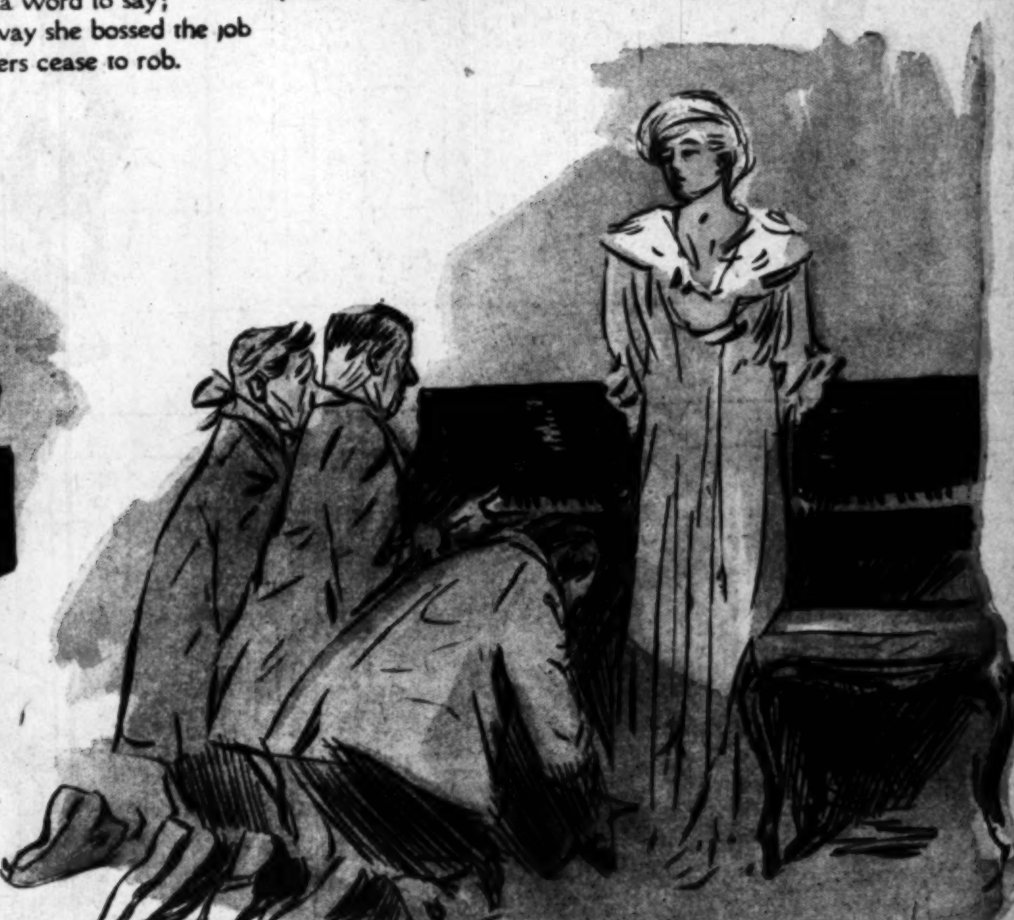


5.—With a look of helpless wonder "Bill the Brute" cut up the cheese
While "Blinkers" made the toast Miss Fluffy put him at his ease:
And as she stirred the rabbit "Artful Artie" hovered near
To sprinkle in paprika and add modicums of beer.

6.—After supper they were mellow, they were soulful with the ale,
While a chastening melancholy called up thoughts of home—and jail.
"And now," cooed Fluffy, "after this a song is quite the thing."
And playing the piano sang as only she could sing.



7.—Ere he knew it "Bill the Brute" was weeping o'er his misspent life,
"Artful Artie's" soul was racked with thoughts of how he beat his wife,
And even hardened "Blinkers" bowed his head in bitter woe
As her tender voice rose softly o'er the minor chords and low.



8.—Then at her feet they threw themselves at last in utter grief
And vowed no man among them e'er again should be a thief.
So they sadly left the silver and filed out like gentle sheep,
But Fluffy, switching off the lights, just cried herself to sleep.

AUTO SPEED MARVEL.

NEW RECORD TO SAN DIEGO.

Four Hours and Thirty-nine Minutes New Mark.

Dare-devil Run Against Time Scores a Success.

Motorists Are Arrested at Journey's End.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Los Angeles to San Diego in four hours and thirty-four minutes was the story of a wild rush against time and a successful effort to lower the record between the two cities.

Bert Latham, A. C. Lusby, J. P. Bemp and Times representative flying over the San Diego road in Thomas-Detroit which broke the Los Angeles-San Diego record yesterday.

Yesterday morning at 5:30 o'clock, while the streets were still free of people, a loud snorting Thomas-Detroit, driven by Bert Latham, of the Western Motor Car Company, dashed up to the entrance of the Alexandria Hotel. Simultaneously with the arrival of the car the night clerk, Willard Johnson, was hailed by a young man with heavy goggles, who breathlessly demanded "stamp," that is, an official stamp showing the time of the morning. While Mr. Johnson was still peering after the begoggled young man, a yell went up from the street and the race against time was on.

In the machine was Bert Latham, Jean Bemb, A. C. Lushy, and The Times man.

The route was down Spring street to Seventh, and while the early dairyman was busy distributing his bottles, the big red automobile flashed into view and tore its way east on Seventh street. To Anaheim and Santa Ana the roads were found to be very good. At the points the speed attained was fully fifty-eight miles an hour, as shown by the speedometer.

As the machine flashed through Santa Ana, the lapsed time was one hour and four minutes. From there to San Juan Capistrano unusually good time was made, and the ruins of the old mission were passed with only one hour and forty-five minutes elapsing since the car left the entrance to the Alexandria Hotel.

Then an to Oceanside, about half way between Los Angeles and San Diego, the car sped. At Oceanside the lapsed time showed three hours and six minutes, which was a little over a half hour ahead of the former record.

The car was behaving beautifully. The recent rains had smoothed up the rough parts of the road, and from Oceanside down little or no trouble was experienced. At points along the road dispatches were dropped informing Los Angeles of the speed made by the car.

After the Thomas passed Oceanside, it was realized that an unusually low record was being established, and instead of stopping at Del Mar to take on gasoline, it was decided to make an effort to rush through the remaining eighteen miles on the supply in the tanks.

The story of the run from Del Mar to San Diego is a story of a wild dash at almost fifty miles an hour, circling teams and dodging pedestrians, until the city limits of San Diego were reached. It was seen that the record would be cut considerably below five hours, and, taking a big chance, Latham drove the machine without slackening from the outskirts of the city to the Brewster Hotel. The big motor arrived there at exactly nine minutes past 10 o'clock.

Scarcely had the automobilists reached the lobby of the hotel before a mounted policeman rode up and announced to the awaiting public that the chauffeur and party were under arrest for exceeding the speed limits of the City of Bay and Climate.

Elated over having lowered the record by more than one hour, and jubilant because a new figure that will probably stand for some time had been established, the occupants of the car paid little attention to the officer, and were inclined to treat their arrest lightly. The matter would have probably resulted in a heavy fine being imposed upon the driver had not Mr. McMullen, managing editor of the San Diego Union, used his good offices and succeeded in having Chief Neely release the automobilists after an explanation, and a promise to drive very slowly while in the city.

The story of the ride down the coast and the manner in which the engine behaved is a technical matter, and is best told by the statement that the engine never stopped running from the moment, at 5:30 o'clock, that the car left the Alexandria, until the Brewster Hotel at San Diego was reached, and that outside of the oil, and an extra supply of gasoline, the machinery and the tires of the car were untouched.

The party plans to return to Los Angeles by the inland route on Sunday, and will make no attempt to establish a record, being satisfied with their present wonderful showing. Messages of congratulation were received from several friends in Los Angeles on the remarkable run made by the car.

Honors of Southern California Go to Riverside Club Because None Other Competes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERIDE, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Women's Golf Association of Southern California met on the links of the Victoria Club this afternoon. The championship went to Riverside, but the victory was easily won, as none of the other women's clubs that were scheduled to play, appeared to contest for the honors and the cups. Miss Grace Gilliland, whose handicap was 24, won the silver championship medal, and a silver loving cup. The second prize silver cups were won by Miss Rita West, scratch, and Mrs. W. S. Gilmore, whose handicap was 10.

The net scores were: Miss Rita West, 104; Mrs. W. S. Gilmore, 107; Mrs. T. D. Hewitt, 109; Mrs. Martin A. Chase, 112; Miss Grace Gilliland, 100; Mrs. Kearne, 117; Mrs. E. B. Howe, 119; Mrs. Hugh Bain, 113.

L. A. High Easily Shows Superiority Over Harvard in Basketball Game.

The Harvard School basketball team was defeated yesterday morning by the Los Angeles High School five by a score of 62 to 8 on the L. A. courts. The Harvard supporters seem somewhat pessimistic in regard to their future basketball season, as they have been unable to bring home a victory.

This is the first year the cadets have played the game, and although they have two fair players, the team work is poor. Stall, forward for the military school, played the best game. He is well acquainted with the fine points and with good support could have made a much better showing against the High School five.

King worked as forward for the L. A. team, and played the star game for them. The men held the following positions.

BILL TO PREVENT FOOTBALL GAMES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANKAKEE (Ill.) Nov. 2.—A motion to restrain the authorities from permitting football in Kankakee public schools was filed in the Circuit Court yesterday by Stephen R. Moore, dean of the county bar.

Attorney Moore filed his bill after he had watched the High School football team play one or two matches. He failed to see any difference between the gridiron game, as the boys played it, and prize-fighting, except that possibly it was rougher and more dangerous to life and limb, and since prize-fighting is illegal, Moore fails to see why the subterfuge under which it is carried on should be permitted.

Beaten Man Warns Pugs to Be Shy of Blackbird.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—"You're a clever nigger," were the last words uttered by Jim Flynn, the Colorado fireman, in his scheduled forty-five-round contest with Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight at Colma this afternoon. A straight right flush to the jaw cut off further speech and Flynn toppled to the floor completely knocked out. The finishing blow was delivered in the eleventh round and it took fully four minutes to resuscitate the defeated pugilist. Throughout the contest Johnson toyed with his antagonist as a terrier would with a rat. In the initial round he practically closed Flynn's left eye, and thereafter made it a target for his unerring left jabs.

Johnson landed at will on his man and seemed to have the contest well in hand at all stages. He left the ring without a mark and only once did he receive a telling blow from his opponent. This was in the ninth round when one of Flynn's wild swings found a resting place in the colored man's stomach. Flynn would constantly rush into close quarters, but invariably he failed to land. In nearly every instance Johnson retaliated with right and left swings to the head and jaw. The beginning of the end came in the tenth round. Near the end of the round Flynn slipped to the mat from the impetus of a misdirected punch. He was up quickly and as he rushed in Johnson clipped him in the pit of the stomach with a short-arm right uppercut. Flynn dropped to the floor and was carried to his corner, the clang of the gong giving him a temporary respite.

In the eleventh round Johnson taunted his man, forcing him to close quarters. Then Johnson, backing, shot a wicked straight right flush to the jaw and Flynn sank to the floor utterly helpless and completely knocked out.

Billy Roche, the referee, after the contest, said:

"Johnson was the best man and he outclassed Flynn in every department of the boxing game. He is, however, deserving of much credit for his gameness and the result would have been the same whether Flynn's eye was closed or not. Johnson is easily the best man in his class today."

Johnson, after shaking hands with his defeated antagonist, said to the newspaper men:

"I knew I had him after I closed his eye. He is a game little boy, but too small for this class. I think that I have demonstrated to the world that I am not afraid and I challenge any one to find the "yellow" in me. Tommy Burns is my next man, and I stand ready to fight him at any time."

Flynn said:

"The best man won, and all I can say is to warn the next man that is matched with Johnson. He is a great man, and I was entirely outclassed. I did my best, however, and would like to show myself before the same crowd with a man in my class. Beyond his cleverness, he was miles too big for me to handle. Arrangements will at once be made to match Johnson and Tommy Burns for the world's heavyweight championship. The attendance was very large and many women were scattered about the arena. The receipts probably will approximate $7000.

In the preliminary between "Denver" Ed Martin and "Spike" Kennedy, Martin was given the decision over Kennedy in the sixth round. The colored man completely outmatched his white antagonist and at no time during the six rounds of fighting was he in danger.

Martin battered Kennedy's face into a pulp, and Referee Roche, yielding to Five members of the Sunset Club and two guests had good sport at the week-end shoot of the club yesterday, bagging about 100 ducks. There were quite a few canvasback and jacksnipe. The kills were as follows: J. Rector, 25; Dr. Stivers and H. Mausard, 20 each; Jergins and Collins, 12 each.

POMONA ELEVEN BEATS QUAKERS.

CONGREGATIONALISTS PLAY IN MUCH IMPROVED FORM.

Whittier Is Unable to Get Near the Enemy's Goal Line, but Fight Hard Throughout the Game — Metcalf Kicks Two Pretty Goals—Brilliant Runs Are Features.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By a score of 37 to 0, the Pomona College team overwhelmingly defeated the Whittier eleven, this afternoon. At no time during the game did Whittier have any show of scoring, while in the first half Pomona touchdowns and field goals alternated frequently.

The Pomona team was in the best of condition, and showed the results of Pierce's coaching. Pomona did most of the scoring in the first half, annexing only one touchdown and goal in the second, which was shortened on account of darkness.

Squabbles over the decisions of the referee took up much time and prevented the playing out of the second half.

The playing of Parker and "Bob" Spurgeon were the features of the sagebrushers' work. Both made long gains on end runs, although the latter only played during the second half, in which he got loose for a 40-yard run for a touchdown. Halladay and Metcalf played their usual brilliant game, the latter negotiating two beautiful place kicks.

Vaile, at quarter, managed the team well, as well as playing a brilliant individual game.

When Pierce saw that he had the game won, several promising subs were put in. One of the features of the first half was a 35-yard run by Baird, headed by magnificent interference of the other backs. Three times he fell, only to be dragged on for a greater distance by his auxiliaries.

Feeler and Rennecker were the stars of the Whittier team. Feeler was strong at defensive end, while Rennecker made the only gains made by the Quakers.

Metcalf kicked to Rennecker, who was downed in his tracks. Wade punted for Whittier to Spurgeon, who ran in several yards. Metcalf gained 15 yards running from position, and a little later Spurgeon bucked over for a touchdown. Metcalf kicked goal.

Wade kicked off to Smith, and the latter ran for a gain. Pomona lost the ball on downs, and after frequent undeserved penalties, got loose for the second touchdown. Metcalf kicked goal. Wade kicked to Spurgeon, who ran in 25 yards. Metcalf was forced to punt, Halladay fell on mall, making a gain of 35 yards. Parker running from position made 25. After a series of short bucks and interchange of the ball, Metcalf placed the ball between the bars from the 35-yard line.

Wade again booted the ball to Vaile, who gained 20. Culver getting the ball

HURRAH!

SAINTS WIN GREAT GAME.

Speed and Cleverness Score St. Vincent's Victory.

Injuries and Warm Weather Aid Hempel's Men.

Maddock Gives Victors All Credit for Winning.

Speed and cleverness enabled St. Vincent's to gain an unexpected victory over the University of Utah at Fiesta Park, yesterday, by a score of 11 to 5.

A great throng which filled the long bleachers cheered the Los Angeles team to victory, and gave the players a great ovation when the whistle blew at the close of the second half.

The brand of football put up yesterday was not as good as has been seen in other games this season, but for enthusiasm and fierce playing the contest stands as the greatest of the year thus far.

Utah scored first, after ten minutes of play, by bucking over the line, after a long place kick had failed and Utah had fallen on the ball on the four-yard line.

St. Vincent's first touchdown was made early in the second half, after Utah had been penalized until the ball rested at their three-yard line. It was then given to St. Vincent's, on an off-side play, and Galt carried it over. Neither side kicked goal on these scores, as in the kick-outs for place both failed.

St. Vincent's scored five more later in the game, on a forward pass from Galt to Capt. Grindle, which the latter carried 35 yards in a brilliant run through the Utah players. He kicked an easy goal, making the score 11 to 5.

MANY FUMBLES.

Fumbles were frequent, especially on attempted forward passes, and in the handling of punts. The St. Vincent's backfield men showed no improvement in judging or catching punts over their poor work in the Denver game. Keim was especially at fault in this regard during the first half. Neither side did any phenomenal kicking, but Conville, who went in as fullback for Utah in the second half, did some creditable work in spite of his injured leg.

When the two teams trotted on the field at 2:30 o'clock, the Mormon players appeared greatly to outweigh St. Vincent's, with Seeley, Russell and Richardson looming up like giants. As a matter of fact, the two teams averaged about the same weight in the first half, but when Fullback Conville went in the second half, the Rocky Mountain bunch had a big advantage. In spite of this fact, the local team held much better in the last half of the game, and made bigger inroads on the heavy Utah line.

The afternoon was excessively warm, and after fifteen minutes' of play it was apparent that the unaccustomed heat was telling on the players from the high altitudes of the Rockies. At first they bucked the St. Vincent's line by merely throwing their weight against it, but in the last part of the first half St. Vincent's held the Utah line, and began to make gains on bucks.

UTAH WEARS OUT.

In the second half Utah seemed worn out, and the Saints were able to score twice, and kept the ball in Utah's territory most of the time.

Coach Joe Maddock refused to make any excuses for his team after the game, however.

"I will admit that my men did not play like themselves today, but I give St. Vincent's credit for a game fairly won," he said. "These Los Angeles players beat us by quick, alert playing, and won squarely. We have been treated royally, and have no complaint to make."

Early in the first half St. Vincent's twice had the ball dangerously close to the Utah line, but the Mormons held on downs both times, and securing the ball punted out to safe territory. In the second half St. Vincent's crossed the Utah line but did not score on the play. Yabarando, who succeeded Huppert at quarterback in this half, punted over the Utah line, and Grindle fell on the ball, but as the punt struck across the line and thus out of bounds no score was counted.

Twice during the game Utah players resorted to flagrantly unfair tactics. Seeley, the big guard, was hissed by the crowd in the second half for apparently trying to kick a St. Vincent's player as the two lay together on the ground after a scrimmage. Later in the same half, Rheinschild, the St. Vincent's right guard, and Anderson, playing left end for the Mormons, engaged in a scuffle for which both were ruled from the game. Murray replaced Rheinschild, and Maddock sent Furgeson in for Anderson, who had played fullback during the first half.

GALT A STAR.

Galt's work at full was up to his usual form and St. Vincent's used him at every opportunity. He was also conspicuous for his tackling. In the second half he made big gains by his plunges into the Utah line, but in the first part of the game was unable to get through the Mormon team.

Capt. Grindle, left end for St. Vincent's, was the hero of the day. His great 30-yard run for a touchdown in the second half brought the crowd to its feet with a great shout. Although injured and almost exhausted from his aggressive game, he stuck to the end. Both Huppert and Yabarando played well at quarterback, and Grant marshaled the Mormon forces cleverly. Stoney at halfback, who went in in the second half, proved a tower of strength for the Los Angeles team, and made good line bucks.

For Utah, Capt. Russell carried the ball for the biggest number of yards, and Richardson showed up well. Seeley, with his 194 pounds in the line, stopped many of the St. Vincent's bucks and Anderson was speedy both as fullback and end, although handicapped by his light weight in the former position.

STORY OF GAME.

The halves were thirty minutes long. Russell kicked off for Utah, making a short kick to Rheinschilds, who fumbled the ball. Galt and Casey failed to gain against the Utah line and the Mormons took the ball on downs. Richardson and Russell started down the field on bucks, but the latter was soon downed for a loss by Grindle.

PROGRESSION.

TROLLEYLESS MOTOR COACH.

Speedy Car May Be Seen on Los Angeles Streets.

Gasoline Marvel Travels Mile-a-Minute.

Marks Long Stride from Steam to Electricity.

With the completion of the handsome gasoline motor car, just turned out of the Union Pacific Railroad shops at Omaha, another step toward the electricizing of steam railroads has been taken. The big motor showed a maximum speed of forty-five miles an hour on its first test, and on a second test made a mile a minute. There is an engine and operator's room in the front of the coach. The passenger compartment has a seating capacity for seventy-five people. This special type of car is said to be adapted for interurban traffic. It has plenty of power, and will pull a trailer as large as itself without retarding its speed to any noticeable extent. The motor is being considered by Pacific Electric Railway officials for use on their longer runs.

There is a steady demand for a low-cost-of-operation, self-propelled passenger car; there are several kinds of transportation service to which the gasoline cars are particularly well adapted, and to which they are almost a necessity. Many steam passenger trains are being operated at financial loss, yet the passenger service must be maintained. To meet these demands this gasoline motor car has been designed for use on former steam railroads.

The first of these cars had 100 horse power gasoline engines of the six-cylinder type, and were efficient up to thirty-five miles an hour on ordinary grades, but the Union Pacific shops at Omaha, where they are all being made, intend to install 200 horse power engines, which make possible a speed of sixty-five miles an hour, and which climb greater grades than are found on steam railroads. Trailers can also be drawn, and thus freight or baggage carried in addition to passengers.

One of the first of these cars turned out at Omaha left that city and reached Los Angeles on its own power, having been shown along the route at various points. It made the run from Salt Lake to this city, a distance of 778 miles, in less than four days, running but eight hours a day. After using this car on the San Pedro and Santa Ana lines to take the measure of the work for future cars, it was started back to Omaha from Los Angeles on June 26 last year, and after an overhauling at Omaha, went into regular service on a branch line out of St. Paul, Minn., to Loup City. A similar car is in daily service between Leavenworth and Lawrence, Kan., the round trip each day being 68.6 miles. This car also hauls a trailer.

The gasoline motor car shown on this page, is known at the Omaha shops as No. 7, being the second one turned out after the one tested here in Southern California a year ago. It is fifty-five feet long, and weighs 58,000 pounds. The roof is nine inches lower than in the previous-built motor cars, which is two feet lower than the roof of an ordinary railroad passenger coach, and yet the ventilation is entirely satisfactory.

The entrances to this car are in the center, instead of at the ends. The interior is finished in English oak and the seats are made to hold three people each, instead of two as in ordinary railway coaches. A semi-circular seat at the rear of the car, following the curve of the car, seats eleven.

While the double sash in the finest Pullman coach will not keep out the dust, a way has been found in building these motor cars to overcome the dust nuisance by the use of a round window sash, similar to the port hole of a ship, which is proving satisfactory. The ventilation is, of course, from the roof.

It is believed by prominent railroad officials that the new type of motor coach will revolutionize railroad passenger traffic. Many objections formerly urged against the gasoline motor have been overcome, it is declared, in the latest type of car made at the Union Pacific shops.

The fact that the coach can travel as fast as the ordinary steam railroad train, and faster than many of the trains on local lines, makes it appeal strongly to railroad men. The long stride which has recently been taken toward electricizing many steam lines is due, it is said, to the wonderful development of the gasoline motor coach.

ANOTHER SHOW.

Importers' Automobile Salon to Be Held in Madison Square Garden During Christmas Holidays.

Amid the exciting incidents of the two shows of American-made cars which are being held in New York, there is no diminution of the general interest shown by the Importers' Automobile Salon, which exhibition will take place in Madison Square Garden from December 28 to January 4.

Although more than two months away, there is a great deal of activity in the search for good space, both in the department of cars, and in the accessories and parts annexes, and many inquiries are being received daily at the headquarters of the Salon in the Bryant Park Building in New York.

C. R. Babley, the manager, says that of the space taken (which embraces practically all of the available space on the ground floor,) the importers of French machines have taken the largest amount of square feet; the importers of Italian-made cars the next largest amount, while the man handling German, Swedish and English machines are about evenly divided in the contest for the third largest allotment.

The Salon this year will be an eye-opener for many visitors who have heretofore failed to realize the extent of foreign business, on account of the fact that importers were formerly placed in out-of-the-way corners of the building, and for visitors to see them was purely a labor of love.

Importers are delighted that they have at last a chance to show to the American public how extensive and far-reaching is the business of dealing in the best foreign makes, irrespective of all questions as to the superiority or inferiority of the cars as compared with American products.

Portable Turntable.

For convenient moving of motor cars, the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company are using in their assembly-room a portable turntable, weighing twenty-five pounds. This table is so constructed as to make possible the turning of any motor-car around in its own length.

Standing Still Test.

The H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company are giving their 1908 motors a standstill or limbering-up test, which consists of running the engine from five to fifteen hours with the car standing still. In this way all parts are eased up, and the natural stiffness of the new engine eliminated.

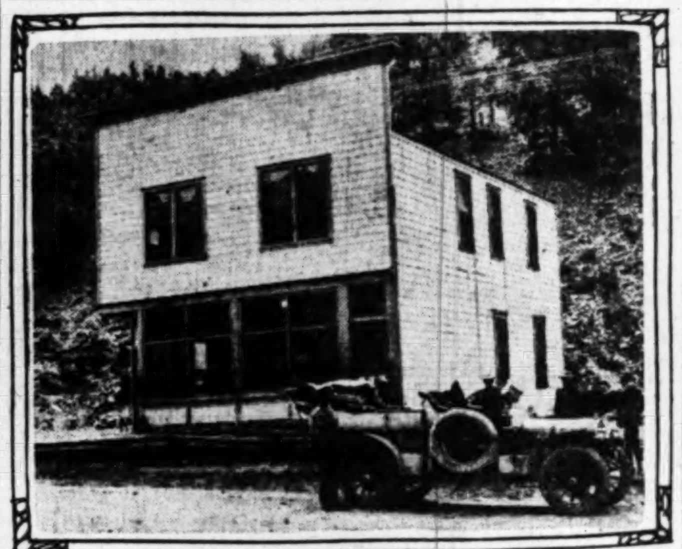
AUTO IS GOOD STRIKE BREAKER.

TOURING CAR CARRIES MAILS WHEN RAILROAD FAILS.

Uncle Sam's Service Is Maintained by Automobile in Crisis at Manhattan When Tons of Letters Are Carried to Tonopah and Regular Trips Are Made.

An automobile has made good as a strike breaker. When strikers refused to move railroad cars a big automobile was utilized as a mail car. The auto made long trips, and carried the mails with the regularity of steam railroads.



Motor car used to carry mails in and out of Manhattan, Nev.

The suggestion of using an automobile came from A. F. Raycroft, an enthusiastic motorist, who owns a big Thomas touring car. From Manhattan to Tonopah, Nev., the car made regular trips, and the residents of the two towns were overjoyed at the novel mail service. Miles of desert sands were crossed by the motor mail auto.

During the recent railroad strike in the goldfields of Nevada the mining camps suffered much on account of the delayed mail service. At Manhattan, which is about forty miles north of Tonopah, on the edge of a rich agricultural district, as well as mining field, much mail had accumulated.

Finally it was suggested that an automobile could be used to advantage in carrying the mails. Raycroft's Thomas Flyer was put into commission as a mail car, one of the railway mail clerks taking charge of the mail service. The tonneau, which is made to seat five persons, is roomy enough to allow mail distribution, and with slight changes served as a railway postoffice.

For some time this motor car was kept in service, following the railroad route through the goldfields, with great success, until the railroad strike was settled.

FIERCE.

AUTO DEFIES SAND AND SUN.

FIVE MONTHS ON OPEN DESERT MOTOR RUNS SMOOTHLY.

Severe Test Results When Car Is Left to Mercy of Merciless Sandstorms—Elements Fail to Disturb Working Parts of Machine Which Chugs Along Merrily When Started.

Robert Atkinson, a mining man of Los Angeles, has become an auto enthusiast since taking up his residence at Johnnie, Nev. Atkinson was a well-known motorist of Los Angeles before leaving for Nevada. He knows a good car and is an expert driver. To friends yesterday he told of an interesting experience with a White car.

Called away on business, Atkinson left his machine with nothing to protect it from the fierce rays of a desert sun but a cotton auto cover. The motor was at the mercy of the merciless sandstorms for five months. He returned to find the top torn off, the tires flat and the paint scorched from the car. After a few minutes of tinkering, he "fired up," and sent the auto over the desert on a long and successful run. The incident, as related by Atkinson, is of fascinating interest to autoists.

"Upon my departure from the desert on May 15," says Atkinson, "I left my 1905 White car, which I had previously run on the desert over a year, at Amargosa, Nev., a small station on the Los Vegas and Tonopah Railroad. This station is situated in the heart of the Amargosa Desert, which is as barren and fully as hot in summer as the famed Death Valley, which is only twenty-five miles away. I expected to return to the desert early in the summer so took no precautions to house the machine other than to throw the regular cotton auto cover over it. Circumstances prevented my returning to the desert until the 10th of October, an absence of five months, all of which time the machine was subjected to the fierce rays of a desert sun and the terrible wind and sandstorms that sometimes blow for a week at a time.

"When I returned last week with F. E. Bennett of Los Angeles I found the cotton cover had been whipped and torn off by the wind, leaving the machine fully exposed to the weather. My tires were all flat but we had no difficulty inflating them. I found the air in the gasoline tank stood at 30 pounds, just as I had left it, and my water and gasoline tanks were full. I lit the pilot light and gave the exposed working parts of the engine a liberal bath of oil, wiping the sand off where it had accumulated.

"By this time a number of men had collected around the machine, and many of them predicted the car would not run. One man who runs a gasoline auto stage line to Greenwater said it took him two hours at least to get his machine ready to run after each trip and he knew I could not run a steamer after standing out there all summer. I offered to bet him $100 I could fire up the car and be on my way inside of fifteen minutes, but he wouldn't take the bet.

"After oiling up, Bennett and I put out suit cases in the tonneau and I turned on the main fire, and in a moment my engine was running as smoothly as a sewing machine. We were soon on our way to Johnnie, twelve miles distant, over a continual stiff grade and rough road. We arrived at camp in just forty-five minutes with everything working fine.

"Sunday I took a party of five down to Ash Meadow, twenty miles from Johnnie, on a duck hunt, and returned yesterday, making the trip, carrying over 1000 pounds in passengers, guns and baggage, without a hitch and without having touched a tool to the car since my return with it to camp."

REGULATOR.

METER TO TEST SPEED LAWS.

GIANT DIAL ON TONNEAU TO BE SEEN BY MANY.

Automobilists Will Give Lessons in Motor Traveling to Farmers and Others Who Would Make Prohibitive Rules—Model Town With Liberal Regulations Is Sought After.

Automobile men of Los Angeles are considering a proposition which they believe will educate the general public with regard to speed regulations of automobiles. An auto meter, to be mounted on the tonneau of a car, will tell the rate at which the machine is traveling. The auto would slide along the streets at eight miles an hour, and crawl over crossings at four miles an hour.

The giant auto meter can be seen for blocks and the large figures showing just how fast, and how far, the machine is traveling give citizens an excellent idea of speed. This means that pedestrians have a chance to see how an automobile moves when going from one to five miles an hour, or from thirty to forty miles. The dial of the auto meter on the dashboard also tells the speed up to sixty miles an hour, and higher if the car can travel faster.

The auto meter, it is believed, will be of special value in small towns, where the speed limits are said to be ridiculous. The country folks who have taken a delight in making a machine go as slowly as possible will be given an opportunity to see what effect a speed regulation, which practically prohibits touring, has upon a town.

There are places which are now shunned by motorists because of the speed regulations. A touring car must crawl along at snail's pace when crossing the townships. As a result the auto men have found a road around such towns and enjoy their rides elsewhere.

This works a hardship for the merchants of such places, who usually are not in sympathy with the prohibitive speed regulations. "There is nothing that stimulates a certain kind of trade like regular auto traffic in and through a town," said a prominent motorist yesterday.

Covina is an example of an automobile town. There are said to be more motor cars in Covina than in any other town of its size in the United States. As a result of the auto interest in the place sane speed laws have been made, and motorists delight to visit the pretty town.

Gearless Car Arrives.

The Gearless Transmission Company of Rochester, N. Y., have established an agency in this city for their gearless automobile. The demonstrating car arrived in town yesterday, and has been an object of interest to all autoists who have seen it. The seven-passenger car is equipped with a seventy-five-horse-power engine, six cylinders. The car is built on straight lines, and is operated almost wholly by foot pedals.

SAFEGUARDS.

RACING PLANS MUST CHANGE

BAN TO BE PLACED ON RECKLESS DARE-DEVIL DRIVERS.

American Automobile Association Will Favor Only Races Run by Affiliated Clubs, and Conducted Under Restrictions Which Will Eliminate the Speed Maniac.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Automobile track racing, if continued in America with the sanction and approval of the American Automobile Association, will be completely revolutionized in respect to the method of conducting such events and the restrictions imposed.

The committee appointed by the directors of the association a month ago to consider the future policy of the national organization on this important matter, have agreed upon a report which will be acted upon by the association in the near future.

The committee does not make the radical recommendation that the track contests be abolished, but propose changes to the sanction-giving power, that will mean a material reduction in the number of such events, while at the same time safeguarding them to the greatest possible extent.

Most important of these changes are that no sanction shall be granted for any track except to a club or organization affiliated with the American Automobile Association; that such action shall be accompanied by a photograph of the track turns, and a certificate stating that every detail of the track and grounds has been carefully examined.

The association will then appoint a referee who shall pass upon the fitness, not only of the track, but of the cars and drivers. He will have power to refuse drivers to compete who are known to have a reputation for recklessness.

That a strong sentiment against track racing throughout the country is felt was indicated by the club vote asked for on this question. President Hotchkiss announced that of thirty-three clubs voting, twenty-seven were against granting track sanctions. Three were in favor of holding races under certain restrictions, while only three voted for track races unreservedly.

AMERICANS RECKLESS.

Europe Charges Them Extra Insurance Rates Because of Desperate Risks They Take.

Charles Givernaud of Los Angeles, who has just returned from a summer of automobiling in Europe, makes some comparisons between American and European motoring. He says the reckless driving of motor cars by Americans is constantly referred to, and that when an American takes out insurance on his cars he is charged at least 50 per cent. more, on account of the desperate chances Americans are constantly taking. One favorite run of thirty miles, says Mr. Givernaud was frequently covered by young Vanderbilt in eighteen minutes with his 120-horse power car. Charlie Schwab, John W. Gates and other famous Americans, always went as fast as possible, also Another comparison is also brought home to Southern California, Givernaud also says that in Europe the open muffler is not tolerated, even from Vanderbilt and in Paris a stiff fine is given for making this extra noise.

M. Givernaud has brought back from Europe with him two Fiat cars, which he used abroad, a 14-18 horse power enclosed town car, with landaulet body made to order in Geneva at a cost of $4000, and the regular F.I.A.T. 60-horse power touring car, which will not run less than twenty-five miles an hour on the high speed.

RIVERSIDE HILL CLIMB.

Dealers and Drivers Take Interest in Thanksgiving Day Event—Many Will Enter.

Among the important automobile events in the near future is the hill-climbing test at Riverside on Thanksgiving Day. Much interest is being taken in this contest, and already preparation is being made for the annual road test.

There is no list of entries as yet available. Almost every Los Angeles motorists expects to be in Riverside on the day of the run. The majority of will enter a White, a Pope-Toledo and a Pope-Hartford. Leon T. Shettler will send a Reo. Ralph Hamlin, Don Lee, O. H. Harrison, Harold Stone, E. E. Caister and others intend to enter one or more cars.

The track at Riverside is in better shape this year than ever before. The recent rains have laid the dust, and the road is in splendid shape. Every Sunday many autos run over the hills and by Thanksgiving Day at least a score of contestants will be familiar with the route.

MODEL GARAGE.

Man of Many Agencies to Be Busiest Ever—New Models Are Light and Handsome.

Shettler has remodeled his salesroom. He has followed the lines adopted by the better class of salesrooms of the East, and as a result the place presents a pleasing appearance. He now has one of the largest and best equipped garages in the city.

With several agencies to care for Shettler expects to be one of the busiest men in the business during 1908. He expects a shipment of two Broughams and two Victorias from the Woods Electric Company's factory this week. He will have the agency for the Reo, "Wayne," Kiselkar.

The Kisselkar will be a little over thirty-six horse power, weigh less than 2500 pounds, and will be of standard construction; 4¾-inch bore and stroke engines; I-beam front axle selective type transmission, 108 wheel base, 34x4-inch rear, 34x3½ front. It will be rated at fifty-five miles an hour, and will do fully that speed. Fifty of these cars are expected before the end of November.

The only radical change in the Reo line for next year will be two new models, one of them, a Reo Roadster, twenty horse power, two passenger-car, with a folding seat. It will have the same chassis as the regular two-cylinder light touring car. The other model will be the four-cylinder "Reo 30," which will be of standard construction throughout.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

The Lee Motor Car Company report the following sales for the week: Marcus W. Hellman has purchased a Royal touring car, W. Halliday of the Merchants' National Bank has also bought a Royal. A model G Cadillac was delivered to William Fraser of Riverside. Walter P. Story purchased a six-cylinder Royal.

The Western Motor Car Company have sold Packard touring cars to Alfred Wilcox, Philip Zobelein and Mrs. S. C. Foy.

F. G. Miner, owner of the Success Automobile Company, was in Los Angeles the latter part of the week. He left for San Francisco yesterday.

Leon T. Shettler spent last week in Arizona establishing agencies. He sold fifteen Reos in Tucson to the Huntsman Auto Company; ten in Prescott to Reese M. Ling, and he has a deal pending for the delivery of ten other machines to parties in Phoenix. He reports the roads in Arizona to be in good condition for touring.

H. M. Hanshue of San Diego, who has the Reo agency in that city, was in Los Angeles last week. Mr. Hanshue will drive a Reo in the Riverside hill climb on Thanksgiving Day.

E. Jr. Bennett and R. C. Hamlin were the last local dealers to start East for the automobile shows.

Harry Mason, the Diamond tire man, is back from a flying trip around the "Kite."

Mrs. Laura A. Preston of this city will get the first 1908 White car.

President John A. Willcox of the Dealers' Association has been in the middle part of the State the past week, boosting Maxwells.

C. L. Brimhall, the Stoddard-Dayton agent at San Diego, has been in this city this week trying to get 1908 cars.

William F. Culberson, Pacific Coast sales manager for the Pierce-Arrow cars, with headquarters in San Francisco, has been in Southern California the past week.

Frank Paige of Morgan & Wright has spent the past month in northern territory, but will make his headquarters in Los Angeles hereafter.

LITTLE SPARKS FROM MOTORDOM.

Although the price of gasoline in Europe is much higher than in this country, the oil comes in sealed cans and motorists always are assured of good quality.

Forty motor trucks will be used in the next French army maneuvers.

When a nut is rusted to a bolt so that to force it with a wrench would break the bolt, the only thing to do is to sacrifice the nut by splitting it with a chisel.

Claim is made that the biggest garage in the world soon will be established in Berlin, Germany. It will have tanks holding 12,000 gallons of gasoline.

In a recent collision between an autobus and a trolley car at Philadelphia, the car was the more seriously damaged.

Sales in Indiana the past eleven months are estimated to have reached fully 3000 cars, or more than half the total number in operation in that State eleven months ago.

Don't forget to watch the oiling system carefully, especially the jackshaft, transmission and other parts.

The fire department of Milan, Italy, is experimenting with a steam-driven motor fire-engine, which can carry six men and make a speed of twenty-two miles an hour.

Statements and articles in the Paris motor press of late show plainly that its confidence in France's ability to hold the world's export trade is being strongly shaken by the recent gains of American makers. French manufacturers particularly fear American cars because of their simplicity of construction.

Motorists who complain of headaches and ill-feeling after driving should look to the goggle lenses. Many cheap goggles have lenses that are not entirely neutral, as they should be, the effect being to strain the eyes as badly as if they were severely astigmatic.

Touring in Germany is expensive. Gasoline costs upward of 60 cents a gallon, and a motorist is required to have licenses varying in cost from $10 a month to $40 a year, with an additional $10 fee if he cannot show his American license, countersigned by a German Consul in the United States.

PRESIDENT AS COACH.

Helps Harvard by Proxy by Ordering Army Man to Assist in Bolstering Up Line.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, is coaching the Harvard football team by proxy. Lieut. Ernest Graves of the United States army and for four years a star on the West Point team, has been sent to assist the coaches in rounding the Crimson squad into a winning team.

It is said in Washington that the President is very much worried over the showing of his alma mater so far this season and he gladly consented to the leave of absence of Lieut. Graves.

Graves was equally happy over the opportunity to go to Havard and he has already worked two hours for several afternoons in strengthening the faltering line.

WILDER SPRIGS.

DUCKS AT SEA; LIMITS SCARCE.

High Sprigs and Not Many of Them in Sight.

Bolsa Clubs Make Poor Day of Their Shoot.

Many Clubs Unoccupied, and Blinds Left Vacant.

Another calm morning, clear as a bell and with no new birds in sight, played mischief with the Bolsa duck hunters' bags yesterday, limits being scarce, and most of the best shots having to content themselves with messes for the family only.

There was no fog, and nearly every club in the marsh began shooting too early. The bombardment was started by poachers who shot into the birds near the Golden West and Lomita some twenty minutes and more before the legal minute to commence firing, and the result was to make the birds so wild that at the first shot on the clubs they rose in a body and struck out for the sea.

No wind came up until nearly noon, and not much was blowing then. Few birds came in off the ocean notwithstanding the warmth of the day, and the situation further was complicated by the fact that several of the clubs did not shoot at all, none of the members going down. Numbers of birds settled on the Christopher ponds and the Green Wing grounds, soon learning that for them these were a haven of refuge which they might seek in safety. The result was to greatly limit the shooting on the adjacent ponds and to shorten the flights as came in. The first movement in the morning was very brief, and the birds at once attained a dizzy height that baffled most of the shooters. The sprigs which came down on the last storm are now as wise as the local birds and know the ropes so well that no very good sport can be expected from them. Another storm, which is severe enough to send South a new flight of birds, is the only remedy in prospect, and that is hardly expected before the change of the moon, two weeks hence, at the earliest.

It is not believed that all the northern birds have come down, or indeed more than a very small percentage of them. The present settled spell of weather is the worst thing the duck hunters could have, and a realization of this fact no doubt curtailed the attendance at the ponds yesterday. Hardly any of the clubs had an average turnout, and none ran up to their average bag.

Such ducks as were killed the majority was sprigs. The teal are not nearly as plentiful as they were; most of the widgeon that put in an appearance two weeks ago are gone elsewhere. The rains, by sprouting the grain and seeds, have shortened the ducks' food supply, and from now on the best table birds will be those fresh in from over the mountains. Many of the local fowl are becoming lean already, even those killed from the flocks showing less fat then they did two weeks ago.

The spoonbills were scarcer yesterday, likewise the bluebills. They seem to have moved on.

Most of the sprigs which went out to sea at the first fire were sitting there when the hunters boarded their cars homeward bound. Not until dusk did the main body come in. There was no scarcity of big birds at the first fire; the skies were covered with them, and the air was full of "V" shaped dots, speeding ever higher and higher with the smell of the sea in their nostrils.

HOW HUNTERS FARED.

Only one limit was reported on the Westminster Gun Club, F. E. Robinson being the lucky man. There was but a few gunners out. Marshall [illegible] was next best, with twenty-[illegible]. Karl Klokke got twenty. Adolf [illegible] had eighteen. The Westminster had a little flight of its own between 9 and 10 o'clock, and most of the birds killed fell then.

On the Golden West only three guns were out, and one of these, Percy [illegible]cher, quit at 8 o'clock with [illegible]. E. A. Hoffman bagged twen[illegible], and his brother, A. J., thir[illegible]. The Golden West, like most of the other older clubs, is having trouble with the grass in its ponds, and is experimenting with ways and means to get rid of the nuisance.

[illegible] and his son and P. M. Gibbs were the only gunners on the Los [illegible] Club, and they got from ten to [illegible] each.

On the Blue Wing the usual Saturday squad was afield, Drs. C. B. Jones, [illegible] B. Steen and George P. Adams, [illegible] Stephens and Louis Woolwine. No limit was reported, but the hunters all had to work for what they got, even on this splendid marsh.

There were but four shooters at the [illegible], Edward R. Maier and Harry [illegible], a guest, drove down in [illegible]'s Peerless. They bagged, respectively, eighteen and eight. Eugene [illegible] had the high bag, somewhere around the limit. James Smith got a [illegible]. Edwin Golter, Jr., accumulated seven.

Only two shooters were out on the [illegible]back ponds, Chandler and [illegible], both of whom got between [illegible] and thirty. The birds were nearly all sprig, teal for once being scarce.

Little shooting was heard below Chico, most of the birds secured at that preserve being the product of the "keeper's flight," which is started by the keeper riding around on horseback, flushing the birds from the reserve ponds, which lie one on each side of the shooting ponds. In this manner the gunners "whipsaw" the birds and manage to get two or three chances, where, by less systematic handling, they would do little or nothing. This is one reason why Chico is generally popping away more or less when the other clubs are waiting for shots.

Poor shooting was the rule everywhere. The Greenwing and Cerritos and neighboring clubs had an inferior day during the middle of the week. [illegible] hardly can expect much better. The Ballona clubs, the Recreation, Centinela, Patron, Santa Monica, [illegible] today also.

[illegible] was not up to grade on the [illegible] Chica, or any of the clubs [illegible] trade off its shooting.

The Pacific, Newport and neighboring preserves make Sunday an open day and will be busy this morning.

After spending three months traveling in Manitoba and Saskatchewan in search of traces of prehistoric mound builders, Prof. Henry Montgomery of the University of Toronto has decided that a mysterious race inhabited the country as far north as 140 miles from the international boundary line. Prof. Montgomery, who has devoted [illegible] years to the study of mound builders and cliff dwellers, says [illegible] the mound builders were [illegible] to the cliff dwellers of New Mexico and Arizona and to the Aztecs.

JOHNSON WINS.

the cries of "Stop it" from the spectators, awarded the decision to the former. Interest in the fight between Johnson and Flynn was greatly accentuated by the fact that the winner will meet Tommy Burns for the world's heavyweight championship.

During the wait for the heavyweights to appear, Jack (Twin) Sullivan issued a challenge to Al Kauffman. The latter, who was at the ringside, announced his acceptance.

Johnny Frayne, a local lightweight, challenged "Packy" McFarland of Chicago, for $1000 a side.

The main event was called at 3:02 o'clock.

First round—They immediately went to close quarters and clinched. Johnson hooked his right to the head, and they went to close quarters, fighting to the ropes. No damage done. Johnson uppercut to the stomach and Flynn drove the colored man to the ropes with right and left short-arm jolts to the body. Flynn rushed in, but was met by a right to the face, and they clinched. Johnson clipped his man with left to the jaw, and then followed it with right uppercut to the face, opening Flynn's eye. Just before the round ended, Johnson closed Flynn's left eye with a powerful left. Johnson had a big lead.

Second round—They mixed at close quarters, Johnson putting in several short-arm rights to the body. Johnson jabbed twice with left to face and then sent a straight right to the face. Flynn waded in to close quarters, but failed to land. Johnson clearly outboxed and outgeneraled his man. During a lull in the fighting, Flynn whipped a vigorous right to the head, and they went to a clinch. On the break, Johnson drove his right to the body and missed a vicious right for the face. Johnson missed a hard left uppercut as the bell rang. It was a rather tame round, with Johnson having the advantage. Johnson smiled and nodded to his friends during the minute's respite.

Third round—Johnson cut loose and landed right and left swings on the head. Flynn rushed in, but, as usual, failed to land. He butted the colored man unintentionally, and quickly shook his adversary's hand contritely. Johnson jarred his man with two wicked right hook to the jaw. A third similarly applied forced Flynn to close quarters. As the round neared its close Flynn took a brace and landed left and right on the face. Johnson, however, had a big lead as the bell sounded.

Fourth round—Flynn rushed to a clinch. All his attempts to land at close range were blocked by the colored fighter. Flynn continued to fight to close quarters, and finally landed a left on the face. It was a very tame round.

Fifth round—Flynn rushed in, but his attempts to land were wild. Flynn landed two good lefts to the colored man's face, and Johnson retaliated with a straight left to the face. Two lefts found a mark on Flynn's face, and they went to close quarters. Separating, Johnson, still smiling, whipped his right hard to the stomach, and a moment later duplicated the blow. A third try was equally successful. Flynn, however, fought back desperately, and landed his right and left on the face. Johnson had a slight lead in this round.

Sixth round—Flynn rushed in, but was met with a right to the face. Johnson jabbed left twice to the face, and followed it with another, sending his man back several feet. An ineffectual mix followed, and Flynn forced his man to the ropes without landing. It was a slow round, without advantage to either man.

Seventh round—As usual Flynn rushed in close, and the colored man landed several right jolts to the body. Johnson pushed his man out of a clinch, and clouted him over the right eye with a right swing. Flynn worked into a clinch, and, breaking away, landed a hard right to the jaw. Johnson sent Flynn's head back with a straight left to the jaw, and the latter wrestled the black man to the ropes. Johnson easily wiggled out of a corner, and some desultory sparring ensued. The bell again closed a rather tiresome round. Flynn's left eye was closed as he took his seat.

Eighth round—Johnson hooked a hard right to the stomach and then sent Flynn to the floor by sheer weight of his body. The crowd jeered the colored man for fully a minute. In a mix at close quarters Johnson swung right and left to the jaw. Flynn, just before the bell rung, swung a vicious right to the stomach and Johnson winced. The round, however, was even.

Ninth round—They clinched and were separated by the referee. Flynn wrestled Johnson almost through the ropes and the referee had to pull the men apart again. Flynn fought with his head bent almost to Johnson's loins and the latter found it difficult to reach the fireman's face. Clinch followed clinch and Johnson swung right and left to the head. Johnson jarred Flynn with another right swing and they clinched. Flynn slipped to his knees twice from clumsy attempts to land on the negro and when the bell rang Johnson ripped in a short arm right to the stomach, Flynn being almost out at the call of the gong.

Tenth round—Flynn rushed in but Johnson sent him away with a succession of right and left short-arm swings to the face. Flynn in a clinch butted Johnson viciously with his head and was warned by the referee. Johnson then cut loose with two powerful rights to the jaw and Flynn stalled to protect himself. Johnson fought carefully and coolly. He sent Flynn's head wobbling from side to side with short arm right and left swings, and then swung a vicious right to the jaw. He followed it with left swing to the face and the bell found the men in a clinch. "You are an awful tough nigger," shouted Flynn as he went to his seat. Johnson's round by a wide margin.

Eleventh round—"Come right on," yelled Johnson as they toed the scratch. Flynn's left eye by this time was swollen to five times its normal size. He worked to close quarters and tried to reach Johnson's body, but the latter floored him with a straight right to the jaw. He went to the mat like a log and had to be carried out by his seconds.

STYLISH.

MOTOR MAY BE RACING MARVEL.

MUCH IS CLAIMED FOR HANDSOME LIGHT RUNABOUT.

Car to Arrive in Los Angeles Within Thirty Days, Will Then Be Placed on Local Track and Sent Against Time for a Record—Seventy Miles an Hour Promised.

Among the fast 1908 models recently turned out is the Pope-Toledo runabout soon to be received by H. D. Ryus. The car is one of the handsomest of the lighter 1908 machines. Its long, graceful body and shapely lines seem to insure speed. It is claimed the motor will travel seventy miles an hour. More than fifty miles an hour has already been made in road tests.

The stylish runabout will arrive in about thirty days. A speed test is to be made on a local track soon after the car gets here. A mile against time on a circular track will introduce the Pope. Capt. Ryus will drive the machine, and he is confident the car will make the speed limit promised.

The Pope-Toledo runabout is an improvement on all previous models. To begin with the lamp bracket has been so arranged that the lamp sets over it like a clothespin. This will prevent the light being shaken off, even with the most severe bumping.

To eliminate leaky radiator troubles the radiator has been pointed, and the brackets which hold it to the frame have been placed four inches higher up. This provides for an uneven strain. There is also a different type of filling thimble which has a solid rubber cap. No matter how hot the radiator becomes the rubber cap can always be removed.

The diameters of the rocker arm pins have been increased twice, and a steel bushing and steel pin replaces the bronze fittings. A change also has been made in the intake and exhaust valves.

The double-ignition system has been installed. That used is the Elseman or Sims-Bosch magneto, which includes batteries and individual switch. Another coil-battery system is also ready for use in case of emergency. Magneto or battery troubles can be overcome with this dual system. When one gives out the motorist can drive home on the other.

Most radical has been the change in the carbureter. The gasoline valve remains the same, no matter in what position the car is placed. A small lever on the dash provides for the adjustment of the carbureter for excessive or slow speeds. This allows an economical fuel consumption.

The engine has a much cleaner appearance than formerly. An exhaust manifold on the compression release cock allows the oil to be exhausted into a dust pan below, instead of being blown over the parts.

At the rear of the car is a tank which will hold twenty-six gallons of gasoline. A pump keeps a continuous level of gasoline flowing from the large tank to a small one on the front of the machine. This tank feeds the carbureter by gravity, and danger by fire from overflowing gasoline is almost eliminated. The pump is automatic and requires no attention from the driver.

There are those who believe the new Pope is a racing marvel. The high speed claimed for the trim-built motor is said to be anything but a dream. Though the public has never had a chance to see the gasoline car in action, the track exhibition, soon to be given, it is claimed, will be the speediest of its kind ever seen in the Southland.

The runabout will later be sent after several road records. Capt. Ryus has his eye on the Santa Barbara-Los Angeles run, and would like to claim it for the Pope. He also has serious thoughts of a Los Angeles-San Francisco run with the new car.

Reo

Makes the Record

And Keeps It

On July 23, 1907, a two-cylinder 20 h.p. Reo stock car lowered the Los Angeles-San Diego record to five hours and forty-five minutes, beating the previous record by one hour and twenty-five minutes.

Several quiet—very quiet—attempts have been made by our competitors to beat this record.

A four-cylinder 40 h. p. Thomas was the latest victim of misplaced confidence—The Thomas tried it last Monday, and did very well, considering—But why select a Four-Cylinder-Forty to beat a Two-Cylinder-Twenty? Why not give the job to the Two-cylinder Twenty-two sold by the same concern? "There's a reason," no doubt.

Nor will it be forgotten that a Reo was the only two-cylinder car to make a perfect score in the memorable Glidden tour of 1907, nearly 1500 miles over the worst roads, in horrible weather.

Then on Aug. 14, 1907, a two-cylinder Reo stock car ran from Los Angeles to Bakersfield in seven hours and eighteen minutes, lowering the previous record by one hour and nineteen minutes—THIS RECORD, TOO, STANDS UNBEATEN.

Reo is never afraid to try. It frequently goes out of its class just to make things interesting. You can't get away from the fact that Reo is the best car made, for the money. It is stronger, faster and more reliable in every way than many cars of nominally of twice the horse power, and costing two or three times as much money.

POLY DEFEATS POMONA HIGH

GREATER EXPERIENCE WINS FOR LOS ANGELES BOYS.

Good Game During First Half Leaves Result in Doubt—Pierce and Thomas Are Stars for Densham's Former Charges—Citrus Belt Team Does Well in First Game.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

POMONA, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Polytechnic High School, 19 (three tries and two goals;) Pomona High School, 6 (two tries.)

In a fast and exciting game at Pomona the Poly boys bested the home team easily yesterday. The play was fast throughout the game, and was an excellent exhibition of Rugby football.

Pomona won the toss and elected to play downhill. Poly kicked off, and followed up with a rush, keeping the ball in their opponent's territory. For some time they were unable to score, owing to the failure of the forwards to feed the backs. Then Smith took the ball from a throw-out and ran over the line. Rickershauser failed to convert, and the ball was dropped out from the 25 line.

Pomona forced the ball down the field and threatened Poly's line, but Pierce saved neatly with a punt into touch. A succession of helds followed, and finally the Pomona back punted shortly into touch to save. Thomas caught a long throw-out from Rowell, ran some way, then passed neatly to Malone as he was tackled. The latter crossed the line, and Rickershauser again failed to improve.

The ball was kept in Pomona territory and Frank Rickershauser took the ball from a throw-out and scored the third try. His brother kicked the goal and the score stood 11 to 0 in favor of Poly. From the half-way kick-off Pomona rushed down on the ball and tackled Yerkes before he could return it. Their forwards formed round the ball before the Poly men had arrived and they dribbled it over and fell on it scoring the first try for Pomona. Score at the end of the first half: Poly 11, Pomona, 3.

The first part of the second half was disastrous for Polytechnic. Several of their men had been winded by hard tackles and they seemed to lack zest. The home forwards bore down on them with overwhelming force and it was only Pierce's splendid playing that saved the visitors time and time again. Finally Weber caught the ball from a clever long throw-out from Evans and scored the second try for Pomona. Evans failed to kick the goal. Score, 11 to 6.

It was Chet Thomas who turned the tide by a clever piece of dribbling and Poly carried the ball out of danger. Thomas and Malone repeated the trick they had played in the first half. The former caught the ball from a throw out of touch, ran till he was tackled and then passed to Malone, who had no difficulty in dodging the fullback and scoring. He was downed on the pavement back of the goal posts and was badly winded, but he had touched the ball down and made his try. He recovered sufficiently to try the kick, but failed and Poly's score had increased to 14.

Five minutes later the ball was punted into Poly territory. Goodwin fumbled, but Pierce came up behind him and saved by a splendid punt down the field. The ball hit the Pomona fullback in the chest, rebounded and was caught by Thomas, who ran down the field with nobody tho stop him, and scored. Pierce improved the try and the score stood 19 to 6 when the whistle blew.

Jim Yerkes made good on the Poly team; he played a heady, cool game and is now sure of his place. Chet Thomas was the star of the day. He played a remarkably brilliant game without an ounce of selfishness.

Rowell, the halfback, was sick and should never have gone on the field, as he was unable to handle the ball deftly enough. Pierce played in his usual cool, clever manner, and maintained his reputation of being one of the best fullbacks on the Coast. Evans and Weber both played well for Pomona; in fact, all the team played well, lacking only the better experience and passing of the visitors.

CATES CHASED OFF THE LOT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] San Francisco had little trouble defeating the Oaks this afternoon, for they found the offerings of Eli Cates to their liking and hammered his curves all around the lot. Things didn't look very bright for the Seals for a few rounds, for the Oaks had scored five runs off Heilman in the first two innings. These were the result of his inability to locate the plate, for he passed six men, made a couple of errors, and plugged Smith with the ball. Barney Joy then came into the limelight, and no more runs did the Oaks send over the plate.

Cates did not seem to have a thing, and if he gives another such exhibition of baseball when he reaches Washington he will find himself being chased to the bushes. The Seals managed to squeeze one over in the third on three hits, but it was in the fifth and sixth innings that they gave Eli the lacing. All told, eight runs were sent over the pan in these two rounds on that many hits, with pretty near the same number of errors thrown in by Van's misfit team. All this made Eli somewhat crabby, and he wanted to give battle to Charley Street because the backstop good-naturedly joshed him. Perrine got into the fray at this point, and chased him off the lot, while the crowd hooted the vanquished pitcher.

HYLAND AFTER PACKY.

M'CLINTIC WANTS LONG BOUT.

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah) Nov. 2.—"Red" Sammy McClintic, manager of "Fighting Dick" Hyland, is trying to get his boy matched with Packy McFarland, the Chicago stock-yards champion. McClintic has sent word to Jimmy Coffroth that he will not sign his boy for any fight until he knows whether Coffroth can give him a forty-five round go in the Mission-street arena, San Francisco, in November, with McFarland.

"I will match Hyland against McFarland for a percentage basis and let Packy cut the purse any way to suit himself," said Sammy today. "He can make it 75 and 25, 65 and 35, or 60 and 40 per cent.—we don't care. All we ask is 133 ringside. Hyland can beat this McFarland boy in a long bout. And a victory over the stock-yards' terror would boost Dick's stock. I expect to hear from Coffroth in a day or two, and then I will know what to decide about the other offers Dick has received.

"Johnny Summers, the English champion, has offered to come west to fight Hyland for a guarantee of $2000 for his part of the purse. We may take him on, if the McFarland plan does not come through."

Famed Virtuoso's Bohemian Home, Bickory Castle, Scene of Much Childish Fun—Noted Musician Plays With Bunch of Hobo "Mintsrels."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KOLIN (Bohemia) Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jan Kubelik, the great violinist who is soon to make another concert tour in America, has twin daughters, Mary and Ann, and each has her own violin.

At the age of 3 years they play with the instruments rather than on them, but as they grow older they will take more seriously to music and it is expected that they will inherit some of the father's talent.

The spirit of fun displayed by them at their home, Bickory Castle, certainly was inherited from the father.

While he was here before, some tramp musicians—in the olden time called "wandering minstrels"—came to the castle and played there.

Kubelik, stripped to his shirt sleeves, seized a big tobacco pipe lying at hand, took his place in the midst of the musicians, and pretended to play with rapt enthusiasm with the "hoboes."

EXTENDING ALFALFA ACREAGE ABOUT PERRIS.

Water Development and Colonization Project for the Valley—Michigan Man Will Install an Olive Oil Mill for the Handling of the Large Crop from His Grove.

PERRIS, Nov. 2.—More pumping plants and more alfalfa is the slogan of progress in Perris Valley. Pumping plants are being installed in every direction, but one of the largest enterprises now in course of fulfillment is the development of 500 acres of alfalfa by A. T. Crane for colonization purposes. The land is situated four miles north of Perris, and is known as the Lenox tract. In the boom days it was partially graded and laid out in eighty-acre parcels, with eucalyptus-lined drives. The trees still remain, and the further grading of the land suitable for alfalfa will soon be completed. There will be 400 acres of the tract seeded with alfalfa this fall.

Water will be supplied for the entire tract by one large pumping plant pumping water from a chain of wells to the highest point of the land. The plant will consist of one 150-horse-power gasoline engine and a twelve-inch centrifugal pump. The lift from the water level to the surface of the ground is seventy feet, and the guaranteed capacity of the plant is 350 inches.

Eight ten-inch wells twenty-five feet apart will be bored, each about 200 feet deep, and connected with the one pump by means of a tunnel at the water level. Three of the wells are now down, and the water indications are found to be even better than the average in this valley.

Eventually it is Mr. Crane's intention to sell the land in small tracts for dairy purposes.

PERRIS VALLEY POINTS.

Hon. F. T. Lindenberger, former Assemblyman from this county, arrived this week from his home in Detroit, Mich., to spend a month on his large olive ranch near here. With his brother, H. H. Lindenberger, he will at once erect an olive-oil mill for the handling of their large olive crop, and under special brand will market their product in the East.

J. Messerall, one of the dry ranchers of this valley, purchased 160 acres of land last year, and from the net proceeds of one barley crop almost paid for the land.

E. K. Pierce, formerly assistant cashier of the National Bank of Ithaca, Mich., is spending the winter at the Lindenberger ranch.

OFFICES ARE CHANGED.

C. B. and Q. Moves to Railroad Row. Trainloads of Colonists from Massachusetts Coming.

Beginning tomorrow the offices of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad will be in the Lissner building at No. 526 South Spring street, instead of at No. 222 South Spring street, as heretofore. The new offices will be more commodious and handsomely fitted up than the old office was. W. W. Elliott, district freight and passenger agent, will be in charge, assisted by City Ticket Agent J. E. Jenkins.

Yesterday twenty-six special colonist cars, with every berth filled, arrived at Denver via the C. B. and Q., and there seventeen of them were made up into three special trains for Los Angeles over the Southern Pacific, while the remainder, or nine cars, will arrive by way of the Salt Lake. Most of these colonists are from Massachusetts.

VISITS NEW COUNTY.

Dr. W. E. D. Morrison, assistant State veterinarian, goes today to the new county of Imperial to confer with the Board of Supervisors regarding local quarantine laws, and to impress upon them the necessity of the appointment of an active man for the position of county veterinarian. Strict watch is to be kept to prevent any cases of Texas fever securing entrance through the lines of the new county from other States. Dr. Morrison will spend several days in Imperial county, inspecting herds.

WEATHER FOR OCTOBER.

The weather report for Los Angeles for the month of October as given by Local Forecaster Wollaber shows that the third was the warmest day of the month, the maximum temperature being 87 deg., and that the coolest day was the 13th, when the temperature dropped to 48 deg. The greatest daily range was 32 deg., and the least 7 deg. The mean for the month was 66 deg. The total rainfall for the month was 1.19 inch, the heaviest precipitation being on the 16th and 17th, when .39 inch fell inside of twenty-four hours. The average rainfall for the month of October for the past thirty-one years is .77 inch. The prevailing direction of the wind was from the west, with a total movement of 3336 miles. The average velocity was 4.5 miles per hour, the heaviest blow being on the 3d, when the wind reached a velocity of twenty-two miles per hour, it blowing then from the northeast. There were twelve clear, fifteen cloudy, and four partly cloudy days during the month. Thunder was recorded on the fifth and the 23d.

Absent-Minded.

A good story is told of a learned canon of the Anglican church in Canada who is a very thoughtful and studious man, but very absent-minded. One morning he was going from home and had his handbag packed and left in the hall, as he intended to walk to the railway station. After he had left the house his daughter came into the hall and saw the bag still there, and said to her mother: "Oh, mother, father has gone off and left his bag behind. I will run after him with it." Which she did, and when she arrived at the station she found the canon walking about with the coal scuttle, which he had taken up in place of his bag.—[New York Tribune.

A Great Ranch.

Probably in no other State in the Union does a big ranch constitute a district, a family the members of a school board, and the son of the family the only pupil in the school district. Such conditions exist on the Woods ranch, formerly known as the Seventy ranch, near Hardin, Colo. The president of the school board is Charles Allyn, manager of the ranch; the secretary is his wife, the treasurer a young woman living in the home, and the pupil of the school the 9-year-old son of the Allyns.

Kind to His Horses.

A certain American boys' institution boasts a brass band made up of the boys of the school. The townspeople look with anything but favorable eyes upon these musicians, and never lose an opportunity of showing their dislike.

The band had been engaged to play at a village some distance from the school, and a wagonette had been hired to take the boys there.

On the way the young leader of the band suggested that they should "have a tune," but the driver of the wagonette at once objected.

"No toons while I drive," he declared.

"But why?" persisted the musicians. "Surely the horses wouldn't run away?"

"No," said the driver, "they wouldn't!"

"Then why object?"

"Simply becos the poor beggars couldn't run away if they tried," was the grim retort. "Their runnin' away days is over, an' as long as I drives you ain't agoin' to take no mean advantage of 'em! That's why I sez no toons!"

The boys subsided, and there were "no toons" on that journey.

GALLANT YACHTSMEN.

SWEDES CHERISH HOPE OF SOMETIME WINNING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 16.—Whatever may be thought of it in America the Kungl. Svenska Segelsallskapet (Royal Swedish Yacht Club) was indulging in no more bluff when it started negotiations with the New York Yacht Club for a challenge for the America's cup. Not yachtsmen only, but Swedes of all classes, from King Oscar down, are enthusiastic over the prospect of [illegible] competing for the historic cup.

[illegible] yachting history inspires the Swedes with confidence. It was a Swedish yacht which in 1852 came nearest defeating the all-conquering America that first won the cup. The schooner Sverige raced the America around the Isle of Wight, and was leading by eight minutes when, near the finish line, one of her halyards parted, and the accident deprived her of the victory that was in her grasp. "What we failed to accomplish fifty-five years ago, because of ill luck," say [illegible], "we may succeed in doing with good luck. They hardly know how much more formidable is the challenger now than it was when the Sverige came so near doing the trick.

T. Carlsson,

who will command the Swedish yacht if a challenge is accepted.

GALLANT RACE.

The story of the Sverige's gallant race and of the broken halyard that robbed her of victory is one often told in Swedish yachting circles. It was the story, after one of the club's recent dinners, when the wine was flowing and enthusiasm ran high, that inspired Mr. G. A. Kylberger, and a merchant, William Olsson—both rich men, as riches are measured in Sweden—with the notion of challenging for the cup and letting the expense "go hang." If the challenge ever goes through, T. Carlsson, a manufacturer of Stockholm, and the best amateur skipper in the country, will command the yacht. Its design will be entrusted to Gun[illegible]gren, the Herreshoff of Sweden, and Plym, a civil engineer, who stands at the top of his profession in Sweden, will build her.

The Royal Swedish Yacht Club was founded in 1832. Last spring it celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of its birth. It has 2800 members and 400 yachts fly the club flag. Most of them are small craft, though among them are some very speedy specimens of their particular classes. There are no ninety-footers in the club.

The Swedes would much prefer to challenge with a smaller craft. A ninety-foot, single-sticker, racing machine is a proposition no Swedish yacht designer or yacht builder has yet tackled. There is a chance that this very lack of previous experience may lead to the construction of some bold and original design that will be a great improvement on the models of the cup challengers and defenders of recent years. But far greater are the chances that the result will be something distinctly inferior to them.

As far as getting together a good crew is concerned there is apt to be little trouble. Swedes make first-class sailors. Scandinavians have been in a majority on more than one of the cup defenders. But that skill and celerity demanded of those who man a big racing yacht is the result only of much practice. And there is not enough yacht racing in Sweden to provide that practice. A crew of Swedes would hardly be equal to such a crew as could be picked up in England, where thousands of sailors depend for a livelihood on yacht racing during the yachting season. Two or three months drilling the Swedish salts would get before the actual contests took place would bring them to tip-top form.

The Royal Swedish Yacht Club has two fine clubhouses. One of them—the oldest—is on the island of Kastselholmen at Stockholm. The other was built in 1897 at Landhamm in response to the demand for a home for the members nearer the scene of their contests.

HUNTERS' PARADISE.

[illegible]W IS BEST TIME TO VISIT IMPERIAL.

[illegible] who are planning a duck-hunting trip to the Imperial country cannot go too soon, even if the [illegible] brought by returning hunters [illegible] by half.

[illegible] who visited the new county [illegible] the season before the storm [illegible] disappointed, having made [illegible] trip for nothing, ducks at [illegible] being very scarce indeed. [illegible] they have invaded the [illegible] in such vast numbers that [illegible] shots a few days ago [illegible] into Imperial fifteen sacks of [illegible] varieties, mallards being in [illegible] considerable numbers. Teal, [illegible], sprigs, widgeon and gadwell [illegible].

[illegible] particular bag was made a few [illegible] of Calexico and across the [illegible] no game law governs, although it becomes operative when one [illegible] bring his birds back, if a [illegible] game warden happens around. [illegible] so plentiful at Imperial that [illegible] ranchers at certain seasons [illegible] to house and entertain the [illegible] they only will keep the birds [illegible] grain fields.

[illegible] shooting at Imperial is not [illegible] to make much of a hit with [illegible] duck hunter, as it is [illegible] night-shooting proposition, [illegible] big flocks as they pass over-[illegible] listening for the "thump" of [illegible] as almost the only guide [illegible] whether the shot was a hit [illegible]. Those who shoot for sport [illegible] what they are shooting at, and take pleasure in seeing the game come down, but the Imperial method has one advantage in that it gets the ducks, although the State law taboos night shooting.

Owing to the frequency with which the water changes in the overflows about Imperial, it is impossible to forecast where the ducks will be working. The system of irrigation practiced in Imperial is to turn a young river into a forty or eighty-acre field, properly diked, and fill it a foot deep with water, which can be done over night, when it is remembered that a thousand miner's inches often are let loose for the purpose. This water is then left to soak into the ground and do its work. Today one rancher has the ducks on his place; tomorrow they may be twenty miles away visiting somebody else. For this reason, any who contemplate a visit to Imperial had better communicate at once with some one there who is reliable and can give them the latest information, else the trip is likely to be a succession of wild-duck chases and always about one day behind the ducks.

Comparatively few hunt in the day-time, the usual procedure being to lay alongside some dyke on a moonlit night and rip into the packed bands as they whizz overhead. It is more like shaking dice than shooting ducks, but those who never have had better profess to enjoy it greatly.

Once in a while on a nasty day, a good shoot can be had on some of the overflows by practicing the same methods as local gun-club men do—staking out dead birds for decoys, and throwing up a rude blind for the time being. A few good shots about El Centro and Imperial hunt in this manner, and by "throwing in" with one of these, a hunter may get the shoot of his life, if the weather conditions happen to be propitious.

South of Imperial over the Mexican line is an endless and inexhaustible supply of quail, which assures the hunter an opportunity to make a good mixed bag, and plenty of upland game, if the ducks are not working to suit his convenience.

One of the worst things about the Imperial trip is the inconvenience of the train-time, which necessitates rising early in the morning before daylight, but those who shoot at night generally hunt the last night, so lose but little time.

Prior to the rains, walking about and "jumping" ducks was the most popular method of securing them, but since the showers, this is too much of a job for any but a Hercules in gum boots. Much of the soil is a rich, red earth of adobe consistency, which balls and sticks when wet until one has to carry nearly an acre of it about on each boot, which soon ceases to bear a sporting look, and becomes killingly hard work.

The hospitality of the ranchers in the Imperial Valley is commented on favorably by returning hunters, who say they never were better treated and that nothing was too good for them. "The farmers appreciate a sportsman in that country, for he means money in their pocket by keeping the ducks from eating up their seed grain," says one.

In very few places can a boat be used to any purpose, although there are some spots where it might help. Several parties have taken folding boats from town, only to leave them at the depot untouched during their entire stay.

RABBITS PLENTIFUL.

GRASS HELP TO HUNTERS.

General improvement in the rabbit hunting is reported by the hunters since the grass started. Not only are the animals more plentiful, but they are in better condition for the table owing to the plenty of pasturage.

Morning and evening, about the edges of the brush where the grass grows greenest, is the place to hunt them. With a little rifle good sport may be had in any of the foothills near town.

Some fair practice may be had on the squirrels for a while now, until the grass becomes too long. They call for accurate shooting and must be hit in the head in order to score a clean kill.

SNIPE COMING IN.

GUNNERS FORESEE SPORT.

The coming of jacksnipe on the last rains has encouraged a number of hunters to try their hands, today. Snipe are not as plentiful as they should be a month hence, but there are several spots on some of the clubs where a good shot ought to be able to get a dozen handily enough, and that is a splendid day's sport for any man.

Old hog wallows and stock pastures where there is water and rich black mud are the places to find snipe. Sometimes one will be flushed from a footprint in the mud; sometimes they take a fancy to "lay" in such depressions.

DIVERSIFIED SPORTS.

California Students Row, Play Basketball and Baseball and Swim in Tanks.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Nov. 1.—Rowing is receiving much attention from Coach Garnett and a considerable number are out for the crews. This week the crews were on the estuary for the first time and as a result of the training in the new rowing tank, they were able to row right off in the light boats. Pending the construction of a new landing float, the coach is using the four-oared barges, but by the middle of next week the eights ought to be on the water. All the men out for rowing go to the estuary at least twice a week, passing the other evenings working in the tank under the direction of the coxswains.

Both the men's and women's swimming clubs are doing active work, the men at the Olympic Club and the women at either Piedmont or Sutro. A. Coney of San Francisco has offered a handsome trophy cup, if intercollegiate swimming matches are arranged between California and Stanford. The cup will become the property of the institution first winning it three times.

Men's basketball has been officially recognized by the Executive Committee of the Associated Students as an official college sport, and while this does not mean that the players are able to win a "C" in the game, it means that the sport will have the financial and managerial assistance of the student body. Regular practice is being held each afternoon and the interclass games will start immediately after the close of the present football season.

The house clubs of the university have caught the baseball fever and have organized an interclub league, similar to the one existing between the various fraternities. There are thirteen clubs represented in the organization.

The women of the university are taking much interest in all forms of athletics. The basketball courts are filled each evening and the tennis courts are always busy. Many women go to Lake Merritt every day and keep the three boats that belong to the Girls' Boat Club in constant use. This boat club is planning to buy a four-oared barge and organize a crew.

An order has been issued by the student executives forbidding the wearing of a university athletic uniform or any part of such a uniform by any one who has not participated in a 'varsity game.

SCHUETZEN FEST.

RIFLEMEN PLAN SHOOT SUNDAY.

TURNERS TO HOLD ALL DAY'S TARGET TOURNAMENT.

Classy Merchandise Prizes Offered and Cash Added—Expert Shots from All Over the South Are Coming—First Elaborate Affair Arranged in Years.

The shooting section of the local Turn Verein Germania announces its first prize shoot to be held at Schuetzen Park next Sunday, November 10, with merchandise prizes and cash aggregating a value of $500, added to a special event, and in the shape of prizes for best shots, and best score.

It is expected that full teams from San Diego, Ventura, Santa Paula, Nordhoff, Ojai and Bakersfield will attend the rifle tournament, and one of the greatest gatherings of crack shots ever present in Los Angeles will be on hand for that day.

Among others expected are: J. H. Walker, M. J. Chick, F. S. Ecker, of San Diego; A. W. Elliott, C. C. Teague and most of the Santa Paula Rifle Club, S. F. Liddamore, M. C. Harvey, N. O. Say, W. L. Frey, Joe Raffetto among others, and Quail Bill Reilly, Charles Bonestel, M. E. Isham, J. C. Hoffmayer and W. H. Granger from the Ventura Rifle Club. Frank Schofield and a few friends will try to make the trip from Bakersfield. Dr. M. E. Taber and son of Riverside are expected.

This is the first time the Los Angeles sharpshooters have ever entertained their friends from the country although the outside clubs have bidden the local gunners to many shoots. Nearly every town has a rifle club, and there is a chance for any good shot to win more than enough to pay all expenses and have his sport for nothing.

A team shoot will be run off, five shots to be fired by each of six men making up each team. Entry fee is $1.50, creating a pool divided as follows: High team to take 40 per cent.; second, 30 per cent.; third, 20 per cent.; fourth, 10 per cent. Any one club may enter as many teams as it desires, but any one man can shoot in one team only.

Shooting is to start at 8 o'clock in the morning and continues to noon, when there will be an intermission of an hour for lunch. The shoot then is resumed until 6 o'clock, provided the light holds good enough.

Cash prizes of good size are offered in the German ring target competition, three shot tickets. Merchandise prize shooting on the German ring target will be conducted on a three-shot ticket basis. The high score has first choice of the trophies offered, second high second choice and so on down as long as there are any prizes left.

The committee in charge invites all riflemen to attend whether attached to any club or not. Chris. Krempel is shooting captain, Frank Huebsch, Joe Singer, Adolf Maas, V. H. Tisdale, Dr. Seely being the committee in charge.

The grounds are being put into excellent shape for the competition. From here, Singer, Henry Pfirrmann, O. Brockmeyer, V. H. Tisdale, F. Huebsch, D. Brockway, L. Vetter, A. Maas, Gen. Last, William Frick, C. D. Black, C. Krempel and others will welcome the visitors.

TO HAVE ONE TEAM.

Y.M.C.A. to Concentrate Basketball Strength in Five to Defend Championship.

Basketball players at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium will soon begin practice for the winter season. Training will begin early this year, as the local team will be called upon to defend the Y.M.C.A. championship of the State, which it won last winter. The registration of the team in the State Y.M.C.A. basketball league must be made by November 10, and the preliminary games are expected to be completed during December. In February the finals for the State championship will be played.

This year the Y.M.C.A. basketball five will be selected from the best players on the two teams put out last year. Only one team will be developed this winter, instead of two, so that the very best material in the association will be on the team which defends the championship pennant.

LAW SCHOOL'S STRONG FIVE.

Stars Who Expect to Defeat Southern California College Basketball Teams.

The basketball team of the U.S.C. College of Law has elected Earl Newmire manager for 1907-8 and he is arranging for games with southern colleges and high schools. The law college team is separate and distinct from the Liberal Arts aggregation, and are conducting their negotiations with other schools accordingly. It has been rumored that the Liberal Arts and Law School are not on good terms in athletics, but the latter claim such rumor has no foundation in fact. Manager Newmire has closed negotiations with the Normal School for a game on Monday, November 4, and Liberal Arts, November 5, and has written for games with San Diego and other points in the extreme southern part of the State.

The following men compose the team: Newmire and Goode, forwards; Selph and Richardson, guards; Folsom, center, and Wall, substitute.

Newmire formerly was captain of the San Pedro High School team for two years, and a member of the Wilton German-English College team for one year. He also refereed for two years in the County High School League. Goode was captain for two years of the Glendale High School team, and a member of the U.S.C. basketball team last year. Folsom played on the Utah team, and last year with St. Vincent's where he was the best college center in Southern California. Selph is a former L. A. High basketball man, and has quite an athletic record. Richardson was a member of the New Mexico Agricultural College team and shows promise of good work. Wall played on the High School team of last year.

OCCIDENTAL BASKETBALL.

Intercollegiate Prospects Bright—May Form Gym Team to Compete This Winter.

Before the end of this week Coach Goheen of Occidental expects to have basketball and gymnastics well under way at the Presbyterian school. Physical culture classes for the students will begin tomorrow and if the plan appears feasible it is likely that the Presbyterians will endeavor to put an intercollegiate "gym" team in the field to compete with local colleges and high schools.

The prospects for intercollegiate basketball are considerably brighter than at the beginning of last season, as few of last year's players have left the school. McKenney, McDowell, Hillery, Conrad and Thomson are some of the players of last season's team who will be out for the team, and the freshman class contains several players who made good in the high school circles.

Girls' basketball will hold a prominent place in athletics at the Presbyterian school, although the plan of not holding intercollegiate contests again will be followed this year. An interclass tournament will be held, however, and the classes already are organizing their teams and practicing under the instruction of Miss Sullivan, who has been engaged as assistant to Miss Nelye Dickson, the physical instructor for women.

From indications the freshmen will have a five that will be first choice for championship honors. Grace McCoy, Lota Williams of Pomona High School, and Miss Rodger of Long Beach High School are being especially commended for good playing, and the other positions will not be difficult to fill from the large number of girls in the freshman class.

Flora Clark and Miss Snively are clever sophomore players. The upper classes contain players of experience, and the four class teams will be very evenly matched.

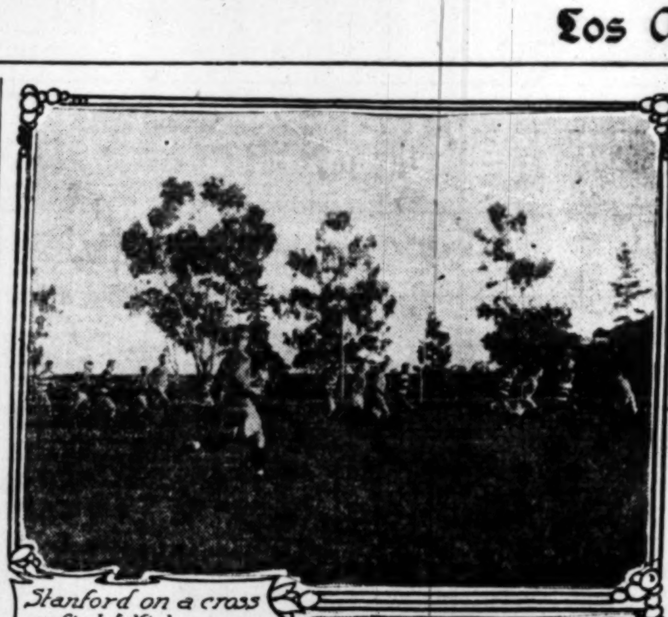
STANFORD TAKES HEART AGAIN.

FOOTBALL TEAM MAKES BETTER SHOWING LATELY.

Vancouver Game Indicates That Cardinal Should Be Slight Favorite in Game With California—Fight for Positions, With Plenty of Candidates Available.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 2.—The depression which settled over the campus after the 'varsity was defeated by the Barbarians has been entirely dispelled by the excellent showing which the Cardinal team has made against the crack Rugby players from Vancouver.

While those who have followed the "dope" are not at all overconfident of victory in the game against the Blue and Gold, the feeling is prevalent that the Cardinal will triumph next week.



Stanford on a cross field kick.

Mow Mitchell, Forward

Stanford Players Who Are Stars,
two of whom come from Southern California and are considered among the best of the Cardinal men.

The fight for places on the team is becoming even more intense and it will be no easy matter for Lanagan and Presley to pick the final fifteen. Perhaps the closest contest is between Rhyne and Terrill for the position in the front rank of the scrum beside Capt. Koerner. Both men are playing fine ball and as yet there seems to be absolutely no choice between them. Another interesting struggle is going on for full between Cadwalader and Freshman Brown. Cadwalader has played the position like a veteran this week, but he has a weak shoulder which would not last long if he should be forced to do heavy tackling. Both are excellent punters, but Brown has lately made a mistake or two at a critical moment, which gives Cadwalader a slight lead over him.

The personnel of the remainder of the back field has resolved into a race between Owen, Cook, Vandervoort, Holman, Reed, Mitchell and Ganong, with five positions to fill. Each man seems to have some particular quality which makes him especially desirable for the team and the process of selecting the most suitable ones will be no easy task. With the exception of Cook and Mitchell, all these men are about equally fast and these two men make up for any lack of speed in their hard fighting qualities and good defensive work. On account of their phenomenal speed Holman and Reed probably will play the wing positions and Vandervoort seems the most likely candidate for center. Mitchell's ability to carry the ball through a crowded field will give him an excellent chance to keep his present position at five in the final line-up.

Fenton, at half, is a fixture, and in the scrum Koerner, Minturn, Crawford, Miller, Thorpe and Pemberton are practically sure of their positions, though Reynolds is pushing Thorpe hard for his place. Mayers probably will be wing-forward, though C. Pemberton will contest the place.

HOLLYWOOD WINS.

BEATS WHITTIER HIGH TEAM.

Hollywood High defeated a team from Whittier High by a score of 56 to 0, yesterday afternoon, at Hollywood.

Hollywood's teamwork was excellent. The Quakers played a good game, but they lacked practice and did not work well together. The foothill boys gained many yards by the forward pass and quarterback runs. The punting of Whittier was good, and several times its goal was saved by this play.

Taylor, Hollywood's quarter and captain, was the star player of the game, and in the latter part of the first half made a touchdown by a quarterback run of fifty yards. The other touchdowns were made by Wallace, Brower, Knowles, H. Gower and Slaughter. Ralphs, the right half of the Quakers, was the best player of the visitors. Hatch, St. Johns, French and Scott also played a good game.

The teams lined up as follows:

Whittier		Hollywood
St. Johns (c)	L.E.R.	Slaughter

HARVARD WINNERS.

THROOP'S CLOSE SCORE.

Harvard School defeated Throop Polytechnic at Pasadena, yesterday, in football by the score of 10 to 6. Harvard scored four points early in the first half on a place kick by Capt. Brown from the 12-yard line, and six more near the close of the half on a touchdown by Davis, to which Brown added a goal kick.

The second half was scoreless for the first fifteen minutes. Brown, the Throop quarterback, made a 30-yard run, carrying the ball to the four-yard line. Right Half Williams carried it over.

BRAVES SCALPED.

INDIANS LOSERS TO OCCIDENTAL.

PRESBYTERIANS IMPROVE OVER LAST WEEK'S WORK.

Sherman Team Not Fully Organized, but Puts Up Plucky Fight. Los Angeles Eleven Pays Dearly for Victory Through Injuries to Some of Its Best Players.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Sherman Indian foot ball team met defeat by a score of 10 to 5 in the game played against Occidental College, this afternoon, at Chemaway Park. A big crowd witnessed the contest, the Indian band was in attendance and enthusiasm ran high.

The only points won by the Indians were gained through a touchdown after a spectacular 80-yard run by Kutch, Scholder failing to kick the ball between the goal posts. At the end of the first half the score stood 10 to 5 in favor of Occidental. This remained as the final score, as neither side was able to cross the line in the second half.

The snappiest playing was done in the first fifteen minutes of the game. At the start the Occidentals got the ball away down the field. McClung secured it and after a sensational pass got the first touchdown. This was a bitter disappointment to the Indians and took some of the spirit out of their playing.

This was the first game of the season for the Indians, whose team was at the double disadvantage of organizing for practice late in the season, and of being composed largely of new men. In the excitement of the game the husky Indians had moments of forgetfulness.

A number of Occidental players received minor injuries and Quarterback Rush was taken from the gridiron with a sprained back. The Presbyterians played a good game from the start, and won by reason of superior experience. Considering the lack of practice the Indians made a creditable showing and gave evidence of developing into a winning team. The officials of the game were Dean Crowell, referee, and Owen Bird, umpire. Both are Los Angeles men. Line-up:

PASADENA WINNER.

CLOSE SCORE AT SANTA ANA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two evenly-matched teams fought it out on the gridiron here this afternoon, and the score counted 11 for Pasadena High School and 4 for Santa Ana High School.

All the scoring was done early in the game and Santa Ana gritted her teeth and tried to overcome the lead, but to no avail. The clean high punts of Capt. Kern of Pasadena alone saved his team from being scored against in the second half, for Santa Ana kept the ball well in the danger territory until the whistle blew.

Pasadena scored after four minutes of play. Longrey, the center, broke through the line and seized the ball almost in Quarterback Vanderlip's hands, got clear of the mass of players, and ran half the length of the field to a touchdown. Kern missed the goal.

The second touchdown was well earned by Pasadena, Kern carrying the ball to a score after a 25-yard run around right end.

Santa Ana then took a brace and the even play of the two teams was apparent from that time on. Neither side was oversuccessful in any particular, though Santa Ana made some pretty forward passes.

Santa Ana held Pasadena on downs at the 30-yard line, and Tedford put the ball over between the posts on a place kick from the field, making the score 11 to 4. Hill of Pasadena, a former Santa Ana boy, got through for a number of tackles behind the line. A feature of the playing was the run-ins of Dubois, the Santa Ana captain. The line-up:

CHICAGO FINISHES FIRST.

VICTORY IN LAST HALF.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 2.—An audience of 25,000 saw Chicago and Minnesota battle for the western football championship this afternoon. The day was raw and chilly. Within the first ten minutes the ball was on Chicago's twenty-yard line and Capron dropped a goal. Score: Minnesota 4, Chicago 0.

Successive line plays and punts by both sides failed to indicate any advantage till Minnesota got the ball on Chicago's thirty-yard line and Capron dropped another goal. Score, Minnesota 8, Chicago 6.

Five minutes after the second half began Chicago had scored a touchdown on a forward pass, and in the ensuing excitement a section of the east bleachers collapsed.

The final score was 18 to 12 in favor of Chicago.

SCORE OF FIVE TO THREE IN VANCOUVER GAME.

Heavy Scrum Keeps Ball on the Ground Much of the Time—Simpson Scores Beautiful Goal, but Pemberton's Try Is Converted Into Stanford Victory.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 2.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford was again victorious today over the Vancouver Rugby players by the score of 5 to 3.

The game was fierce and hard-fought, but not nearly so spectacular as the previous exhibition. The northerners took advantage of their heavy scrum and kept the ball on the ground much of the time, relying on hard dribbling rushes for their gains.

The Cardinal team was compelled to adopt the same tactics, so that neither backfield had much opportunity for passing rushes. The Stanford forwards, though weakened by the absence of Capt. Koerner, proved fully as aggressive as the northern pack, and defeated them at their own style of play.

The game was robbed of much of its interest by the over-frequent penalties for off-side play and forward passes awarded by Referee Elliott, captain of the Barbarian team.

Fenton was the star of the day, pulling his team out of many a dangerous situation by his clever kicking. Brown at full played fine Rugby, kicking accurately and breaking up the visitors dribbling rushes like a veteran. Holman played his position well and kicked much better than usual. Among the forwards, Mitchell, Thorpe and Pemberton were prominent, Mitchell doing especially good work in blocking the opposing rushes. Simpson, Springer and Bull did good work for Vancouver, the latter's kicking being exceptionally good.

The first of the game was a series of dribbling rushes and punting duels. A 50-yard passing rush by Vandervort, Mayers, Mitchell, and Owen was only broken up by Simpson at the 5-yard line. The visitors rushed the ball back into Stanford territory where an off-side play gave Vancouver a free kick on the 45 yard line. Simpson scored a beautiful goal, making the score 3 to 0 in favor of Vancouver. Stanford remained on the defensive the rest of the half and time was called with the ball in midfield.

The 'varsity braced up decidedly in the second half, and the ball was in their opponents' territory much of the time. Hard dribbling took the ball near the Vancouver goal line. Miller missed an attempt at free placement kick.

Fifty-yard runs by Owen and Fenton for the Cardinal, and Johnston and Springer for Vancouver were interrupted by forward passes.

After a scrum on the visitors' five-yard line, Pemberton scored the first try for Stanford. Fenton converted, making the score 5 to 3. The remainder of the half was seesaw play, the clever work of Brown alone preventing a second score by the Vancouver forwards.

The game was witnessed by Capt. Tuller and the California team, who came down this morning and practiced on the turf field at noon today.

INDIANS DEFEATED.

PRINCETON TIGERS WINNERS.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Princeton defeated the Indians, 16 to 0, at the Polo grounds, this afternoon.

Rain began to fall half an hour before the game. Both teams were heartily cheered. Carlisle won the toss and kicked off. The slippery ground handicapped both teams, and the game soon resulted itself into a kicking match. One of the Mt. Pleasant's punts rolled behind the goal line and Princeton kicked out to mid field. After a touchback, the Indians started to hit the line for a gain, when Exendine fumbled a forward pass. Princeton's attack was then threatened for the first time. On the other hand, Dillon and McCormick and Harland broke through the Carlisle line for repeated gains, carrying the ball to Carlisle's 20-yard line, where Princeton lost it. Princeton got the ball on an exchange of punts, and McCormick and Harlan alternately carried it through the line for a touchdown. The score: Princeton, 5; Carlisle, 0.

Harlan kicked the goal. Score: Princeton, 6; Carlisle, 0.

Princeton sent McCormick through for short gains and a penalty of 15 yards on Princeton forced Harlan to drop-kick a goal from the 30-yard line. Harlan booted it between the posts accurately. Score: Princeton, 10; Carlisle, 0. On the kick of the second half, Eddie Dillon brought the ball to the middle of the field in a 30-yard spurt, only one man tackling him from behind. Princeton began a succession of gains, playing with great snap and speed, despite the slippery field. Rain was coming down in torrents, but the big crowd braved the flood.

Mt. Pleasant was given the ball for Carlisle, and made several spectacular spurts around the Princeton ends for substantial gains, including one of 25 yards, but part of this was lost on a penalty for holding. On splendid interference, Princeton broke through the Indian line and made a 40-yard gain, and scored a touchdown. Harlan kicked the goal. Score: Princeton, 16; Carlisle, 0.

lines, and the ball was in St. Vincent's hands at the middle of the field. Huppert punted forty-five yards and recovered the ball after the fumble catch by Russell, but Utah again held and took the ball on their own five-yard line. An attempted punt netted but two yards, but St. Vincent's could not carry the ball over the line, and Utah punted out of danger. Utah gained thirty yards on a forward pass and a buck by Richardson, and then punted to Galt, who fumbled and lost the ball.

Here Utah came near scoring, for Russell made a twenty-five-yard run, only to be penalized because a member of the team held. An exchange of punts brought the ball out to the middle of the field. Utah failed to make their yards on bucks and tried a forward pass, which was fumbled. Grindle made a beautiful tackle of Russell on an end run, forcing Utah to try a place kick on the thirty-seven-yard line.

HITS CROSS-BAR.

Anderson booted the ball straight to the goal, but it hit the cross-bar and fell to the ground where Seeley fell on it on the four-yard line. He bucked two yards, and Anderson carried it over the line. The kick-out for position for the goal kick failed; score 5 to 0 for Utah.

The rest of the half was a see-sawing up and down the field, with the St. Vincent's backs making a constantly better showing against the Mormons. St. Vincent's was penalized once for Keim's hurdling. The ball was in possession of St. Vincent's, on the twenty-yard line, when time was called.

In the second half the ball was largely in Utah's side of the field, with the St. Vincents aggressive all the time. With the ball on the fifteen-yard line, Yabarrando was sent in as quarterback, after a few minutes of play. Galt failed to make his yards, and Utah took the ball. St. Vincent's blocked the punt, and when Referee Traeger penalized Utah fifteen yards, St. Vincent's had but three yards to go for a touchdown. Galt scored the touchdown near the corner of the field after two fierce bucks.

The kick-out for a goal-kick failed because Stoney, who received the ball, stepped forward in heeling the catch. Score 5 to 5. A punting duel between Conville and Yabarrando ensued after the kick-off, and the Saints kept pressing forward until in position for a place-kick, which failed. Conville punted out, and Galt and Yabarrando, by forward passes and quarterback runs, carried the ball down to the twenty-yard line. After more punting, Grindle ran thirty yards for a touchdown, after receiving the ball on a forward pass from Galt. The goal was easy. Score, 11 to 5 for St. Vincent's.

Grindle kicked off to Conville, who was tackled hard by Stoney as he hobbled down the field. Utah executed a clever forward pass, throwing the ball to the end, who stood almost at the side lines, and gained 20 yards. A punt by Conville brought the ball to the center of the field, where Yabarrando made an ineffectual punt as time was called.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

A bunch of U.S.C. students headed by their coach, rooted for the Utah team. For three years Holmes coached the Mormons.

Seeley, left guard for the Mormons, says he is going back home and tell his kids all about it. Seeley has been married several years, and often coaches the high school team in which his sons play.

Sorenson, coach for the Los Angeles High School, still says he believes he has a better team than St. Vincent's. It is doubtful though if the teams will mix this year.

Coach Hempel said, after the game: "We are champions of the West." However, much depends on the result of the games which the Utah team still has to play. The Mormons have yet to play their hardest games, which decide the Rocky Mountain championship.

Hemple says that his quarter, Yabrando, is a wonder. The students probably think so, too, for they carried the sixteen-year-old player from the field to the college.

The Nast brothers were on the sidelines. They left the school because they broke training rules. They agree with Hempel that he has a good team, yet acknowledge that the team misses them.

St. Vincent College will celebrate their victory with a holiday Monday, and a box party for the players.

The sum was particularly favorable to hunt there, owing to the opening of the season, after a closed period of years. Plenty of elk were left for next season, although every got the limit of one bull. Some heads were brought in.

CORBINA BUSY AGAIN.

The season has been one designed apparently to reverse all precedent. Now that the corbina season has passed, and nothing further is to be expected in the surf-casting line, comes a fair-sized run of corbina at Huntington Beach and neighboring points, including some individuals of five pounds weight, at least one of which has been taken.

Fishing at Huntington Beach Thursday, one local angler landed eight corbina, ranging from one and a half to five pounds in weight, all in prime condition. From Melrose, Balboa, Sunset Beach, Bay City, straggling catches of corbina, mostly of the "nipper" persuasion, are reported by occasional anglers during the week. Clam bait is in good supply, and is at present the favorite, although a few sand-crabs are to be had at some of the resorts.

Large jack-smelts are biting well, now, and the small fishermen are quite in their element with a fair supply of corn-fed mackerel, some very large sardines of a pound weight, occasional herring, pompano and no end of king fish to fill up their baskets. Redondo, Playa Del Rey, Port Los Angeles, and Huntington Beach are the places for this kind of angling, which has the great advantage of always providing a mess for the table. Mullet are reported very plentiful in Newport and Bolsa bays, just now.

Bass are biting a little outside in the kelp beds, and with the exception of albicore which are only fairly plentiful, are about the only fish the trollers have been able to get. Yellowtail have been seen in great schools, but the launches have had great difficulty in locating them, owing to the fact that the squid generally travel a little below the surface and are apt to be swallowed whole by the fish which leaves less of pieces to attract the gulls overhead, and thus betray the presence of the big game underneath. Likewise the large fish do not churn up the surface as much as when breaking up the sardine or anchovy schools. Often the first known of their presence is a succession of short strikes. When busy with squid they care little for anything else, preferring that food to anything else that can be offered, although an occasional one with a freak appetite will lay hold of a spoon or bone jig.

Fishing in San Pedro Bay has been quiet all week, only once in a great while a croaker being caught. Anglers are beginning to think the early winter spotfin run will not occur this year. Last spring there was some excellent sport to be had with the big fellows and the present season may be a forerunner of more of the same sort. Big croakers have been scarcer than usual. Those taken are seldom over five pounds in weight, and the Sunday crowds that have lined the bay for miles are thinning out as the anglers scatter to other places.

The best bay fishing is for bass at present. Some big ones are to be had opposite Terminal and even farther up the Cerritos slough, the fishing being done from a skiff.

Local fans will have their last chance today to see the Coast League players in action, for the season comes to a finish this afternoon when Portland and Los Angeles will play a double-header at the Chutes Park. Andrada will probably pitch one of the games for Portland, and it is more than likely that there will be a switch in the Los Angeles line-up, in honor of the day.

YACHTING NOTES.

That there will be no race for the America's cup next year now seems certain. According to the terms of the deed of gift it was necessary for the challenge to be made before November 1, and except for the one received from Sir Thomas Lipton early in September, none has been heard from.

Among the eastern yachtsmen it was expected that a challenge might be received from the Royal Swedish Yacht Club or that some of the doughty German tars would like to try for that most famous trophy, but neither evinced such a desire in writing.

Among South Coast yachtsmen the subject of another Santa Barbara regatta is the most favored topic for next season's sport. Those who participated in the initial regatta at the mission town in August are very anxious for another and larger one next summer.

All conditions favor the amateur sailors at Santa Barbara—there is plenty of anchorage room, the danger of lying at anchor in an open roadstead is reduced to a minimum during the summer months, ashore there are ample accommodations for the yachtsmen and their friends, and, most important of all, the Santa Barbarans are royal good hosts.

Geographically, Santa Barbara is centrally located, and if, as is now expected, the San Francisco and Corinthian clubs will send fleets from the Golden Gate, and the San Diego yachtsmen could be induced to bring north their swift racers, these, together with the South Coast fleet, would make a nautical pageant that would rival Newport or Bar Harbor.

The date could be arranged to follow closely upon the start of the trans-Pacific race to Honolulu and would attract yachtsmen from the whole Coast. Much surprise was evinced at the steady favorable wind at Santa Barbara during the August regatta, and a variety of courses may be laid out, as there are no obstructions.

Next year promises a strenuous life for the yachtsmen of Southern California. Besides the trans-Pacific race which will be an international affair, there will be the race around Catalina Island for the Montgomery cup, and another ocean race to Santa Barbara for the Baker trophy. These, together with the Times cup race, always set for the glorious Fourth, the regular club events, and the prospect of a renewal of the Lipton cup races will make lots of work.

In order properly to prepare for the many events most of the racing fleet of the South Coast Yacht Club have been stripped and hauled out of the water. As the new universal rule will govern all races next year, extensive alterations in sail plans and stowing of ballast are necessary.

Columbine is on the ways at Terminal and will be shifted to winter quarters in a few days. Skipper Whitney is of the opinion that few changes will be made in the champion of the past season, and it is expected that Capt. Mitchell will sail her as she is and accept the penalty imposed by the new rule.

Mischief II is ready to haul out. In Capt. Folsom's boat important changes are to be made. Her deck is to be lowered several inches and the hoist of the mainsail shortened. This, it is expected, will bring her nearly to her rating. But Mischief II has never appeared to be over-canvassed, so many yachtsmen think with a small sail area she will hardly do so well in light airs.

Neither Detroit nor Yankee can be changed materially without practically rebuilding them, and as they are in a class of their own they will more than likely sail next year as they did this. Yankee's ballast needs rearranging and with this done the big single stickers should furnish some good sport.

The yawls Arrow, Minerva and Yankee Girl are still in commission, and being staunch cruisers, will be kept in the water later than the rest of the fleet. The schooners Lurline and Skidbaldnir are to be laid up in a few days. The latter being finished very late in the season, has not had a chance to show her sailing power. She may be a surprise next year.

Of the smaller classes Merlin and Valkyrie are stripped and put up for the season, while Myth and Portola will be kept in commission for Sunday sailing for a few weeks more. Marie, Muriel and Osborn are to be stripped next week, and after that the anchorage in front of the clubhouse at San Pedro will be quite deserted.

With the larger boats put away, the season for punt sailing will open. Although not much is said of this class of sport, it furnishes no little excitement and lots of amusement to the skippers. Without pretending to classic design, the punts are built for fun and never disappoint any one in that respect. They are usually about twelve feet long and three or four feet wide. Except for a comfortable cockpit they are decked over; as a rule there is only a mainsail and jib and in many cases the head sail is dispensed with.

Thompson Boys Win.

The Thompson football team defeated the Seventeenth-street squad by a score of 11 to 5, yesterday. Both elevens played a good game, and at the end of the first half the score stood 5 to 5. At the opening of the second half Walsh of the Thompson team made a long punt, which was regained by the end, and resulted in a run for a touchdown. Percey Sheedy of the Seventeenth squad played the star game, and Hunton of Thompson's eleven distinguished himself as a good yard gainer.

The Man Who Delays Is Lost

Never was the adage, "The man who hesitates is lost," more aptly illustrated than in the case of the man who suffers from Weakness, Varicocele, Contracted Disorder or some other kindred disease and who neglected to have his ailment treated.

Some men hesitate to consult a doctor for lack of courage or because of false pride. Others profess to have no faith in medicine. Still others try to cure themselves by the use of patent medicines or some clap-trap device that has been recommended. Sooner or later all these so-called "cures" prove their utter worthlessness. Meanwhile, in each case, the disease gains a firmer hold on its victim. If he delays longer, the disease is likely to involve all the vital functions and make his case a hopeless one.

Right here I want to sound a note of warning to every ailing man. If you are suffering from any disease of a private nature, don't delay, but come to me at once and be cured. I CURE ALL DISEASES OF MEN.

My Method Entirely My Own

Bear in mind that my methods of treatment are entirely original with me. These methods are the result of my own study, experience and untiring efforts to devise a means of alleviating suffering and for curing the most difficult cases of men's diseases.

I opened the way to easy and permanent cures of these ailments. Many other doctors have tried to follow in my footsteps. They have tried to imitate my methods, as the countefeiter tries to imitate Uncle Sam's good money. Of course this imitation of my treatment only proves that my methods are held to be the STANDARD by other medical men.

I Treat Men and Men Only

I warn you, however, not to be deceived into believing that there is any other treatment that will do for you what mine will do. You may appear to be benefited for a time by some of the other treatments offered you, but the cure will not be lasting as it will be under my treatment. My methods are used only by myself. No other doctor employs them, because they are absolutely unknown to others. My cures are quickly effected and they are invariably permanent.

I Have the Largest Practice Because I Invariably Fulfill My Promises

There's no drawing the line between curable and incurable diseases. Each individual case must be considered. Most doctors claim that among that class of diseases peculiar to men one or two are incurable. This idea is wrong. I have demonstrated that it is wrong for I cure all diseases of men. The truth is that some cases of curable diseases are incurable, and some cases of so-called incurable diseases are easily curable by the right methods. I by no means claim the ability to cure each and every case that may come to my office, but I claim to cure most of the cases that others cannot cure, and I always refuse treatment where conditions indicate that I will be unable to obtain thorough and lasting results.

Weakness
"Weakness" is not a weakness at all, but is merely a symptom of chronic inflammation in the prostate gland, bought on by early dissipation or some contracted disorder. My system of local treatment removes this inflammation, and is the only treatment that ever can permanently restore strength and vigor.

Varicocele
Many who are but slightly afflicted with varicocele believe that the trouble is of little consequence. The opposite is true. Varicocele is a disease of a progressive nature. As it advances, nervous complications come, power diminishes, and the general health is impaired. I cure varicocele in five days.

Contracted Disorders
Contracted disorders tend to work backward until the most vital nerve centers become involved in the inflammation. Safety demands that every vestige of infection be eradicated at the earliest possible moment. My treatment is thorough and so perfect is my method of application that even chronic cases yield completely.

CONSULTATION FREE—MY HONEST AND CANDID ADVICE COSTS YOU NOTHING. I cheerfully give you the very best opinion, guided by years of successful practice. Men out of town, in trouble, write if you cannot call, as many cases yield readily to proper home treatment and cure.

Our treatment for this loathsome disease is mild, thoroughly effective and curative, eradicating every particle of virus and precisely similar to that employed by the most celebrated specialist of Hot Springs, Ark. Beware of harsh treatment administered by inexperienced practitioners or pseudo specialists.

STRICTURE
This trouble we treat successfully by our improved method, which never fails to bring about a cure. Electricity or electric belts cannot do this trouble any good; when you employ either you throw your money away. Call and let us explain the nature of your trouble and how you can be permanently cured.

Sixteen years of phenomenal success as specialists for men only, right here in Los Angeles, is strongly presumptive evidence of skill and good repute.

Our cures last. We cure to stay cured. Our large and constantly increasing practice is not due to newspaper advertising, but to the fact that we cure our patients soundly and completely, thus making every patient a "booster." Our medical Journal may be secured downstairs at out entrance, 202½ S. Broadway. If out of town, write for one.

WE NEVER FAIL
Perfect tecnique, up-to-date equipment and wide experience enable us to achieve perfect results in every case. We cure the cases others cannot cure, and earnestly request the public to judge us by our work.

VARICOCELE
No case of varicocele ever was or ever can be cured without an operation, notwithstanding the bombastic statements of would-be specialists to the contrary. For the last ten years we have had a standing offer of $1000 to be awarded to any specialist who could cure a case of Varicocele without operation. Our operation is painless and devoid of all danger, and we only require our patients to lay off work for one week.

"WEAKNESS"
Weakness is usually but a symptom of congestion or inflammation of the prostate gland. Prematureness and loss of power, etc., incident to this abnormal condition cannot be cured by internal medicine or wearing electric belts. Removal of the abnormal conditions immediately results in complete restoration of functional activity of the organs involved. We are the only specialists on the coast curing weakness with absolute certainty.

Final Games of Season Will Be Played Today.

Los Angeles, 6; Portland, 2.

The proposition of trying out bush pitchers may be all right in a way, but it always turns out to be short weight. It is bad for the kids, for they generally explode before a large and caustic crowd that fails to see the humor of robbing the nursery and trying to pass a child off on real men and ladies, merely to hush the proud hopes of some small town where every one knows every one's business.

Some fellow dug up the San Pedro team battery, which is Ford and Sylva, and they were put in to do the work for Portland. They did all right for two innings, and then the loud noise that was heard was Ford hitting the sky. When he came down at the end of the fourth inning, little Capt. Casey threw him on the bench and put in another busher named Andrade, from Santa Monica. This one was all right, for he allowed but four hits in four innings, but the Looloos already had the game won and didn't strain themselves much to make any more runs.

Of course, Dolly Gray was pitching and won, which makes his fifth victory out of six games he has pitched here during the final five weeks of the season. There is nothing spectacular about this old boy, but when it comes to taking the games, he is there, as the leading pitcher of the league should be. Carlisle was responsible for one of the runs the enemy made, and Ellis probably caused the other, by waiting for a fly ball to center field that he should have caught. However, neither of these things made any difference, for the locals not only hit Ford, but took advantage of everything and breezed along in front after they once got in their stride. Portland had a bush catcher named Sylva behind the bat, and there were seven stolen bases off him. There were no spectacular plays, and the game was over in one hour and thirty minutes. Dillon and Bernard went to a football game, and Hogan and Hosp played first and second.

Portland made its first run off Casey's single and steal, and Kennedy's hit to center, and the second came from Raftery's hit to left, Carlisle's pass of it to the fence and Johnson's single to right.

The locals got four in the third from four singles, three stolen bases, a pass and a long fly. Two more came from two singles, an error, a wild pitch and an out.

The last games of the season will be played this afternoon in a double-header, and Andrade will probably pitch again.

WOMAN HUNTS BIG GAME.

Kills Wild Cat With Club and Saves Man's Life from Wounded Grizzly Bear.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 31.—One of the most successful hunters of the Territory is Mrs. George W. P. Hunt, wife of the president of the Old Dominion Commercial Company of Globe. She is the daughter of James Ellison, and for many years lived upon her father's cattle ranch, in the wildest district of Gila county, in central Arizona. She has been on the ranch hunting behind her father's pack of twenty-eight hounds. It is told that bear and lion have been secured in number, but her latest exploit was the killing of a wildcat with a club. The cat had been treed by the dogs, and could not be reached by rifle, so Mrs. Hunt fearlessly climbed the tree and disabled the animal by a well-directed blow with a club.

Several years ago Mrs. Hunt saved the life of D. W. Hall, now of Salome, Ariz., who was hunting near the Ellison ranch. He stirred up a gigantic bear, which he shot in a spot not vital. The bear charged. Hall tried to climb a hill. As he stumbled over a rock, Miss Ellison, who had been watching the race, shot at the critical time that saved Hall's life.

Incidentally, Mrs. Hunt can ride the range as expertly as any cowboy, and she and her sister have assisted their father in the cattle round-ups.

Good Trap Shooting.

Some good scores were made in the informal practice shoot of the Western Gun Club yesterday at the LiFur grounds. J. E. Vaughan broke 95 out of 100. Vetter, the veteran gunsmith, was in fine fettle also, and broke 25 straight, 21, and 22 out of 25 in other events. Homer Kennedy shot a pump-gun for a change and broke 18 out of 25 with it.

DIABOLO FINDS FAVOR AT HUNTINGTON HALL SCHOOL.

Latest European Craze May Become Generally Popular Here. Much Skill Required for Best Results—Sport May Be Played on Any Kind of Open Field.

"Diabolo," or "The Devil on Two Sticks," the latest European craze in the way of outdoor sport, is being played by the girls at Huntington Hall. Miss Hanslee, the principal of the school for girls, brought the game over from Paris last summer.

In Paris the craze has reached such a height that a special police law has been passed, making it illegal to play Diabolo on the streets.

Miss Hanslee is especially enthusiastic over the game as a developer of grace and agility. The game is a very old one, and comes originally from the Orient. A feature that especially recommends it is that it may be played anywhere, unless it is played in a tournament. The girls of Huntington Hall play it on their hockey field, which makes an ideal place for Diabolo. Even a competitor is not always necessary, the Diabolo furnishing enough activity for one.

The game requires merely a piece of string about six feet long, attached to two wands, and the Diabolo, shaped like two tops joined at the pointed ends. These tops are made of celluloid, though some say another material should be used.

The celluloid bobbin of Diabolo, or Lorio, is dropped to the ground. The player holds the two sticks with the string hanging between, and slips the loop made by the string under the Diabolo so that it lies in the groove. Poising the left hand with the stick held waist high, the player moves the right hand up and down so that the Diabolo rotates along the string. When the Diabolo has begun to hum, the two ends of the stick are brought together and then quickly jerked apart. The Diabolo flies into the air at a height which varies according to the expertness of the player. It is possible for it to reach a height of fifty feet. It moves steadily, rotating sometimes at a rate of 2000 times per minute. As the Diabolo comes down the player or opponent slackens his string. The Diabolo is caught near the right stick, the string is pulled taut and the bobbin is jerked into the air again.

This motion is like the well-known sleight-of-hand trick when the performer throws up the ball in his left hand and catches it in his right as it comes down. It is in this form of the game that the records are made, the Diabolo being hurled up hundreds of times in succession.

A popular Diabolo tennis game is played. When the Diabolo has begun humming on the cord the player faces his opponent, who is about twenty-four yards away. The Diabolo is shot across the net. The receiver catches it on his cord—always provided that his eye is accurate and he himself is quick—and sends it back.

Again the field may be arranged like a football field, and the side which allows the Diabolo to fall loses a point.

The game has been received with the greatest interest and Huntington Hall hopes to develop a line of experts in this novel sport.

TENNIS TOURNEY DELAYED.

Presbyterian Courts to Be Scene of Contests for President Baer's Trophy.

The uncertainty of the weather has caused a delay in beginning the interclass tennis tournament at Occidental, but it is expected that play will begin not later than next Tuesday. President Baer has offered a loving cup for the winning class and next to football, tennis is holding the greatest athletic interest on the Presbyterian campus.

It first was planned to throw the tourney open to all departments of the institution, but a later arrangement has excluded the "preps," which leaves the four college classes the only entries. The new ruling has caused some disappointment in the academy as the third-year class was confident of winning first honors, as it contains Winfred Mace, the interscholastic champion, and Marguerite Merrill, who represented the Presbyterians in intercollegiate tennis last year.

From indications the sophomores should win the cup, as they are strong in players for all events. Grayon Merrill is probably the best player in college and will play for the "sophs" in the men's singles, men's doubles, and mixed doubles. Misses Flora Clark and Elva Gardiner are strong sophomore players.

The intercollegiate tennis prospects at Occidental are not very bright at present. Rob Cleland, the mainstay of last year's championship team, is not in school, and Lowry and Marguerite Merrill, who played last year, are in the preparatory department and probably will not be permitted to play in intercollegiate contests this year. New material will have to be developed, but as interest in the game is high, the Presbyterians expect to produce some good players before the intercollegiate season.

HIGH SCHOOL TENNIS.

Dawson and Rogers Expected to Be Mainstay of Team—Try-outs Being Arranged.

The Los Angeles High School tennis team is getting into form and will open the season in a few days. The try-out has not been completed as yet, but the four who represented the school last year are still attending and no doubt they will play in the league games.

Manager Rogers will secure the games for the team, and he expects to put the best squad on the courts the school has ever had. Principal Housh has promised to have the new tennis courts finished as soon as possible so that the four may have a place to practice.

The following men probably will make up the team: W. Dawson, C. Rogers, A. Davison and M. Hutton.

FORM NEW FISH CLUB.

Local Anglers Join in Unique Sporting Organization—Officers Work.

Los Angeles and Ocean Park fishermen who generally take their outings at Port Los Angeles have formed a fisherman's club of unique design and great convenience which is likely to be copied by other anglers if in future it continues to be as successful as in the last year during which it has been in existence.

The club was formed under the name of "Don't Flurry Fishing Club." W. P. Snyder of Ocean Park is president; Harry Heap, also of Ocean Park, is vice-president; Frank Childs of Los Angeles is second vice-president; Sam. Jackson, treasurer; Julius W. Krause of Los Angeles, secretary; Judge Harry H. Rose is attorney and referee.

Meetings are held each Sunday at the Long Wharf at Port Los Angeles and when the fishing is poor the club adjourns to Playa del Rey. The records to date are a 17½-pound lobster by Krause, and a 23-pound halibut by Snyder.

FAT YEARS AND LEAN.

Is not that an interesting old story in Genesis of Joseph down in Egypt reading the signs of coming times and telling the Pharaoh that the "flush times" then prevailing would not last forever, but in coming years as in past years there would be some when the [illegible] floods of the Nile would fail to come down and make the land fruitful and harvests abundant?

Was it not the act of a king wise and good, too, for the Pharaoh to take precaution during the "fat years" to save the surplus food so that when the "lean years" should come his people should have bread?

The writer who tells the story so directly and simply assumes on the part of his readers knowledge of the conditions in which people lived in Egypt in those days. The picture was plain to the eyes of those who looked upon it through the eyes of the person who made it. To get a proper view of the picture at this long lapse of time, we need sidelights from the past reflected upon it. We must go to more elaborate histories of Egypt under these Pharaohs giving details of conditions in order to comprehend the story fully.

What were these conditions? Somewhat like those which socialists are trying to establish in this modern world. There was little human individuality in those times, little scope for initiative on the part of most men. Private ownership of property was almost unknown. Men had not learned that they were created with certain "inalienable rights and that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Lands were all the domains of the king, of his family remote or near, or of a few favorites of the court. The King of Egypt could say with more truth than the King of France, "The state? That is I." The great mass of mankind was indeed "the common herd." The king supervised, directed, controlled all.

So it was easy for this Pharaoh to send out "throughout all the land of Egypt" and take from the fields any that he pleased of the crops and store them up, or do anything else he pleased with them. As things went then it was quite proper for the king to exact payment from the people for this food thus held in reserve when the "lean years" came on the land and the crops failed. When he took the grain he took what was his own. He stored it in his own granaries, and when he sold it he was selling his own property. The people who tilled the fields were slaves like the Hebrews who made bricks. Joseph was a slave whom the Pharaoh might sell or kill as he pleased.

That is all changed with us. We live in the age and country where royalty is not the basis on which all things rest. This is the age of manhood. This is the country of manhood. Each citizen is a sovereign. His life is sacred. His liberty is secure. He pursues what he considers his happiness along what paths he pleases, so long as he does not trespass on his neighbor. When we plant a field it is our own. When we reap a crop it is ours. The field we cultivate may be our calling in life and the harvest may be our wages or salary. Whatever it may be, it is ours to do with as we like.

We have no king in "fat years" to store up portions of our harvest for "lean years." But the years are not all alike in California in the twentieth century any more than in Egypt 4000 years ago.

The "cowboys" from Central Asia who made up the brethren of Joseph in this long-ago age had no schools in which their minds were trained and did not have the limelight of the ages which shines on our path to teach us wisdom. These changed conditions are the basis of our life which endows men with sovereign citizenship instead of making slaves of them as in the Egypt of Joseph's day.

We have been passing through an unusually long period of "fat years" in America, and they are not ended yet. Just before this series began was a pretty long period of "lean years." It was quite as long as that which the Egyptians went through. There had been periods of "fat years" prior to these lean ones. A good many of us manifested much inability to manage our affairs with the wisdom of the Pharaoh who stored the surplus harvests. Some of us during these "lean years," along about the end of them in 1897, were in a worse plight than the slaves on the banks of the Nile. The pinch for bread was awfully severe here in Los Angeles. The "fat years" came at last, and the harvests have been abundant beyond all experience of any people in the world at any former period. This year is the fattest of them all in plenty of work, good wages, high salaries and large profits in business. There has been and there is ample opportunity to lay up some of the surplus harvest for a "lean year." We hope this event is far away. But "lean years" will come. The flood of prosperity will fail to overflow the valleys and produce large harvests.

Let us think quietly over the old story told of the Pharaoh and his dreams. Never mind whether you think this story is authentic history or not. If the "fat" and "lean years" did not actually come and go as the story is told, and if the account is some one's "dream," it is a dream which has "come true" many, many times in the history of the world, several times in the experience of some of us. Dream or reality, it is something that will come again. When it does come, there will be, as has been the case, many in the sad plight of the children of Jacob living where no grain had been stored up, and compelled to travel far to get food at very great expense and perhaps with no money to pay for it when found.

We are all sovereigns. We should be our own Pharaohs, not consume all our surplus harvests in the "fat years," but keep some of the surplus for the years when the Nile fails to rise.

ON THE SHORE.

Across the bay fly seagulls,
  As twilight hovers low,
Their feathers, wet with dewdrops,
  In vesper light aglow.

Dim, gray-winged birds, in silence,
  Half-seen, are slipping by;
And dreaming, ever dreaming,
  The fog-wrapped islands lie.

I hear the mystic voices
  That fill the pregnant slime,
And lonely curlews calling—
  So is it to all time.

The breezes shiver lightly
  And sink again in sleep;
I hear the mystic voices
  That brood upon the deep.

LONDON'S EMERGENCY WOMEN.

The new London invention of "emergency women" will probably have an important bearing on the servant question. It promises to be a new and profitable occupation for capable women.

The function of the emergency woman is to visit any household where there is a sudden need for special services. Let us suppose that the servants in your house have fallen ill or gone off without notice. Or it may be that a batch of country cousins have paid you a surprise visit, and you are at your wits' end to cope with the extra work occasioned. You send at once for an emergency woman.

In short, one can think of innumerable domestic crises where the arrival on the scene of an intelligent, capable woman could be of inestimable value to you as helper and adviser. There is plenty of room for such women, but they should be level-headed and efficient. And they cannot have too many accomplishments.—[Unidentified.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

PERNICIOUS DOCTRINE OF "AFFINITY."

THERE is no cause however worthy, no term however noble, that may not be degraded into a corrupt convenience for the justification of deeds of gross selfishness.

We have before our mental vision a tragically pathetic scene of misery and dumb desolation; the darkened home of a faithful and honest carpenter, the husband and father without fault of his, according to press reports, recently deserted by the woman whom his children call "mother"—the woman whom he had taken to his heart and hearth, to love, cherish and protect; and whom she had accepted with similar vows, pledging herself to remain faithful to the obligations of wedlock until death should sever the tie!

The shadow of death with all its terror and grief has yet something less terrible than the impenetrable gloom that is cast upon a household by the moral death of a dearly-beloved member, selfishly removed from the home-circle, dead to the pleadings of loyal hearts, deaf to the call of duty and of conscience.

True, that in case of loss or death through transgression, there is the sustaining hope of resurrection of the life, or regeneration of the spirit of the lost one here and now and not at some other time hereafter. The hope is that the alienated one may return; the chilled affection may be rekindled in the perverse heart, and a new and more lasting fire of filial or conjugal love and devotion made to burn on the present forsaken family altar. It is with such hope as this glimmering in his sorrowing soul that the deserted carpenter with his little son and daughter finds solace in the dreary hours that have passed since he has made his last sacrifice not alone of his personal feeling and his marital rights, but also of his material possessions by converting a portion of his household effects into available means by which to speed the wayward, selfish creature, unworthy of the dignity of honorable wife and motherhood—to her criminally sought "affinity!"

The husband so wronged utters no word of condemnation against the woman who has found it in her heart and conscience to forsake husband and children for a more "blissful" union with another, with one who she supposes more nearly approaches her ideal, and with whom, according to the promulgators of the doctrine of "affinity," she assumes to have the right to live out of wedlock. No doubt there are vast numbers who look upon this fictitious justification for tearing asunder the marriage bond without a word of protest. It is so easy, so convenient a way to cast off the old fetters that have become distasteful even if for no more serious reason than that the impulse for change and exploration of untried sources of happiness makes particularly attractive the glamour of romance that lingers in the law of "affinity"—and hence gravitation of one guilty party to the embrace of another is taken to be sanctioned by "a law above the law."

Ah, but so it is with all other laws that conflict with personal inclination or individual desire. Whenever the repressing or constraining hand of the law becomes irksome, when the prescribed limits are contemptuously overstepped and the legal mandate or moral imperative boldly defied, then lo, the unique motive or the operation of "a higher law" is eloquently pleaded, and which "higher law" when sifted to the bottom is generally seen to consist of the elements of consummate selfishness.

Indeed for those who are inclined to relax their moral or marital moorings, for those who heave anchor in no harbor long, who enter into the state of matrimony with less serious reflection upon the duties and responsibilities which a matrimonial alliance entails than they bestow upon the purchase of a hound or upon the investment in a house—for such the world abounds in "affinities!"

We declare, finally, this pernicious doctrine of "affinity" to be the apotheosis of individualism, or the climax of a social disaster-working selfishness. And this form of moral evil is applauded every time those responsible for it are aided or abetted in their efforts to release themselves from the marriage relation for reasons which, in the cause of morality and for the well-being of society, are not to be recognized as warranting the dissolution of the marriage tie, with its inevitable train of misery such as neglect or abandoning of offspring; shattering the life of a self-elected spouse; crushing the hopes of friends and wrapping in despair trusting families.

Nay, the claims of society are not to be relinquished in order that the "affinity"-bound traitors to Duty may secure their newly discovered cup of nectar and ambrosia. Do they suppose life marriage to be of no greater import than the mere titillation of one's vanity? Is a husband or wife to be "picked up" or discarded as suits with whims or fancy of heart and home-breakers—the disorganizers of society? There is no absolutely thornless path in any walk of life, why insist upon it in the field of matrimony? Moreover, the marriage relation is not to be regarded as a perpetual source of pleasure and the home as a mere place of amusement. For both, while including these, have higher functions to perform. If the actual conditions of marriage prove other than ideal, that is no excuse for a cowardly escape from them. For duty, honor, justice, conscience, self-respect demand that difficult circumstances be endured, changed, transfigured, but not selfishly left behind. For the end of marriage is not personal gratification nor even procreation, but the evolution and development of character to more and more sublime heights of moral purity and spiritual grandeur

Do they suppose life marriage to be of no greater import than the mere titillation of one's vanity? Is a husband or wife to be "picked up" or discarded as suits with whims or fancy of heart and home-breakers—the disorganizers of society? There is no absolutely thornless path in any walk of life, why insist upon it in the field of matrimony? Moreover, the marriage relation is not to be regarded as a perpetual source of pleasure and the home as a mere place of amusement. For both, while including these, have higher functions to perform. If the actual conditions of marriage prove other than ideal, that is no excuse for a cowardly escape from them. For duty, honor, justice, conscience, self-respect demand that difficult circumstances be endured, changed, transfigured, but not selfishly left behind. For the end of marriage is not personal gratification nor even procreation, but the evolution and development of character to more and more sublime heights of moral purity and spiritual grandeur

THE LAND OF CUSH.

A TRIP THROUGH IT ON A SOUDAN GOVERNMENT STEAMER.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WADY HALFA.—For the past two days I have been steaming up the Nile, above Egypt, through one of the oldest lands of the globe. I have been traveling through the country which belonged to Noah's grandson, Cush, and which, in later days, was known to the Greeks and Romans as Ethiopia. The Egyptians called it Nubia, from their word noub, which means gold, and it is known that a large part of the gold of ancient times came from it. There are miners working in it today. It has been recently parceled out by the government to three English syndicates, with capital ranging from $250,000 to $1,500,000, and one of these companies, known as the Soudan Goldfield Limited, has already sunk three shafts in the ancient workings of Om Nabardi and is now building a railroad, to connect them with the government line which crosses the desert from Wady Halfa to Abu Hamid.

Ancient Nubia had a considerable population, and it was noted for its riches and power. It was something of a country at about the time the pyramids were built, and in the most prosperous days of old Egypt it had large towns and magnificent temples dedicated to the worship of the Egyptian gods. On my way here I passed Abu Simbel, a great temple on the banks of the Nile, which was cut out of the rocks by Rameses II, the Pharaoh who oppressed the Egyptians and would not let them go; and a little further down the river lies the Temple of the Lions, where that same old king himself was worshiped as a god.

Nubia was tributary to the Pharaohs until 1100 B. C. It then became independent, and later still its armies overran Egypt and conquered it. As other nations came into the lower part of the Nile Valley, they sent armies against the Nubians, only to be driven back, and at the time the Romans entered Egypt the country was ruled by a succession of queens named Candace, one of whom made war upon Rome. Shortly after Christ, the people adopted Christianity, and later, when the Mohammedans took possession of Egypt and the Upper Nile Valley, they were converted to Mohammedanism. They are still followers of the prophet, and they formed some of the boldest soldiers of the Mahdi in his recent war against the forces of Egypt and England.

A land with such a history ought to be a rich one. The Nubia of today is about as barren as any country on earth. With the exception of a narrow strip along the Nile, it is altogether desert. It begins in the sands of Libya and goes for several hundred miles eastward to the Red Sea, and it is only in a few places that the soil has enough moisture to f[illegible] a scanty pasturage for camels and sheep. The bulk of the desert population is made up of Bisharin Bedouins, who live in tents, of matting, and move about with their flocks from place to place. Each tribe has a certain number of wells, and their water is the principal part of its visible wealth. During the past few years the English officials of the Soudan have located these wells, and they have now information as to their depth and the quality and flow of the water. The government has also sunk some wells and has found water at about 100 feet.

The Nubia of today is a part of the Upper Nile Valley. If you will imagine a cultivated strip, about a quarter of a mile wide, winding its way like a snake from north to south as far as from New York City to Detroit, and embracing both sides of a river as large as the Mississippi, you may have some idea of this country. You must not think that the cultivated strip has any regularity of width. In some places the desert comes close to the river, and in others the stream is walled with black rocky hills, which rise, almost straight up, a thousand feet above it. Farther on may be yellow sand, spotted with black rocks which show signs of volcanic origin, and farther still, a low bend in the river where the water can be conducted out over the sands and make a cultivated patch three miles in width. In no place can you get out of sight of the desert. There are always rocks and sand on the other side of the green, and generally only a thin strip of green with the bleak, bare desert reaching out beyond to the horizon.

Irrigation in Nubia.

The Valley of the Nile here is narrow to an extreme. The river has cut its way through the rocks, and is so walled with hills that its waters have to be lifted in order to flow over any level place whatsoever. This is done chiefly by sakeyehs, of which there are something like 4000 on the Nubian Nile. The great wheels, moving in cogs, can be seen, here and there, high up on the banks, with their strings of buckets hanging to them. As the buckets descend each dips into the water and carries to the top a few quarts. In some places men raise the water in baskets or buckets, and in others they carry it up by hand and water little patches twenty or thirty feet wide, where the river slopes at such an angle that this can be done. Every low place in the river is used, and, as the Nile falls, the sand banks and islands are planted.

Wherever there is a strip of cultivated land, a village of huts, made of mud and stones, has grown up, and such villages spot the banks for hundreds of miles. At times there will be no green except between them and the river, and one wonders how men can be born and live and die there. Nevertheless there are more than 100,000 people to whom this region is the center of the earth.

I understand that this Nire strip is very fertile. The government officials tell me that it raises excellent cotton, and that a movement is under way to open up cotton plantations wherever there is a big enough block of land for the purpose. At present the chief crops are wheat, barley and millet, and the chief fruit is dates. The date tree thrives, and the fruit is sweeter and larger than that grown farther down the Nile Valley. One sees date palms almost everywhere along the banks. The government looks upon them as a source of revenue, and taxes them at the rate of 10 cents per tree.

On a Government Steamer.

The Ibis, on which I have been travelling, is one of the little steamers of the Soudan government which goes twice a week from Shellal, just above the Assouan Dam, to Wady Halfa, where the railroad across the desert begins. The ship is a stern-wheeler, much like those on American rivers. It is about 20 feet wide, 150 and it draws only 6 inches. We make about per hour, and our pilot, a dark-faced, short-bearded bian in turban and gown, winds his way from of the river to the other as we go on up the stream.

We fly the Egyptian and Soudanese flags, steamer belongs to the government of the Soudan, that means it is English. The captain, however, German, and the rest of the crew are Nubians, whom are as black as your hat. The captain German, French, English and Arabic. I find the steamer comfortable and the company able. The boat has two decks. On the lower one thirty cabins and the dining-room, where our meals served table d'hote. Over the upper an awning is so that we can sit out and watch the scenery as up the river.

Our party consists of several commercial who are bound for the Soudan and Central sell or buy goods; two missionaries who are the Sobat River; a capitalist, largely interested development enterprises about Khartoum, and ple who are on their way to the Blue Nile to game. Among the latter are a German baron wife and several British army officers from India, are spending their leave in this way. Most of our appears in evening clothes at dinner, although far away in the wilds of Nubia, with nothing on each side. Our meals are served in courses, half-dozen changes of plates, knives and forks, have napkins.

How One Suffers in the Desert of Nubia.

Indeed, it may interest you to know just suffers out here in the Desert of Nubia. I will the bill of fare for one day. At 7 this morning, was yet in bed, my black boy appeared and a cup of hot tea, with two sweet crackers on of the saucer. At 8 o'clock the bell rang for in the dining-room. The meal was as follows: fish, fresh from the Nile; bacon and eggs, bread ter and jam, with tea or coffee to order. At 1 o'clock came luncheon, consisting of rice, giblets, chicken, mutton chops and fruit, with bread and butter and cheese. Coffee, of course. At 8 o'clock we had dinner, and the menu was as follows: First, an excellent soup, then a boiled fish just out of the Nile, followed by a compote of pigeons, roast lamb and mint sauce, with potatoes and string beans. Then there was a course of tomato salad, and after that a pudding and fruit. All this was eaten about as far above the Mediterranean Sea as Omaha is above New Orleans, and the meals were served well. The charge for the food alone is $2 per day, and the fare without food for the two days' trip is $25.

I do not find travel in Africa at all cheap. If one travels along the Nile he must expect to spend $10 or $15 a day, the cost increasing as he goes up the river. My trip from Shellal to Khartoum and back by rail and steamer, not very much longer than from New York to Chicago, will be $115, or about 6 cents per mile, and I shall doubtless have to pay at Khartoum a hotel rate of at least $5 per day. Almost every good hotel in Egypt charges that much, and the extras proportionately high.

If one attempts to travel economically he must expect many discomforts. On this boat first-class passengers only are carried. We have some second and third-class passengers, but they live not on the steamer, but on a low barge, which we tow along by our side. This barge has a flat deck of rough boards, covered by a roof. The people upon it carry their own bedding and lay it down on the boards. They must supply their own food, and, as the servants of the first-class passengers and natives, who are none too clean, go in that way, the company is not overly desirable. Besides it is very cold after dark, and those who sleep on the decks have the desert breezes blowing over them all night long. It is cooler here than in Egypt, although we are nearer the equator. I have a woolen blanket on my bed, and on top of that a heavy traveling rug, and still am none too warm. In the early morning I wear an overcoat when on deck, although at noon it is so hot out of the breeze that I would fain take off my flesh and sit in my bones.

The Plague of the Flies.

Sailing up the Nubian Nile we are almost free from flies, such as are found by the millions in Egypt, but Nubia has a little fly of its own which is almost unbearable. This is known as the nimetta, a small midge, which appears in countless myriads during the winter season. Its bite causes a slight fever, and the natives sometimes wear bunches of smoldering grass twisted about their heads to keep it away.

As to the flies of Egypt, they are probably the descendants of those which the Lord sent in to afflict Pharaoh when he would not let the children of Israel go. They look not unlike the common fly of our country, but are more bold and hungry. Their feet stick to one as though they were glued, and they will not move until brushed off. Their favorite feeding place seems to be on one's eyes, and the Egyptian peasants have become so used to them that they let them feed at will. This is especially so of the children, a common sight being a child with its eyes so fringed with flies that it seems to have double eyelashes. The flies cover the meat in the markets, they roost on the buffaloes; camels and donkeys, and they attack the tourist to such an extent that the selling of fly brushes has become an Egyptian industry. The brushes are tassel-like affairs with long strings similar to the hairs of a horse's tail.

Every one knows that flies carry disease, and many of the troubles of the Egyptians of today are due to them. This is especially so of ophthalmia. There are blind people everywhere, and one-eyed men and women are common. Diseases of the eye are so universal that one of the charitable features of Lower Egypt is a company of traveling eye doctors. These men are supported by a rich Englishman, who has given a fund for the purpose. The doctors go from village to village, carrying their tents with them. As they enter a town the word goes out that the poor will be treated without charge, and crowds come to their tents to have their eyes examined and cured. They remain in one town for a month or so, and during this time the poor are attended to without money and without price. I am told the institution does great good.

Will Philae Be Drowned?

The port of Shellal, where I took the steamer for Wady Halfa, is just opposite the Island of Philae, and during my stay there I rowed over and took photographs of the ruined temples as they have been more or less affected by the backing up of the water from the Assouan Dam. Now that the dam is to be built fifteen feet higher, most of the temples will be drowned when the reservoir is full, and the probability is that they will soon pass away. When the dam was first proposed a great outcry came from the savants and archeologists of the world on account of the injury that it would do to Philae, but the material results have been so valuable to Egypt that the dam is to be raised regardless of the preservation of these ancient ruins. Something like [illegible] was spent in fortifying the old structures during the building of the dam, and it is probable that twice this amount would suffice to take up the temples which are now there and carry them to the mainland, or even transport them to Cairo, :where all the world might see.

The Island of Philae is situated on the edge of Lower Nubia, in the center of the Nile, just above the first cataract, and it is reached by ferry boat from Shellal or from Assouan and the dam. The island is about 1500 feet long and 500 feet wide; it is almost covered with temples built by the Ptolemies and others two or three centuries before Christ.

The chief deity of Philae was the goddess Isis; but Osiris, Hathor and the gods of the cataracts were also worshiped there. Under the Roman emperors the temples were enlarged, but when Egypt was converted to Christianity the hermits and other fanatics made their way into Nubia and took possession of it. They turned some of the temples into Christian churches and their mutilations of the splendid carvings put up in the honor of the gods of old Egypt can be plainly seen.

The ruins today are well worth a visit. Some of the structures have a forest of columns about them, and the Kiosk, which is known as Pharaoh's bed, is one of the most beautiful of the Egyptian temples. The stones of which Philae is built are of great size. They probably came from the Assouan quarries, or it may be from the granite rocks in the desert about. That region is almost all granite. I rode for about thirty miles on donkey-back over it, making my way through the desert in and out of granite boulders, worn smooth by the sandstorms of thousands of years. The rocks are of all shapes and are so piled up, one on another, as to make one think that the gods had used them as building material. Here one stands high over those surrounding it as though on a pedestal; there others are massed like fortifications, and again they rise in towers.

During my stay there I visited the Assouan quarries, the great stone yards from which the obelisks were taken and from which came the mighty statues of Rameses and the stone blocks of the greatest of the Theban temples. The quarries today are much the same as they were when the Egyptians left them two or three thousand years ago. One can see the marks of their wedges on the rocks and the markings of the old stonecutters are plain. In one place there is an obelisk half finished lying on its side, just as the masons of the Pharaohs left it ages ago. When the stones were gotten out for the Assouan Dam the Italian workmen used many of the blocks which the ancient Egyptian mechanics had begun to cut; and indeed that great granite structure was made in partnership by two sets of mechanics who were born thousands of years apart.

SACRED CATTLE IN TEXAS.

The herd of Burmese sacred cattle which "Tom" O'Connor, a prominent stockman of this region, imported direct from India about two years ago, has done so well that these cattle will soon be found upon many of the ranches of Southwest Texas. They were brought to Texas with the special idea that they could be used to advantage in improving the breeds of the native cattle. A. P. Borden, of Pierce, Tex., and other representative cattlemen of the Gulf Coast region, made a personal investigation of the Burmese sacred cattle in India before the experiment of bringing them over here was tried.

A shipload of the odd-looking animals was brought over, and when they were unloaded at the ranch of Mr. O'Connor, near here, they attracted the widest attention among cattlemen. They are still the objects of much curiosity, and cattlemen come long distances to see them and to make personal inquiry as to the success of the experiment. Mr. O'Connor is more than satisfied with his efforts at raising the Burmese sacred cattle. They seem to be particularly well suited to the Texas coast region, and they have thrived much better than the average stock imported from other States or even from the remote parts of Texas.

It is said to have been fully demonstrated that these cattle are immune from the "tick" fever. This fact is of itself a point sufficiently strong to recommend the adoption of the cattle upon all of the ranches where the peculiar malady is encountered. The claim is made that not only are the native Burmese cattle immune from this fever, but that they transmit the immunity to their offspring, and that it is found in the half-breeds as well as the thoroughbreds.

There is a hardiness about the Burmese sacred cattle that is said to fit them peculiarly for range life. It is believed that they will be able to withstand the severest kind of weather without serious losses, and that they are well fitted for the ranches of the more northern portions of the State, and even of Oklahoma and Kansas. The terrific heat of summer and the various insect pests of the Gulf Coast region do not seem to affect them adversely. Their skins are tough and are apparently impervious to all insects pests, such as ticks, mosquitoes and flies.

As a beef animal the claim is made that the Burmese are the equal of any of the breeds of cattle commonly found upon the ranches. They fatten easily, and their flesh is particularly well flavored. When crossed with other breeds the mixture is an improved animal both as to standard of weight and other important qualities, it is claimed.

The Burmese cattle are docile and domestic by nature. Their chief characteristic in the matter of personal appearance is a large hump which is situated just above their shoulder blades upon the front part of their backs. —[Goliad (Tex.) Correspondence New York Tribune.

HOW POETS DIFFER.

There is a sort of idea in the public mind that the poet is what scientists call a "fixed genius"—that every poet is the exact counterpart of every other poet. There is probably no class of men in the world—if class it can be called—whose members differ more widely in personality.

Pope, for instance, was a miser. Dryden and Shelley seemed to have no use for money, and threw it about in the most insane fashion. Shakespeare was a keen man of business. His contemporaries, Marlowe and Massinger, did not leave enough to have their bodies decently buried.

Coming down to modern times, Tennyson was artistically the most delicate and fastidious of men. A misplaced comma, an epithet which was not the perfection of expression, gave him nights of insomnia. Yet he was, perhaps, the most utterly careless man of his generation regarding his personal appearance. Had he not been carefully watched by his devoted wife, he would have been quite content to wear a suit of clothes until it dropped off him bit by bit in obedience to the law of gravitation.

But, after all, poesy is a peculiar gift, and those who possess it are not to be judged by the standard of ordinary individuals.—[Answers.

Why Named Sequoia.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME GIVEN TO CALIFORNIA'S BIG TREES.

By a Special Contributor.

IN California's wonderland nothing is more interesting or wonderful than the Sequoia gigantea, which grows along Sierra Nevada's slopes and its lesser cousin Sequoia sempervirens, inhabiting the lands near the coast around Santa Cruz. "What is the meaning of sequoia?" I asked a judge. "It is undoubtedly of Latin derivation, but I fail to remember its significance," was the judicial reply. The physician declared it "well-chosen scientific nomenclature," and stopped. A man on the street said he "guessed it was the name of the fellow that discovered the trees," so I came to the conclusion that but few know, and yet the story is interesting.

A long time ago, as the story books say, there lived near famous old Fort London, in East Tennessee, not far from the Georgia line, a very great man of whom not one American in a hundred has ever heard. Joseph Guess, or Sequoia, a half-breed Cherokee Indian, was born in 1760, and possessed qualities which would have made him great at any period or among any people in the world's history. Combined with a powerful creative intellect were indomitable energy, application, persistence, that no discouragement could effect, and a firm confidence in his own ability to overcome all obstacles. In his youth he acquired distinction in his tribe as a craftsman in silver, his handiwork showing not only technical skill in execution, but unusual ingenuity and originality of design.

It was not, however, until 1809 that he began the work that was to entitle him to a place among the earth's truly great. In that year Sequoia's ambition was fired by the knowledge that the whites had a method of communication by means of writing and books, and set out to devise a written language for his own people—when it is realized that Sequoia was illiterate, knew not a single letter of the English alphabet, had no basis in his own language to build upon, the stupendous difficulties of the task he set for himself may well be imagined. He began his great work without a doubt of his ultimate success, with the superb faith that belongs only to the great. From an old English spelling-book he copied all the letters, giving to each a sound, modified some of the letters he found, invented others until he had eighty-five characters, by means of which might be expressed every sound in the Cherokee language. Not only would this have been impossible with our alphabet, but so simple was the system that any one speaking Cherokee might within a week or two learn to read and write it. There are not lacking learned and distinguished philologists who unhesitatingly declare that Sequoia's alphabet is the most perfect ever devised for any language.

He had at first the usual experience of inventors: Shafts of ridicule were aimed at him, and he even received violent abuse from many of his tribesmen for his attempts to introduce this remarkable innovation, but his triumph came in 1821 in California. He was then 61 years of age, when a council of Cherokee chiefs formally adopted his invention. Soon a printing press was established and quite a large and varied literature was its fruit, while even a newspaper was printed in Cherokee by the aid of Sequoia's alphabet.

The desire for learning among the Cherokee was remarkable, so much so that in a very few months after the invention was given to the nation, thousands of its members could read and write. Considering the difficulties of his undertaking and that his invention raised a people from illiteracy, I think we are safe in writing the old chief who died full of honors, far from home in Mexico, one of the greatest of Americans.

Tennessee has given to the world many great men, Presidents Jackson, Polk and Johnson standing in the forefront. The nation they served has become one of the first of the earth, and so their names are known of all men. The people toward whose uplifting Sequoia spent his life are scattered to the four winds of heaven. Only a remnant remains, and in a few more generations they will be but a memory, and his achievement will be known only to the curious.

The old chief's life work was not in vain. No life of unselfish devotion ever is. A great American scientist with a soul attuned to the fitness of things Latinized the Indian name to Sequoia and gave it to California's great trees. And what name for the greatest of American growths could be more appropriate than that of one of the greatest of America's early race?

Scientists tell us some of these trees are thousands of years old. Everything that lived in all the earth when they were young has long since passed away. But there are young ones coming on under the shadow of their alders, and so, is it beyond the range of probability that a dozen centuries hence some broken and discouraged traveler resting under the gracious shade shall ask the reason for the beautiful name Sequoia, and hearing, become uplifted and stimulated to do noble things through the story of the humble red man who by unselfish devotion became great.

SCRAPPLE SEASON AGAIN.

With unfaltering loyalty we greet once more the advent of scrapple; succulent, comfort-giving, health-producing scrapple, such as it has come down the years since William Penn made it the chief article of his nutritious breakfast. The people of this community need not be told the significance of good old Philadelphia scrapple. Its merits have been praised in word and song. Scrapple done nicely to a turn is food fit for epicures. But for the benefit of those who decry the dish in its entity or its details let it be said right here that far from being a plebeian article scrapple has found its way into some of the most exclusive homes and hotels the country over.—[Philadelphia Telegraph.

Naturalization Reform.

UNITED STATES HAS ESTABLISHED NEW CLEARINGHOUSE.

By a Special Contributor.

THAT we at last have naturalization reform as a fact, not a theory, will be impressed upon any visi- to the newly-appointed offices of Mr. Richard K. Campbell, chief of the Division of Naturalization. Mr. Campbell was chief of the law division of the Bureau of Immigration where his work was so efficient that Commissioner-General Sargent selected him for his present important office. He was also an active member of the Naturalization Commission which advised Congress as to the framing of the new naturalization law which practically eliminates naturalization frauds and exterminates naturalization grafters.

him and his present residence. The document thus sworn to is under the new law exactly the same in every court, the information being filled in a blank form supplied by the new Division of Naturalization. Under the former law there were nearly as many forms as there were courts. The paper is watermarked and all court clerks supplied with the forms must account even for those that may be spoiled. The declaration of each applicant is filled out in triplicate, one being filed with the court, an exact copy being sent to the Division of Naturalization, at Washington, and another exact copy being given to the declarant, who will need it before he can finally obtain his papers.

Must Be Able to Write Name.

The applicant next files, with the court, in duplicate, a petition for citizenship, and this step must be taken not less than two or more than seven years after he files the declaration mentioned above. This petition must be signed in his own handwriting and besides giving the information about himself that appeared in the other documents, must give the name, nativity and residence when he says he did and it is attached to the This identifies the petitioner as the man who The latter must be verified also by affidavits of ible witnesses who are citizens and who swear applicant has resided, as long as claimed, in the and State. The old law required but one wi necessarily a citizen. Under this clause all abuses occurred. There was no Federal official to question the witness's fitness, and often there professional witnesses employed to railroad through the courts. Under the new law, a Fede torney always has access to the witness, and may tion him as he sees fit.

The petition of the citizen-elect is next post ninety days must elapse before the certificate zenship is issued. Under the previous law, the cate was issued at once. This ninety days allows time for the petitioner's case to be looked into by a functionary of government—the "naturalizatio iner."

There is a corps of these Federal officers, who

Chief Richard K. Campb

Each alien now entering the country lawfully must, in the immigrant station, pass before an employé who measures his height, notes the color of his eyes, hair and complexion, his personal peculiarities, name, age, occupation, place of birth, last residence, intended residence, date of arrival and the name of the vessel which brought him. On the basis of these data each immigrant who afterward applies for citizenship will be identified and all those who have been smuggled into the country will be discovered if making so bold as to apply for naturalization or passports. All of this information is entered in a register at the immigrant station, and each alien may at once or later obtain an official duplicate, in the form of a "certificate of landing" which will be indispensible when he endeavors to become a citizen of the United States. Without producing this document he can never become a citizen, unless he go over the border, be entered all over again, and wait five years after such second entry. Descriptions of his wife and children are similarly taken when they enter.

All Blank Forms Now Uniform.

As a second step toward citizenship, the immigrant goes into court and declares on oath that it is his bona fide intention to become a citizen. This declaration must set forth his name, age, occupation, personal description, place of birth, last foreign residence and allegiance, date of arrival, the name of the vessel carrying of his wife besides the name, time and place of birth, and residence of each of his children, if he have any. In it he must assure the court of his intention to reside here permanently, and although this assurance will not legally hamper his further movements, it gives a legal basis for the cancellation of the naturalization certificates of the many foreigners who are annually obtaining American citizenship and then hurrying back to their native lands to avoid military duty and live under the better protection offered by our flag. In the city of Jerusalem alone there are 1000 natives enjoying American citizenship, yet permanently transacting business on their native soil. But any naturalized American who hereafter takes up permanent residence abroad within five years after naturalization will have his certificate cancelled as fraudulent.

Another marked innovation in the new law makes it illegal for an alien who arrived here before reaching 18 to file his declaration simultaneously with his petition, upon becoming 21. Under this provision, thousands of flagrant frauds occurred, and the new law provides that two years must elapse between the declaration and petition in these cases; that in all cases the petitioner must have lived in the United States five years and be of age.

Now comes the time for filing the certificate of landing, containing the data on the immigrant station register—height, color of hair and eyes, peculiarities, etc.

clerks' offices these unofficial agents even came to blows over the possession of aliens applying for papers. Under the same roof that sheltered the sanctity of one court an "agent" conducted a school wherein aliens were taught to repeat, parrot-like, the answers to the questions to be directly asked by the clerk of the court. But under the new law the assistant District Attorney has access to the alien at all stages of the proceeding, and may even question the clerk if suspicious circumstances arise.

Must Now Speak English.

No immigrant unable to speak English may be naturalized, under the new law. Any one who fails to learn our language after remaining here the necessary five years remains a foreigner in law as well as in spirit; is either too deficient or too careless of his opportunities to make a good citizen. This requirement does not apply to the deaf and dumb, or to other aliens physically unable to speak English. It is waived also in the case of those who make homestead entries upon the public lands, where they may be too isolated to learn English. Taking up a homestead is good evidence of intention to reside here permanently.

The final oath by which the alien becomes a citizen must also be taken in open court, according to the new law. Formerly it was administered by the judge at odd times and without interrupting the routine of the court. But now all other proceedings must be stopped and this ceremony made impressive. One judge, on Staten Island, now requires that every one in the courtroom, including the spectators, rise while the oath is administered.

Another requirement reducing danger of fraud is that taking naturalization out of the hands of the lower courts. Under the former law, any court having a seal, a clerk and common-law jurisdiction might confer citizenship. Under the new law it can be granted only by the Federal circuit and district courts and the State courts of record having jurisdiction in actions involving an unlimited amount of money.

Certificate on Safety Paper.

An entirely new form of certificate on safety paper is now issued by Mr. Campbell's office to all courts with naturalization jurisdiction. The design is exactly uniform, and they are printed in duplicate, consecutively numbered and bound, like checks, in a book with stubs. The paper is of the same quality of linen as used for government bonds. It has the emblem of the Department of Commerce and Labor, conspicuously watermarked upon each sheet; also the letters "U.S.A.," repeated a number of times. It is given a peculiar pearl tint which would be difficult to reproduce, and an official inspector of the Division of Naturalization posted at the mill of the manufacturers keeps the employés under surveillance and sees that they do not allow one sheet to go astray. He sees also that it is properly shipped to Washington, where it is stored in one of the big Treasury vaults. Thence it is sent to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where the lettering is added from engraved plates having borders of complicated lathe work which only the most experienced engraver can counterfeit.

Stops the "Minor Children" Frauds.

The duplicate of each certificate given the new citizen after his oath-taking must be sent by the court clerk to Mr. Campbell's office, and the clerk keeps the stub containing the same number and data that appear on the certificate. These data include the age, height, complexion, color of eyes and hair and visible distinguishing marks of the new citizen. There is also the data concerning the birth, names and places of residence of minor children. This is added to provide against the old frauds which occurred under the claim of many foreigners that their fathers were naturalized when they (the children) were minors; for under the law, naturalization of an alien confers citizenship upon not only his wife, but his minor children. Children making such a claim of citizenship hereafter will in case of dispute have to have their claims corroborated on the duplicate of the father's certificate filed with the new Washington bureau.

There were almost as many distinct forms of naturalization certificates as there were naturalization courts under the former law; and there were over 5000 different courts. There was no central office to which these courts made returns of any kind. The Federal government took no interest in the matter, and there was no means of knowing even how many persons were naturalized in any month or any year.

Clerks Must Account for Spoiled Certificates.

Clerks must account to the Washington office for even spoiled certificates, under the new law. Every precaution is taken to keep the engraved forms as well as the blank paper out of the hands of unauthorized persons. Each certificate must not only compare favorably with the original description of the alien recorded on the register of the immigrant station, when he landed, but must contain such a description of himself and his family that it will be impossible for another to make use of it. Thus are the fraudulent "mills" which turned out bogus certificates put completely out of business. Counterfeit certificates have been sold in the past for from $15 upward, and two Italians who turned out such papers a few years ago were found to have a forged seal of the New York Federal court. Another man systematically obtained from the clerk of a court duplicates of his own certificate from which he erased his name with acids and then inserted another's.

[illegible] Fees.

One-half of all the court fees received for naturalization must now be turned into the Treasury through the Division of Naturalization. Under the former law each court authorized its own fee for naturalization in its own way, but under the new all fees must be uniform—$1 for filing a declaration; $2 for filing a petition, and $2 for the final order of the court. The last fee includes the cost of the certificate, if granted. Under the former law the fee for a certificate varied from nothing to $10.

The court clerks are now allowed to retain one-half of all fees, provided their income from this source does not exceed $3000 per year.

The great fileroom of the new office contains one solid wall of modern filing cabinets. As each alien makes his declaration a duplicate of the declaration is sent to this room and an index card is filed under the alien's name. This card contains the data necessary for his identification, and when the duplicates of his petition and certificate come in they will be noted on the same card. By this excellent index system access may be had to each alien's papers, giving a record of his case from the time of his declaration. As shown by the number of certificates being filed here, naturalization is now occurring at the rate of about 3000 per month, which would be 36,000 per year. Last month there were about 5000 new citizens.

Mr. Campbell is arranging to have all naturalized citizens classified by nationality. When this is done, we will know for the first time the proportions of the different foreign elements which are being amalgamated with our native body of voters.

The Hotel Clerk.

He Gives His Opinion of the Graceful Society Man.

By a Special Contributor.

"SHE certainly is mighty superior-lookin'," said the House Detective as the young woman in the evening gown cruised across the marble and gold lobby of the Hotel St. Reckless and tacked down Cockatoo Lane in the direction of the ladies' writing-rooms. "I'll bet it takes a pile of money to keep her in clothes."

"And at that they ain't able to keep her more'n two-thirds of the way in," said the Hotel Clerk. "Possibly five-eights, but I should say at a rough guess, two-thirds. Let's see, I can play the button-button game on the joints of the lady's spine as far down as 'doctor, lawyer, merchant'—no, she's out of sight now!"

"She suits my notion of a real girl, all right," continued the House Detective. "She moves along so high-spirited and independent-like. I like to see a girl that's got her mind above what she's wearin'."

"And in this case not only the mind, but several other vital organs, such as lungs," said the Hotel Clerk. "Well, it's a way they have in this town for a young woman to put on a skirt and a pair of silk suspenders and call herself full-rigged. The more they're dressed up the less they have on. Still, I admit that the young person who just passed here filled the eye in a satisfactory, not to say translucent manner. But have you been noticing who it is she's been strolling the avenue with these last few afternoons?"

"Who?" said the House Detective, "some good-lookin' young feller, I reckin?"

"Not so as to startle your gaze," said the Hotel Clerk. "The one I see her with most frequently here of late is the oldest boy of that rich bunch that came up from Newport the first of the month and took the big suite on the sixth floor."

"For the love of Mike—him!" exclaimed the House Detective. "You ain't meanin' that young bunny rabbit that wears them words-and-music clothes?"

"The same," expounded the Hotel Clerk. "This afternoon he had on a vest that was a popular-song hit if ever I saw the back covers of one. The orchestral arrangements were running up and down his legs in the stripes on his pants. All he needed was a paper cornycopia full of jig-sand and a few magic-lantern slides to be the complete musical interludes for between the acts."

"Now, what do you suppose a high-geared girl like that wants to trot double with that runt for?" queried the House Detective. "D'ye suppose she goes with him for charity, to kinder take the curse off?"

"I have a notion," said the Hotel Clerk, "that maybe it's for the satisfaction of hearing people say to each other when they pass: 'It certainly is a fine-looking couple—all but him. Such remarks, so I'm told, are very soothing to a young woman. Long ago the women beat the stage managers to the discovery that a contrasting background helps the stage setting a whole lot. I've always noticed that a leading lady who's depending largely upon her face and figure to fill the red plush reservation out in front is supported by some middle-aged females closely resembling a delegation of widows of the late Sitting Bull."

"But that there sawed-off locust—how kin she stand for him?" protested the House Detective. "If he'd stretch his galluses a little he could use his hip pockets for ear muffs. Why, Mr. McBean, he ain't much bigger'n a half portion of rice birds and he's got a face like a sudden relapse. What's more, if I'm a judge, he ain't no intellectual giant, not by several large volumes.

"Conceded," said the Hotel Clerk. "If you were a stranger seeing him for the first time you'd say to yourself: 'That can't be his customary face he's wearing; he's doing that to pay an election bet.' Then you'd take another look and you'd see it wasn't an intentional joke he was playin' on you. In regards to this here face of his, Nature was so economical toward him that there ain't enough of it to cover his teeth, and several of the front ones have been out in the climate so long they've got freckled, as you may have observed."

"Yes, I seen that," said the House Detective. "I was standing right next to him the other day when he smiled, and it put me in mind of somebody raisin' a pianner lid—a pianner that the keys ain't been dusted in quite some time."

"Only too true," said the Hotel Clerk. "But, even so, he seems to have no decided aversions to himself. When they was passing the hat to pick the proper person to do the lady-killing, he thinks he was the one that drew the black bean."

"Judgin' from outward signs, or have you been talkin' to the human stub pen?" inquired the House Detective.

"Oh, we had quite a talk," said the Hotel Clerk. "I opened the conversation by remarking that it was a fine day, and he replied in the affirmative by turning his head and looking steadily out of the window for some time, so as to confirm my assertion. And so one word led on to another, with me furnishing the words and him doing the leading by remaining politely silent."

"It's a wonder you didn't git sore and quit," said the House Detective.

"Not me," said the Hotel Clerk. "I wanted to fathom the workings of his mind. You may not know it, Larry, but I'm a psychologist. A psychologist is a person who goes to a place where he's pretty sure there ain't any brains and looks for them. Well, eventually, he began to thaw slightly around the eaves, and when I suggested a few bites of liquid refreshment, he was mine to command.

"We were just giving the order when I saw his father's secretary on the other side of the bar and I suggested that we might extend the scope of the testimonial so as to include him in its beneficent effects. But, no.

"'I couldn't think of it,' he said with much dignity, drawing himself up to his full height of five feet, two and a quarter. 'I couldn't think of it. He ain't my equal.'"

"No more he ain't," broke in the House Detective. "The secretary ain't his equal, and what's more, he never will be onlessen he should have a long spell of illness and then get kicked in the face a couple of times by a mule. That secretary's a decent-lookin' young feller. The nerve of the likes of him, talkin' that way!"

"Well, there're points to be credited for and against our young friend in the transfromation clothes," said the Hotel Clerk. "I don't think he's got more than two gallons and a half of gray checked matter sloshing around in his crock. If he wore anything bigger than a five and three-quarters hat he'd lose it every time he coughed. He's got slathers of money, or rather his paw has, but it's been my observation that money is often very careless in its choice of owners. But after all when it's a matter of displayin' the social graces—when it comes down to tripping over the light fantastic toe, as the saying is, and leading a butterfly life on a grubworm intellect—that small young person has got anybody that you and me know frazzled to a fringe. He was born to the part, and he was educated for it."

"Social graces—what's them?" asked the House Detective.

"I will explain," said the Hotel Clerk. "Considering this youth just as he stands, you wouldn't esteem him to be the whole cheese. But catch him threading the mazes of a cotillion up at Sherry's, or take part in one of those swell weddings where they have to have the reserves out, over at the Church of the Leavened Yeast on the avenue, and you would instantly recognize him as the oldest son of Supreme J. Camembert, of Switzerkase-on-Watercrackers, Stilton-by-Skipwitch, Cheshire-Rennet.

"Go out and lasso the smartest man in this country. Back him into the costume of an usher, start him up the middle aisle just ahead of the bridal couple with 4000 eyes glued on him and the organ giving off the deep notes from its stomach, and by the time he got to the chancel rail his neck would be setting his collar on fire and he'd be having a truckload of extra hands and feet and no place to leave 'em. But young Master Rollo from Newport would swim forward to the altar as cool and pleasant as a catfish going upstream. He'd enjoy it. He's been ushing for years for the best families.

"Or take me for example. Equip me with one of those self-rising opera hats and a suit hollowed out in front like a hansom cab. Insert me into a conspicuous place in a box at the Metropolitan. Have a bunch of Italian and French immigrants on the stage trying to render Massacre's immortal opera, "Medula Oblongata," in opposition to the conversational outbursts from all us society people in the Golden Horseshoe. Surround me with a bevy of prominent ladies with still more prominent shoulder blades. Let upwards of 2000 strangers level opera glasses on me. Would I be a care-free, graceful devil full of quilps and—and repartee? I wot not. Not by several thousand wots and some few kilowatts. I'd be deaf, dumb, partially blind, paralyzed on both sides and suffering from Arkansas ague. But this here laddy buck we've been discussing could sit there cool and collected and happy—actually happy—handing out a constant line of the conversational Florida water that passes for language in his set.

"I can tell with half an eye, Larry, that you know how to harness a horse, but could you or any other man you know, stroll debonairly into the [illegible]st of an afternoon tea in a undertaker's coat and a self-made tie, among a lot of fashionable ladies and a collection of Louie Kahn's furniture and do the Elbert Hubbard while holding in your two hands a high hat, a cane, a pair of dove-colored gloves, a cup of tea, a soda cracker, an olive, a spoon, a lump of sugar and seed cookie? Or would you signalize your advent by tripping yourself up and then stepping on your own prostrate form? And would you break something expensive and then retire with all the careless grace of a crab trying to back into a small-necked bottle? Answer, you would. But it would be just the same as pie for the little boy on the fifth floor."

"A man that's strong enough to grow hair on the back of his neck ain't got no time for such foolishness, anyway," said the House Detective disgustedly.

"Right you are," said the Hotel Clerk. "But somebody's got to do it or else there wouldn't be anything but feminine genders in the society column."

SECOND GENERATION OF STANDARD OIL MAGNATES.

By a Special Contributor.

WHO will make up the second generation of Standard Oil? John D. Rockefeller is not doing a stroke of business; he has not been near the Standard Oil offices for eight years. William Rockefeller is abroad for a year, so ill that he isn't even allowed to read the stock reports.

H. H. Rogers is so prostrated that he cannot hear a word about business. The courts have postponed the great $50,000,000 suit against the Standard Oil brought by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenough for the alleged misappropriation of a secret process for the refining of petroleum because Mr. Rogers is not in a physical condition to testify.

The great triumvirate which have controlled this most far-reaching of all trusts are preparing to step down and out for all time. Who shall succeed them? Who will make up the second generation of Standard Oil?

The answer is not far to seek. There are three sons already broken to harness. Their hands are already at the helm. Soon they will be master and mates of the great ship which their fathers have sailed before them.

John D. Rockefeller has one son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; William Rockefeller has two sons, William G. Rockefeller and Percy A. Rockefeller, the latter still a subordinate. And Henry H. Rogers, Sr., has one son, Henry H. Rogers, Jr.

These three are the second generation of Standard Oil.

Already John D. Rockefeller has given proof that he is about to step into his father's shoes. He has foregone most of his religious work—the hobby of his life—in order to be able to devote himself strictly to business. He has resigned from his famous Bible class, the apple of his eye. He has abated his settlement energies over in Tenth avenue, New York City. There is work in hand for this young man, who is some day to inherit $300,000,000, perhaps $500,000,000—who knows how much?

To this particular Rockefeller work will come hard. He has never been a strong man. He has never been able to yet grasp large things. He likes detail, trifles. He has not that ability to surround himself with subordinates who can take details off his shoulders, leaving himself for larger things. That is his father's strongest point.

But young Rockefeller's greatest burden is his poor health. There is just one thing in the world which money cannot buy for John D. Rockefeller, Jr.—a stomach. He has aggravated dyspepsia and nervous trouble, too. He must perforce diet carefully and give himself over to the ministrations of specialists that he may have strength to carry on the great plans his father has made for him. Next to business, he has to think more of what he can eat and what he cannot eat than anything else.

Up to now he has spent much time in Europe trying the various cures. On this side of the water he divides his leisure between his town house, No. 13 West Fifty-fourth street, New York, and his beautiful country place at Pocantico Hills, Westchester county, N. Y. In both places he leads the simple life.

This young Rockefeller intends staying up at Pocantico Hills until very late this autumn, trying hard to get himself in some sort of condition. Apparently he has not yet succeeded. He is very pale. The only exercise he is able to take is riding and driving. Every morning, when up in the country, he and his wife, who was Miss Abby Aldrich, daughter of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, take a drive over their estates. That is the sum total of young Mr. Rockefeller's pleasures, outside of books and religion. He never golfs. Sometimes he plays a little tennis listlessly. Yet on his grounds are the finest tennis courts that an expert could lay out or money buy.

These young Rockefellers seldom, if ever, entertain, either in town or country. They are not seen at the theater. The young man is devoted to his wife and child, and has no fondness for the society of any one else. In fact, he leads an old-fashioned life up in the quiet of Pocantico Hills, or even in his West Fifty-fourth-street home, just off Fifth avenue. He rises at 7 a.m., then takes a cold plunge, with light breakfast at 8 a.m. This meal consists of a little fruit and a cereal, nothing more. After a short rest, the horses are brought over to the house and he and young Mrs. Rockefeller take a short ride. Then it is business downtown for six hours, if he is able. Like the semi-invalid that he is, the young man must lie down after his day's work and take a rest.

His daily mail both at home and in the office is a tremendous undertaking. His reputation for piety and deep religious conviction brings him many appeals for help, and sometimes he gets a threat. None of these letters ever reach him, for a careful secretary sees that his master's thoughts are not unduly disturbed.

Downtown or at home, there is luncheon at 1 p.m. This is as simple a meal as breakfast, and all pastry and starchy foods are barred. If he gets home early enough, young Mr. Rockefeller likes to drive tandem or occasionally he may tool his coach, if he isn't too tired. His régime demands a walk in the late afternoon if he doesn't drive, and he usually makes this his time for inspecting whatever work is going on.

And here the contrast between himself and his hard-working cousin, William G. Rockefeller, is best to be seen. William deals with millions; John concerns himself with trifles.

There was quite a crop of apples on his estate this year. Mr. Rockefeller superintended the harvest himself, while ten Italians did the work. The windfalls—the unripe, inferior parts of the yield—were carefully packed and sent as gifts to the poor families in the neighborhood. The good, sound apples were as carefully placed in barrels and stored in the icehouse for the winter use of the Rockefellers.

An iron fence to keep out intruders has also busied the young man very much—this young man who will inherit hundreds of millions. Trespassers annoy him, so he has secured permission from Sheriff James Merritt of White Plains to make deputies of six of his men, and they patrol the place, night and day. They get $5 for an arrest, and if they land a poacher shooting squirrels on the estate they receive a bonus of $25. During the winter season when the ground is covered with snow this young Rockefeller attends to it that his men scatter apples and nuts about the woods, that the squirrels may not starve.

Dinner is at 7 p.m. There is little reading in the evening—the young man is too tired. He does not approve of cards. Bedtime comes at 10 p.m.

All the smaller things about the place are this young man's chief concern. He is satisfied immensely when he sees that he is getting his money's worth of iron fence or that nobody steals his apples.

He is busy now over plans for a swimming pool, soon to be completed, which is about 500 feet from the house. The ground has been staked out, and when finished, the pool will be one of the finest in the country. He doesn't care for golf at all, though the finest private links in the country are on the estate. His father often comes up there to play, and has even been seen going around with an umbrella over his head. He can do nine in 48, under the supervising eye of "Willie" Dun crack Englishman whom his son employs to keep links. But such amusing things do not inter most serious of all the Rockefellers.

Young Mr. Rockefeller has always been inte nervous. Though rather retiring, he is egotis Sometimes in the presence of friends he is apt boastful, especially when speaking of his father, wh he regards as the greatest man in the world.

Unlike his cousin William, John D. Rockefeller, has little method in his make-up, and not so much utive ability as one would naturally expect in the of such a father. There is an element of speculatio his nature which has several times proved disastr particularly when he attempted to bull United Leather several years ago.

A bull pool gleefully made this particular Rocke its victim. Its members came in at 13 and unlo nicely on young Mr. Rockefeller at 40. Since then father has called him off from further speculation.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is intensely religious, those irreverent youths who joined the famous cla scripture students in the hope of breaking into St ard Oil or something equally as good are just as far the goal of their hopes as ever. And those guil ones who have attempted what is vulgarly known "touch" have never tried again.

One of the saddest crosses the young millionaire to bear is the fact that he cannot discover which bers of his class are reporters. Half a dozen of cleverest newspaper men in New York belong and in each Sunday with the greatest reverence and the words as they fall from the young Croesus's They can sing with piety, pray with unction and to his long addresses with Christian fortitude. As reward, they are allowed to meet John D. Roc Sr., once a year and shake him by the hand. Li they get good space in the Monday morning pa

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has the same horror licity that John D. Rockefeller, Sr., has.

Picture him, then, pale, thin, attenuated, nervou peptic, isolated, mysterious, secrecy-loving, pub hating, this young man whose stomach alone may between him and the real headship of the greates on earth, the Standard Oil.

Be that as it may, there are directorships to must fill for his father—five in all. He represents D., Sr., in the American Linseed Company; the ware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad; the St Oil Company of New Jersey; the United States Corporation, and the University of Chicago. And nobody knows how many hundreds of millions he to manage and to inherit.

Of the other Rockefeller, son of the younger what?

He passed through Yale, quiet, unobtrusive, popular nor unpopular. Athletics had no intere him save as a spectator; social doings were a Neither Scroll and Key, nor Skull and Bones, nor Head, the three senior societies which are the every Yale man's hopes, favored the young man an election. Yet practically every multi-milli son who goes to Yale "makes" a senior society. Rockefeller was graduated with the class of '0 the middle of the class. He was 23 years old the

And from the shade of those immemorial New elms young William G. Rockefeller, Yale, '0 straight down to No. 26 Broadway and annou his father: "I want to be richer than Uncle John; to be worth a billion dollars!"—this young fellow was so quiet at Yale.

The Rockefeller passion for money had fired hi now that the opportunity was his. The college didn't care a snap for athletics or society or books or fraternities had struck his gait. His ambitions were not in making touchdowns or hitting out home runs or leading cotillions or being a little college god for a brief year—he wanted something more; he wanted to make himself the richest man in the world!

New York society would have welcomed the young millionaire-to-be with open arms, but this wasn't to be. The future head of the Standard Oil was all shaped to one purpose—the acquisition of business knowledge. It was work, work, work all the time with him. He permitted himself time, however, to seek out a wife, and he fittingly chose Miss Elsie Stillman, daughter of James Stillman, president of the National City Bank, better known as the "Rockefeller bank." They have been particularly happy. Young Mr. Rockefeller spends his spare time in the bosom of his home—a domestic family evening usually marks the close of his busy day. Theirs is a handsome house at No. 292 Madison avenue.

And now it is work all the time; work, for longer hours than the army of clerks who daily flock to No. 26 Broadway; work, intelligent, painstaking, unremitting work; work that is fast fitting his hands to take up the reins when the elder Rockefellers drop them; work, that some day will eventuate in giving him control of the most colossal fortune in the world.

Like H. H. Rogers, with whom he is more intimately associated at the office than with any of the Rockefellers, this future head of the Standard Oil is up with the birds. He is downtown with the earliest of the clerks. Punctuality and method are the watchwords in his own particular offices. In all the vast machinery of the great trust none works more smoothly than that branch over which young William G. Rockefeller presides. And even more—he is the only Rockefeller who is always accessible to the business man who seeks an interview on a legitimate errand.

It is literally impossible for any one who is not a close personal friend of John D. Rockefeller or of William Rockefeller or of H. H. Rogers to gain admittance to their respective offices. Six secretaries, as many more stenographers and a trio of negro office boys bar the way to John D. Rockefeller, Jr. William Rockefeller is just as unapproachable. The man who gets as far as the female Cerberus who guards the entrance to H. H. Rogers's business sanctuary is indeed lucky. Contrast this with the method in the office of the young man who will succeed them all, and perhaps be richer than all three of them together.

"Yes, Mr. Rockefeller is in," is the office boy's reply in business hours.

And in you go, if you have legitimate business. You are sure of a civil reception, and if you have a good idea you are listened to. The call ends when young Mr. Rockefeller knows all you have to tell him, though perhaps you know precious little of what Mr. Rockefeller thinks on the same subject.

When the Rockefellers took up Amalgamated, William G. Rockefeller was made secretary of the corporation which was destined for such a skyrockety career. His work in welding those vast mining interests into one money-making whole showed the real Rockefeller genius.

At present Mr. Rockefeller is especially devoting himself to the mining interests of his father. He is a director of the Amalgamated Copper Company, treasurer and trustee of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company; secretary, treasurer and director of the Butte and Boston Consolidated Mining Company, and he also has time to look after a great part of the details of his father's interest in more than a score of big corporations.

William Rockefeller once described himself as the "bad" Rockefeller in contrast to his elder brother, John D. Similarly the younger William is not conspicuous in church work or ostentatious in charity, as is his cousin John. But he thinks more of his citizenship than any of his Rockefeller relatives.

When he was summoned to serve on the grand jury a few years ago, he didn't shirk, as many rich men do. Instead he entered into the work with such enthusiasm that he was made foreman. The members of the District Attorney's staff were agreed that he made a first-class foreman. He injected method into the work, and expeditiousness so well that the jury's labors were always well in hand, and not in that slipshod condition that is often the despair of district attorneys.

Though he has almost a contempt for the frivolities of society, young Mr. Rockefeller has plenty of sporting blood now. He likes to hunt and fish. He drives [illegible] gaits, but he doesn't follow the anise-seed badly or [illegible] a coach. His exercise has method in it, too—he means to preserve his health by judicious outdoor life, the better to preserve his health for the great work that some day will be his.

It is very plain now, to those "in the know," that William G. Rockefeller has already the authority that comes of the future headship of Standard Oil if cousin John's health won't let him make good.

But there is another to be considered. One day in the [illegible] of 1901, there walked into the great main offices of the Standard Oil at No. 26 Broadway, a slight, short[illegible] [illegible]-looking fellow who was very pale and wore ey[illegible]

[illegible] stopped scratching; eyes looked up from pon[illegible] ledgers. There were several polite "good-mornin[illegible] which were most affably answered, and several negr[illegible] [illegible] all strove for the honor of taking the young man's hat and overcoat. Well enough they knew who he was—their future master, Henry Huddleston Rogers, son of H. H. Rogers, Sr., one of the master minds of the great trust in oil.

As for the thousands of men who had had business with Standard Oil for years, not one in ten thousand of them knew that there was a son of the millionaire—youngest child. He alone bore the family name, for the three daughters of Mr. Rogers were all married—Mrs. W. E. Benjamin, Mrs. Urban Broughton and Mrs. William R. Coe. As for the public, not one in a million knew that the multi-millionaire oil magnate had a son. But Standard Oil knew. It knew that some day he would be called upon to take up the labors of his father, to follow out his policies, to keep on building up his great structures of finance where he must leave off. And so Standard Oil took stock of the newcomer.

They found Mr. Rogers, Jr., a very modest sort of young fellow, fresh from college, without any exaggerated ideas of his own importance, which is quite a rare trait in younger graduates. He entered with Columbia '01, but did not graduate because he had decided to get married. Married students are not accepted at any big college, not even if they are the sons of millionaires.

And it was that very marriage that showed young Rogers to have some of the pluck and some of the determination of his resolute, iron-willed father. The girl he married was dowerless, but a beauty. Position she had, to be sure—Mrs. Rogers is the grand-daughter of Park Benjamin—and a wealth of vivacity and savoir faire, but she came to him dowerless.

They met twelve years ago in Fairhaven, Mass., where Mr. Rogers, Sr., has a baronial estate that cost him $1,000,000. And it was right in that prim little New England town where he was born and where he drove a grocer's cart that he began building his great fortune, today put down at $75,000,000.

"Harry," as his intimates call him, was only a boy of 16 then. Miss Mary Benjamin, then 17, was just budding into womanhood. Her mother was dead; she was under the chaperonage of Mrs. William Benjamin, her aunt by marriage, young Mr. Rogers' eldest sister. And it was a case of love at first sight, for this beardless boy and pretty girl. They yachted, fished, drove, rode together. Mr. Rogers soon learned the state of affairs, and when the time came, said the regulation "Bless you, my children!" and handed over $400,000 in Standard Oil certificates as a present for his son against his wedding day.

They were married on November 7, 1900, at the Benjamin home, No. 46 East Seventy-fourth street, New York, when the boy was just turned 21. They went abroad for a honeymoon, which lasted through the winter. Finally, when young Mr. Rogers brought back his bride he at once took his place in that great machine at No. 26 Broadway, eventually to assume his father's place when the time should come, as come it has, apparently, already.

Evidently he found business far more fun than society. True, he could give little dinners at his pretty country house in Tuxedo, and sometimes he entertained modestly at his town house, No. 26 East Fifty-seventh street, New York, but it wasn't the eternal round of dinner, dance, bridge and roulette, house party and yachting cruise of the average man of inherited wealth.

Rogers, Sr., noted what Rogers, Jr., was doing, and saw that all was well. So, step by step, the young man was conducted into great enterprises. He was made director in Amalgamated Copper to watch out for his father's interests first and last and all the time. He did wonderfully well. "The boy is going to make good," was the dictum of more than one magnate whose own son had chosen the butterfly life instead of the workaday one.

Then another directorship, and another, and another, until young Mr. Rogers represents his father and Standard Oil today in seven great enterprises—Amalgamated, the Atlantic Coast Electric Railway, the Atlas Track Company, the New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Company, the Richmond Light and Railroad Company, the Southfield Beach Railroad Company, and the Staten Island Midland Railway Company, of which last he is president, besides being treasurer in four others and vice-president of one.

Now, like most other young men of parts, Rogers, Jr., has a hobby. And that hobby is the military. All his business energies were expended quietly. The public knew nothing of the young man's many directorships. But in 1904 when H. H. Rogers, Jr., was unanimously elected a second lieutenant in Company A, of the Twelfth Regiment of the New York National Guard, then the fact that H. H. Rogers, Sr., had a son of real flesh and blood became publicly known.

The Twelfth New York is a peculiar organization. It is composed of all sorts and conditions of men, from millionaires to hod carriers. It is run on regular army lines. Popularity counts for nothing. To gain a commission a man must have education and executive ability. Young Rogers proved himself worthy of his election by passing a splendid technical examination in tactics and the art of war.

He wasn't permitted to be a junior subaltern long. A year later he was chosen by Company C to be its first lieutenant. He passed a second and harder examination with flying colors. Nor was this all. Early this year when Gov. Hughes ordered an eleventh company—Company L—to be added to the Twelfth Regiment, it was young Rogers who was detailed to take up the work. From nothing he evolved a large and prosperous company—so much for his training in doing things just as his father has done them.

Today he marches in the same battalion with another millionaire of his same stamp—Cornelius Vanderbilt, who [illegible]s Company F. That he is democratic, goes with[illegible] saying, or Lieut. Rogers could not have succeeded [illegible] such a regiment as the Twelfth. He is liked as much by the humblest private who dwells in a tenement as by those who are his financial equals.

The men come to him with their troubles. When a soldier loses his job, the first person he goes to is Capt. Rogers. And if the man is worthy he is pretty sure to find himself installed in some one of the many Rogers enterprises, doing just what the captain thinks he can do best.

Of the three of the second generation of Standard Oil, young Rogers is far the jolliest. He doesn't faint at the sight of a high ball, and he smokes gold-tipped cigarettes, which he carries in a handsome cigarette case. Neither of the Rockefellers smokes or drinks, but young Rogers doesn't care if he does. Further, he bothers little with the Rockefellers outside of business hours.

This youngest of the trio of Standard Oil heirs is the most outspoken of the three. He doesn't mind saying what he pleases when he pleases. He is not afraid of newspapers, and he doesn't run from the camera man.

"Why," he will tell you, "just let them take your picture, and they won't bother you again. But if you run—well, you know what they can do."

The Rockefellers always flee from a photographer as a timid child might from a jabberwock. And an interview for publication? Not for worlds! They take life too seriously. Rogers, Jr., has a good time while he may. He has a yacht and an automobile, and he likes to travel in both of them. But never when there's work to be done. And Mrs. Rogers always goes along.

The clubs see very little of young Rogers. He is member of the New York Seawanhaka Yacht Club, and of the Racquet, and of the Army and Navy. His name is up for the more exclusive Union Club, but as yet it has not been reached.

Society sees less of him than even the clubs. He is not in what is popularly dubbed the "400," but he has a coterie of his own, most of them belong to the set which has made Tuxedo what it is. He is not known at Newport.

Clothes do not appeal to this magnate-to-be. He dresses quietly; plainly, if you please. His ties are dark, his hats conventional. He abhors fancy waistcoats. In the evening he likes the informal dinner jacket in place of the more conventional swallowtail.

But then, you know, only the rich can afford to dress carelessly.

And such is the second generation of Standard Oil. There is a third generation, too, but the time is not yet when they must be called upon to begin where their grandfathers and fathers left off. Besides, who knows what the future holds in store for them?

KING AND KAISER.

SOME INCIDENTS SHOWING THEIR LONG STANDING FRIENDSHIP—EARLY ESCAPADES.

By a Special Contributor.

The approaching visit of the German Emperor to England furnishes, of course, in diplomatic and other circles much food for conjectural politics. Quite persistently it is pointed out that the Kaiser's visit at the Court of St. James will tend to mitigate much of King Edward's dislike for his imperial nephew. There surely is neither proof nor reason for this alleged dislike. While it is more than possible that the King of England, in natural accord with the British general sentiment, may look with apprehension upon the aggressive commercial policy and activity of Germany and her ruler, it is on the other hand a fact that Edward, the uncle, entertains a sincere affection for his nephew Wilhelm, an affection which has stood the test of time, for, it extends back to the younger days of the two monarchs.

More than a quarter of a century ago, in the early part of the eighties, when Edward VII was still Prince of Wales, and the present Emperor of Germany simply Prince Wilhelm of Prussia, the two princes were boon companions and, together with the late Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, were in Europe generally referred to as the "royal triumvirate," while the most intimate court and aristocratic circles nicknamed them—with more or less reason—the "naughty trio." Indeed, the English public, less restrained by laws in their freedom of speech than that of Germany or Austria, indicated their knowledge of Edward's frolics by indulging in a somewhat suggestive roundelay, whose refrain ran thus:

> "We tell naughty tales
> To our good Prince of Wales,
> But we take off our hat to the Queen."

Edward paid, then, frequent and prolonged visits to Vienna and Berlin, and, together with Prince Wilhelm and Crown Prince Rudolph—all three dressed like ordinary citizens—loved to mingle with the masses in their everyday life, enjoying keenly their droll humor. There are many stories abroad of the princes' varied experiences.

One day, while in Vienna, Edward and Wilhelm, plainly dressed, entered the so-called "Schwemme" of a restaurant, a room which corresponds somewhat with the bar-room of an American eating-house. Such a room, in Vienna, is exclusively used by servants, and also largely frequented by the Viennese "Fiakers," public coachmen famous for their skillful and fast driving, their good nature and their drollery. The two future rulers sat down, ordered their "stein," and forthwith engaged in conversation with a number of stout whips, who, of course, did not know the identity of their interrogators. After some talk on general Viennese topics, the princes purposely began to upbraid the coachmen for occupying with their carriages for "stands" the most attractive portions of the city.

"Why," said Prince Wilhelm, "if I were the Emperor I would not allow you fellows to occupy as stands for your vehicles the finest of Vienna."

One stout charioteer looked for a moment, with disgust stamped on his red face, at the speaker. Then he turned toward his brother coachmen.

"Say, boys," he called out loudly, "look at that fellow! He wants to be the Emperor! Why, if you were the Emperor," he continued, turning toward the futre ruler of Germany, "you certainly wouldn't set a river on fire!"

At another occasion the same two princes visited a "bier garten" in Berlin, where the table service was given by young and pretty waitresses. When they paid their bill, Prince Edward said to the handsome female who had waited on them: "My child, I shall give you this gold piece if you correctly, or nearly so, can guess my station in life."

The girl, a genuine "Berliner Kind," placed her arms akimbo and measured him with a scrutinizing glance.

"Well," she said, with a decided air, "judging by the flesh you carry, and by your general appearance, I should think you to be either a brewer or a butcher!"

Canadian Sealing Fleet.

A CLASS OF SEAMEN DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHER TYPES.

By a Special Contributor.

THE great penchant which the women of today have for fine furs, especially sealskin, is the cause of the maintenance of several fleets of boats on the Pacific Coast which are only used to carry the seal hunters into the Arctic Seas every year and to bring back the great or small cargoes of furs, depending on the season, back to civilization.

In a little arm of Victoria Harbor, on Vancouver Island, there lies at anchor every winter most of the schooners belonging to the Canadian sealing fleet which was fitted out by a company that was organized over half a century ago for the purpose of supplying Great Britain with sealskins. It is from this port that the fleet sails every summer, and here these vessels find a haven after the long voyage to and from the northern seas, past the most dangerous coast in the world, the west coast of Vancouver Island. Every year a few new boats are added, but the size of the fleet remains unchanged because the sea claims a few boats each year as its share of the spoils, and the additions have to be made by the company in order to keep even.

As the generations have passed the sailors of the sealing fleet have been replaced from time to time with new men and the sons of the old-timers, until a type of hardy men, equal to the famed fisherman of the Grand Banks, have been produced. These old salts are a class of seamen distinct from all other types, from the fact that they pass a considerable time on dry land loafing at the southern end of the voyage or gathering the seal pelts after the hunters have finished their part of the work, at the northern end, but the time that they do spend at sea is filled with terrible hardships, for they go north at the first break of spring and stay until winter is upon them with all its force.

Most of the fleet is made up of two-masted schooners, some of which have been going sealing for the past thirty years, but a few of the late additions have gasoline engines for auxiliary power, so that they can stay in the north a little longer and force their way through the first ice packs with the extra pelts that they gain from the late stay. But these power boats are a late thing and are looked down upon by the sealers of the old school. Within the past two seasons, real steam sealers have been added to the fleet with harpoon guns mounted on the forward deck, and they proved their value by bringing home twice the number of skins that any of their rivals were able to secure, but this did not help matters in the eyes of the old-timers, who scorned any new departure in their profession, and even refused to ship on the new-fangled "iron tubs," as they styled the new boats.

During the long winter months while the sealers are tied up in the "creek," as that part of Victoria Bay is called, the old salts that have no other ambition than to go sealing live on board, only going ashore between rains—and it rains most of the winter in Victoria—to get provisions. The young fellows spend their time ashore loafing about the saloons, or seeing their sweethearts, by night, and working in the companies' warehouses by day for extra spending money, for the big pay day that comes after every voyage does not last long on shore.

With the first sign of approaching summer the water front of the creek begins to bustle with activity. Salt by the wagonload is taken aboard each schooner. All the painted work is gone over with a new coat, and the small boats are caulked, as are the deck seams of the big schooners. All the rigging is gone over, and new sizings placed wherever they are needed. New sails are brought down from the sailmakers' lofts and stored in the lazaret against that time when they will be needed, after some heavy blow carries everything away.

After all these preliminaries have been completed the hunter arrives with his guns and ammunition, followed by a wagonload of chests and other trappings peculiar to his kind. These hunters are a class by themselves, half sailors, half trappers, whose business it is to bag the now thoroughly alert seals.

It used to be an easy matter to kill enough seals to load down the schooner by going out with a club and beating them to death during the season when the females were taking care of their young. But both the Canadian and American governments prohibit this slaughter of mothers and are enforcing the laws against the killing of seals at any other than certain months of the year, so that the hunter of today must arm himself accordingly.

The skippers figure on arriving at the Bering Straits about the time the ice breaks up, and leave Victoria accordingly. Some of the captains are so proud of their sailing record that they put off the leaving time to the latest date possible and then start for the north under full press of sail. But this method is discouraged by the owners of the company because several schooners that have tried this have failed to arrive at the northern end of the trip. Their crews have been brought back by other boats whose captains sighted their distress signals on some barren island on which they had been wrecked. Twice the late starters were never heard from at all.

The course to the Bering lies out through the Straits of Juan de Fuca and up the west coast of Vancouver Island. It was on this coast that the Valencia was lost. Here also the crews of several foreign ships have gone down to their death. The danger on the coast lies in the fact that there are no lighthouses on its many headlands, and in the contour of the shore line. There are as many fjords as on the coast of Norway, and the sea is 100 fathoms deep within fifty feet from shore, so that if a boat goes on the rocks it immediately slips off into deep water and sinks with all on board.

Every boat carries a crew of ten or twelve men and the speed with which they can handle the sail on these small craft is marvelous. They will slip down the straits carrying all sail when there is a furious storm raging outside, and hang onto every rag until it seems as if the very boat itself would be blown out of the water, then in a twinkling of an eye they will have every bit of light canvas furled and two reefs taken in the foresail, and the little boat would go plowing off into the northwest, going clear under every other sea.

Bering Straits are generally sighted while the sea is still full of ice, and from that time it is a game of hide-and-seek with the icebergs until late in the summer.

When the hunting grounds are reached the sailors take hunters and their guns ashore, and follow along to help in the skinning of the dead seals. Of late years much of the hunting is done at sea, and the dead seals are hauled aboard and skinned on deck, the carcass being thrown overboard after being stripped of certain portions of its blubber, seal oil being a by-product to which much attention is paid.

The sailing schooner has a hard time of it waiting for fair winds and dodging lea shores amid the gales of the Bering Sea, and it is a lucky crew that can get enough pelts to pay for their trip without doing a little poaching.

The poachers, however, have a hard time of it, for three governments, Russia, England, and the United States, maintain revenue cutters in the Bering to make things interesting for them. The poacher who is caught loses his boat and has a prison sentence staring him in the face.

In the last two years the seals on several of the hunting grounds have been almost annihilated out of season by Japanese poachers, who have suddenly taken a great interest in the business, but so many of them have been thrown into jail that they have become discouraged; not, however, until they had killed so many mother seals, leaving the young to die, that the hunting has become very poor in certain localities.

Despite the contempt in which the old sealer holds the modern steam sealer, the modern boats are those that are bringing home the cargoes. They do not leave Victoria till long after the last sailing vessel has gone, but they manage to be the first to poke their noses into the northern ocean and make straight for the favorite grounds. On their forward deck they carry a gun that is not only good for sealing at sea but can be used to shoot harpoons into any whale that may be encountered en route. If they find that the hunting is poor at one place they put on steam and go to some other far distant field without waiting for anything but not for it unless it is very thick.

These boats do not carry enough fuel to through an entire season, so a whale is a very sight, for they kill him and use his fat saving the coal for the return trip.

Some steam sealers have been known to trips in a season, but this is very rare and is couraged, since one of them hurried back after trip and stayed so long that it was crushed in and became a total loss.

As the season nears its close, the Canadian all the American sealers that spend the north, begin to get under way for the south. days, when seals were plentiful, this start home companied with great hilarity on the part of the but of late when the season's catch is so small trip must result in a loss for the company, they loath to leave because they are paid on a basis when the catch is above a certain figure always want to have as much spending money sible.

It is a long, hard trip down the Alaskan coast the early winter storms, and the little sealers lorn and weatherbeaten when at last they sight Flattery light and turn eastward up the Straits toria. There is always a crowd on the pier in the to welcome each newcomer and inquire into the of the trip.

After congratulations or condolences, which entirely upon the number of pelts secured, are crew set to work to get the valuable cargo into the house so as to be relieved of the responsibility as possible. Then the little vessels are hauled the middle of the creek where they are anch by side to await the approach of another the crews hurry to their homes or to the up to tell of the deeds of the far north and spend they have earned.

Through Desert Land.

A Woman's Account of a Happy and Wonderful Ride.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHY did you go?" "How did you go?" "What was there to see?" These are the questions that are asked sometimes here in the land of the sun—in this land by the sea—if one has aught to say of voyaging off in the desert, far from the lines of railways, and with no very definite object in view.

Then, in return, I ask (but silently, for there are those who never understand:) "Why do you question so foolishly?" And: "Have you no desire to taste of the life that lies away from asphalt, and rubber tires, and electric bells, and seats with four legs?" Then I shake my head regretfully and say (again to myself:) "Ah, well, there be those who never can be made to understand!"

Listen: let me tell you of one ride that I remember. A desert jaunt in no wise very different in its essentials from many another I have known in the good far days I rode there. This journey through desert-dried seas was only one of scores and scores of such land-voyaging—journeys that have become now—alas!—but a memory. But to relate it may serve to answer your "Why?" or "How?"—if so be it that you are one of those who do not understand.

"How did I go?" On the back of a good horse, assuredly; for whenever I could do so, I have always shirked the driver's responsibility, that I might, instead, enjoy those delights which are to be had only when one is in the saddle. To drive, is to constantly think of one's team and the road—a road that, perhaps, may not have been traveled once in five years, and now may be full of badger holes and boulders.

But in the saddle! One's horse is given his head, and one's eyes are free to roam whither they will—to go seeking out the little things that otherwise would surely be missed. To know the desert well—to be close friends with it, and finally to be taken into its confidences—one must of necessity either travel on foot or be in a saddle. If the distance one would journey is far, then the saddle! But to drive, one misses most of the game, and all of the little discoveries.

"Why did I go?" To turn another page of the great book of desert lore that lies open for all those to read who have the eyes wherewith to see.

"What was there to see?" you ask. Listen: Let me tell you.

We were three on this especial trip. Two of us on horses. The third driving the light wagon it was needful to have; for there were the rolls of blankets, the cooking outfit, horse feed, the cameras, shotguns and rifles, and the like.

Such a glorious day it was—that one, when we began our junketing! The valley was all purple and blue with morning mist, turning golden as the sun climbed higher, as we passed out through the gate and rode away from the ranch, and on—up the wide valley of the Humboldt. Across the dry lakes, over the mesa, through a narrow pass in a low-lying range of hills, and our road led us into the second valley after leaving the river—fertile, pleasant, peaceful Buena Vista. We came upon scattered ranches where fat cattle and blooded horses were in the fields, and thrifty fruit trees hung with many yellowing apples and pears, and plums, purpled in the sun.

A halt. In desert land one makes friends easily, and the fault is your own if you do not find hospitality at every threshold. That days's night halt was made late because of the hours we tarried there listening to an old miner's story of hard luck, and then—when he had thought himself overlooked by every kind fate—of finding the end of the rainbow. He had a family of bright-eyed children and a wife who was in reality the "pardner" he called her, and they were all so happy in having the fine little ranch (bought with the proceeds of the mine that we dubbed him "Father Rainbow," and wondered if life could have held anything better for him than this. Yet, he told us he hoped some day to have a house on "Fi'th Av-noo, N'York." For, see you, the [illegible] for the pick handle was in his palm again, and he was once more—during all his spare time—prospecting for gold.

All too soon we had to leave the green shade and fruit-scented air, and those cool porches where was brought us, from the spring-house, cold buttermilk that was to parched throats as never could have tasted the nectar of the gods. We rode away with our hands full of delicious "Bellflowers" and juicy "Bartletts," and—looking back—saw other hands waving us a friendly "bon voyage!" across those desert seas.

That night saw us encamped where the steam from hot springs surrounded us. Day-dawn, and we were away with our shotguns carried across the saddles; for we were to be riding through the high places haunted by sage chickens. Few people ever crossed these leafy trails; we had sent our own team around by the road along the foothills. Game there was always practically undisturbed. And though we shot only what we would be able to use for our camp provender, we enjoyed a sportsman's delight in flushing great flocks of birds that went with a whirr and a rush of strong wings to hillsides beyond. Quail, too, flew across our trail, or ran swiftly up the slopes. On the ridge, less than a mile away, we saw three deer looking down on us as we laboriously climbed upward; but—taking fright—they went like a wave over the hills and melted into the gray distance. All about us were the late wild flowers that seek the heights. A hundred kinds; and growing more and more plentiful as we rode forward. Up and down deep cañons we went, where there was no sign of road or trail; down a long and rough one where the walls of one side lay still in deep shadow; and at last where it opened to the plain, we joined our slow-moving team which, in our hours up aloft, we had quite forgotten. Up and down another ridge, and we came upon a Shoshone village tucked so out of sight that it was startling to discover our brown brothers living there. Far away from the railroad, and the towns that so soon teach them the white man's ways, they were almost aboriginal in dress and customs, and seemed a different clan. Theirs was the dress of those who lived in the land when the white invader first found his way there. Still were they eating dried seeds and the things their forebears had taught them; still they lived in huts wattled with rabbit brush and willows. None of them spoke any English; few of them looked, even remotely, friendly. We gave to one of their number—an old man, weather-furrowed of face and crooked-limbed, a package of cigarette papers and a sack of tobacco. His grunt of acceptance was hardly the sign of graciousness. We rode on.

Winding in and out of rifts in the hills, through mountain clefts, over divides where the wind crooned, we rode and rode; through groves of cottonwoods tucked away in the cañons, where the leaves fell upon us as we passed beneath; and the scarlet and yellow of the buffalo berries shone through the green growing along the creeks. The air was clear, and cooled by the winds blowing on the heights, over which slowly moved clouds of piled-up whiteness. There peace was found, and rest.

There were more days like these, varying but little. Then camp was made beside a stream running the length of a cañon which was part of a ranch where we found a quartette of Mexicans in charge. No one else around for miles and miles! The old house was falling to pieces, and we refused their proffer of shelter; instead spreading our blankets on the sweet, fresh-cut hay in the barn. But we gladly gathered with them when they brought out of the kitchen (that smelt of garlic and onions, and had strings of "jerky" and chiles hanging on the wall) the things that were so tempting and savory, the carne, and corn, and frijoles, and various dishes of Mexican cookery; ripe red tomatoes, lettuce fresh from the garden; bread, white and sweet, and just out of the oven; coffee, strong, hot, and without milk; fresh meat off the coals; and fruit just picked from the trees! What would you better, or more?

Then, when supper was over, and the table cleared of its dishes, lying back on a couch of furs arranged for my comfort (for what Mexican is ever unmindful of the courtesy due a woman?) I listened to songs, and to stories.

Songs that have never been written, learned from the lips of another; songs that are fast disappearing, crowded out by the new education. Now—years after—the lilt of the music comes back and I hear again, in fancy, the voices of those dark-skinned men singing to us there, away off in the tumble-down ranch house of the desert mountains. All around us was the desert's night silence; and within, the songs and the stories—stories of wild days back in rough districts; of deeds of daring, coupled with bits of outlawry; of reckless, daredevil riding, and raiding; tales told in broken English, mixed with the soft, sibilant language of Spain.

The evening winds came up from the sage-scented lowlands, across the alfalfa fields and the orchard, and in at the open windows of the smoke-blackened room, blowing the flickering candle light alternately into brightness and semi-oblivion. The candle, thrust into the neck of a black bottle for support, stood on the bare boards of the rough table, around which, in shadowy corners, were scattered the men whose dark-skinned faces showed dimly in the glow of the fickle flame. The wind-blown candle light in its vagaries seemed to make strange, grotesque expressions come and go on the half-hidden faces of Mateo, and black-bearded Manuel, and little Vitoriano, and the Big Basilio—Basilio of the sweet tenor voice, singing the simpatica songs of Spain. Our eyelids, by and by, grew heavy, and, lulled by the melody, as we listened, we went drifting—drifting——

Then some one sprang up to say that the hour was late, and there was mucho trabajo to be done on the morrow; so, with a "buenas noches" all around, we left them and went down to our beds in the barn loft on the fresh-stacked alfalfa, where we dreamed of the Alhambra, and the dark eyes of Spain, and those things they have lent to the new world since the days of Cortez. So we drifted into sleep, in our clover-sweet beds, hearing the horses in the stalls beneath us steadily grinding their hay.

Then came a day of climbing the heights for a shot at a deer; but though no deer was sighted that day, it was one so full of wonderful discoveries of the little world underfoot for the mountain climber, that I forgot my quest, and was long finding out how heavy my rifle had become lying across my shoulder. We sat by a spring a full hour watching an "ant lion" lie in wait for unwary ants, and drag them down to his dungeon. We found a place where bees had hidden their stores—and so became their robbers. We watched a herd of antelope drift over the plain far, far beneath us—looking like balls of thistledown carried along by the wind. We found arrow points where, in the old days, the untamed red man had fashioned them when he was making war on his white brother. We watched a wild stallion lead his little harem warily up and down hills over a well-worn trail to the spring we had just left; and we saw him—when he scented our recent presence there—take fright, and, without waiting to drink, go racing off and away with his little band at his heels to his grazing-place and—to safety! We found an abandoned mining claim (scarcely more than a prospect,) yet with enough work done on it to show that some one, some time, had hoped and worked, and failed, and lost heart, as so many before him have done. The broken rock was red-rusted with age, nor had the place been visited for many a year. How strong he must have been when climbing the mountains in the beginning! How wearily his feet must have dragged when he turned, and went down, and away! The old, old story of the old prospector!

We shot at a coyote, and—missed him; and we saw a mother coyote carry a jack rabbit to her young ones. We saw the sun go down the slanting sky; and then we went down to camp. We had seen no deer, though many tracks; and the track of a mountain sheep we had seen more than once. Though we had nothing to show for our day, yet it seemed to have been full and satisfying.

We moved camp; went over to another mountain; went till we came to a village where, the night we were encamped there, we went to see "Called Back" played at the town hall—presented by amateurs! How heartily we laughed—behind sober faces.

Another day, and we fell in with a "cattle outfit"—cowboys driving beef cattle to the railroad; and we kept pace with them behind the lowing herds. It was a long drive, that day, to water; but at nightfall we reached a cañada having a stream that tumbled and shouted over the boulders filling its bed, and there we spread out our camp outfit, and built our fires. After the stock had been watered, and we had our suppers—our own supplies reinforced by roast ribs, hot and juicy from the juniper coals at the cowboys' camp—we foregathered about a huge brush fire and listened to frontier stories, while the stars came out in a sky all purple with dark. Under the willows and buck brush, where moss and water cress grew, the springs gurgled and sang. Then to sleep, under a thin thread of a moon.

Morning! Saddle, mount, and away! Again across plains of shifting sands and leprous spots of alkali, losing our trail and ourselves after long hours of straying; then, when night fell, to halt at last at the "Mud Hole," that gruesome pool of stygian blackness (or, so it seemed to us that night under a clouded sky;) and on the badger-bored, dust-harried clearing about the spring, spread our blankets for sleep. Did we sleep? I fear not. Whirlwinds of black dust, and the troops of wild horses that came down to drink, were not of those things that encourage sweet slumbers. In the gray, early dawn we harnessed and saddled and were off. That day we reached the place of our quest—the wonderful cañon of Titanic rocks we had traveled so many miles to see. Then we had gone out across desert land with a purpose? To be sure! But the days of our voyaging had been so full of ever-changing delights, interspersed with the mishaps and the little anxieties that fall to the share of all who go through those wastes (but which are really so trifling,) that we forgot for the greater part of the time he had any other object in view than just to go drifting—drifting day after day; glad because we were living.

We had reined in our horses on the high ridge of a bald mountain, where the wild winds buffeted our clothing, and we held to our hats with both hands as we sat there among trees that grew slantwise—trees that from long bowing their heads to the storms, now leaned like old and bowed men.

We turned to face the four winds—for they seemed all blowing at once—and looked at the world beneath, and about us, and at still other mountains far off, yet hemming us in, lying fold upon fold; gray here, and blue in the distance, the highest peaks hooded with the first snowfall of the coming winter. At our feet the trail led down a long cañon filled with cottonwoods and quaking aspens whose turning leaves shivered and shuddered in the chill autumn wind that swept down the ravine, bringing tidings of the approaching snow time. Nature was announcing her "fall opening," and the trees were arrayed in every imaginable shade of crimson, and yellow, and brown. Some leaves wore small spots of red, others great splotches of color. But none went unadorned. Only the junipers, up near the snow line, still were attired in conventional green, quite unconcerned at the frivolous ones gone mad in the riot of magnificent colors. At our left, walled by vertical rocks about its uttermost rim, lay Table Mountain, blue in the sunshine, in the shadows shading to purple. Close-walled with granite and porphyry varying from 100 to 300 feet high, through which but three or four openings gave entrance to the level, grass-covered plateau where—daily—hundreds of wild horses came to graze till deep snows drove them to the valley below. In that rock wall—an impregnable fortress—now and then some cowboy riding hard after a fast-running herd of such horses, would catch an instant's glimpse of rare little black foxes.

The slant of the afternoon's chill sun was in our faces when we came suddenly upon the cañon of the Titans. Heavens! what a panorama! Immense, imposing, they rose in huge masses from the point of a sage-covered hill projecting—like a promontory—into the wide cañon. Truly had they been sawn in some "mills of the gods," for no haphazard work of chance could have made them so true. From eighteen inches to two feet through, these dark reddish-brown monoliths seemed to have been squared, and sawed, and planed as true as though run through a mill. Some of them thirty feet high—some higher—some not over ten; side by side, like posts, standing on end, they covered acres innumerable. Here the rocks stood in perpendicular masses, like timbers suddenly turned to stone; over there, but a short distance away, hundreds were lying horizontally, as if piled there by giants who would use them in building their castles. As before the Giant's Causeway, and the Devil's Post Pile, and others of Nature's similar vagaries, one stands and wonders, awed into silence. We lingered, and looked, and studied them, and speculated; we stared up to their tops till our necks ached. We climbed to the opposite side of the cañon, and gazed down on them from that height. We went up the cañon to get a long vista. They stretched away like a line of——

Ah, but here am I telling you of the wonderful monoliths in the far-away cañon of the Titans! Instead, you should see them for yourself. I was only going to tell you about those days when I drifted hither and thither about desert land; drifted deliciously through care-free days. Are not such days—such rides—worth while? Worth my while, and yours?

HOW ALEXANDER BEAKES RECOVERED HIS FATHER'S GOLD.

By a Special Contributor.

BETWEEN the rocky road and the gushing mountain creek, Judith stood, her steamer trunk at her feet, and gazed into the wilderness. The wind moved in the surrounding pines, droning through the needles, and the creek tinkled; but, except for wind and water, an absolute silence rested over the almost primeval lands. Hill shadows were creeping down over rocks, crags and pine woods into the narrow gulch, and Judith, with a growing fear upon her, vainly looked for smoke of cabin or cottage, vainly listened for mine whistle, or horse hoofs on the road.

On the timbered mountain to her left the forest at one place fell away, exposing a bald spur, rocky and desolate. There, as she looked, a horse and man trailed eastward, and at sight of a human being Judith drew her breath with almost a sob of relief. Snatching the long veil from her hat, she shook it with frantic vehemence; then, when man and horse had almost reentered the wood, she screamed. The moving figures stopped, and stood for some time, while Judith waved. Finally a distant yodel came echoing down, the man turned, and Judith sank on her trunk.

It was a bewildering picture that met the mountaineer's sight as he came out of the pines, leading a limping horse behind him. A slim, blond girl, sitting on a steamer trunk in a mountain wilderness.

"Am I dreaming?" he asked, stopping by the creek and staring.

"Oh, I'm in such a predicament!" Judith cried, running to the edge of the water. "Come at once; you must help me. You——" she hesitated, and her voice lost some of its confidence—"do you know Mr. Wardwell of Wild Rose?"

"I'm a stranger here; Alex Beakes, quite at your service, of course." The young man bared his head and waded the creek. From under his corduroy coat peeped out the holster of a heavy revolver, and a rifle swung at his saddle bow, together with a satchel securely lashed in place there. His eyes gazed in frank astonishment, and, unable to solve the mystery, he ran his slim hand through his hair.

"I would think you one of the summer folk from above," he ventured, "but you didn't carry that trunk here yourself?"

"I've been waiting for hours and hours," Judith said; "waiting for Jimmie to come after me. He's forgotten all about me. Oh, won't I——!" She did not finish her sentence, but her eyes threatened. "My cousin, James Wardwell, has a lodge below here," she explained, pointing to the left, where a rain-worn by-road followed the creek. "This here," she waved her arm along the highway, "is the road from Elktown to Black Valley, and somewhere west, beyond that bald peak, is a colony of city people."

"Yes, I know," Beakes said; "the Ameahahas. You came over in the stage from Elktown, then?"

"Yes, down that awful mountain." She pointed again where the road ran, coiling link above link, up All-Over Hill. "Cousin Jim was to meet me here at the cross-roads and take me down in his auto; and, when we found no one waiting, the driver wanted to turn to Wild Rose; that's Jim's lodge. But it would have made him late at Black Valley, so I insisted on being left here. I didn't know, though——" her voice caught pathetically ——"that I would be alone for three mortal hours. I can't fancy what is wrong."

Alexander Beakes puckered his lips into a noiseless whistle, and thoughtfully frowned at his feet. "I'll have to take you down," he said with noticeable reluctance. "How far is it?"

"Three or four miles, I believe," Judith answered. "If it takes you out of your way, you might stay over night with us. My trunk is light; you can balance it on the saddle."

Beakes flushed and grew embarrassed. "The horse is lame," he muttered; "it slipped on a loose stone. Can't your cousin come up after supper? Let me help you across the creek, or we won't get there before dark."

Judith drew back. "I merely waited in order to protect my trunk," she said, while her cheeks grew nervously pink. "I'm afraid I have no other need for your services."

Beakes shrugged his shoulders and looked about helplessly. "I can't let you go down alone," he returned. "I'll take the trunk, of course, though it's quite a load for my horse. I wanted to keep him as fresh as possible."

"You know best," Judith responded wearily; "I don't wish to impose."

"Nor I to be ungracious," he muttered; "fact is, my bag's full of ore—quite heavy—but the horse can manage all right." He looked about again, searchingly; stared long at the silent mountain across which he had been trailing; and then, with an earnestness wholly unaccountable, he unstrapped his black-leather satchel from the horn, and lashed it securely in the saddle.

Decision apparently lightened his mood, for he turned with a pleasant smile. "Light as a feather," he said, swinging the trunk to his shoulder; "I could carry it down." He waded the creek, and, returning, placed boulders at convenient intervals for stepping-stones.

"Better let me take your handbag," he suggested. "We must strike a pretty good gait, or dark'll catch us this side of Venusburg."

"Wild Rose," she corrected.

He laid the trunk above the leather satchel and the horn of the saddle, and stood beside it, keeping the balance with one hand. "You'll have to lead the broncho, I'm afraid," he said "And so, we're off! Quite a picturesque group, are we not? Suddenly I feel the spirit of romance."

She glanced back with tired but somewhat surprised eyes, meeting his own frank, laughing ones. "I don't," she returned. "I'm merely grateful to you, and angry at my cousin."

"There must have been a misunderstanding. No man in his senses would deliberately leave a girl alone, here in the wilderness, for three hours. You are sure he expected you today? Not yesterday, or tomorrow?"

"Everything was arranged last winter, even to the date of my leaving. We've written repeatedly since, and I telegraphed when I left home and again when I left Denver, saying I would be here Thursday. The stage driver put the messages in a mailbox back at the foot of the hill."

"No mail in it?" Alex inquired.

"Oh, I never thought to look. But it doesn't matter now."

"You are sure he is here?"

"Of course. They come up every June—have, for years—and stay until Steptember. They wrote me when they left Denver, a month ago."

"He has a touring car?" Alex asked, studying the road. "I see fresh tracks, certainly, but only one way."

Judith was too tired and cross to reply. They went on in silence, broken now and then by gossip from Alex and monosyllables in return; yet whenever the girl happened to look back, she noticed that he seemed absorbed in studying the darkening hills.

"Getting chilly?" he suddenly inquired, as the wind grew somewhat stronger, streaming down the gulch and through the pines with a sharp smack of snow in its breath.

Judith shook her head. Indeed, the dry air was invigorating her like a tonic, and her step grew lighter. "No," she said over her shoulder, "quite the reverse. This is fine, really; like a rich wine. I suppose," she continued, "this country has been settled a long time, despite its desolate look?"

"Well, not exactly settled; peopled, however, for half a century; and of course, full of legends. Though I'm almost a stranger, I know a good many. Take that hill there;" he pointed back toward the mountain where Judith first had perceived him; "it's called Guerrilla Peak."

"Yes, most names have a history," she responded understandingly. "Why Guerrilla, though?"

"Because of a half-dozen guerrillas who made their headquarters there in sixty-three. They ran from Missouri, and, once out here, became mere road agents. Old Chivington, of Sand Creek fame, ended their story, I believe; but one of them, before he died, told a soldier a secret which is still alive in a fragmentary state; no less a matter than the cache of the loot—the hiding place of their stolen gold dust, you know. Guerrilla Peak has been gophered by people hunting that mythical fortune."

"Then the soldier didn't find it?" Judith politely inquired.

"He went out at Sand Creek—Ute Arrow—but the legend has it that he, too, passed the secret on to his son. The latter never profited, though, for a good reason; he degenerated into just another such a chap as the guerrilla; went to the bad, killed an unusual number of better men, and was finally driven out of the country altogether, and went to Argentine. You've doubtless heard of Little Paradise? That's the fellow, and, by the way, the hills are whispering that he's back again. The odd part of the story is that my father was one of the heaviest losers to the original road agents; he was held up back there in Bughouse Gulch, in the fall of sixty-three, and robbed of quite a tidy fortune he'd dug out of a pocket in Park county."

"What a shame!" Judith exclaimed. "You father was a miner, then?"

"At that time. There, see!" Alex exclaimed, suddenly breaking off in his gossip; "that must be Wild Rose."

Turning a sharp bend of the creek, they had entered into a wide, grassy flat, at the far end of which a group of buildings stood in the gathering dusk.

"Yes, of course!" Judith cried with immense relief. "But it doesn't seem to be living," she said in a moment. "There's no smoke and no light. And aren't the doors and windows shut?"

"I was thinking it strange," Alex replied. "Are there any other lodges near by, do you know? Has your cousin a neighbor?"

"No, no one. He came here purposely, to be quite cut off from Ameahaha. Not even a rancher or miner lives near." Disquietness was in her voice, and she turned with troubled eyes. "Could anything happen?"

"I'll tell you what has happened," Alex said cheerily. "This road is tracked but one way; your intelligent relatives have mixed their dates. It's no uncommon occurrence, you know. Not expecting you today, they are now in Ameahaha, dining with some cheerful idiot. All you have to do is to take possession and wait."

Reaching the silent lodge in its bower of greenery, Alex thumped up the rustic veranda and loudly rapped on the closed door. No dog barked; everything was quiet and dismal in the dusk.

"Oh, dear!" Judith wailed, "they're gone!"

"To dinner somewhere," Alex finished. "Not the slightest cause to worry, really. It's annoying, of course, but doubtless there's plenty to eat about. Won't you ask me to supper? And I'll stay till your people return."

"But we're locked out!" Judith's voice bordered on the tragic. "If I don't—Jim—oh, the idiot!" And then she suddenly trilled into low laughter, to which Alex roared an accompaniment. "But," she continued, suddenly grave again, "how can we get in?"

"This way." Alex set a shoulder to the door, and the lock snapped. "Serve 'em right for forgetting you," he said from the hall. "What in the world would you have done, if I hadn't found you? I'd like to punch his face!"

"So would I," Judith laughed, as she peeped into the dusk. "There's a hanging lamp, see? Your match glitters on it. Oh, what a love of a hall!" She stared in admiration.

"Yes, rather neat. Here's the living-room; by it's comfortable, too. Logs in the fireplace, kindling derneath, everything ready to be touched lighted the reading lamps, and then, bending started a fire laughing in the wide hearth. "I'll your trunk, and we'll skirmish for the grub, eh?"

Judith nodded. She was not tired now; reaching ter was a tonic to her. She tossed her hat and a window seat, threw her gloves and jacket on a and took possession of an arm chair.

"Do you know," she said, hearing Alex behind "this is far pleasanter than I dared hope from their scription. There are my cousins, by the way, frown down on us." She pointed to the mantel.

"Glad their faces are here, anyhow," Alex "I'll put your trunk in the corner for the present. valise," he continued, handing it to her. "Now, really welcome——?"

She gave him her hand. "Do you doubt it?"

"No," he said, considering her eyes, "no, I don't. stay with pleasure until your people come; then I'll off."

"Oh, but——" she hospitably began.

"I should be in Elktown tonight. Now, I'll take horse around and find a bit of feed for him, while can be foraging a little provender for us?"

"I'm as hungry as I should be," Judith said. that hand-lamp, please, and put the others out. to the back door when you get through with the

She found the almost urban kitchen—"a dove kitchen"—without trouble, and lighted the stove. When Alex tapped on the rear door, a little ble was spread with cold victuals.

"Nothing to feed the horse but gasoline and grease," he said, "so I took him farther down and eted him in the grass." He entered, bent sideways der the weight of his satchel. He looked about moment, studying, and then laid his burden in the try, shutting the door on it. "Just in case of acci he explained. "It's rather valuable."

Judith sprang up. "Jim and Alice!" she cried. she did not move toward the door.

Alex swallowed rapidly. "Of course," he said, forced composure. "But, if not——!" He reached revolver at a jump, and thrust it under his coat. right," he called, answering the renewed kno "Don't be frightened," he said over his shoulder girl. "I hear that Little Paradise is in the distric the rumor's true, he's bound to be haunting this Gu Peak neighborhood, hunting the gold."

He opened the door and stood shading his eyes peering. "Hello," he said; "who is it? W wanted?"

"We're paralyzed at botherin' you," said a soft ring southern voice; "an' draggin' yo' from table a-way, too. Good-evenin' to you, ma'am. I was tellin' yo' husban'——"

"Yes," Alex replied, quite at ease. "Jim War What can I do for you? Won't you come in?"

Judith drew back trembling, and stood in bitt decision and dismay. Listening to the curt and answers, her mind at the same time reverted first sight of Beakes; and she remembered his gait among the hillside pines, far from a road, his terious satchel hidden in the pantry, his reluct accompany her.

"Got a stranger visiting you tonight?" she hea crisp western voice demand.

"No, no one at all. Why?"

"Don't know. Lame horse, though—and a box, or somethin' on his saddle—him walking?"

"I don't remember any one like that."

"Fact of the matter is, Mr. Wardwell," said a voice, "we're Black Valley people. I don't suppo that you know me? Kedge, sir; Theophilus Ke

"No, thanks; we'll be going. We trailed our dark; now we've got to just trust to luck. Good-

Her flesh crawled with him, and she came out bareheaded into the da But there she turned, looking back, and saw hurt reproach in his eyes. He did not draw away the open door, but he folded his arms, and tightened.

"He's an outlaw," the leader explained. "You happen to see him? What'd he look like?"

"Yes, I—that is, I believe I did." Her voice and she came farther into the night. "A young much like—this—like Mr. Wardwell. What will to him if you catch him?"

"Well, I reckon he'll go out," the leader dang snarled. "You've seen him? Where? When?"

"At the cross-roads below here," Judith answered a rush, her words following a sudden change of "two hours ago. He went up—up—up——"

"All-Over Hill! Might 'a' known it! But the lame. We'll circle it, boys—catch him before hit Elktown. Arkansaw, and you, Foucher, foll road." Two men wheeled their horses, and wakened the galloping echoes.

"What was he carrying?" was demanded. "Something in the saddle, carefully—what was it?"

"A black valise. He hid—did seem very careful of it. He put it—had it fastened to the saddle bow. It contained stolen money?"

"It did so. Thanks, ma'am. Your wife's a peach, Wardwell. Hike, Sawtooth!"

The two remaining men turned their horses, and for an instant Judith stood doubtfully. "Wait!" she called, almost hysterically, "I haven't told you everything!" Then, with one backward glance at the silent man in the doorway, "Run!" she whispered; "oh, run! I must tell them!"

She saw that Alex disappeared into the house, shutting the kitchen door. The two horsemen returned, their animals dancing at the sudden check.

"Tell me exactly what he has done," she said breathlessly. "In return, I'll tell you where to find him."

"Held up the Black Valley Bank," the leader jerked out. "Where is he? In the barn?"

"Is the bank's money in that satchel? Do you know his name?"

"He's Little Paradise. Yes, bank money. That's what we're after; recovery of the loot. Quick, now!"

"I know where he is," she gasped, "and I know where the money is—he has hidden it. If you get the money—isn't that all you want? Won't you let him go? I'll promise that he—that he'll reform."

The second rider guffawed.

"Shut up!" ordered the other. "Yes, ma'am, give us the satchel, and we'll overlook the rest. He didn't hurt anybody."

"It's here," she said; and led the way to the closed door. The men dismounted and came stumbling after her. Her heart tripped, but she was light with elation. The parley had given Alex plenty of time to make his escape; and if he had but deserted the evil money, she would never reproach herself for shielding him. "He's the man you called Wardwell. He's not all bad," she added, to herself.

"No, ma'am," said the stranger; "nobody is."

Judith opened the door, but stood on the threshold with a cry of dismay. Alex sat in his chair by the table rolling a cigarette. His rifle and revolver both hung out of reach on the peg. An arm crashed down on Judith's shoulder, and a blue-steel barrel glinted past her face.

"Hands up," the man behind her ordered.

"Don't worry," Alex said unruffled; "I'm not going to do anything rash. Come in. Miss Wardwell has confessed that I am a thief?" He looked at her with a smile. "I don't blame you. You were really quite nice about it. I shan't forget. As for the money, you pirate, find it if you can!"

The two men entered, and Judith turned to the leader—small, nervous and brown—and held out her hands, almost imploringly.

"Your promise!" she gasped. "The money is in the pantry!"

The man did not move, though his eyes greedily snapped. "Sawtooth," he ordered, "stand here beside this fellow; if he winks, blow his head open."

"Sawtooth" was huge and unwieldy, and he lumbered across the room to his post with a porcine grunt. Alex guarded, the little man sprang to the pantry with fluttering excitement, tore open the door, and pawed into the contents

"On the floor," Judith directed; "in a black satchel, Mr. Kedge."

He groveled. "'Tain't!" he cried, backing out like a dog and showing a canine face, snarling and dangerous. "He cached it somewhere while we gassed outside."

Alex struck a match for his cigarette. "Of course," he said. "Think I'm a fool?"

"Blame big one," Sawtooth grated, his pig eyes maliciously yellow. "In just about three, you go out!"

"Dead right!" the other supplemented, twirling his revolver under the captive's nose. "Quick, where is it?"

Judith suppressed a scream. "Don't hurt him!" she said; and, not curbing the instinctive action, she sprang before Alex.

The leader laughed shortly, with an angry, unmirthful leer. "Don't interfere," he warned. "The boys'll lynch this fellow anyhow, but we want the money!"

"The beast is right, Miss Wardwell," Alex said softly. "You can do no good now, but only harm to yourself. So please don't complicate matters."

"The dust?" Sawtooth snapped; and his trigger finger twitched.

Alex changed countenance a trifle. "I want to bargain," he said. "Wait! If I give up the money, will you fellows take horse and leave me here—unhurt?"

"Yes," they eagerly cried together. "Where is it?"

"But they had already promised me that," Judith murmured. "I wouldn't have—have betrayed you, but for that."

Alex glowed; a red blush tingled his forehead, and he beamed upon the threatening revolvers in rather ridiculous ecstasy. "In the living-room," he stuttered; "oh, I'm so glad of that!—under the divan in the Turkish corner—I'm so very glad!"

"Come and show me," the leader twittered to the girl. "Hurry, now, ma'am; hurry now. By the Holy Poker! We've got it, Sawtooth! Take me to the living-room."

"This way," Judith said bravely, and preceded him.

He hesitated in the darkness, and a match spluttered. "Any one about?" he demanded. "No, I see not. Here, [illegible], light that lamp, while I fix this one; the fire's light enough in itself. Now, what's the diven?"

"There," she said, pointing. Again the man groveled and burrowed, wriggling himself back until only his legs protruded. And as Judith watched him, she heard a distant bugle blowing a tally-ho call. Her nerves twitched, and straining her ears, she caught the faw-away "Honk! Honk!" of a touring car's French horn.

"Oh," she whispered, "Jim!" Gathering her skirts about her, she scurried from the room, leaving the short man wriggling under the divan.

She hesitated at the kitchen. The men were talking. "I knew you were hunting it," she heard Alex say, "but, confound it, man, I had the best right, and I was on the field first. This is plain robbery. Why, I've been working for months!"

Sawtooth chuckled unctuously. "Joey, he came up a-purpose," he said; "an' he got us to help him. He had a pritty good idee of the location of the cache, but when we hit it there weren't nothin' but the tools an' your blame trail. If you'd been a day sooner we'd lost out. Funny world!" Sawtooth chuckled again.

"Very," Alex dryly rejoined. "I'll tell you what, though, Mr. Sawtooth McGuire, you're on the wrong side of the law this time. I'll have Sheriff Kedge and a posse after you before morning."

"Arrest them two that hiked f'r Elktown," Sawtooth said; "me an' Paradise'll be far, far away. I reckon we'll settle among the greasers, hey? along with the Guerrilla gold!" He guffawed, until the tooting of the automobile interrupted him. "What's that?" he gasped.

"That's my cousin returning," Judith said, entering. "Oh, Mr. Beakes, I didn't understand! Why didn't you tell me at first! It's the guerrillas' gold, isn't it? That beast isn't the Sheriff?"

"He's Little Paradise," Sawtooth grinned; "an' he sure is some peaches, ma'am."

The little man burst in triumphantly, bending under the weight of the black satchel. "Hike!" ne gasped. "Got it! Here comes a devil wagon. Ride for hell!" He dived through the door into the night.

Sawtooth clumsily rushed after. "Oh, ain't you a good gold miner!" he taunted Alex. "Thanks for findin' it, pardner!" He, too, fell into the darkness, and the horses clattered.

"Mr. Beakes!" Judith could not express herself. She leaned against the wall and blinked. "I'm an idiot!"

"You're an angel," Alex laughed. "Look!" He ran from the room, returning with Judith's satchel; "see, I put stones in mine; here's the Guerrilla gold." He opened it, and displayed the dirty buckskin bags. "I've found it, and we've saved it! And I'm not a thief, am I?"

Judith gave him both hands and beamed. Thereupon the "devil wagon" drew up with red eyes and thunderous honks, and Jim Wardwell sprang into the room.

"Thunder!" he ejaculated; "today's Thursday!"

Political Slang.

STORIES IN A NUTSHELL OF THE ORIGIN OF CERTAIN PHRASES.

By a Special Contributor.

A STORY lies hidden in many a commonplace phrase, and particularly meaty with anecdote we find our political slang if only we take the trouble to crack it open.

The familiar expression, "An ax to grind," frequently attributed to Benjamin Franklin, originated with Charles Miner, who introduced the following tale of woe in a short, pithy essay published in a country newspaper of Pennsylvania during the year 1811. A little boy is asked by a man with an ax and an engaging smile if his father has a grindstone, and the family being in proud possession of that implement of welfare, the youngster leads the way into the back yard.

"What a fine little fellow you are!" exclaims the stranger—quite casually as though scarcely conscious of speaking aloud. Of course the boy becomes at once his most obedient servant, and by more well-directed praise brings water to whet the wheel and heroically turns the grindstone until his small hands sting with blisters. But the moment the ax is ground, its owner calls his little fetch-and-carry slave "rascal," crushes his newborn manly pride by bidding him hurry off to school.

The wire-pulling referred to in the political vernacular as "mending his fences" harks back to John Sherman's ambition for Presidential honors. Shortly before the meeting of the Republican National Convention in 1880, Sherman slipped away from the Senate to his Ohio farm where presumably he was engaged in quietly furthering his desired ends. Thither he was pursued by a reporter, who suddenly bobbed up through a trapdoor one day, when Sherman and his brother-in-law were putting some new rails on worn-out fences. The brother-in-law, cornered by direct questions as to what Sherman was doing now, jocularly replied: "Why, you can see for yourself; he's mending his fences."

In the baffling complication of modern life the awkward position of "being on the fence" has become a household experience, but in its beginning the phrase was a political sarcasm referring to men who took no action in matters until they saw which way things were going:

"A kind o' hangin' round an' settin' on the fence, Till Providence pointed how to jump an' save the most."

"Pipelaying," with its honest suggestiveness of a man's work by the sweat of his brow, in plain American English stands for procuring votes by fraud, and refers to a political scandal of 1835. The leaders of the Whig party in New York were accused of a plan to bring over a large number of voters from Philadelphia, and, honor among thieves falling below par, one of the supposed conspirators gave away the whole proposition, producing letters in evidence in which the number of voters hired was spoken of as so many yards of pipe, the laying of pipes for the Croton water being at that moment a leading New York activity. The Whig leaders indicated were subsequently acquitted by the jury, who decided that the accuser and the letters alike were fraudulent, but "pipe-laying" schemes had come to stay.

"I acknowledge the corn," meaning "I give in," "I retract," was a flash of humor lighting up a serious discussion in Congress during the early year of 1828. Andrew Stewart, indulging in oratorical license, made the picturesque statement that Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana sent their haystacks, cornfields and fodder to New York and Philadelphia for sale. But Wickliffe, a strict constructionist in words, refuted the charge.

"What do you send, then?" asked Stewart with a shrug in his voice.

"Horses, mules, cattle, hogs," was the reply.

"You feed $100 worth of hay to a horse," retorted Stewart, and we can fancy the triumphant slyness of the twinkle in his eye, "and thirty bushels of corn to fatten a hog. You simply put that thirty bushels into the shape of a hog and make it walk off to the eastern market."

A saving grace of humor came to Wickliffe, and in an instant he was on his feet.

"Mr. Speaker," he cried, "I acknowledge the corn!"

The term "a Gerrymander" was also born in laughter. In 1811, when Elbridge Gerry was elected Democratic Governor of Massachusetts, both house at the State capital were also Democratic—in short, the Democrats had a corner on the local market. Eminently fitting was the moment for rearranging boundaries on the political map so that a large number of Federal votes might be thrown into one or two districts, leaving all the others controlled by the Democratic power. So remarkable an appearance had the new map, however, that Gilbert Stuart declared it the express image of a salamander.

"A salamander!" retorted a wit. "Call it a Gerrymander instead!"

"Not much of a shower" is the political turn of the sour-grape fable of our nursery days, and is often thrust into the teeth of an opponent who pretends to make light of a grave defeat.

While Noah was building his ark a neighbor daily jeered at his labor, but when the rains descended to the uncomfortable degree that the scoffer had to wade with water up to his chin, he approached the ark and begged to be taken aboard. Noah was obdurate in refusal—the zöological crowd on board a sufficient excuse, perhaps, for turning the cold shoulder—and the drowning man waded off in a huff, calling back: "I don't believe there's going to be much of a shower, anyway!"

The rather anarchistic slogan of "waving the bloody shirt," the reprehensible attempt to inflame sectional passion long after the Civil War ended, has too weirdly picturesque an origin to be passed over in silence. All the way to Corsica we must go, back to the blood-letting days of endless feud.

Before burial the victim of the little unpleasantness among friends was laid out on a plank, with his firearms close to the dead hands and his blood-stained shirt hung, a banner and a badge, above the unseeing dead face, while women huddled in black mantles, rocking and wailing, encircled the corpse, and men bristling with arms close to the dead hands and his blood-stained shirt suddenly wife, mother, or sister of the deceased sprang up with a scream, snatched down the bloody shirt and, waving it, began a frenzied lamentation, a rhapsody of love for the dead, a tirade of curses upon his enemies.

"To make up the slate," a secret understanding of leaders before the convention officially nominates candidates, probably originated in an early use of a slate upon which names could be easily changed.

"Log-rolling," a mutual assistance of persons in power without a too nice regard for the public good, had an honest, commendable origin in the neighborly habit of backwoodsmen helping each other in cutting down trees.

"Mossbacks" was the pet name given to Democrats regarded fossil, particularly in the State of Ohio. The analogy apparent to any one, irrespective of party, who has been introduced to the old snapping turtle whose sluggish habits are responsible for the moss-like vegetation growing upon its shell.

"Jayhawks," thrust upon the guerrillas during the Kansas troubles in 1886, was afterward applied to political marauders generally, a jayhawk having so disreputable a disposition that he has been accused of killing innocent little birds for mere sport.

FINDING ONE'S WAY IN CHINA.

It is no easy matter to find one's way about in China, even if one knows the language. So, at least, says W. J. Garnett, the third secretary of the British Legation at Peking, who returned a little while ago from a journey through the provinces of Shantung and Kiangsu. There are, he says, villages every few miles, but the inhabitants seem very ignorant of the places in their own neighborhood.

As a sample of the conversation that took place when he asked the way from one village to another he records the following: "Is this the way to Tsouhsein?" "Are you going to Tsouhsein?" "Yes; is this the way?" "Oh, you are going to Tsouhsein, are you? Where do you come from?" "From Chiningchow. Please is this the way to Tsouhsein?" "Oh, you've come from Chiningchow, have you? Are you going into the city walls of Tsouhsein?" Finally the native would admit that he did not know the way to Tsouhsein. At the entrance to another village an ancient villager was asked what the name of the place was. After asking in turn who Mr. Garnett was, where he had come from, where he was going, and why he wanted an inn, he considered the original question, when repeated by the patient inquirer, and finally closed the conversation by saying: "How should I know? I am not a learned man."—[Manchester Guardian.

NOT THE SAME KIND.

"I have been trying the so-called fruit cure," said the dyspeptic. "For the last month I have eaten nothing but fruit, but it hasn't benefited me in the least."

"That's strange," rejoined the healthy man. "Just look at me. I subsist entirely upon fruit."

"What kind of fruit?" queried the other.

"The fruit of my own labor," was the significant reply.—[Chicago News.

HOW AN ARIZONA CATTLEMAN WON HIS BRIDE.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHAT was that Joe was sayin' to you about the yearlin's, Bascum?" asked Joel Crayton as his foreman came round the barn.

"'Twasn't Joe; 'twas Jack," grinned Bascum.

"His voice is as much like Joe's as one tarantula's like another," grumbled the cattleman, trying the newly-braided snapper on his long whip with great effect. The "twin voices" of his two best cowboys was a jest upon the range.

The spring round-up was over and work on the home ranch slack. While the cattleman and his overseer were discussing their men, Jack Freeman sauntered up toward the house, an old-fashioned adobe, built, like many others in the Southwest, on three sides of an open court. It crowned the summit of a slight rise and was nearly surrounded by a garden, formal enough near the house, but rioting off toward the lower ground to mingle with the mountain grass and wild flowers.

Not far from the adobe stood a little lattice summer-house covered with sweet peas—a bower of pink and white, where Blossom Crayton, the cattleman's only daughter, often sat stringing beans or bright red peppers for old Francisca, the Mexican cook. Jack took off his hat, and, putting aside the vines that overhung the entrance, went in—as Blossom came dancing out upon the veranda, dimpling with mischief, for she had seen Joe Lawler enter the summer-house a minute before.

Blossom was 18, when action and expression for every emotion are necessities. Bubbling into song—but very softly, lest the young men hear and take it as an invitation to the veranda—she dropped into a hammock and [illegible] one slippered foot to the floor.

"My grandmother's words kept ringing in the air—'Of all the young men you must beware!'"

As the hammock began to sway from the impetus she had given it, the sound of Joe's voice—or was it Jack's—came floating up from the summer-house. It was clear, and, though not well-modulated, a very pleasant [illegible]

"What do them sweet peas remind you of, pard?"

"Blossom," came the reply without delay. A light wind brought her the words distinctly, and, so far as the voices were concerned, one of the men might have been holding a dialogue with himself. A faint smile curved the girl's lips.

That she could marry either of these men who were comparing her to the dantiest and proudest of all spring [illegible], she knew. They were both declared suitors; both had eagerly sought to please her. But as yet she had not decided which she preferred. Jack was the son of a neighboring cattleman, and she had known him ever since she could remember; while Joe had been with the X Bar L outfit only a year. There was no haste in deciding, however; she meant to have several years of freedom and gaiety yet.

As she sat, smiling and quietly swinging, she caught another question, apparently idle, although the tone in which it was put was faintly, indefinably unpleasant.

"Which do you like best, the bud or the blossom of [illegible] pea flowers?"

"The blossom, of course," and a laugh of confession accompanied the words.

"Well, the buds for me, every time. I can have a blossom whenever I want it." The tone was openly boasting. "It's ready to fall at the drop of my oldest sombrero. And," brutally, "when I've got it, it's proud [illegible] will have to unbend."

Blossom sprang to her feet, trembling, her hands clenched, her face flushed to the temples. She stood so a moment, listening: the voices in the summer-house had grown loud and angry. Was Jack resenting the boast, or was Jack himself the braggart? She would have given all she possessed to know. Never would she feel aught but aversion for the man who made that contemptible speech. Though, thoroughly lacking in chivalry as the words themselves were, even more the tone in which they were uttered had shocked and surprised her. It was the tone of one essentially cruel—a man who, had he the opportunity, she felt sure would be as ruthless in breaking a spirit as he would in breaking a fractious colt. But she had never known anything cruel of either of her lovers—one of whom no longer deserved the name.

Finally, while the war of hot words, spiced with vigorous western profanity, was still going on under the shelter of the fragrant sweet peas, she went inside. When, minutes later, Jack stalked out of the summer-house off to the corral, and Joe came sauntering toward the veranda, Blossom took refuge in the kitchen, where old Francisca was cutting chilis into a pot of [illegible]

[illegible], however, the girl almost ran into her father. Crayton was a stern man, whose code consisted of a few sturdy principles to which he adhered without compromise. And if his family did not share in his beliefs, they had at least to live up to them. He believed, among other things, in early marriages, short engagements and no nonsense. As Blossom came flying into the room, he spoke to her peremptorily. He had got wind of the high words passing between her admirers, but he did not know their import. She was old enough to marry and settle down. At present she had the choice of two of the best cow punchers within a hundred miles. She would select one of them before the week was out, and—no, she needn't cry; it would do her no good. It was a disgrace for a girl to be the cause of quarreling.

At the dinner table, where the cattleman, his family and dependents all sat down together, Blossom listened to every word uttered by either Lawler or Freeman, trying to catch some word or tone that might furnish her a clew to the character of the man. Within the week she must decide between these two. She knew her father; he could not be coaxed. And, with no more light than she had at present, her choice of a husband might fall on one both despicable and cruel. The cruelty of that speech was what clung to Blossom. If she could detect either of the men in a cruel action, she felt that she would have the key she needed. But the time was so short—only a week. She must try something else.

There was to be a dance at the ranch-house that evening, and all the neighbors for miles around had been invited. Blossom was dressed and down in the great living-room before 7 o'clock, in each hand a tiny cluster of sweet peas—one of buds, the other of full-blown flowers. Lawler and Freeman were on the veranda, and Blossom, sitting down in a deep window seat, leaned out to speak to them.

"You'll want to look smart for the dance," she drawled sweetly. "Here's a nosegay for each of you. Which is your choice, the buds or the blossoms?"

"The blossoms for me, Miss Crayton!" cried Joe quickly.

She gave him the full-blown flowers and turned to Jack. "And your choice?"

"Is not what Joe Lawler has left."

Her little plot had failed. She hid her disappointment, however, and, later in the evening, when the dancing was at its height, slipped out alone into the garden, to think. She wanted to see the men under stress, for, inexperienced as she was, she knew that then is when character reveals itself without adornment. If she could only devise some means of testing them!

The garden was wonderful, under a round and mellow moon. Here violets were shimmering in moonlight; moonlight bathed the trees and seemed dripping from their foliage; the roses were steeped in moonlight. But Blossom saw nothing of the beauty about her. Busy with her thoughts, she was walking slowly toward the summer-house. When she was nearly opposite the entrance she heard some one speaking within and paused. It was either Jack or Joe—she could not tell which. As, listening, she loitered, steps sounded behind her.

"Blossie." No need to look up. No one but Jack ever called her that. "Aren't you going to give me a posy, too, little lady?"

Near by grew an American Beauty, with perfect buds just opening. She turned to pluck one.

"But I wanted your fav'rite blossoms—sweet peas," he said, aggrieved.

"No," she answered, "when I give my fav'rites to any one again it'll be to the man I intend to marry."

At her words a giggle came from the summer-house, and a girl appeared at the entrance, beside her Joe Lawler. He had heard, which was as Blossom intended. Soon, lured by the strains of a waltz, Lawler and his companion went back to the dancers.

Left alone with Blossom, Jack began: "They say your father has told you——"

"Yes," she interrupted, her face flushing. "I reckon the whole range knows it by this time. I have to choose this week. You know Dad. Once he's given his orders, he won't listen to reason nor mother—nor even his foreman." She was silent a moment, and then, suddenly: "Are you and Joe going to try for the prize in that steer-tyin' contest in Phoenix tomorrow?"

"Yes, but what's that got to do——"

She faced him. "I'm goin' to marry the best man," she stated with deliberation.

"You wouldn't never choose that a-way, Blossie!"

"I'm goin' to marry the best man," she reiterated, adding something under her breath which Jack did not catch.

Before the night was over, Joe, too, had asked her—for the second time—to be his wife, and she had repeated her decision to marry the "best man" in the coming contest. He listened in silence, with set lips and a flash of the eye.

The next day, booted and spurred, and dressed to delight, the eye of the tourist, the cowboys from the ranch of the X Bar L rode down, out of the hills, and across the desert to town. They left the ranch at sunrise, but, early as they had started, Blossom was on the trail two hours ahead. For several miles, as she rode along on her pony, she had a cañon on one side, while on the other rose a mountain, studded with trees and set with boulders. Here the faintly bitter odor of "old man" was on the air, and soft green things slapped her as she passed; and here a thousand blackbirds, mad with glee, greeted the dawn of day.

She crossed the strip of desert lying between the mountains and the town, and, in the afternoon when the sports at the park began, veiled and in the western riding costume, she was seated in a front row of the grand stand, which faced toward the east. To the right, behind bars, stood the steers destined to take an unwilling part in the afternoon's entertainment.

First came a relay race, after which reckless vaqueros rode broncos that "twisted" and "bucked" and side-stepped, and danced first on one leg and then on another. Then the master of the day rode up and down, proclaiming the great event of the afternoon—the steer-tying contest.

"The rules require that each man rope and tie his steer, building his own fire and branding the animal, all without assistance. Three contestants are entered. The one who brands his steer first, to the satisfaction of the judges, wins the prize, a handsome silver-mounted saddle and bridle. Ladies need not be alarmed at the smoke; the branding is only hair-deep, and there is nothing painful to the animals in any part of the performance."

A trumpet blast was followed by the entrance, from a gate to the left of the grand stand, of Joe Lawler, Jack Freeman, and a third contestant, less well known. All were mounted on trained cow ponies and wore the fluttering bandanas, leather "chaps" and high-heeled boots that are as much a part of such an exhibition as the steers themselves, while over the pommel of each saddle was coiled a long, stout lariat, the "cow catcher" of the western ranges.

Near the center of the field, a great circular enclosure, was a heap of brush and kindling wood, piled there for the convenience of the contestants. At a signal the bars were let down, when a brindled steer and one milk-white dashed into the ring together. After them came a red and untamed brute, bellowing and shaking his head in anger. The X Bar L boys let the brindle pass, and it was roped at once by the third man. His lasso fell over the horns of the animal, which kicked up his heels and raced madly round the ring, dragging pony and rider after it, to the accompaniment of hoots and yells from the laughing crowd. Joe's lasso caught the white, as Jack flung out the hissing coils of his lariat for the forefeet of the wild red steer.

The brute Joe had roped faced him at the other end of his lariat, standing perfectly still, with a wary eye on the pony. The man rode forward, but the steer made no movement. Joe attempted to circle, and then the steer turned sufficiently to keep face to face with his captor. At the end of a minute's maneuvering, which had resulted in nothing save a change of positions for Joe, he heard a cheer from the grand stand, and looked over his shoulder.

Jack had roped the red steer and ridden swiftly round him, tangling the animal's legs till he fell, helpless and subdued. The other end of the lariat was over the pommel of the saddle and the pony had planted its forefeet firmly, ready for any trick the fallen steer might try in his efforts to rise. Jack had swiftly tied the steer's feet together, and was now running toward the brush heap.

Again Joe tried to circle the white, and again he was unsuccessful. He gave another quick glance over his shoulder. Jack had gathered up an armful of brush and grasped his branding iron. As he turned to run with them (for his fire must not be built too close to the brush heap) a puff of wind lifted his hat and took it across the field. He would miss it in lighting his fire. Throwing down his load he struck a match. It went out at once; he scratched a second. At any moment he might get a blaze going. Jack set his teeth, and, gathering the slack of his rope as he rode, made straight for the clever white, which stood motionless, staring and wary.

When he was close enough, he took off his sombrero and flapped it heavily in the animal's face. The steer started back; the moment he did so, Joe wheeled his horse, striking it with his quirt. The horse bounded forward, when the steer was dragged down upon his knees, the combined strength of man and horse proving more than a match for him. His nose plowed the ground for a yard; one horn snapped off at the base. No need to tie his legs together, for one of them was broken at the knee; but Joe made the pretense.

The next instant he was at the brush heap and had dragged a handful of twigs and kindlings apart. He struck a match, and, sheltering it under his hat, applied it to a wisp of paper—and his fire was started. Jack's blazed up a moment later; but Joe had already thrust his iron into the flame. It was thoroughly heated a second earlier than Freeman's, and he had that much the start in the branding. There was a little puff of smoke as he applied the iron to the white steer's hide. An instant later a similar puff came from Jack's iron as it touched the red. Then Joe's hand shot into the air with a triumphant wave. He had roped, thrown and branded his steer in five minutes. Jack's time was five, one. Cheers and fluttering handkerchiefs evidenced the approval of the grand stand at this quick work. When the third man finally got the imprint of his iron upon the brindle all the animals were released from the lariats. Two of them trotted peacefully off the grounds, but the third lay motionless where it had been thrown. A questioning murmur rose among the people.

"That isn't the way Lawler brands cattle on the range," growled one bystander, and "He'd lose his job if it was," another returned.

The judges, who had previously inspected the brands, now walked over to the dehorned white, conferring. Jack had skillfully thrown the wildest steer in the bunch. His was the first to go down; he had made a perfect brand, and the steer was uninjured. But Joe had got his brand imprinted first. He was proclaimed the winner. He had broken none of the rules—only a dumb brute's horn and leg.

Jack heard the decision in silence, then stooped and patted the suffering steer, half drawing his pistol.

"Shall I put it out of its misery?" he asked.

"Better wait till the crowd leaves," advised one of the judges. Joe, in the meantime, had picked up the horn so rudely torn from its socket. Brushing off the dust that covered it, he stuck it into his belt, a trophy, so he said, of the best day's work he had ever done.

And Blossom saw and heard all these things as they happened.

It was moonlight when the cowboys struck into the trail that led toward home. Joe, on his silver-mounted saddle, was in the lead, while Jack brought up the rear. All but Jack were singing, laughing and jesting. He was silent. His face looked haggard, and he slouched forward, a little wearily, in his saddle.

As, winding round the mountainside, they turned a curve, Blossom stepped from the shade of a tree, out into the moonlight. In one hand she held a bunch of sweet peas, and at sight of her every man's head was uncovered and the train stopped short. The little queen of the range came down to the path in silence, and, walking straight over to Jack, held out her blossoms. There was an awkward moment before Jack comprehended. Then he was off his horse and lifting the flowers and the slim brown hand that held them to his lips, his face transformed. But Joe spoke out in hot reproach.

"Blossom, you told me last night——"

"I told you last night," she interrupted superbly, "that I'd marry the best man, and I tell you now that the best man's not the one that maims cattle, nor yet the one that boasts of a girl before he has won her!"

Revival of Kilts.

KING SHOWS DIPLOMACY IN ENCOURAGING SCOTCH COSTUMES.

By a Special Contributor.

KING EDWARD VII of England is determined to keep Scotland as Scotch as her people want her to be. In this he shows his capacity as a diplomat and adds to his already tremendous popularity throughout the British empire.

It is all a question of skirts, or rather "kilts," as the Scotch term their gay and picturesque national garb.

Many years ago—in 1745, to be exact—the gallant Highland clans, who had been fighting more or less with England for several centuries, joined the rebellion raised by the Jacobites, the name given to the adherents of the male line of the house of Stuart. When the troops of the English crown overthrew the young pretender at Culloden in 1746, the Jacobite cause was crushed and an era of punishment was inaugurated. England felt especially wroth with Scotland for the Highlanders' part in the uprising. So as a drastic measure of reproof, the crown suppressed the Scotch language and customs including the wearing of the famous kilt.

Of course these harsh measures were modified later and finally repealed, and Scotch kilts became as familiar among "the hills and heather" as oat cakes and Scotch whisky.

But even as the "Marseillaise" and the tri-color are inseparably associated by the French people with their struggle for liberty, so the kilt and the cherished customs of their land will always recall to the Scotch memories of their old-time heroes. It is with this thought in mind that King Edward, trusting the loyalty of the sturdy Scot, has encouraged a wave of revival of old Scotch customs which seems to be sweeping the land of Robert Burns.

King Edward garbed in Highland costume with Queen Alexander

Lady Constance Mackenzie as a Highland Laddie

Balmoral Highlanders with Lochaber axes

Prince and Princess of Whales and Family with the Prince and his in Scoth Kilts

All over Scotland the desire to restore the ways and manners of old is apparent. The younger generation is taking to the kilt and tartan, and many are learning to play the bagpipes. Then, too, there is a noticeable increase among the rising generation of those who want to learn Gaelic.

The movement is particularly marked in the Deeside highlands, where its existence forms a curious comment on history, inasmuch as it was in these same Braes of Mar, now so loyal to the English crown, that the standard of the Jacobites was raised over a century and a half ago. The King's tenants at Balmoral have an organization known as "The Balmoral Highlanders," and with their retainers they appear on various festal occasions in Highland garb, carrying their Lochaber axes, emblems of the Pretender's days. Recently they marched led by the King's own commissioner.

Now King Edward has not only encouraged these revivals, but he and other members of the royal family take pains to be seen in kilts and full Scotch costume on many occasions. Recently he posed for a number of portraits in Highland costume, while the Prince of Wales and his children took pains to stand before the camera clothed in similar garb. Of course being photographed in kilts is not a new experience for the King, but the fact that he and his son have posed for a number of these pictures recently is worthy of note. All of this is appreciated by the Scotch, who love their land dearly, and stick tenaciously to their customs.

There is an interesting little side light on this which serves as additional evidence to show the King's desire to express his love for his Scotch subjects. It is said that the King does not take very kindly to short trousers, His Majesty feeling that his legs are not meant by nature for this sort of garb.

Casual observers of the royal limbs see nothing wrong with them, but King Edward thinks he has a slight tendency to be "knock-kneed," and therefore he prefers long trousers.

Indeed, it was said, not long ago, that the King, who sets fashions for England, if not the world, favored the idea of men adopting knee breeches for evening dress, but that owing to his aversion to appearing that way, declined to set the example.

Now kilts expose just as much of the lower extremities as knickerbockers, so it is doubtless evident that King Edward makes some sacrifice of personal pride at least to demonstrate his regard for Scotland by posing in Highland dress.

Besides the King many members of the nobility are wearing kilts upon occasion. Even women of note affect the garb, particularly at fancy dress balls. Lady Constance MacKenzie, whose athletic performances have made her famous, is notable among the British women who sometimes wear the kilt.

The Scotch plaids or tartans, as they are called, are popular combinations of bright color all over the world. Each Scotch clan has its peculiar tartan, and the wearer of the colors is easily identified.

In addition to his title of King and Emperor, Edward has a number of Scottish titles signifying his authority in this part of his empire. He is "Grand Steward of Scotland, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, and Lord of the Isles."

Scotland is most loyal, and the King gets a hearty welcome every time he takes a trip north. Despite the fact that it is a country absolutely separate and distinct from England in the manners, traditions, customs and general make-up of its people, it appears to be thoroughly contented in its relationship with the English crown.

The King, who is being recognized more and more as a consummate diplomat, is anxious that this tranquillity of the political atmosphere remain undisturbed, and for that reason he is glad to encourage all Scotchmen who want to be thoroughly Scotch.

GUGLIELMO MARCONI.

THE WIRELESS TELEGRAPH WIZARD AND HIS WONDERFUL CAREER.

[Pearson's Weekly:] In a few days' time, if all goes well, the first regular wireless telegraphic service across the Atlantic will be inaugurated. This means that anybody, on payment of a few pence, will be able to communicate between the old world and the new, or vice versa, without the aid of cables, or other tangible connecting links, for conveying to and fro the electricity that "does the business."

The man, Signor Marconi, who has accomplished this marvel, is a youngster of 33, son of an Italian gentleman farmer and of an Irish lady of considerable mental attainments.

It is usually said of him that he commenced periments in 1895, when in his 21st year. But not correct.

So long ago as 1888, when barely 14, he set up ple of clothes props on his father's farm near stuck two empty tin biscuit boxes on top of the transmitted from the one to the other the first telegraphic message the world had ever known. himself that he got the germ of the idea from conjurer, who was also in some sort an electric form a trick at a village fair. His transmitter ceiver, however, made out of discarded pickle his very own; while his electrical generating consisted of an old-fashioned glass disc machine by a wooden handle, and a second-hand Leyden purchase which he saved up his pocket money many weary months.

The lad's father, with rare insight, decided that was "something in" his son's experiments, and money wherewith to continue them, with the that by 1895 a regular experimental wireless had been established between the village of Griffo a house in the suburbs of Bologna, belonging to a of the family, the distance separating the two tions being three miles.

Difficult Photography.

LIMITATIONS OF THE CAMERA IN YOSEMITE VALLEY.

By a Special Contributor.

THE limitations as well as the possibilities of the camera are strikingly apparent in the Yosemite Valley, where light and shade, height and depth, and perspective and atmosphere are presented on so gigantic a scale, though compactly massed, tnat the best efforts of the photographer, glorious as the results are, fall far short of attaining his desires.

One who has seen the falls, for instance, must feel only disappointment in the photograph, so inadequately is the real majesty and grandeur portrayed. The life, the action, the grace of motion, the Titanic power, the overwhelming roar, the play of lights culminating in the elusive rainbow of colors in the spray, the sharp, moist draft of air caused by the velocity of the waters—all these, which make up much of the charm, are outside the province of the camera and are not to be considered. Yet soul-lit eyes may close, life and animation depart, and the corpse still be transcendently beautiful; but the photographs of the falls, beautiful though they are, lack an indefinable something which one feels by right should be there. Perhaps it is the very impossibility of reducing great magnitudes to the space of a few inches and still preserving the sense of magnitude.

At first, the mind, like the camera, fails to grasp it, until it has had time to adjust itself to the stupendous reality. Viewed from its foot, one cannot tell whether the width of a fall at the top is eighteen inches or eighteen feet, and feels no surprise on being told that it is twice the latter figure. As well try to estimate the size of the moon by seeing it rise when at its full. But day by day the falls assume more definite proportions until one realizes something of their actual value.

Even the solid rocks, that stand motionless through the ages, are an ignis-fatuus that lures the photographer on and on to further effort. For eleven seasons an expert has been photographing the Yosemite, with the best equipment. In that time he has made no less than [illegible] negatives of that seemingly simple subject, El Capitan (to say nothing of the many times he has gone for the purpose without taking it at all,) in his efforts to make the picture give to the beholder the same mental impression that the colossal granite cliff gave to him in its best lights and atmospheres.

For more than three years he worked on a particularly picturesque spot on the Wawona road, starting long before day to get the early morning lights, before he was content with the camera's portayal.

No less difficult are the mountain trails. The photograph of a small section—as much as the camera can take in—of the zigzag up the edge of tne almost vertical wall of the valley to Glacier Point, in which an altitude of 3200 feet above the valley's floor is reached by a mule-back ride of three miles, gives little or no idea of the dizzy heights and depths and distances as the eye sees them from eyries on the way. When flying machines permit aërial positions for cameras, better effects may be secured in some instances, but when a mountain looms up where a tripod ought to stand, the case is hopeless.

Overhanging rock at Glacier Point is a favorite subject, as nature has been kind in providing camera room. The view is usually the same, the pictures being varied by the poses of more or less daring individuals on the rock, which is merely wedged in like a lever and may be made to vibrate by a person standing at the outer edge.

A San Francisco acrobat, outdoing all previous comers, threw a backward summersault on this rock and performed many other feats for the benefit of Mr. Boysen's camera. People see the pictures and wonder and exclaim at the man's fearlessness or foolhardiness, according to their point of view; but they have no thought of the photographer on a similar overhanging rock. The former was perfectly at home in his stunt, his mind wholly concentrated on himself; while the photographer's attention must of necessity be intently fixed on the acrobat in order to catch him at the exact moment, and on the proper manipulation of his instrument, rather than on his own perilous position.

An idea of how far either of them would have fallen, had they lost their heads—or their footing—may be gained from illustration No. 4, which, to the right, shows about one-tenth of the distance to the floor of the valley.

This picture is also a good illustration of the limitations of photography. One would not know by looking at it that the Yosemite Valley intervenes between Glacier Point and the mountain beyond; that it is perhaps a mile from the camera's viewpoint to the trees midway at the bottom of the picture; that it is little short of a mile from the top of the Half Dome to its base at the lower left corner; that instead of Glacier Point towering above the surrounding country, as it seems to do, because of its nearness to the camera, to the man on the rock it appears to be about on a level, with the valley a deep, irregular cleft beneath. The Half Dome itself is 1800 feet higher than Glacier Point, and The Three Graces, Sentinel Dome, Mount Star King, North Dome, Three Brothers, Eagle Peak, and El Capitan all exceed it. When the photographer and the painter have done their best, they can still give little idea of Yosemite as it is.

If certain dreams come true, there are yet more worlds in the Yosemite for cameras to spend ammunition upon. Since it is now possible to approach within fifteen miles of the valley by rail, there are visions of the remaining fifteen miles of stage road through the cañon being kept open during the winter. This would give access to the marvelous but hitherto inaccessible beauties of this winter fairyland, of which we get suggestions from photographs made by one brave enough to be immured there from autumn until spring, held prisoner by the heavy snows.

The quick transition from blooming gardens to snowshoeing and winter sports of the far north in such a setting as the Yosemite Valley is indeed a dream too beautiful for its realization to be long delayed.

GOVERNMENT GIVES ADVICE.

When an American boy leaves school he does not always know what sort of work he wants or is fit for. Or even when he knows exactly what kind of job he desires, he often does not know at all how to find it. Such a job as he aims for may not exist within his opportunities of place and time. So the boy leaving school may drift into an unsuitable occupation, or, worse, into no occupation at all, in spite of an honest wish originally to work. In Germany they order these things better.

Every year printed schedules of comprehensive questions are sent to every head teacher of the Munich schools to be distributed among the pupils who are going to leave the schools that year.

The pupils are asked to put themselves in communication with the municipal labor bureau, which will advise them as to the choice of a vocation, and give them the best chance possible to secure work.

Yearly circulars are also sent to all the trade guilds and other labor societies to enlist their cöoperation.

The children respond readily to the aid given them. Boys come by dozens to the offices of the bureau in search of positions as apprentice or beginner. Each brings a form of application filled up by himself, but signed by his teacher.

When the bureau finds a place for him he is notified by post card and presents himself for examination by the employer, wherever and whenever the latter may appoint.

Whether the boy takes the job or not he must report to the bureau the result of the interview, and this goes on until work is procured which suits him and which he is able to do.

For the direction of the boys the labor bureau has prepared, with the aid of expert employers and medical men, a handbook of the industries open to a boy. This handbook describes the different kinds of work, the qualifications necessary to each, the prospects of promotion or steady employment, the health conditions, the dangers and difficulties, the cost and time of training and everything else which the boy and his parents ought to know before choosing his career.

A ladies' committee has lately been appointed to look after the girls, also, from the schools. So the young people of Munich have a first-rate chance for a good start in life.—[Youth's Companion.

ELECTRIC CULTURE SYSTEM.

The experiments in growing plants under the electric culture system, by which electric light is used at night as a substitute for the sun's rays, are proceeding with most satisfactory results at the Royal Botanic Gardens.

About three weeks ago the Express explained the system, and showed how powerful arc lamps were made to travel slowly on overland rails up and down a house full of plants, thus turning night into day for three hours every night. Tomato plants, fuchsias, geraniums, chrysanthemums and ferns thus treated grew in only a few days much taller and stronger than similar untreated plants which were of the same size when the experiments began.

The plants treated by this "midnight sun" now show very interesting and important results, and Mr. B. H. Thwaite, F.C.S., who initiated this form of electric culture, lectured yesterday on the system before the Royal Horticultural Society.

He stated that the plants which up to yesterday had been subjected to the arc-light treatment at the Royal Botanic Gardens for sixty-eight hours, were a month ahead of the untreated plants, and this was strikingly illustrated by lantern slides showing treated and untreated plants side by side.

Mr. Thwaite told an Express representative after the lecture that the increase in the treated plants approximated 30 per cent.

"The tomatoes have done especially well," he said, "and the chrysanthemums have flowered more freely than those plants which have been outside the influence of the electric arc.

"It is my impression that we shall be able before very long to increase our crops by 300 or 400 per cent. by electric culture rather than a mere 30 per cent., and that this system of culture will prove of great commercial value. I expect to get a very large increase on the results achieved by the electro-static system; but my ideal is a combination of the two—the arc light in the houses and the wires over the fields, deriving their current from the same electric plant."—[London Express.

The Blue Canton Bowl.

ITS MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE AND UNEXPECTED RETURN.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Chinaman handled the bowl carefully, asserting that it was ages old and extremely rare. Elizabeth said that he told the truth when she had examined the tint, glaze and design of the dish. "But I cannot pay so much," she remonstrated.

"No payee, me no sell. Velly ole, "the fellow answered, the lines in his face seeming to sink deeper. Another Chinaman, who was sitting in the rear of the store, smoking, then came up. He took the bowl, turned it over and over, gesticulating, and talking in Chinese. Evidently he was anxious about the sale. I put down the jade bracelet I held and stepped closer to Elizabeth. "Oh, come away," I whispered. "You don't want it, anyway. We must get out of here."

It was our last night in San Francisco, and in Chinatown. Elizabeth had insisted on having "one more look," although I protested, knowing she could not afford to spend another dollar foolishly, but as usual she had her way, and when we were at last in the dingy little shop she completely ignored me.

"I'll give $10 for the bowl," she said. I could have shaken her. The Chinaman with the pipe grumbled heavily, and the other fellow jabbered back at him, but began wrapping the dish, while Elizabeth counted out her money.

After we had left the shop, I looked back. The two Chinamen were standing outside, talking to a third. I grabbed Elizabeth's arm. "There's something queer about that dish," I said. "Those Chinamen are pointing us out to another fellow. I saw them. He passed us as we came out. I noticed him in particular because he has such a long queue and a purple button on his cap. Now what on earth can he want? Oh, I wish you had left the thing alone."

Elizabeth laughed, but I could see that she, too, felt a little nervous. She had only that morning told me a tale which she had heard of a piece of Chinese ware which was spirited away from the Emperor's palace and finally traced to this country. What happened to the poor fellow who had it, was never found out.

We hurried along, but when we turned the corner the Salvation Army blocked our way. We crossed the street, crowding past a party of tourists turning in at Fish Alley. They were doing their best to hear what the guide said, but the monotonous tones of his voice were lost in the din of the army music. The gaily-painted lanterns swung from the wooden balconies, and here and there the face of a Chinese woman peered through the grating of a basement window from whence came sickish, sweetish odors. It was the same Chinatown which had so interested me, but I was so annoyed with Elizabeth and worried about the old bowl, that I scarcely noticed the passing show.

"We'll go to 'Coppa's,'" I said, "and get a cup of coffee. The coming and going of Bohemia was at any time much more interesting to me than Chinese pottery, and I felt that the restaurant was the nearest refuge from the shadowy alleys of Chinatown. As we hurried along, I said: "Elizabeth, how could you afford to pay $10 for that old bowl?" She had told me that day that her funds were getting low. She looked guilty. "Why, I went three times to see the bowl, and each time the Chinaman made me a lower price. I finally decided it was foolish not to take advantage of such a bargain, so I—I pawned my watch."

"Pawned your watch!" I said in amazement. I felt stunned, too disgusted to say what I thought. The idea of insanity flashed through my mind, and I looked at Elizabeth searchingly. We soon reached the restaurant, and when the door closed behind us and we were quietly sipping our coffee, I felt relieved. Elizabeth held the bowl in her lap. "I don't care," she went on emphatically, "I would rather have this old bowl than any watch I ever saw. Mine didn't keep good time, anyway," she added, thinking it an excuse." The man said he would keep it three months, and that I——"

Before she finished her sentence I stopped her with a look. The door had creaked, and as I looked up I saw the wrinkled face of a Chinaman disappear in the shadows. As he turned his back, I noticed, with a start, that he had a long queue and wore a purple button on his cap. It was clear to me that we had been followed. When I felt that Elizabeth was really in danger my ill-temper left me. I tried to plan some way out of the difficulties that seemed to be closing about us. I knew that it would be foolhardy to return the dish to the shop, as much as I wished it was there. I also felt that it would be wise to get away from that part of the city as soon as possible, so I called a waiter and asked him to order a carriage for us at once. "Elizabeth," I said, "you must leave that bowl here in the restaurant until morning."

"I'll do nothing of the sort," she replied. "You are silly about it. There is no danger of any one's molesting us, and as for that Chinaman who looked in the door, there may be a hundred of them who have long queues and purple buttons on their heads." But when we were in the carriage and driving up Montgomery street, I noticed that she kept the bowl as much hidden as possible.

"What do you expect to do with it?" I asked, not trying to keep the sarcasm out of my voice.

"I will carry it," she said meekly. Then with a sudden inspiration, common with Elizabeth, she added: "Why, I'll just pack my toilet articles in it, and do it up with my shawl strap. It will save dragging my suit case out from under the berth." So another bunchy bundle was added to our luggage.

Elizabeth's hobby had nearly been my undoing. We had planned this western trip for five years, and had put aside a little money now and then toward it. By careful figuring, we thought we could travel comfortably and even afford some of the extras. But I had not counted on Elizabeth's specialty. It, by the way, started suddenly. Her great-uncle died, and much to my disgust, after having at various times when living insinuated that he would remember Elizabeth substantially, bequeathed to her his grandfather's clock. It didn't fit in anywhere. It made everything in our small apartment look out of place. It appealed to Elizabeth, however, so she took to antiques to make the old clock feel at home. She bought books and subscribed to periodicals that treated on the subject. She talked about it constantly, until the very word "antique" grated on my nerves; but to Elizabeth it stood for harmony and enchantment. She positively seemed to grow younger, although I was unkind enough to say one day, when especially tried over the misplacing of things to accommodate new specimens:

"I should think you were near enough to being an antique yourself, without emphasizing the fact."

"Oh, I don't mind growing old," she said sweetly. "Old things, of the right sort, are always interesting."

I hoped that our trip would change things, and that she would recover from the malady, but it was not until we reached San Francisco that Elizabeth really displayed the true spirit of the collector. Our room at the hotel had a good start toward looking like a junk shop. There were old brasses that she found down in the Mission; an old silver plate that had belonged to a padre of the early days; a horrid rusty old lantern that she ferreted out of a corner of a disreputable underground shop, and many more relics. They were added to the lot one at a time, until I was desperate. Elizabeth grew reckless with her money. She never had been that until this antique frenzy attacked her, so, as I said, when she suggested that last trip into Chinatown, I protested, but what was the use? We went, and it ended in her buying the blue Canton bowl.

When we left Oakland, en route for Portland, the following evening, I felt relieved. The porter was making up the berths when we entered the sleeper. "Anyone in this upper?" I asked.

"Yes'm, a ge'man has that."

"Thank fortune it's a man," I said to Elizabeth. "He'll likely leave the section to us during the day, and we'll surely need it with all of these traps." I took from my suit case the things I wanted, then shoved it, with Elizabeth's, under the berth. We disposed of our hats and crowded our wraps into the hammock. Then I looked at Elizabeth. She stood holding the bundle containing her precious bowl.

"I don't know what I can do with it," she said anxiously.

"You can hardly put it under your pillow, as you did your watch," I replied. "Why don't you let the porter keep it for you?"

"Oh, I couldn't do that," she answered. "It's too valuable."

"Well, I think you'll have to sit up and hold it," I said. "I'm going to bed." As I turned around I saw that we had been blocking the aisle. "I beg your pardon," I said to the gentleman back of me. "We seem to be monopolizing space here." When I glanced up he was smiling, and assured me that we had not inconvenienced him in the least.

"I have this upper, I believe," he continued. "You seem to have more luggage than you can dispose of. Perhaps I may help you out a little, as I have only my bag to stow away." This to Elizabeth, so I stepped to one side.

"Oh, I think we shall manage somehow, "she replied sweetly. "You see," she went on, rather confusedly, "I have here a piece of Canton china which at the last minute I could not get into my trunk. I feel especially choice of it, you know."

Old Canton! You are fortunate," he replied.

I was surprised, and took another good look at the man, wondering if he too were addicted to antiques. He seemed sane and sensible.

Elizabeth showed her delight. "Oh, you are fond of the good old things, too," she said. "I know that you will like this bowl. I'll show it to you right now." She began undoing the bundle.

"Elizabeth," I exclaimed, half under my breath, giving her a little nudge, "hadn't you better wait until morning?" knowing she had entirely forgotten what she had packed in the dish.

"Oh, no, it will take but a minute," she answered, and continued undoing things. I felt mortified enough, when her silk kimono, hair brush, powder box and other toilet accessories came out one by one, and stood in array on the opposite seat. Our upper neighbor looked very much amused, but when the bowl actually made its appearance, I was amazed to hear him exclaim with enthusiasm: "A Royal Canton! How did it ever reach America?"

I at once remembered the tale which Elizabeth had told me, and unconsciously looked back of us, half expecting to see a Chinaman with a long queue and a purple button. I was glad that we were out of San Francisco.

Elizabeth was delighted to have her treasure guarded, and was charming in showing her appreciation. When our new acquaintance said good-night, he gave his card to her, saying his home was in Boston. After we were alone, Elizabeth said with assurance: "He's surely all right, dear, for the Mainards are an old Boston family." I hoped within myself that Elizabeth would not take on genealogical madness along with antiques.

Mr. Mainard joined us at breakfast quite early. He said that he considered the trip which we were taking through the Shasta Mountains, in the West, held scenery which was unequaled in any stretch of country, and that we should reach Mount Shasta before noon. I felt glad that he had been over the route before, as he would be able to tell us much of interest concerning it.

"There is an observation car on," he said, as we left the table. "I'll see you there." He turned to Elizabeth and asked her to bring the bowl with her. We stopped at our section to straighten out our belongings, and tried to persuade Elizabeth to leave the bowl in the sleeper.

"I do feel rather foolish carrying it around," she admitted, "but it might get broken in here, you know."

When we reached the observation car but few had taken seats. Mr. Mainard had selected three together. When we came in, he looked up with greatest animation. "Just see what I ran across in the case of books," he said to Elizabeth. I glanced over her shoulder, and caught a glimpse of the title: "Things Chinese." It was, of course, a topic for conversation, and he and Elizabeth made the most of it. They read extracts from the book and compared the descriptions of antique Chinese pottery with the designs on the old blue bowl. They seemed to find something new on every page. I was annoyed with Elizabeth. We had taken this trip that we might enjoy the Shasta Mountains together. The hours slipped by, and so did the beautiful mountain scenery, but it was not until we reached Shasta Springs that they took any notice of what was passing. As the train slowed up, Mr. Mainard said that we must surely have a drink of Shasta water, so the book was laid aside, and with the old bowl under his arm he led the way out of the car. When we stepped on the platform Elizabeth nudged me, saying in a frightened whisper: "Of all things! Look!" I did look, and my heart sank. It was a Chinaman, long queue and purple button on his cap. Elizabeth had said nothing to Mr. Mainard of our experience in Chinatown. I had wondered if she would. I decided that she felt ashamed of our nervousness. I say our nervousness, for I knew that she felt as I did, although she tried to assume indifference. I was glad that Mr. Mainard and not Elizabeth was carrying the bowl, but I was more than amazed when he exclaimed: "Well, well, if there isn't Luey Sen of New York, one of the finest fellows I know." Turning to Elizabeth, he added: "He could tell us a lot about this bowl."

When we were back in the car, Mr. Mainard asked if we would not like to meet his Chinese friend. He said that we would find him very interesting. Later in the day, the two men joined us in our section in the Pullman. Luey Sen spoke English well and told us many interesting things about Chinese curios. When Elizabeth showed the bowl to him, he looked surprised for a second, then very suavely exclaimed over its beauty. He said that it was a rare piece of ware; he also added that he had left an order with his agent in San Francisco to procure for him, if possible, just such a bowl. When he left us he said to Elizabeth that if at any time she wished to dispose of the bowl he would gladly pay her $100 for it. After he had gone with Mr. Mainard, I said to Elizabeth:

"Why in the world didn't you take him at his word and get the money?" She looked dreamy, and it was fully a minute before she answered, then she said with a great deal of feeling: "Sell this bowl! Why, I wouldn't take twice that amount. No, nothing would tempt me to part with it. If it had not been for it, I might never have met him, and I think he's just splendid, don't you?"

"He is certainly entertaining," I replied. "I did not suppose that a Chinaman——"

"I was not thinking of the Chinaman," she said, nor of the bowl, either, I thought to myself, when toward evening I found it on the floor back of the chair in which Elizabeth had been sitting. Through the window, on the observation platform, I could see Elizabeth's veil floating over the gray cloth cap of her affinity.

I admit that I began to take more interest in the dish after Luey Sen had made such a liberal offer to buy it. He had said that he was to stop over a few days in Minneapolis. When we reached that city he came to bid us good-by. He gave his card to Elizabeth and said that if at any time she was in New York she must call at his store, and he would show her many treasures from the Orient. He also repeated his offer to purchase the bowl. Elizabeth and Mr. Mainard both expressed regret that the Chinaman was to leave our train, but I was not sorry to see the long queue and purple button disappear in the throng of people.

Before we reached Chicago I had come to regard the bowl as my special care. When we were going into the city, word reached us of the earthquake at San Francisco. All else was forgotten in the excitement. The depot was a scene of turmoil; the constant cries of the newsboys declaring the horrors of the stricken city pushed every other thought from our minds. I had placed our hand luggage on the seat in the waiting room. Mr. Mainard kindly offered to look after our trunks. In the meantime, Elizabeth and I, with hundreds of others, eagerly scanned the bulletin boards, unable to believe the dreadful things which were related. When Mr. Mainard returned he said that he would go with us to our car. We turned to gather up our traps and to our utter dismay the shawl strap containing the precious bowl had disappeared.

"No, I did not leave it in the train," I said. "I put it here on top of the suit cases." We made some inquiry, but every one was too greatly excited to pay much attention to us. Mr. Mainard reported the loss to the depot authorities. It was all that could be done. Whether some one had seen the bowl in the train and knew its value, or if the bundle was taken by mistake was a question, and Mr. Mainard and Elizabeth discussed it, but in my own mind I could but associate the disappearance of the bowl with Luey Sen of New York, and I said so to Elizabeth.

She was disgusted. "Why, he left the train at Minneapolis," she said with asperity.

"Yes, but couldn't he have accomplices in Chicago?" I replied. "The telegraph wires are still working."

Of course we did not speak of Luey Sen to Mr. Mainard, because he had introduced him to us as a friend and fine fellow, but I had not forgotten the three Chinamen standing outside the little shop in Chinatown.

As the weeks went by, I seemed to think more about the lost bowl than Elizabeth did, but Mr. Mainard had come to Chicago in a business capacity, and he found time to call so frequently that she had little opport to lament. She found in him an enthusiastic sympathiser in her study of antiques. He was delighted with the grandfather's clock and the Sheraton table and chairs. One by one other finds were crowded into the small space left, and I too drifted along with the stemless tide of association and environment, and contributed a set of old andirons to the collection. I ran across them in a curio shop in an out-of-the-way corner, when searching such places in hopes of finding the old blue bowl. I felt that Elizabeth really grieved over its loss more than we knew, but because it had been in my care and for the reason that I had so emphatically criticised her for purchasing it, she said nothing regarding it. That Elizabeth and Mr. Mainard had planned to be married in the fall only added zest to their interest in their hobby, and everything was purchased with the cosy little home in view. They even planned to have a corner for poor me, and I surely felt as though I belonged in their catalogue of antiques.

The morning of the wedding really came. I had seen to every detail of the arrangements, as Mr. Mainard had been out of the city for a month. Elizabeth was useless, and I had sent her to her room to rest. The house was quiet for the first time in weeks. I sat down in our little library to think over things. As I looked around the rooms, everything seemed doubly dear to me, and nothing seemed out of place. The old clock was no longer an interloper, and I knew that I should miss the company of its good old face and cheery tick. I remembered with regret of my unkindness to Elizabeth in connection with our last visit to Chinatown, and I regretted sincerely that the one treasure she had most prized had been lost when in my keeping. But suddenly my thoughts were sent flying by the furious ringing of the doorbell. Thinking that Mr. Mainard had come, I hurried to open the door. With amazement and consternation, I looked straight into the face of a Chinaman. He wore a long queue and a purple button on his cap. Elizabeth, too, had heard the bell, and, thinking, as I had done, that it was Mr. Mainard who had come, she had followed me into the hall. When she saw the Chinaman, she gave a smothered little scream and darted back of the portieres. It was I who must face the music. But the fellow only bowed and silently turned down the steps and into a cab standing in front, leaving in my hand a large box. I think I expected to see an officer of the law appear instantly, so deep-seated had been my fear of the long-queued orientals, but Elizabeth laughed hysterically, and began unwrapping the box. Mr. Mainard came just then, in time to hear Elizabeth's excited exclamation: "It is, it really is, my old blue bowl!" We turned to Mr. Mainard for an explanation.

He stooped and picked up a card from the floor. It read: "With the compliments of Luey Sen."

"Now, I call that fine of Luey," Mr, Mainard said. Then he explained: "At the time the bowl was lost, I reported it at once to Luey Sen, knowing that he, if any one, could trace it, but after weeks of investigation which was fruitless, I asked him to go to no further trouble. Evidently he continued the search. He may have felt, as I did, that his honor was at stake, and that in your minds, if not in mine, lurked a suspicion that he was in some way concerned with the disappearance of the bowl. Or perhaps he only wished to do a kindness for a friend; at any rate, the bowl is here, and I must say," he added, drawing Elizabeth closer, "that you seem more glad of its return than of mine."

"No, no," she said tenderly, "but if it had not been for the bowl, dear——"

I did not wait to hear the rest. With an apology in my heart to Luey Sen, and with the realization that the spirit of the collector had settled upon me, I slipped quietly out, carrying the old bowl with me.

HOW THE WORLD IS TO END.

A scientific forecast of how the end of the world might come has been given by Prof. Ellard Gore. His theory is the final cataclysm may possibly be the result of a collision between the sun and some dark, dead, derelict planet. Although astronomers have no actual proof that such dead suns exist, without life or light and careering about in space, they believe it quite possible. The result of a collision between the sun and a dark planet would be that the former's light and heat would be enormously increased and the earth instantly destroyed by combustion. Prof. Gore tells how we should be warned of our approaching doom. "When about 15,000,000 miles from the sun the dark body would begin to shine by reflected light. In about ten years it would have become so bright as to be visible to the naked eye. In fifteen years it would be brighter than any object except the moon. Very soon afterward would come the final catastrophe of its collision, moving at 400 miles a second, with the sun moving at the same speed."—[Dundee Observer.

SOME AMUSING MISTAKES.

According to the Bluejacket, Rear-Admiral Evans, while traveling on a steamer between Fort Monroe and the exposition grounds, was accosted by a lady passenger, who had a baby and some bundles in her arms, with the query: "Are you going ashore here?" When the admiral said yes, she asked him to carry her bundles. "Certainly, madam, only too pleased to," was the quick reply. The admiral was in uniform, and the lady took him for one of the steamer's officers or porters.

Many officers of the navy are frequently asked to stop a trolley car, to prevent a dog fight, or to say offhand just when the next train will leave for Oshkosh or some way station. The story is also told of a midshipman in Washington, who was asked by an old lady to carry her baggage, and offered him 10 cents as a tip. These mistakes are due to the fact that naval uniforms are so closely copied in the dress of municipal, railroad and other employés that it is sometimes difficult to tell the real from the imitation.

For Mother's Sake.

A STORY OF RENUNCIATION AND LIFELONG DEVOTION.

By a Special Contributor.

FARMER EVERETT had been laid to rest in the quiet village churchyard at Winsor. He had lived all his life in New Hampshire, and had ended his life where it began—on the stony little farm that had been his father's and his grandfather's before him. Mrs. Everett had borne up bravely until after the funeral, but now she seemed completely prostrated. She lay helpless on her great bed, soothed by the devoted care of her daughter Emma. A respectful hush pervaded the family group that gathered in the dining-room for the evening meal.

Ada and her husband had come from distant Idaho. They had helped the dear father through his long illness, and now were anxious to get back to Boise, for Mr. Johnson's business needed his attention.

John Everett stroked his daughter's fair head gently when he saw the tears gathering in her big blue eyes. She was a girl of ten years, and being the only grandchild, had been very dear to Farmer Everett.

"Come, Minnie," said her mother cheerfully. "Pour the tea and help mamma."

"I do wish that Henry had come home," said Ada, nervously. "It seems so hard to leave mother and Emma alone."

"Hardly alone," said John, "Harriet and I live so near that one of us can look in every day and see how they are getting along. Henry will probably marry out in Texas and remain there. It wouldn't do any good to insist on his coming back. He never was contented here. Emma and mother will do all right. Don't worry, Ada," said John, kindly.

They all took it for granted that Mrs. Everett would remain in the old home, and that Emma would stay with her. Emma was now 26 years old. She had been teaching school for seven years, and had lived in Vermont and Massachusetts, but always spent her vacations at home.

Henry wrote a kind letter to his mother. He said he hoped Emma would not have to give up teaching, for he knew she was "wrapped up in her occupation," and suggested that she secure a school near home. Ada and her husband soon left for Idaho, and John and his wife went about their own affairs as before the father's last illness. Emma understood what was expected of her. She did not protest. She made no promises. She simply shouldered the burden.

Five years passed. Emma had acted upon her brother's advice and had secured a school near home. She had been able to teach only about half of the time. Twice she had given up her school in the middle of the term, as her mother needed all her attention.

About this time Emma had a very eligible offer of marriage, and her mother counseled her to accept. Emma thought favorably of it, too. She did not love Mr. Hill. But what of that? She did not doubt the power and the beauty of love with other people; but, as the years went by and it did not come to her, she thought herself incapable of loving. The yearning for motherhood, however, was strong within her heart.

"I can be a dutiful wife, a loving mother," she said to herself with a blush.

And so when the pompous Mr. Hill came to the farm that evening, she said respectfully: "Mr. Hill, I have decided to accept." Then, with a smile, for she thought every one knew that she was in duty bound to care for her mother—"I have only one condition to make. Of course you do not object to mother's sharing our home. You must have thought of this, for you know that mother is 71, and in poor health."

Mr. Hill hadn't thought of it. "My chief object in marrying," he said with dignity, "is to secure a wife, not a mother-in-law."

"I must do my duty toward my mother," said Emma, firmly. "I have done it for five years."

Mr. Hill forgot his dignity. "That's just it!" he exclaimed impetuously. "You've waited on her hand and foot for the last five years. Now let the others do their duty. If they each take a turn of five years, that will see the old lady through, I imagine."

Emma was hurt and shocked. She dismissed the pompous manufacturer with the calm dignity of an offended queen.

When Emma told her mother, Mrs. Everett entirely approved of her decision. "So he thought he could part us!" she exclaimed angrily. "A fig for his money!"

Five years more passed. Mrs. Everett was ill so often that Emma no longer tried to teach. They lived on the rent of the little farm. In spite of her 36 years, Emma looked young, for she was very happy. Something new had come into her life, something of which she had thought herself incapable. Almost before Emma knew it herself, her mother had seen it, and warned her, saying:

"A woman of 36 should not allow herself to fall in love with a young man. He will either laugh at or pity her." Emma did not mind the cruel words. She had seen the love light in Roy's honest gray eyes.

"Mother," said Emma one day, "I am going to be married soon."

"To whom?" asked Mrs. Everett.

"O, mother dear," laughed Emma, "don't affect surprise. To Roy Dalton, of course."

"I am very sorry," said Mrs. Everett drawing herself up and looking very stern. "He is a roving, drunken fellow, ten years younger than you."

Emma's cheeks burned, but she answered without any show of anger: "He has been a rover, but now he can settle down and be content. He drinks sometimes, I know, but hardly enough to warrant your calling him a drunkard. He is six years younger than I am, not ten."

Mrs. Everett was silent for several minutes. Then she asked grimly: "Does he object to a mother-in-law?"

"Not at all," answered Emma.

"Then," said Mrs. Everett, "it remains for the mother-in-law to object to him. Emma, will you desert me in my old age?"

"Not willingly," answered Emma, "but I love Roy. I will not give him up."

During the spring months, Mrs. Everett enjoyed a drive during the cool morning hours. Twice a week Emma drove her to the town of Winsor and back. On one of these drives, they saw Roy Dalton coming out of the Winsor tavern. His steps were unsteady, and a friend was "seeing him home." Mrs. Everett said nothing, but Emma saw a look of triumph in her face. Hurt by her mother's look, she turned her face away, only to meet Roy's glance of mingled shame and regret. Emma never knew what her own eyes expressed, but she was conscious only of humiliation and disappointment.

A week after this unexpected meeting, Emma heard that Roy Dalton had gone to New York.

"He is ashamed to come to me yet," she thought, "but surely he will not be gone long."

The days wore on, and still he did not come and did not write.

"The dear, dear boy! He takes it too hard," thought Emma. "If he will only come back and take me in his arms, I will never mention that morning."

The days wore into weeks, and Emma's poor, patient heart ached. At last she went to Roy's friend. Roy had sent him a postal from New York. It read: "I start for South America tomorrow. Will write you from there."

The poor girl suffered less for a while, for she made the desperate resolution to go to Roy as soon as she found out his address. But month after month passed, and the friend received no letter. Emma lost hope. Her life became a monotonous round of duties. Lines of care appeared on her forehead. Her brown hair was streaked with gray. Mrs. Everett watched the silent sufferer and was sorry. Harriet saw the change in her sister-in-law, and tried to be very kind. But both of these women had married too early in life to understand the intense love of the woman of 36.

After three years Emma received a letter with a Brazilian postmark. Mrs. Everett watched her, as she opened it with trembling, eager hands. Then she saw the gray head bent low, and heard sobs of unutterable anguish; but she never knew what the letter contained except that Roy Dalton was dead.

Mrs. Everett reached the advanced age of 92, and then was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the village churchyard.

Emma sat in her black gown just as she had come from the funeral. She was alone in the farmhouse. Her brother John had said: "Come and stay with us for the present," but just now she preferred to be alone.

John and his wife were preparing to go to Boston to live with their daughter Minnie. Minnie was a good daughter, her husband all that they could wish. Her children were respectful and considerate. They would enjoy a pleasant old age.

"John has sold his place. He will leave for Boston in a week or so. There can be no home for me with him," said Emma with a touch of bitterness. She felt that she could have lived with John and Harriet; but to go out to Idaho or Texas and live with Ada or Henry would be impossible. She would stay where she was.

Emma was 52. For twenty-six years her life had been devoted to her mother; and now that mother was gone. Her tired hands moved restlessly, but their duty was done.

"Life will be a blank," murmured Emma, "but isn't that what it always has been?" She thought back over the twenty-six years. Had they been well spent in the sight of God? After all, might it not have been better to take a firm stand and say to the mother: "You must go and live with John, whose wife will be kind, or with Ada, who is rich and has no children?" Was it her duty to sacrifice all? She thought of the pompous manufacturer and felt no resentment.

Emma's face flushed a little. She rose and paced the floor. She took an old letter from a drawer and spread it out carefully. What need to put on her glasses? She knew it by heart.

"Dear Emma," it began, "I am dying, and I want to say good-by. It was cruel of you to send your mother to tell me that you despised a drunkard, that you would not marry me, and that I had better leave the neighborhood. I deserved your contempt, perhaps, but you ought to have heard my story. You ought not to have taken back your promise without seeing me again.

"I have suffered for three years, but I love you, and I forgive you for being hard. If you have married a better man than I am, I am not jealous, for I am dying. God bless and protect you, sweet Emma. Good-by.

Your loving ROY."

Great tears fell on the paper, as Emma folded it carefully. She had known her mother's treachery all these years, and had never reproached her with it.

"He died thinking me cruel," she murmured. "Oh, the pity o' it! But the dreary years will end some time, and then, Roy, I'll explain."

When the Tank Ran Dry.

DEAR OLD AUNT AMANDA AIDS IN AN ELOPEMENT.

By a Special Contributor.

UNCLE JERRY sat on the front steps of the old brown farmhouse, apparently engaged in admiring the landscape that lay before him.

On every side stretched endless fields of waving green alfalfa broken here and there by groups of trees and bushes. On one side a great spreading sycamore stretched its huge branches protectingly over a group of cows standing in its shade, and and on the other, nestled under the shade of drooping pepper trees, lay a quaint, old-fashioned garden where roses and sunflowers grew side by side and scarlet geraniums added their brilliant color to the scene.

In the midst of all this quiet beauty stood the old, weatherbeaten farmhouse, and over it all hung the dreamy hazy sky of a perfect Indian summer day.

But to Uncle Jerry this was nothing. He was gazing intently down the long shining rails of the track which ran not five rods from his front steps.

To Uncle Jerry and Aunt Amanda the daily passing of the Overland was the one variation in the dull monotony of their lives, and its coming was eagerly looked forward to.

But today it was late, and Uncle Jerry was worried. He walked slowly out to the track and, shading his eyes with his hand, gazed long and hard down the long stretch of shining rail. But no black speck appeared and no sound broke the silence.

"It's strange," he said to himself, as he walked back. "It's strange, I say. As long as I've lived here it ain't never been this late before. Must be something's happened."

Slowly he climbed the steps, and opening the front door, he studied the tall, old-fashioned clock in the hall anxiously.

"Mandy," he called.

"Yes," answered a cheery voice, and Aunt Amanda appeared in the doorway, her plump figure enveloped in an enormous calico apron and her shining white hair covered with a snowy cap. Faded blue eyes peered kindly out from behind gold-rimmed spectacles, and her round face wore an expression that was kindness itself.

Her smiling countenance grew sober when she confronted Uncle Jerry's anxious face.

"Why, Jerry," she said, "what's the matter with you? What makes you look so? You ain't sick, are you?"

"No," answered Uncle Jerry. "It ain't that. I s'pose I'm kind of foolish, but the train hain't passed yet, an' I'm worried some, that's all."

"Why, so it ain't," exclaimed Aunt Amanda in genuine surprise. "Bless my soul, if I didn't clean forget it! I was working so hard I forgot there ever was a train. Good gracious! Jeremiah Larkins, you don't suppose there's been a wreck, do you? Oh, if there has, just think of all those poor souls coming out here to Californy for the first time and gettin' killed! Oh me! Oh my! The poor dear people! What——"

"Well, we don't know yet if there's been one," interrupted Uncle Jerry, as he sat down on the steps. Aunt Amanda returned to the kitchen, wiping her eyes as she went, at the mere possibility of an accident. "Poor dears! Poor dears!" she kept murmuring to herself. Aunt Amanda possessed a heart that was, if anything, too tender and sympathetic.

Suddenly a faint whistle broke the stillness. Uncle Jerry sprang to his feet.

"She's a-comin'!" he shouted. Aunt Amanda rushed out, carrying the dish she was wiping, and together they stood on the porch and eagerly watched the approach of the belated train.

"Seems to me," remarked Uncle Jerry, "she's a-comin' mighty slow, ain't she?"

"Yes," agreed Aunt Amanda, "she seems to be gettin' slower an' slower! Oh, Jerry, "as the engine stopped with a great clank and rattle, "she's stopped, and right in front of our house. What do you s'pose is the matter?"

But Uncle Jerry was half-way down the path. "I'm goin' to see," he called back.

In five minutes he returned, accompanied by the blue-uniformed conductor.

"It ain't a wreck," explained Uncle Jerry. "It's just a lack of water, an' they can't get up 'nough steam to go on or go back."

"Yes," put in the conductor, "whoever's responsible for filling that water tank ought to be fired. A pretty piece of business, I call it. Here we are, ten miles from the last station, and no steam. I don't know what we can do.

Haven't got a telephone, have you?"

"A—what?" asked the two old folks at one and the same time.

"A telephone, of course," repeated the uniformed official, somewhat impatiently.

Uncle Jerry and Aunt Amanda regarded each other blankly for a moment. Then Uncle Jerry chuckled.

"Ho, ho!" he cried, "a telephone! A telephone! Well, if that don't beat all! A telephone—now what good would one of them things do ye?"

Aunt Amanda gazed from one to the other, quite mystified. Then she pulled gently at her husband's sleeve and asked: "But Jerry, what is a—a—oh, that thing you're talkin' about, anyway?"

"Why," exclaimed Uncle Jerry, "why, it's only a little box stuck onto the wall that people sometimes talk into. And poor things, they actually believe they can hear somethin' else beside their own voice. Dear, dear, but that does tickle me!" and Uncle Jerry laughed his chuckling laugh.

Aunt Amanda failed to see any joke, and gazed reprovingly at him, while the conductor laughed in spite of his anxiety. But, glancing back at the motionless train out of which the curious passengers were swarming like bees from a hive, he bethought himself of his present responsibility.

"Look here," he said, "can't you help me out of this? Can't you think of something? If we could only get water enough!"

His gaze traveled around the yard, and then, lighting upon something at one side of the house his face brightened with hope.

"Say," he cried, "that thing over there—at the side of the house—yes—well, that's a treadmill, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Uncle Jerry.

"Well," went on the conductor hurriedly, "don't you think that if we had a good strong horse we could pump enough water to take us on to the next water tank?"

"Why, yes, I reckon so," answered Uncle Jerry slowly.

"Have you a good, strong horse?"

"Yes, old Jennie. She's old but mighty strong, an' she's used to treadin' the mill, too. She pumps the water to irrigate my young orange trees. You can have her an' welcome."

Aunt Amanda seconded Uncle Jerry's hospitable offer, and with a smile of real pleasure added: "And tell all them poor tired folks to come in an' rest, every one of 'em."

Jennie, the old gray horse, was soon at work treading patiently, pumping through the long lengths of hose that stretched to the engine the water that was to carry the train and its load of tourists on to their journey's end.

And good Aunt Amanda was working too. She had carried out all the chairs in the house, and spread all her rugs on the ground beneath a huge pepper tree which grew in front of the house.

In this grateful shade the tired mothers and children from the East enjoyed the fresh cold water from Aunt Amanda's best glass pitcher. "It come right from the well," she informed them.

But while the majority appeared to be extremely comfortable under the great pepper tree, there were two who seemed to be greatly agitated. They presented themselves before Aunt Amanda when she chanced to be standing alone on the little porch.

The girl was young and pretty, and her companion tall and manly-looking. Both seemed extremely nervous and apprehensive. They stood in front of Aunt Amanda like two criminals before their judge.

"Well?" Aunt Amanda beamed upon them.

"We——" the girl began, picking nervously at her lace handkerchief, "we—oh, Charlie, you ask her!"

He coughed and glanced nervously behind.

"They can't see us yet. Don't be afraid, dear," he said in a low tone to his fair companion; then to Aunt Amanda: "May we go inside, madam, just for a few minutes? This lady here is—er—er—well, no matter—but may we come in?"

Aunt Amanda smiled upon them. "Why, yes, of course, you may. The idee of askin' such a thing as that. Come right in. You poor dear child!" she cried, pulling the girl gently inside, "why, you're all done up! Here, take off your bunnit an' lie down here. Just wait a minute and I'll make you some good hot tea. I always think tea's a good medicine when you're tired out. Lie down here now, dearie, and rest. I won't be long."

Aunt Amanda bustled about, heedless of the protestations of her guests. The young man stood by the window gazing down the road, while the girl watched him anxiously.

"Do you see them?" she asked. "There's a cloud of dust about a quarter of a mile away, and sometimes I can see a streak of red.

"That's papa's new automobile!" declared the girl positively. "I was just sure he'd come in that! Oh, dear, what shall we do!" She began to weep softly.

"Don't Gracie, don't!" pleaded the young fellow desperately. "I don't know what to do. Oh!" he gave a sudden gasp of dismay. "We're caught!" he cried, "he's come in his auto! There, he's looking through the train!"

The girl was wringing her hands in despair when Aunt Amanda entered the room.

"Here, my dears," she began, "is some good hot tea——"

"Wait!" cried the young man excitedly. "For heaven's sake can't you hide us somewhere? Quick! Anywhere!"

Aunt Amanda stood still, teapot in hand, and gazed wonderingly at the anxious pair.

"Why," she began dazedly——"

"Oh, hang it all!" broke in the young man, "I'll have to tell you: We're eloping, and the old gentleman's out there looking for us. Don't, for pity's sake, let him see us! Hide us somewhere, and be quick."

Slow comprehension dawned in Aunt Amanda's face, and then as she fully realized the situation, she laughed aloud.

"Law!" she cried, "eloping!" Well, you needn't be scared of any one findin' you here. Nobody would come here lookin' for runaway couples."

The runaway couple did not seem reassured, and Aunt Amanda went on. "If any one does come for you," she said, "they won't find you, that's certain."

In her kind, simple heart there was not a shadow of doubt as to the propriety of the course she was taking. All she knew and recognized was the fact that these two young people needed her. Any soul in distress had Aunt Amanda's sympathy and help.

The young man reported his observations from his post behind Aunt Amanda's lace curtains.

"He's gone through every car now. Here he comes looking around everywhere. He's talking to some one—didn't get much satisfaction, evidently, by his looks. Here he comes, straight for the pepper tree. He's talking to some one else—every one shaking their heads. By George! but he looks mad!"

"You'd better go into the kitchen," said Aunt A "If he comes here I'll talk to him."

In the little old-fashioned kitchen the runaw ple sat side by side and listened to the sound Amanda's voice at the door, and the gruff tones of the irate parent.

In a few minutes Aunt Amanda entered the laughing softly.

"There's no danger now," she announce climbed in that there big red buggy an' gone pretty mad, but I guess he'll get over it. They do. He asked me if I'd seen a young couple aroun I says: 'Oh, yes, there's been lots of 'em around

"Then he started in to describe you, but I broke in an' told him there was so many around I'd confused. Then he said quite a lot more, and finally he just turned and stalked off to that red of his, an' off he puffed the way he come. Gone home, I reckon. Now, you poor tired children, right down here an' eat these doughnuts, an' here's of my strawberry preserves, an' here's your tea. you just enjoy yourselves while I go out an' the others are up to."

She bustled out of the room, and the lovers sat most complete silence, too happy for words.

In another hour when, after numerous break old Jennie had finished her task of pumping the water into the engine's tank, the conductor called aboard!" and the passengers left the shade of the tree almost with reluctance. Aunt Amanda's hot and doughnuts had been delicious, and Aunt herself the very soul of hospitality.

In the little brown farmhouse the runaway gratefully thanked Aunt Amanda for her kindness. never forget it," declared the young man, heartily, ing Aunt Amanda's hand.

"Nor I," exclaimed the girl, impulsively putting arms around Aunt Amanda's neck and kissing wrinkled cheek. "You've been a perfect angel, Charlie and I will always love you for it, won't Charlie?"

Tears sprang to Aunt Amanda's old blue eyes saw them disappear into the train. When the gine slowly moved and a score of handkerchiefs from the windows, she waved her apron in reply, to the last two young heads thrust through the and hearing two young voices calling good-by.

Then she turned with a sigh to find Uncle Jerr her side holding a slip of paper.

"Look here, 'Mandy," he cried, "that there co feller made this check out to me and said a whole other things besides. Ain't that fine? Now we to see Edith and Fred, can't we, 'Mandy? Why, the matter? Don't you want to go?"

Aunt Amanda smiled through her tears. "Why, Jerry, of course I do," she answered. "But I gue kind of tired, that's all. We've had a good time, hain't we, Jerry?"

A Difficult Lingo.

"WHEN George Ade wintered in Egypt," said a Baltimorean, "it amused him a good deal to see the serious way in which his fellow-tourists took their smattering of Egyptian archeology, of the Arabic tongue, and of the ancient Egyptian dynasties. They had picked up all this flimsy knowledge in a week or two's reading, but they acted as though it was the precious fruit of a lifetime's study.

"At Assouan, one fine day, a young woman from St. Joseph complained that she could not understand the Arabic of her guide. To the crowd that encircled her she pointed out the guide—a bent old fellow with a white beard—and she said bitterly that, after her thorough study of Arabic, it seemed strange that she and this guide could not converse.

"From the rear of the crowd Mr. Ade called gravely:

"'It's your own fault, Miss Hodson. You should have hired a younger guide. These toothless old ones all speak gum Arabic.'"

Thomas the Tank.

E. J. BERWIND, the great coal operator of Philadelphia, was asked by a reporter, at his beautiful Newport villa, a rather stupid question in finance.

Mr. Berwind laughed.

"That question," he said, "is about as absurd and as ludicrous as a tableau I once saw in a little French theater, in New Orleans.

"The curtain rose up in the theater, revealing a large bed draped with crape, and occupied by an elderly woman who held a black-edged handkerchief to her eyes. A widow, plainly, of but a few days standing. She wept. Her wound was still raw.

"On the other pillow beside the widow lay a large bottle of gin. She turned toward the bottle, and, sobbing as if her heart would break, she said tenderly:

"'Ah, when I see and smell the gin there, I think it's my Thomas back at my side again.'"

The Painter's Way.

MARK TWAIN, at a dinner in New York, talked about the troubles of housekeeping. Referring to the painting season, he said:

"If you are a housekeeper, I don't need to tell you that when a painter has taken up the parlor carpet, removed the furniture from the dining-room, leaned two ladders against the hall mantel, and stacked a half-dozen variegated cans of paint on the sideboard, it means he is now ready to paint the outside shutters and the back fence."

Mary's Question.

SOME little while ago a popular writer visited a jail in order to take notes for a magazine article on prison life. On returning home he described the horrors he had seen, and his description made a deep impression on the mind of his little daughter Mary. The writer and his offspring, a week later, were in a train together, which stopped at a station near a gloomy building. A man asked:

"What place is that?"

"The County Jail," another answered promptly.

Thereupon Mary embarrassed her father and aroused the suspicions of the other occupants of the carriage by asking in a loud, shrill voice:

"Is that the jail you were in, father?"—[Judge's Library.

Sloan.

Of the late Samuel Sloan, the noted railroad man, a New York broker said the other day:

"Mr. Sloan owed a great part of his success to his prudence. He was never reckless, he never threw good money after bad, but, once he perceived that an investment had a hopeless look, he abandoned it coolly, and turned his attention to something more promising.

"Most of us are different. We lose our heads over some trifling loss. We waste a dollar's worth of time and energy trying to recover a penny. In short, we are like the man who lost the copper.

"There was a man who dropped a penny down a crack in a board walk. With a wire and a stick he tried to recover the penny for a long time. Then, shaking his head sadly, he went home.

"But the next morning he returned early to the spot, and he was bending over the crack with a quarter in his hand when a friend happened along and said:

"'Hello, Joe, what are you doing there?'

"'Well, I'll tell you,' said the other. 'Yesterday I dropped a penny down this crack. Now I reasoned that it wasn't worth my while to pull up four or five boards to find a penny, but last night in bed an idea struck me; I'm going to drop a quarter down to make it worth while.'"

J. ULRICH, traffic manager of the Keystone Telephone Company of Philadelphia, has deleted the "please" from the vocabulary of his exchange girls. They will hereafter say "Ring off" instead of "Please ring off," "Call again" instead of "Please call again," and so on.

"The word 'please,'" Mr. Ulrich explained to a reporter, "was used in our telephone business 900,000 times a day. Allowing half a second for its utterance, that meant a daily waste of 125 hours. Why shouldn't those hours be saved, saved for some better use?

"You know," Mr. Ulrich went on, "I believe in few words. Wasted, superfluous words mean spoiled effects. What, for instance, could have been more telling, more effective, than the note, containing not a single superfluous or wasted word, that a man once wrote to his physician?

"This note ran:

"'Dear Doctor: I had a few words with my wife last evening. Please send me a bottle of lotion.'"

A Native Dish.

STEPHEN THAW, a nephew of Harry Kendall Thaw, is a missionary in Syria, and to his friends in Pittsburgh the young man occasionally writes the most amusing letters. In a recent letter Mr. Thaw described a dinner that a Chinese merchant had given to an English traveler in a remote Syrian town. The Chinaman could speak no English, and the Englishman could speak no Chinese; nevertheless the dinner went off very agreeably. The two men sat facing one another in silence, while a neat Chinese butler served them dish after dish of surpassing delicacy.

There was one dish especially that pleased the Englishman. It was a rich stew of onions, pork, mushrooms and a dark, tender, well-flavored meat that seemed like duck. The Englishman ate heartily of this stew. Then he closed his eyes and lifted his hands and shook his head with an air of ecstasy. After this pantomimic compliment to the dish, he said interrogatively:

"Quack, quack?"

"No, no,' said the Chinaman. "Bow-wow-wow."

A Troop of Witnesses.

A STORY is told concerning a captain of cavalry in the old army days who was inclined to gaze too long upon the flowing bowl. He finally came to grief and was placed under arrest, charged with drunkenness. The judge-advocate who was sent to conduct the court-martial was fond of the bluff old soldier, and in his heart hoped that he might be able to clear himself.

On the day of the trial the two, defendant and prosecutor, were talking.

"They have me at last," said the captain. "I do not see how I can clear myself."

"Have you no witnesses?" asked the judge-advocate.

"None," replied the despondent officer.

"Suppose we call your first sergeant and ask him."

The first sergeant was duly called.

"Have I any witnesses," asked the captain. The old Irishman was quite certain that the captain did have witnesses. He was dismissed with orders to bring the witnesses, equipped with side arms, to the captain's tent in a half hour. At the time appointed the sergeant stepped into the room, saluted, and reported: "Sor, the troop is ready to be sworn."

Wanted, a Stone Master.

"LOOK here," said a gentleman to a railway station master, "don't you think that thing is rather dangerous where——"

"Ah!" interrupted the official addressed, who had just been promoted, "you've noticed that barrow, have you, sir; you're going to make a suggestion about the place where it ought to stand, I suppose? Might I go on, sir, and ask your opinion about the position of the booking office? Do you think that the signal box is in the right place? Shouldn't the station master's house be shifted a few yards farther west? Any opinion you would like to express, sir, shall have immediate attention."

The traveler turned away, and the station master turned round triumphantly to the guard of a train waiting in the siding.

"Ha! ha!" he laughed, "did you see the sport I had with that 'old nuisance?' I soon shut him up."

"I'm not so sure of that," replied the guard. "He's the traffic manager!"—[Pearson's Weekly.

"You know what coffee is?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, sinkers are doughnuts."

The waiter smiled frostily.

The Only Way Out.

PROF. LORENZ, the famous Viennese physician and surgeon, who, during his visit to the United States, some time ago, came also to Los Angeles, to perform a marvelous operation on a little girl, addressed, after his return from Los Angeles to the city of New York, the faculty and student body of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of that city. In the course of his interesting lecture, Prof. Lorenz had occasion to point out to his listeners the serious dilemma in which certain operations may place the operating surgeon by the fact that, while the operation may give relief to the sufferer one way, its effects may necessarily create new and serious complications in some other bodily function. Prof. Lorenz then paused.

"In such a dilemma," he continued smilingly, "the operating surgeon may not find always such excellent advice as the conductor of an omnibus received in a certain perplexing situation. There are parts in my beautiful native city, Vienna, where, as a cherished remnant from older days, is still used the old-fashioned omnibus as a means of passenger transportation. One day two old ladies were among the passengers when the old vehicle rattled slowly through the streets.

"'Conductor,' said one of the old ladies, 'please close that window, or I shall catch my death from the draught.' The conductor closed the window. Instantly the other old lady spoke up.

"'Conductor,' she said, 'if you don't open that window I shall suffocate.' With an apologetic glance at the first lady, the conductor raised the window again. But by doing so he opened a sharp controversy between the two women, one of them insisting that the window should be closed, while the other with equal determination demanded that it should be opened.

"The conductor's rather perplexing dilemma was relieved by the advice given by an elderly gentleman among the passengers.

"'Conductor,' he said quietly, 'please, open the window. One of the ladies will then catch her death from the draught; then close the window and the other will suffocate. Thus we shall be rid of both.'"

Wu's Withering Wit.

MINISTER WU is receiving ample warning that his sharp tongue may be curbed to the advantage of his country. The Chinese Minister left many enemies behind when he quit his post here, and his return will find most of them implacable. More than one American statesman found that he could not have fun with Wu and escape unharmed. A diplomat is supposed to smooth things over, but Wu could not resist a challenge to a verbal passage at arms. Once at a little poker fiesta at the home of a Senator, in which Wu sat, a certain Representative from the West, known for his incurable habit of "busting out" with observations that were better suppressed, leaned over to Wu and said something to about the following effect:

"Mr. Wu, I hear that there's a movement in China looking to the abolition of the pigtails you fellows wear. What do you wear the fool things for, anyway?"

"Why," inquired Wu, peering at the margins of the cards that had just been served to him, "do you wear your fool mustache?"

"Oh," replied the Representative, "I've got an impossible mouth."

"Er—so I should suppose, from some of your remarks," observed Wu, calmly, tossing some chips to the center to open the jackpot.—[Kansas City Times.

A New Dodge.

HILARY K. Adair, the Western detective, said in Duluth of a wiretapper:

"The man escaped us. He had invented a new dodge. That, you see, is the trouble about the science of detection. The minute we detectives master all the old tricks, something new springs up.

"It is rather like the story of the thirsty butler. When you keep a cask of beer under lock and key in the cellar, only giving the butler the keys when you want him to draw you a pitcher, then, if you make him whistle all the time he is out of sight on this errand, you are bound not to be defrauded, eh? Or so, at least, it was in the past.

"Well, there was a man who engaged a new butler, and, as of yore, the first day he wanted beer, he said:

"'James, here are the keys to the beer closet. Take this pitcher down and fill it. And mind you whistle all the while you are gone.'

"'Yes, sir,' said James, and he departed whistling.

"The clear, sweet notes of 'Home, Sweet Home,' floated upstairs for a minute or so; then they ceased. The master rushed to the cellar door.

"'James,' he shouted, angrily, 'what are you doing?'

"With a gulp James answered:

"'Nothin', sir, only changin' the tune.'"

"Yassah, I get it right off."

Pat Finds Money.

PAT had heard of the fabulous wealth of America, and that one could find money lying around everywhere. Upon his arrival in New York he set about to see the town. He had gone but a block when he found a $10 gold piece lying on the sidewalk. He picked it up, put it in his pocket and resumed his walk. Soon he met a beggar, on whom he bestowed it, saying that the beggar needed it worse than he did, and he could get more. By a singular coincidence he found another gold piece and parted with it as in the former case. But he found no more, and soon became thirsty and looked around for some more money. Finally he espied a small circular piece of shining tin and picked it up thinking it was more money. So, with his new-found wealth, he entered a barrel-house and called for a drink, which was forthwith given him, and in payment for the same he laid down the piece of tin. The bartender refused it, saying:

"That's tin."

"Tin?" queried Pat. "Oi thought it was foive. Have wan on me."—[Judge's Library.

ROSE HISTORY.

MORE THAN ONE THOUSAND VARIETIES IN EXISTENCE.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE history of the rose family is an interesting one, extending back a long period of years, though the modern up-to-date rose is of comparatively recent origin. As an example, La France was the first of its type, and was produced in 1867—just forty years ago. The rose primarily consisted of native species less than a hundred in number and conceded by conservative botanists as comprising less than half a hundred species. But from these hundred or less species have sprung more than a thousand horticultural varieties. This large number of garden varieties represents roses which vary most remarkably in climatic requirements so that some may be found for every quarter of the globe. It is in the temperate zones, however, that roses flourish, and still better in the northern hemisphere. It is in the same region, too, that most of the native species are found. Roses do not like extreme heat, and in the tropics few native species are found except well up in the cool atmosphere of the mountains. We have ample evidence that cool climates are preferred by the rose from the fact that England and the coast region of Oregon both grow finer roses than Southern California, though we may pick some every month in the year, whereas they cannot. All the parents of the modern race of roses were single, though seldom are they seen in commerce today and less in California than elsewhere. Rosa rugosa and R. centifolia are the wild species most commonly known, though occasionally an American species is cultivated. In another article we will give the several types of roses known today together with one or more names of well-known varieties belonging to each type. Such a key should enable the rose fancier to readily recognize to what class a rose belongs, though rosarians occasionally disagree, and it is now known that numerous crosses have in some cases resulted in the parentage becoming lost in obscurity by reason of the complexity of races involved.

The Thickest Trunk.

In Africa there grows a tree of the Malva family known to science as Adansonia digitata which is said to have the thickest trunk of any in the world. The tree does not attain a greater height than sixty feet, but those having a diameter greater than thirty feet are common. The common name is Baobab, but in extreme Southern Florida, where it is occasionally grown, it is called Monkey's Bread. The name of Egyptian Gourd has also been used, though with what warrant we cannot say, as it does not belong to the gourd family.

It bears large, pendulous, five-petalled white flowers about six inches across, and the fruit is a large woody basin filled with a mealy pulp, and have been grown in tropical Florida to a foot in length. No doubt their resemblance to members of the gourd family is responsible for one of the popular names. It is said that the Africans greatly revere the Baobab, and hold all religious services beneath its branches. Some travelers state that the interior portion of the fruit is used for food and drink, but those grown in Florida would not in any wise appeal to a white man's palate.

Prunings and Trimmings.

Those who garden are often at a loss to know what best to do with plant trimmings too green to burn, and as is often the case where there is no convenient place to burn them. E. S. H., of Los Angeles, sends the following as her solution to the vexing problem:

"Dig a saucer-shaped basin six feet across and six to ten inches deep. In this pile all trimmings, leaves and weeds, throwing on a few shovels of earth occasionally. About this basin plant a circle of nasturtiums—the climbing variety—or sweet peas or morning glory. Water often. By the time your vines are climbing, your trash heap will be high enough, and a new one one may be started. You will have a mound of extra fine leaves and blossoms, and the rubbish heap will be one of the most beautiful spots in your garden. By the time the vines have made their growth, the material beneath will be sufficiently decayed to be ready to spade in to enrich the soil, and trash heap Number two will be in blossom. Then start Number three."

Floral Decorations.

Whether plants or cut flowers are used in the house, strive for simple, rather than striking or spectacular, effects. If the subjects are in themselves beautiful, they will prove sufficiently spectacular. Do not mix the cut flowers and pot plants—let each be individualized and their distinctiveness accentuated by giving each their proper places. Study color values and do not get colors together where one must suffer by contrast. If a magenta is used have green or white, or both, between it and any other flower. The same should be done with two or more shades of pink. Home decoration encourages originality and the cultivation of good taste, and should be followed at all seasons of the year, for with us green and colored plant life is ever abundant.

Open Lawns.

In planting the new home grounds, the first consideration must be the preservation of as wide and unbroken expanse of lawn as is possible to attain. This is the first fundamental rule of landscape gardening, and if violated good effects as a whole are entirely out of question. Many seem to think there are other roads to beauty of planting, but they are wrong. Only one way is right, and that is the right way.

Flowers Are Incidentals.

Trees and shrubs should be a fundamental part of the planting scheme, but small flowering plants are incidentals, and should never be placed in conspicuous beds in lawn centers. Place them close about the house or in the border plantation, where they may have an effective background.

Home Fertilizers.

One of the best fertilizers, purifiers and deflers is soot from the chimney. Its value for plant food is heavy, it enriches all flowers and foliage with deeper shades of color; it purifies and sweetens soil and wards off many injurious insects. Wood ashes should also be applied liberally to lawn and garden, especially to roses and carnations. Either of the above materials may be freely used in the garden, but if used in pots or other receptacles for confined soil they should be used sparingly, or, as an old Scotch gardener said: "Mixed with caution."

LA FRANCE—THE FIRST HYBRID TEA.

Lobster Claw Cactus.

This cactus, for there seems to be a doubt among botanists whether all are not varieties of a single species, is one of the most beautiful and at the same time most curious and interesting of this curious family. In their native Brazil these plants are usually found growing on trees, not however as parasites, but as epiphytes (living on air.) For this reason they do remarkably well in Southern California where, as some of carping, captious critics say, the inhabitants live on climate, and we might add, thrive most marvelously. The common name of lobster-claw or crab cactus is given because of the resemblance of the joints to those of a crab's claws and from the ends of these joints a heavy crop of blossoms of most unusual beauty are borne. If a plant be well trained a shapely house may be made from one on its own roots, but the best results come from grafting on a night-blooming cereus or upon the more common Cereus colubrinus. Some grow it upon stock of the hardwooded climbing cactus Pereskia aculeata, the Barbadoes Gooseberry, but this is not so good as those of a more succulent nature like the crab cactus itself. This plant may easily be propagated from cuttings at any time of the year by placing joints in sand or a very sandy soil and keeping warm and moist. There are at least a score of beautiful horticultural varieties.

POLYGLOT POLICEMEN.

The indefatigable Lepine, the Paris Prefect of Police, has formulated a new scheme which is designed to make strangers in Paris feel more at home. Incidentally it will enable the ubiquitous Paris police to keep better track of what is going on in the visitors' minds. M. Lepine sent sixty policemen to a school to learn English, German and Spanish two months ago and expects to put them on the streets in January. He will distribute them at stations in the quarters favored by foreigners. These polyglots will wear an insignia which will enable strangers to identify them.—[New York Sun.

The Fijians.

CHANGES WROUGHT BY TIME IN THESE ERSTWHILE CANNIBALS.

AMONG Christians—carnivorous, herbaceous, or both—there exists a strange if not actually uncanny curiosity concerning cannibalism. Travelers have done little to gratify this. Contact with the thing itself seems to turn the stomach of the most inquisitive and close his mouth. If Mrs. Beatrice Grimshaw, who wrote a book (published by Doubleday, Page & Co., and from the New York Herald's estimate of which this account is taken,) is a little franker than her predecessors, it should be remembered that the cannibals whom she met were nearly all reformed. For thirty years Fiji has been Christianized and uncannibalized. The younger natives have grown up with only hearsay knowledge of their forbears' trencher feasts on roast or boiled or deviled man.

Eight weeks after leaving the English port of Tilbury Mrs. Grimshaw caught her first glimpse of Fiji. "One morning we are all waked early by the sound of the steamer shrieking for a pilot, and when we hurry on deck we are confronted by a sparkling harbor, a green lagoon and a pile of the most extraordinary and incredible mountain ranges ever seen outside the dreams of a delirious scene painter. There are peaks 3000 and 4000 feet high, the color of a purple thundercloud, jagged and pinked like broken saws; peaks like side saddles, peaks like solitary, mysterious altars raised to some unknown god, and in the heart of the glowing violet distance one single summit, fashioned like a giant finger, pointed darkly to the sky."

Opposite the hills lay a pretty little town under the shelter of rich, green wooded heights. This was Suva, the seat of the British colonial government, having jurisdiction over the 155 islands of the Fiji archipelago, with a total area of 7400 square miles. Most of the land is contained in the two great islands of Viti Levu and Vanua Levu, which account for 4112 and 2432 square miles respectively. The two islands are exceptionally well wooded and watered, and could, it is said, support three times the population of the whole group. Suva is situated on Viti Levu. It proved on landing to be "a good-sized town with a long, handsome main street, edged on one side by neatly-cut grass and great flamboyant trees in full flower of vivid scarlet, bordering the still, green, waveless lagoon that lies inside the barrier reef. On the other side stand shops with big plate-glass windows, clubs, offices, hotels. A little way out of the town is Government House, perched upon its own high hill to catch the trade wind, long and wide and deeply verandaed, with a tall flagstaff bearing the union jack on the roof, armed native sentries pacing the avenue gates and a stately flight of steps leading to the porch, to be covered with red carpet on great occasions. . . . And this is savage Fiji!"

East of Fiji life is one long lotus-eating dream, stirred only by occasional parties of pleasure, feasting, lovemaking, dancing and a very little gardening work. Music is the soul of the people, beauty of face and movement is more the rule than the exception, and friendliness to strangers is carried almost to excess. Westward of the Fijis lie the dark, wicked cannibal groups of the Solomons, Banks and New Hebrides, where life is more like a nightmare than a dream, murder stalks openly in broad daylight, the people are nearer to monkeys than to human beings in aspect, and music and dancing are little practiced, and in the rudest possible state.

In Fiji itself the nameless dreamy charm of the eastern islands is not; but the gloom, the fevers, the repulsive people of the west are absent also. Life is rather a serious matter for the Fijian on the whole; he is kept in order by his chiefs and by the British government, and has to get through enough work in the year to pay his taxes; also, if the supply of volunteers runs short, he is liable to be forcibly recruited for the armed native constabulary, and this is the fate that oppresses him a good deal—until he has accustomed himself to the discipline of the force, when he generally makes an excellent soldier. But, all in all, he has a pleasant time, in a pleasant, productive climate, and is a very pleasant person himself, hospitable in the highest degree, honest, good-natured and clever with his hands, though of a less highly intellectual type than the Tongan or Samoan.

"Nothing can be more amiable and good-natured," says our author, "than the Fijian of today; no colored citizen in all the circle of the British colonies is less inclined to crime." Yet she notes that the great jail in Suva and the various smaller ones dotted about among the country police stations are always well filled, for the Fijian, being naturally rather thick-headed, manages, in spite of all his amiability, to run up against the British constitution every now and then. There are laws for his guidance and restraint that do not exactly please him, and, as he cheerfully drives a coach and six, or its Fijian equivalent, right through them whenever he feels inclined, it follows that an interlude of jail is an extremely common incident in Fijian life.

Once inside the jail, he is in no hurry to come out. This is said advisedly. He could readily escape if he wished. He doesn't wish to.

"The Fijian attaches no disgrace whatever to being in jail—indeed, it would be hard for him to do so, since the larger proportion of his acquaintances have passed through that experience at one time or another. He regards it as a slight inconvenience—an interruption to his occupations at home, largely compensated, however, by the delights of a trip on a steamer down to Suva and a sight of the busy capital. Furthermore, he is sure to find plenty of old friends in the jail, and they welcome him joyfully.

"Indeed, one of the comicalities of life in Fiji is to see a batch of convicts hurrying 'home' from the place where they have been assigned to penal labor.

"The gates of the jail are closed at 6, and a few minutes earlier gangs of prisoners can be seen collecting from every part of the town—some under the care of a warder, but many alone—all hurrying anxiously toward the jail. As the hour draws nearer they hurry more and more, and many begin to run, with anxiety painted plain on their copper countenances. If they are not in at 6 o'clock a terrible punishment awaits them—a punishment they would do anything to avoid. Discipline must be kept up, and there is no mercy for the prisoner who neglects the closing hour.

"What happens to him?

"He is shut out of jail.

"No supper for him—an unspeakable calamity this—no evening gossip, no bed! Until tomorrow he is an outcast without a home. You may see him, perhaps, if you drive past the jail a little after sunset, crouching low on the threshold of the gateway, wiping his tearful eyes with the hem of his broad arrowed 'sulu,' and presenting an excellent living picture of the famous line, 'Oh, who would inhabit this cold world alone?'"

Contrary to the advice of all her friends in Iowa, Mrs. Grimshaw made a resolve to visit the interior of the island of Viti Levu. One or two white women, accompanied by Europeans, had seen a little of the native country in recent years. None had gone very far, and certainly none, so Mrs. Grimshaw was informed, had ever gone alone. Straightway she determined to perform the still unattempted feat.

She bought a horse, harness and equipments. She engaged a time-expired native soldier of the Governor's armed constabulary force to act as interpreter and courier, picked up a couple of carriers at Ba, the "jumping-off place" into the unknown, and set out.

A little village called Nandruga was her first stopping place. Here she was received with a hospitality that never failed her company in the island. It was night when she arrived. Her couriers unceremoniously took possession of the biggest house, shoving the sleepers out from under their mats on the floor, and depositing their various packages in convenient places. The inhabitants took all this as a matter of course, merely inquiring who the marvelous apparition might be, and then squatting outside the doorway to stare their fill in silent amazement as the visitor commenced on a feast of baked yams pilfered from their own larder.

"It was nearly time for bed now, so my men put up my mosquito net on the bed place and told the Nandrugians that only the women might remain in the house for the night. This evidently impressed the Fijians as the funniest idea they had ever struck; the men cackled with laughter at the notion of any one's objecting to sleep in a miscellaneous crowd of both sexes, while the women crowed with triumph at having the wonderful marama (lady) all to themselves. It is not often that a Fijian woman gets a chance of making herself prominent or getting the best of anything; she is simply a drudge and a slave, as a rule, eating the leavings of the men, doing all the hardest work, and pushed into a corner at once if such a rarity as a white visitor passes through, because it is not modest for her to talk to or even look at strange men, also because she is a dog, a slave, and does not count. Now the tables were turned, and the utter delight with which the women cleared the house and ran about waiting on me after the men were gone was something worth seeing. They screamed when I began to comb my hair, which was certainly unlike their own short, stiff brush, and remarked in a flattering tone that it resembled the tail of a horse! They went into hysterics of joy over all my clothes, uttered strange savage 'tck-tcks' of wonder at the riding gloves I hung up to dry, and told one another that the marama wore 'tarowis' on her hands, a word that I could easily translate without a dictionary."

One young woman, shoe-brush-haired, wild-eyed and long of tooth, caressed the visitor's arm in a passion of delight, even going so far as to set her teeth gently in the flesh and exclaim longingly: "Vinaka na kakana!" (What good food!) Mrs. Grimshaw knew that she was too young to have been a cannibal, and that her exclamation was only a compliment—somewhat left-handed, it is true—to her British skin; but the remark was interesting as an unconscious outbreak of heredity. The young lady's parents, a fine old couple residing in the next house, had, without any doubt at all, enjoyed many a hearty meal of human limbs, in the good old days, when the forearm was always considered the choicest and tenderest bit.

A WATER FUNERAL.

In the northeastern corner of France, in the Pas-de-Calais department, there is a stretch of country which possesses practically no roads. This region, lying between St. Omer and the Belgian frontier, is traversed in every direction by canals, which serve as a means of communication between the different centers of population. The people use skiffs, not unlike Venetian gondolas, and in these they glide silently to field and market. The village cure makes his round of visits by water, the very horses have to be taken by boat to and from the fields in which they work, and it is no uncommon occurrence for a frisky animal to kick out, overbalance the frail craft, and precipitate its occupants into the water. It is a region of perpetual peace, a country of eternal calm, where the noise of wheeled traffic is unknown, where the motor horn is never heard.

A frequent sight in these narrow waterways is a funeral procession. The coffin is placed on a couple of chairs and is covered with a cloth. The nearest relatives of the deceased sit behind the coffin, friends follow in other boats, and the priest recites his prayers while the little cortege makes its way slowly to the burial-place.—[Exchange.

An Odorous Industry.

GREAT PROFITS FIGURED OUT FOR SKUNK FARMERS.

By a Special Contributor.

SKUNK farming is becoming an important industry in the United States, and yet the man who suggested it was regarded as mentally off his base. One of the officials of the Agricultural Department, in speaking of the skunk industry, said:

"About eight years ago some enterprising and imaginative newspaper correspondent here in Washington sent out a purely fake story about the big money which was to be made in skunk farming, and gave this department as his authority. The result was that hundreds of letters were received from people all over the United States, asking about the matter. At that time we could give but one answer, and that was that the story was a fake, and that we had no facts relative to the industry; but since then there has been a great change, for the story did effective work. In the skunk regions the farmers 'got busy,' so to speak, and a number of skunk farms opened up, and today there are hundreds of such farms on a paying basis. Take, for instance, the State of Maine, which derives an annual revenue of from $125,000 to $150,000 from the skunk industry. Fully 25,000 gallons of skunk oil is produced in that State every year, and there is a steady demand for the oil on account of the curative properties it is said to have for rheumatism and other ailments of like nature. The increasing popularity of the oil has caused the price to advance within a year $1 a gallon, the wholesale price now being $5.25 a gallon. An average skunk produces one quart of oil, and the fur or skin always brings a good price, fashion regulating the value. At the present time the skins which are most valuable are those of the darker animals. A pure black skin is worth from $1.25 to $2.50, according to quality and size; striped-skunk skins bring in market from 40 to 60 cents, while those with a part stripe are worth an average of a dollar.

"It does not take a prolonged and expensive investigation to demonstrate the truth of what I assert. It is not necessary to send a lot of special agents from the department helter-skelter over the country to gather facts and figures. Not a bit. Just get one of these old-time fellows who has spent his entire existence on the farm and in the woods, and who is a close observer of the habits of 'varmints,' and he can give all the information desirable. An old fellow like this can tell you when the first skunk appeared on the American continent, how often they have young, how many, how fast they grow, and to what age they live. From such information as this it is easy to figure out the facts you wish, and there is but little doubt of its accuracy.

"While there are no official statistics on record, it is known that skunks—the American skunk—will begin breeding at one year old. They breed twice each year, and have litters of from five to thirteen, an average of eight to a litter. It is asserted that skunks can live on as little as any known animal, except the goat, and there is little expense in raising them. The skunk is of a different disposition to the coon, squirrel, and other animals and varmints; for the skunk never becomes tame, and it is not to be supposed that people desire them for pets.

"There are two distinct species of the skunk—the jet black and the black and white striped. The latter is regarded as one of the most beautiful creatures in the animal kingdom, but its breath is worse than an all-nighter's after partaking of gin fizzes, Limburger, herrin tails and onions.

It has been figured out that a man who understands skunk farming can begin on twenty skunks, fifteen females and five males, and in a few years he can have a healthy bank account. It is not difficult to calculate how fast these twenty skunks will increase in number. Say you begin work in the early fall, and that in December they breed. Right from the jump you have an increase of 120 skunks, putting the average of each litter at eight. Well, in June they breed again, and if the same ratio of increase is kept up, at the expiration of one and one-half years you will have 7495 skunks. In four years, without some mishap, your skunks have increased in numbers to 3,780,000. Plain figures will show that this will be the increase.

Put the pelts at $1 each, the pelts of 200 male skunks would bring $200; the oil at 50 cents an ounce would be worth $800. Then figuring as we did on the increase of skunks at the expiration of one and one-half years, you could kill 3700 male skunks, the pelts of which would be worth just as many dollars. The amount of oil gathered from this number would be 29,600 ounces, worth just $14,800. At the expiration of four years you would have killed 1,890,000 males, the pelts of which would be worth $1,890,000, and the oil, 15,120,000 ounces, $7,560,000, and still you would have 3,700,000 skunks left.

These figures are not extravagant, and it is not surprising that the skunk-farming industry has grown so rapidly. Skunk farming discounts raising cotton or any other agricultural pursuit, and if there was some way to deodorize the skunk it would make the business much more profitable.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

POULTRY IN SONOMA COUNTY.

WHERE THE BUSINESS HEN PREDOMINATES ON THE LANDSCAPE.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

I AM afraid that many of the readers of The Times who think they are in the poultry business will materially change their minds after reading this little skit. Business calls me to Sonoma county about once a year, and it is only then that the possibilities of poultry culture are really brought to my mind in tangible form. There it is carried on as a business much as the making of sugar, the growing of citrus fruits, or the production of any one of the leading staples. Hen fruit is contracted for by the carload and shipload; individual plants represent an investment of from $20,000 to $50,000 each; poultry are hatched in bunches of 10,000 per month; and the whole business is carried along much as our big financial and manufacturing concerns are. The basic industry of many of the smaller towns of the Sonoma Valley is the American business hen—her presence predominates the landscape and keeps the rural population in ready money. In the successful prosecution of the business there is no secret—it is simply a matter of creating the product at the minimum of cost and disposing of it at a fair margin of profit. To do this no elaborate plans are resorted to. For the most part the colony system prevails, which means simply that the fowls are staked out over the land in small bunches, with houses capable of accommodating from twenty-five to forty head. The larger plants go into more detail, having fine equipments of incubator and brooder-houses, machinery for grinding and mixing feeding material, usually operated by a gasoline engine, packing-houses, etc. One establishment has an equipment of twenty-seven incubators, each with a capacity of 504 eggs, which are in operation the year round. The owners were formerly produce merchants in Petaluma, but gave it up to go into the chicken business. Their investment in land, improvements and stock must be in the neighborhood of about $75,000.

If a business of this kind "makes good" in one section of the State, why not in another? All through the San Joaquin Valley there is little indication of any great development, though in Southern California plants of a few thousand head are met with. Why is this? Surely, poultry will grow equally well in other portions of the State than the Sonoma Valley. A plant well equipped and well managed much like the more successful ones in and about this northern section would pay well within easy reaching distance of Los Angeles.

Non-Returnable Egg Cases.

Commercial breeders depending on San Francisco for their market are somewhat exercised over a movement among dealers to do away with the returning of egg cases after the product has been disposed of. The custom has been to allow free returns of the empty case. This has entailed some "looking after cases both on the part of dealers and of the producers. Under the new dispensation it is proposed to make the breeder supply his own non-returnable cases. The matter is creating some little discussion in the north, though there is something to be said on both sides of the question. At present returnable cases cost the poultry farmer about 75 cents each. During the year there is some loss, due to wear and tear and to every now and then a few missing cases. In view of this there is a constant expenditure for new cases. Under the proposed non-returnable system, it is the intention to use a much cheaper case, one costing less than one-half of the returnable one, to try and get a cheaper rate from the express companies, since they are saved the expense of the "return haul," and finally to "tack on" this additional cost to the price of the product. This latter, however, is problematical and elusive. It seems to the writer that in its last analysis that the non-returnable case will be adopted, especially if the express companies make a correspondingly lower rate. If a cheap case can be devised it is to be desired, as the returnable cases soon become shopworn, and then make an unpresentable appearance.

A Unique Poultry Show.

For the first time in nearly twenty-five years Petaluma is to have a poultry show this year. This of itself is no startling piece of news, but viewed at close range it presents some startling propositions. In the first place it will undoubtedly be the greatest aggregation of high-class White Leghorns the world has ever seen. With a million and a half head to select and draw from, it is obvious that no other section can "put up" so fine an array of this breed. But beyond this, this show will bring together the largest number of expert commercial breeders that is possible in the United States, and the most interesting and varied assortment of modern appliances adapted to the successful prosecution of the poultry business. We give emphasis to this phase of the enterprise, because the average show is after all invariably a fanciers' affair. And right here, let us suggest to all who contemplate going into poultry as a business, to visit this show if possible. It will be essentially an affair to reflect the practical and money-making phases of the business in a way that cannot be seen or studied at any other similar function held in the United States.

The Grading of Eggs.

The average breeder is quite apt to think the grading of his hen fruit as to freshness, size and color of shell is a matter of no real importance, and hence his product often goes to market in an "uneven" condition and suffers correspondingly in price. Again, no two breeders will grade alike, hence the dealer invariably regrades the eggs himself.

As in fruit, the producer should always remember that his product will never be any better than it is when it leaves his hands and govern himself accordingly. To bring his eggs up to such a standard that they shall grade extra fancy without the trouble of regrading is the desideratum to attain. This implies that his flock must be of one variety, or at least laying all either brown or white-shelled eggs, and of sufficient number to market his product by the case every few days. In grading after eggs reach the dealers, breeders often suffer in having their product "go in" with eggs of same color and size, but much older, and hence far from what would be considered a really fresh egg. Where the eggs are marketed daily, graded and cleared, as they are in Petaluma, ideal conditions prevail, and the product reaches the consumers in nearly a perfect state.

What Is Really a Good Egg?

Not long since an experienced poultry grower of brown-shelled eggs made the rounds of the high-class Los Angeles hotels and restaurants in an endeavor to secure a contract for really high-class eggs at a given price, several cents per dozen above the market for a product guaranteed to be fresh, and of the highest value in nutrition and flavor. His effort was abortive, the best offer he could get was the magnificent sum of 1 cent above the daily quotation. Subsequently he tried the high-class grocery houses. Here he met with better encouragement, but the offer did not go beyond 5 cents per dozen. This did not satisfy. He then proposed to place his product on consignment, exacting that he get a set price from the dealer, who in turn was to ask a set price from the consumer. These eggs are packed in cartons, containing a guarantee as to their freshness and explaining where they come from. Result? Why these eggs are in constant demand by the best customers the establishment enjoys. The dealer gets his profit, the breeder his price, and the buyer satisfaction. Does this not prove that the survival of the fittest is also the money-maker? And this brings us back to our caption, "What is a Really Good Egg?" A good specimen of hen fruit is one produced by a hen enjoying contentment and clean environment; one that is fed on pure grains, wholesome (fresh) animal food, and nourishing green stuffs; one that does not eat tainted meats from restaurants and hotels, nor sweepings from the elevators and flour mills; a bird that is free from disease and sings her song and does her work for the glory of doing it. Only under such conditions can the best flavored and nutritious egg be produced. As for the other kind, why they are to the trade what shoddy is to broadcloth.

Does Like Beget Like?

That certainly is a somewhat euphonious as well as a misleading phrase. If we mate a Barred Rock male to Barred Rock females the progeny will certainly be of the same variety; but if we breed a prize-winning male to a prize-winning female it does not by any means follow that the entire progeny of this mating will be prize-winners. As a matter of fact, the qualifications that make a prize winner are not as a whole transmittable. Being artificial conditions created by man, it is the rare bird that possesses them even in a limted sense, and not the rank and file. The combs of males might be dubbed for a thousand years, and they would not "come that way." And since this is essentially true, we must breed in comparative great numbers in order to get even a few prize winners. Burbank in his plant creations breeds by the thousand with the hope of securing only one out of the mass calculated to meet his purposes. I have only recently seen literally thousands of White Leghorns, yet out of the whole mass there were but comparstively very few that stood a chance of winning a first at a good poultry exhibition. So pronounced is this fact that when it comes to a "new breed" the subject is beyond the province of the novice. It was not to discourage the beginner that this paragraph was written, but rather to warn the breeder about to enter the show pen that his birds "from prize-winning stock" may not duplicate the record of their parents.

A Matter of Product and Market.

A late issue of the Farmers' Tribune contains the following pertinent suggestions, which so fully endorse what we have from time to time printed in this department, that we feel justified in giving it place:

"A large part of the profits in poultry keeping depends on the marketing of the products. We must be good salesmen as well as good poultry raisers. We must have a good market to begin with, or else know how to make one. High-priced trade is not found 'ready-made,' nor can it be made to order. We must make it ourselves. We must cater to it. It requires time, ingenuity, tact and high-grade products which some one wants and is willing to pay the price asked. It is a demand that most people will not take the trouble to supply, though such a trade is worth working for.

"Solicit the trade of the rich consumer. The prices can be obtained, and the largest profits are in supplying a retail trade. This is one of the most isfactory trades to cater to, and is easy to get. The are hundreds of families in every large town who

"These customers are willing to pay four and this not worth working for? The largest profits come from superior marketing and from special adv

tages in selling eggs and stock. A little extra care skill in preparing poultry for market will often make large increase in the selling price. A casual glance the dressed poultry offered for sale in most markets reveal the fact that much of it which is of inferior might have sold for top prices if it had been prop picked and packed. People judge poultry by app ance. Careful grading of poultry pays. There is a derful opportunity which poultry men have of sup ing not only fresh eggs, but also fresh poultry thro out the year to private customers. This demand properly-fattened, well-dressed poultry is large, and particular effort has yet been made to supply it."

PARK MAINTENANCE.

SOIL RENEWAL ONE OF THE SUBJECTS TO BE CONSIDERED.

THE building of a park, like the planting of a private garden, involves more than the mere creation and many expensive problems arise that were not anticipated at the beginning. In Southern California our parks are all too new to need serious consideration along lines of difficulties now confronting some municipalities on the Atlantic Coast. Nevertheless the time will come when soil renewal and kindred subjects will perplex us. Nearly worthless tracts covered with shallow soils containing a paucity of plant food will not always maintain a vigorous tree and shrub growth even though liberal top dressing furnishes ideal sustenance for herbaceous plants. A complaint has already reached this department that Monterey pines (a short-lived tree at best) were dying in a public square, though less than twenty years of age, and in good heavy soil of fair drainage. In passing, we would recommend as an experiment application of a liberal supply of air-slaked lime ly incorporated with the soil as deeply as it be economically worked. In foreign lands reports that our Monterey pine flourishes best on well- soils containing a large percentage of lime.

many eastern parks, notably in Central Park, New many trees are dying and a still greater number ugly and unhealthful because of a depleted supply—worn-out soil. Yet this park is a comparanew one, and the question arises as to how long have to wait before facing like problems. There that the point of soil exhaustion has already ched in some of our older gardens, and valuare being lost that are worthy of extended exin seeking to preserve. A case in point is the homestead at Main and Eleventh streets, Los The fickle Monterey pine and other trees have from soil exhaustion, lack of drainage or probably easy of determination and which be easily overcome by a thorough investigation intelligent treatment. There is now the United States the chief gardener of the city a Mr. Vacherot. He has expressed himself as disappointed with the lack of vigor shown by tree and attributes much of the beauty of parks and in Paris to the fact that proper attention is soil drainage and renewal. The problem is park authorities to consider, for the private is equally vulnerable, and some attention should to the demands of grand old trees planted sevades ago. It often occurs in our semi-arid clime tree which is watered nearly every day eventually thirst. A superficial surface wetting will never roots ten, twenty or thirty feet below the surface, healthy conditions in trees of large size call for an investigation with pick and shovel.

on Billboards.

Welch of the Superior Court of Santa Clara in delivering an opinion against a billboard makes the following points which must be of interest; in fact, they are of interest to every of California, if not of the nation:

difficult to discover just the line of demarcation rates the power to restrain an act offensive to and to the sense of smell from an act offenthe eye.

billboard set opposite a man's house in a bordering upon a public highway in a country ted to homes, is just as offensive to the immeents as would be the maintenance of a pig sty offensive odors, or the maintenance of a king machine or the chime of hoarse bells. In principle there is no difference between them. It is after all only a difference in degree; each is an interference with the peaceable and quiet enjoyment of one's property.

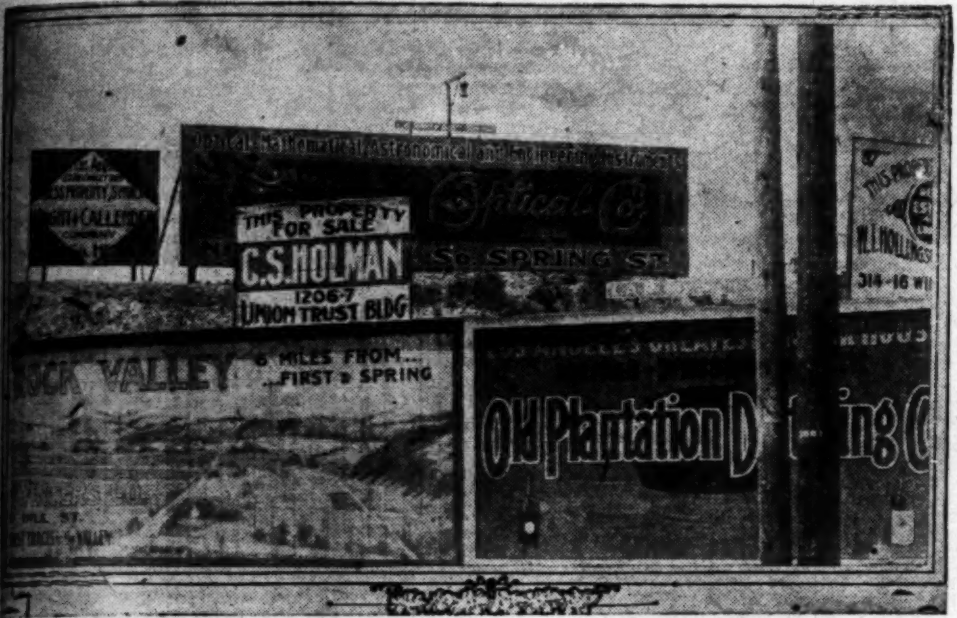
"There can be no doubt that a board of trustees may not declare an act or omission a nuisance which is not in fact a nuisance and which cannot, under any circumstances, in fact be a nuisance. But it does not follow that many acts which are not in themselves nuisances may not be declared nuisances under certain circumstances. There can be no question of the power of town authorities to declare such acts to be nuisances when circumstances justify.

"A billboard may be a nuisance or it may not, and a general advertising business carried on in a community may be detrimental to the general welfare and so become a nuisance. The proper function of the board of trustees is to ascertain and declare the act to be a nuisance.

"Under the general laws of the State, 'Anything which is injurious to health, or is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, is a nuisance.' Civil Code, Sec. 3479.

"As applied to the facts here, this section when analyzed, must of necessity leave open to some power the determination as to what act is indecent or offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property, and Section 862 of the Municipal Government Act commits to the board of trustees of a municipal corporation of the sixth class this power.

"The evidence as recited in this brief clearly shows that the act prohibited was offensive to the senses and interfered with the comfort and well-being of the community and fully justified the judgment of the board of trustees that the maintenance of the billboards under the conditions there existing, constituted a nuisance and should be prohibited."



CITY BEAUTIFUL AT GRAND AVE. AND TENTH ST.

A National Flower.

There has been incorporated a National Flower Association which is urging the adoption of a national flower. The goldenrod has heretofore passed as the national flower by general agreement, though it has no official recognition. The chief difficulty in the way of its adoption seems to be the great number of species of widely-different habit and general appearance. In Los Angeles county we have three species, none of which closely resembles the better species found in commercial plant depots. No doubt if the matter should be put to a vote of the States, a great many flowers would be put forward and a great diversity of opinion be heard. It may be necessary to forego the adoption of a flower and choose an object such as an oak spray with an acorn attached—emblematic of strength and staying qualities.

California Billboard Legislation.

The city attorney of Stockton has framed an ordinance for the Council to consider, prohibiting the placing of advertisements on billboards, fences, telegraph and telephone poles and sidewalks.

An ordinance making it a misdemeanor to erect or maintain a billboard or advertising sign larger than five feet square anywhere in the city south of Eagle avenue has been passed by the City Council of Alameda. All owners of billboards within the proscribed district and the owners of property on which billboards are located will be notified to remove them under penalty of arrest.

The Twentieth Century Park.

The up-to-date neighborhood park of today embraces more than well-kept lawns, attractive flower beds, screening shrubbery plantations, shady walks and rest-inviting settees. One of the most useful innovations are the playgrounds, in and outdoor gymnasiums, wading and swimming pools, etc., and in some systems of our larger cities we find libraries, reading, club and meeting-rooms, indoor swimming pools, baths and shower baths, etc., and the regularity with which they are visited by numberless thousands year in and year out, since their inauguration, shows convincingly that they fill a pressing demand and receive thankful appreciation.

FIELD NOTES.

Pomelo Subject to Scale.

THE question is often asked why the grape-fruit tree seems so much more subject to black scale than other citrus plants. The usual reason given is, that the pomelo's vigor of growth provides more available food for the insects than other trees, being approached more nearly in this respect by the Valencia orange. If we knew the origin and history of this citrus a different explanation might be given concerning its attractiveness to the black scale. It may be there is a flavor, or a nourishing element in the pomelo tree to which this insect adapted itself in the early history of the world. Or, that both the scale and the tree being importations here have developed coördinately as host and parasite, as have the citrus and the white scale come together in California under conditions toward each other different from those of any other country. The origin of the pomelo is a mooted question, some authorities making it Chinese and others Indian, and yet others averring that this great fruit came from Java. Perhaps no one will know till its wild prototype is found in some out-of-the-way place.

Saki-Cured Persimmons.

ABOUT one year ago I met George C. Roeding, the famous fig grower of Fresno, and he told me of certain experiments he was making upon the removal of the astringency of green Japanese persimmons. This fruit may be grown bounteously in many sections of the State, but heretofore had to be sold on the local markets on account of the tenderness of the ripe fruit in transportation. Mr. Roeding's process is to gather the persimmons somewhat green, place them in tubs previously containing saki, or Japanese rice beer, and seal them up in these vessels for about two weeks. When removed, the fruit is found to have lost its bitterness, and may be transported to distant markets. In fact, the Fresno genius has made it a success commercially this season, and recently shipped 1000 pounds of saki persimmon through a fruit company to be sold in the markets of the East. The shipping was done in twenty-pound boxes, and sent out in refrigerator cars.

This process is said to be extensively used in Japan, and Mr. Roeding's attention was called to it by the Department of Agriculture, and he was induced to make the two years' experiments now apparently successful. I know of one fruit grower near Los Angeles who has started a large orchard of Japanese persimmons for the local trade. If the eastern people take to saki-cured persimmons, I advise him to get in on the wave and send to the Orient for a lot of saki-saturated casks.

Mr. Roeding, who is one of the most enterprising and interesting fruit farmers of the Coast, has now added another special product to the canned olive, the fertilized fig, and everything else that promises success under careful experimentation and handling. The persimmon experiment is being conducted also in Florida. It might be tried in Southern Indiana and Illinois, where wild persimmons grow in thousands of tons, but cannot be eaten till a severe frost ripens and unpuckers them to the point of being perhaps the most delicate and delicious wild fruit in the temperate zone. I used to sell them at 10 cents a pail to the steamboat men on the Mississippi, and had I known the Roeding process forty years ago I might have been a great man by this time. We hope to hear more of the new process later on.

Large Peach Planting.

AS an evidence of the continued confidence in the peach, one of the largest deciduous fruit men of the State told me recently that he expected to set out 40,000 trees in the Sacramento Valley the coming season if he can find the stock anywhere on the Coast. I find optimism among the deciduous fruit interests, with the exception of the pear, and it looks so dark for that fruit that no one dare predict the outcome. Planters will scour the whole country for nursery stock, and not find enough, I fear, because of the uplift deciduous fruits have had the present season. It is fortunate for a few Los Angeles nurserymen that they have been budding large numbers of peach trees ready for the demand one year hence.

Peach Blight.

PREPARATIONS are under way in many localities of the north for spraying peach orchards to control the blight. Southern peach growers have not been troubled with this disease yet, but they should be prepared to fight it at first appearance, which may be next season. Thorough experiments have shown that spraying should be done by the middle of December, and that time will soon roll around. Mr. Chadbourne states that he used this Bordeaux mixture—16 pounds copper sulphate, 35 pounds quick lime to 100 gallons of water. He says: "I think after the first year this wash can be used a great deal weaker; but that is the way we used it on an orchard that had not produced a crop for the past three years and this year our crop was three-fourths thinned off by hand, trees tied and propped, and still the trees broke down from the overload of fruit."

I saw some very discouraging prospects in the peach orchards of the interior last season on account of the blight. But its control was predicted long since by Prof. Waite and others on account of the fungus growth's not having a deep hold, or of the spores remaining dormant and easily reached in the early winter. When nature produced the bacteria that feed upon the walnut and pear, it is a pity she chose to imbed the poisonous cells in the tissues too deep to be destroyed by any known means. Perhaps these blights may be controlled by the same means phylloxera and wooly aphis are kept in harmless state—by the selection of varieties which the same dame has rendered immune.

Cool Weather Grapes.

A STATEMENT is made in the Fresno Republican to the effect that the raisins at Madera this season contain a larger percentage of saccharine matter than usual, and they are the finest raisins ever produced there. The last summer was the coolest on record there, and some surprise is expressed that such fruit could be produced without the usual heat. The explanation is easy. It does not require great heat, but great action of other sun rays to develop sweetness in fruit. Long days of sunshine in the north make sweet sugar beets, Michigan excelling in saccharine percentages over warmer localities with greater heat. Fruits in the Antelope Valley are very sweet, on account of the clearness of the sunshine. The good old summer time should be free from haze and mist to produce the most excellent fruits.

Anderson's Appointment.

THE selection of Leroy Anderson as director of the State Farm School shows good judgment upon the part of Prof. Wickson, or Dr. Wheeler. Perhaps they both had a hand in this excellent choice. Mr. Anderson has been in charge of the California Polytechnic School at San Luis Obispo for some years, and it was in this office that I became acquainted with this earnest student and teacher. He is a graduate of Cornell University, finishing there in 1896, getting his degree from that institution six years later. Seven years ago he became a member of the University faculty at Berkeley, and for the last five years has held the position he now vacates for the greater field. It is such appointments as this that is giving our university its good standing with the farmers of the State.

Scrambling-egg Story.

A REMARKABLE story of egg dancing is published in the Grass Valley Tidings. It contains an element of strange entomological truth that may be worth notice. The discovery has been made that the oak trees of Shasta county are swarming with embryonic life. Masses of eggs adhere to the under side of the leaves, and as they advance toward maturity they dance about like electric automatons. By holding an oak twig containing any number of eggs to one's ear, a crackling sound may be heard like the splitting of electric sparks. The shell contains a tiny grub, working for release, but what shape it takes upon reaching maturity is unknown. The curiosity is attracting a great deal of attention. In many places in Redding collections of the eggs are kept on the table for the amusement of guests. Immediately the eggs begin to disport themselves, bounding about and springing into the air sometimes to the height of sixteen inches. Or, it may be seventeen. So ends the story.

I have seen some of these oak leaves. The under side was covered with Aleyrodes coranata. It is a white fly. I suppose the emergence of the mature fly might be rapid enough to make the crackling sound described in the Redding story. The fly could certainly wing to the height of eighteen inches. The sulphur bug is also a novelty in Shasta county. It thrives best in the red-hot roaster piles at the smelter of the Mountain Copper Company. But the tale here gets too complicated for any bugologist in Southern California, and the sulphur bug too Satanic to exploit in respectable society.

Walnut Blight.

PROF. R. E. SMITH of the State Pathological Laboratory has a very sensible article in a late number of the Sacramento Bee, concerning the means of minimizing walnut blight. There is an interest awakening in walnut culture in the Sacramento Valley near the Capital City, and in reply the editor, Prof. Smith, takes a hopeful view of the future for this great product. In this, he departs from the hope of spraying remedies and advocates the selection of more resistant varieties, improved methods of soil culture and their attendant use of water. It must be admitted that little progress has been made in understanding the nature of bacterial disease of vegetable origin. So long as it is impossible to destroy these poisonous organisms that attack the walnut, pear, grape and citrus by artificial means we must look to the antecedents of the trees selected, to the reinforcement of their resistant vitality and to fruiting them during the shortest possible season of blight activity. Of certainty location has a great deal to do with walnut blight conditions, but, inasmuch as even the localities ordinarily least affected are subject to the malady, the control of this disease is of general interest.

Students of these obscure but destructive troubles may in the future make more progress in the study of parentage than in bacterial analysis. Perhaps there is no disease germ more extensively studied than that of consumption, yet its destruction seems impossible by medicants. However, much progress has been made in its control, if not elimination, by appealing to nature's simple laboratory. Fresh air, exercise and dietary measures have been most destructive to the germs tha the great white plague. It is not visionary to call similar restoratives in the case of the walnut can call to mind scores of pear trees, some of them the far side of the century mark, which will never a touch of the blight if they live a hundred years though their finer kindred adjacent have been out by this implacable bacterium.

So it is with the native walnut trees. With the ception of a harmless aphid and a few leaf eaters primeval species of the walnut have no enemies, tainly none bacterial. We should encourage Smith's line of investigation. It is extremely for it has to do with disease of a tree thousands of from the origin of the plant. This, in addition obscurity of the laws of varieties and species will progress very slow, at best, but most remarkable altogether helpful when discovered. Even though blight-resistant walnut should be discovered breeding and selection, it would be strange to altogether immune so far from the tree's original ronment. Hence the necessity of investigating avenue—varietal, cultural and sectional. In some ties in Southern California, isolation has kept pear blight, but immunity cannot be had for the nut where this product has reached the enormous of the present time.

Fruit Prices.

GENERALLY throughout the State the fruit have this year received fine prices for their It is not necessary for me to refer in detail to the prices the citrus-fruit producers have enjoyed, for ing pocketbooks and plethoric bank accounts evidence every time a farmer draws on his overalls meets the obeisance of his banker. This prosperity not confined to the citrus people by any means. I a stranger a day or so ago who said he received ton for his entire crop of merchantable peaches. cultivation of table grapes has been lucrative, and grape prices good. Apples are high, and deciduous shippers generally prosperous, and altogether the has been one of extreme encouragement to most of fruit growers of the State.

This condition is most reassuring when we recall pessimism prevailing in some quarters up to the time. Most of the dark forebodings have been by the achievements of the present season. Orchard are reminded by this overturning of the pessimists, through the decimation of fruit pests and disease, aging of orchards and vineyards, the natural tion of the soil, the every-year climatic exigencies, many other conditions and emergencies, fruit growing coming more into the class of scientific pursuits. stead of abandoning the various fruit industries, farmers are specializing, using their brains more in general and taking permanent courage in the ation of the business.

TREE FROM A HANDSPIKE.

"There is a river birch tree on the banks of the Fork branch of the Little Coal River in Boone West Virginia," said M. C. Eldred of Madison, W. "and it would go hard with any man who put an it. That tree has a story.

"When the Mexican War began, in 1816, a recru officer visited a lumber camp in the vicinity of Mad seeking enlistments from the sturdy woodsmen were at work there. Among them was a giant lum man named Jim Martin.

"He was using a handspike made from a river sapling recently cut and still green. Eager to go front, he thrust his handspike deep into the soft of the river bank and went away with the recruiting cer.

"The handspike Jim Martin used was too big heavy for any of his fellows to handle, and it was sticking where he had jabbed it into the ground. next spring it was noticed that it was putting green shoots, showing that it had rooted in the gr

Prize Apples.

THE recent sale of a number of boxes of Winter Banana apples at Hood River at $8 per box has brought up the question of record prices for apples. The price named has been mentioned in Portland newspapers as the highest paid in Oregon since 1852. The horticultural annals of the State show that in 1856 one box of Spitzenberg apples grown in the Willamette Valley, and shipped to San Francisco, netted the shipper $60. In the same year three boxes of Winesaps were sold in Portland for $102, or $34 per box. In 1855 6000 boxes of apples grown in Oregon were sold at prices which netted the shippers $20 to $30 per bushel. In 1854, 500 boxes were sold at from $60 to $90 per box. The first lot of apples grown on grafted trees were sold in Portland by the grower, Henderson Luelling, at $1 per apple. There were seventy-five of them.

Smyrna's Raisin Crop.

ACCORDING to Consul E. L. Harris of Smyrna, the raisin crop in that part of Asia Minor this year is expected to be 40,000 to 45,000 tons. The crop in 1905 was 63,000 tons, but last year it barely reached 25,000 tons. Freight rates to the United States are expected to be lower than ever, owing to the increased number of steamship lines trading between the United States and the Levant. The introduction of American vines into Asiatic Turkey has not been regarded as successful, owing to their producing fruit freely from only ten to twelve years, while the native vines produce fruit up to the age of eighty and even 100 years, and are at their best when about fifty years old.—[Orchard and Farm.

Why Trees Die.

EXTENDED experiments recently conducted in this country have shown clearly that fruit trees suffer very materially, and are often killed outright, when grass is allowed to grow under the tree and close up to the trunk. Various probable reasons for this effect, such as the removal of plant food and of water by the grass, also the supposed liberation of carbonic acid, which might prove injurious to the roots of the trees, were respectively demonstrated to be outside the primary cause of injury, and, finally, after seven years' work, it was concluded that the injurious effect could only be due to some poisonous substance formed in the soil by the roots of the grass. On the other hand, it is a well-known fact that in many instances, considerable difficulty is experienced in obtaining a growth of grass under trees. C. A. Jensen has given an account of certain experiments bearing on this point in science. There is distinct evidence that plants produce toxic conditions in the substance in which they grow, and as a rule the excretions given off by the roots of a certain plant are more toxic to the same or a nearly-related plant than to plants not so closely related. The effect of tree seedlings on the growth of wheat was tested, and after eliminating as a cause of injury such factors as removal of plant food or water by the tree roots, it seemed that the roots of the latter had some direct effect on the growth of the wheat, which suffered in all the experiments. The seedlings were placed in plant pots, where the roots of the tree and those of the wheat plants were in close contact. Trees of various kinds were used in the experiments, and the retarding influence, although found in every instance, differed in degree; cherry was least active in checking growth, pine most so. The conclusion arrived at was that the effect of trees on wheat appears to be due to the excretion by the trees of substances toxic to wheat.—[Scientific American.

Pumped Through Plants.

Few realize how continually the plants that grow on the earth are pumping water from the soil into the air. Every normal plant is engaged in this work, and the surface of the earth is covered with them except in the regions of eternal frost and the great deserts. Experiments made in Utah showed that through June, July and August of one year each foot of soil lost by evaporation of moisture through plants over nine pounds of water. When this is multiplied by the number of feet in an acre it gives over 190 tons of water for a single acre. When this is extended to the plant-covered surface of the world it indicates the fact that a good-sized ocean of water is by the plants pumped up into the air each year, and that for each day a good-sized sea is so returned back to the element from which it came—the air.—[Coleman's.

Blackberry Care.

A DISH of luscious blackberries fresh from the vines while the dew is yet on them is a magnificent breakfast dish. They are enjoyable to the same degree as the ones bought of the vegetable selling Chinaman, dried and hard at center, disappointing. Plenty of water with fertility and tilth makes luscious fruit. With blackberries it is so simple to produce such fruit that it is a wonder there are not more in our gardens. A half dozen vines are sufficient for one family. In fact, the writer picked from one vine, the only one in our garden, many fine breakfast dishes this season. It had plenty of water and fertilizer. But it paid. Don't plant many—unless you expect to sell or give away—but plant a very few fine vines.

Regarding culture, a writer in Farm Progress says: "The essential point in growing blackberries successfully is a moist soil, not one in which water will stand, but one rich enough in humus to hold sufficient moisture to carry the plant through the growing season. It is usually best to plant the blackberry bushes in the fall, setting the smaller growing kinds 4x7 feet apart and the larger varieties 6x8 feet. Thorough cultivation throughout the season will help in a material degree to perfect a good crop. The soil should be cultivated very shallow, so as not to disturb the roots. Breaking the roots starts a large number of suckers which have to be cut out and destroyed.

"Blackberries, like dewberries and raspberries, bear but one crop on the cane. That is, canes which spring up one year, bear the next. From three to six canes are sufficient to be kept in each hill. The superfluous ones should be thinned out as soon as they start from the ground. The old canes should be cut off soon after fruiting and burned. The new shoots should be pinched back at the height of two or three feet if the plants are to support themselves. If they are to be fastened to wires, the canes may be allowed to grow through the season and be cut back when tied to the wires in the winter or early spring."—[California Cultivator.

Tree Raspberry.

A "TREE RASPBERRY" is said to be the latest fake in the East. The horticultural department of the University of Wisconsin Experiment Station is warning farmers against buying the "Tree raspberry bushes." Claims of indorsement are commonly made by agents without the knowledge of any one connected with the station. "It has been the policy of the Horticultural Department not to recommend novelties, for it has always advised the farmers of the State to purchase only known varieties and let the experiment station test the merits of the new varieties. The horticultural department has not tried the 'tree raspberry,' and has not had this plant brought to its attention."

Salsify-"Mock Oyster."

THIS is a vegetable that deserves wide cultivation. It will thrive on even poor soil, and manure should never be put close to the plants, as it causes them to throw out so many fibrous roots instead of attending strictly to business and making one strong root that will grow larger than a parsnip, and if rightly cooked is gifted with the faculty of making you think your meal is from the scallops of the ocean. After the thistle-like blossoms have dropped the seed, if the ground is moist, it will come up thickly and must be thinned to six inches apart, or if transplanted it must be done when quite young, as with all deep-rooted plants. It grows prolifically in California, and more than supplies the place of the parsnip that gets quite surly because the thermometer does not drop down below zero, so it can hibernate all winter.—[Kerman News.

Crop Rotation.

INTERESTING experiments are to be made on the islands about Stockton to determine whether or not soil that has been well exhausted from continuous crops of potatoes can be restored to its original fertility and productiveness. The tests are to be made by an expert of the United States Department of Agriculture. Potatoes have been grown so long and continuously upon the land under inquiry that it now produces only half as much as it originally did.

Potatoes are known to be very exhaustive to soil, but it has never been definitely ascertained just what elements are extracted from the soil by potatoes. Chemical analyses will be made of the land about Stockton to determine this. Tests will also be made in rotation of crops as a possible means of restoring the "potato sick" land. Rotation is known to be a very effective means of conserving fertility in the raising of the cereals and cotton. It is not unlikely that the same is true of potatoes. At any rate, rotation and diversification of crops do no harm, and in most instances do the soil much good, preserving its fertility and maintaining its productiveness.—[Fresno Herald.

Coontie or Comptie.

THIS is the common name of a plant found growing wild in this State, very abundant in some sections. Where it does not grow wild it is occasionally found in cultivation as an ornamental plant. It is offered in florists' catalogues as Zamia integrifolia, but Prof. Bailey, in his Cyclopedia of American Horticulture, says that this species is not found wild in the United States, but that the species offered under the name are all either Zamia Floridana or Z. pumila. The large root is very full of starch and has been used for a long time. The following item from the Punta Gorda Herald shows what is being done, and that there are still openings for more in the same business:

"The Comptie plant grows wild all over this Punta Gorda region. According to all accounts, 'there's millions in it' for small capitalists looking for paying investments."

How this comptie plant may be made a source of great profit, may be understood from reading the following from the Miami Morning News:

"For some time past, Hurst Bros., of Biscayne, have been making comptie starch in limited quantities, but are now preparing to largely increase their output. For the past year or two, they have been operating a sawmill and supplying lumber to the Key West extension. The stopping of work, however, has curtailed the orders for lumber, and Hurst Bros. will now devote more attention to starchmaking. They are experienced manufacturers of starch, and say that, for culinary purposes, the comptie starch excels the finest arrow root. Comptie is a plant which grows everywhere in the pine woods of Florida. It has comparatively little foliage, but produces a large bulb from which the starch is made. They will dispose of most of their products in Havana.—[Florida Agriculturist.

COLORS SEEN IN DREAMS.

Red and yellow are the dream colors if Dr. Havelock Ellis is right. No other hues come to the dreamer of dreams. Simroth has declared that red is the most primitive of colors, and long ago protoplasm from which human beings derived their origin on the new earth probably responded to or was affected by red color waves.

In the depth of the sea the algae or seaweed are red. With the savage red is the favorite color, and for a bright piece of red calico African savages gladly would give valuable elephant tusks.

Red strikes the note of intense emotions. It is the color of joy, exultation, jubilation. Savages paint themselves red and rejoice at seeing each other in burning hues. German women of the early ages daubed their bodies with brilliant red and yellow, and considered themselves most beauteously adorned.

On sacred festivals in Rome and Greece Pliny records red was smeared over the statues of Jupiter and was the color of religious rejoicing.

The human eyes, it is said, can distinguish 100,000 different hues or colors, and can appreciate and differentiate twenty shades of each hue. In other words, the eye is capable of 2,000,000 color impressions.—[Chicago Tribune.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S VISITING CARDS.

The German Emperor believes in being sufficiently represented, even on a visiting card. No ordinary-sized piece of pasteboard will suffice him, for William's cards measure no less than six inches in length and four in width. On the upper line is the single word "Wilhelm," and below are the words "Deutscher Kaiser" and "König von Preussen." The words are printed in large, fat, German script letters. Of course, the Emperor does not carry these imposing sheets of pasteboard himself; they are confided to his chasseur, or body servant, who follows him.

The other sovereigns of Europe are content with more modest visiting cards, with the words upon them in Latin script. Among the simplest in size and appearance are those of the Emperor of Austria and the Prince of Wales. The Prince has two sets of cards, one for use abroad and the other for England. The English one bears the words "The Prince of Wales," the other the French equivalent, "Prince de Gales."—[Tit-Bits.

ONE ON SAM CRAWFORD.

They are telling a funny story about big Sam Crawford up in Detroit. It deals with the time when Sam was a barber out in Nebraska, long before he stepped into major-league baseball, although at that time Sam was clouting 'em out on the nose in the semi-weekly games he used to play out in the wild and woolly.

Sam, as every one who knows the great ball player will tell you, is a ready-witted fellow and quick at repartee. Well, when he was running a barber shop in Nebraska he was also the western agent for a hair restorer and Sam tried his best to work the stuff on his bald-headed customers. Sam is himself inclined to the above-mentioned affliction. But the story goes, Crawford was one day trying to work off a bottle on a customer when the man turned to the ball player and said:

"Why, you're bald-headed yourself. Why don't you use a bottle of the restorer?"

"Well, you see," glibly replied Sam, "I represent before using, and my brother at the next chair over there represents after using."

The story doesn't say whether the customer bought a bottle or not, but Sam laughs every time he hears any one refer to the incident.—[Washington Star.

NESTS OF THE GOLDEN EAGLE.

Every pair of eagles whose habits I have had an opportunity of watching over a period of a few years would seem to have invariably at least two alternative sites for their nests; some have three, and I know of one with four sites. In fact, I only know of one pair out of many which habitually resort to but one place and only one.

The reason for this is, however, apparent, for owing to its situation it has never been disturbed. The nest is in a small cavern on the face of an absolute wall of limestone rock some 800 feet high, at about 400 feet from the summit. Above the cliff is a talus of loose stone at an angle of 45 degrees or so, above which again rise other precipices. To reach the nearest point above this nest would be a long day's work.—[Saturday Review.

Cleaning Up.

FROM a cutting-down of the force of the city health department, to an extra expenditure of over $20,000 in the month, is a considerable jump. That is what the city fathers are doing, in response to a request of the doctors, the money to be used in a general clean-up, and rat-catching campaign. There are to be nine medical inspectors, at $150 a month, and several hundred other employés, at wages ranging down to $2.25 per diem each, "and up."

Whether or not this sudden inspiration of cleanliness is due to a fear of the bubonic plague matters little. It is a good thing to have a clean-up. As the editor has shown, it is the only rational protection against epidemics of disease, of any kind. So, let us welcome a clean-up, by whatever motive it may be actuated. You have to threaten some people with the jail—or the devil—to make them behave themselves.

As to the rat-catching business, the editor regards that as a waste of the people's money—a foolish concession to the microbe superstition. If you remove the filth upon which the rats feed, you accomplish your purpose, and if you remove the rats and leave the filth, you are no better off than you were before.

There is no need whatever for any anxiety on the score of a possible outbreak of the bubonic plague, or any other such disease, in Los Angeles. Sporadic cases we may have, of this or any other filth disease, as the city grows, and the accumulation of filth grows with it. Until recently, Los Angeles had nothing of a slum district, but now, unfortunately, with our incoming of cosmopolitan population, that also is coming, with other "modern improvements." Let us make up our minds to hold it in check from the beginning. In a city that is large enough to give a half acre of land to every family, there is certainly no excuse for crowding the population together in unsanitary tenements.

It will do little good if we make a spurt for a month, and then leave filth to accumulate again. Our streets should be kept much cleaner than they are. The ungraded streets, especially, are a menace to health. Here is an extract from an article by S. T. Erieg, in the October Naturopath, on "Filthy Streets as Disease Producers:"

"The earth that composes the substance of our streets, together with other accumulation, remains for years. The rains make a mortar and mud bed of the streets, the constant accumulating of filth is mixed with the mud, the sun dries this mass and it is wafted on the breezes and finds access in the homes and lodgment in the human lungs. Thus the condition of filthy accumulation, mud and drying, goes on for years and for years, is taken into the human system with disastrous results. To add still worse to this unhealthy condition, the expectoration on the sidewalks finds its way into the street by the aid of the house broom, and the broom is carried in the house again and perhaps used on the floors to send millions of germs flying about the house."

Mayor Harper proposes that we should have two city housecleaning holidays, one in the spring, the other in the fall. A good idea.

As the editor has said, on more than one occasion, we need to be specially careful in regard to cleanliness, in a city with a climate like that of Los Angeles, where practically no rain falls during six months of the year, to cleanse the atmosphere and the ground. Never before, in the history of the United States, has a city of over a quarter of a million people been built up in a climate like that of Southern California. In San Francisco, they have the heavy ocean breezes all the year round to purify the air. Otherwise, the bubonic plague, of which there have been a number of cases in that city, would be likely to develop into a real epidemic, for the sanitary condition of San Francisco is exceedingly bad.

In conclusion, remember, as the editor has frequently told you, that cleanliness—outer and inner cleanliness—is the only rational means of averting filth disease, such as cholera, typhus, smallpox and the plague. You may suffer from your neighbor's eternal filth, if you are internally filthy, but you cannot suffer, if you yourself are internally clean.

Sexuality and Suffering.

A WRITER in the California Medical and Surgical Reporter, for September, asserted that gonorrhoea and syphilis are now acknowledged to be the most potent factors of depopulation, particularly in America, and that even France has a greater birth rate than our own country.

The American cause for this decreased birth rate is, the author says, the sterility of women, brought about by gonorrhoeal infections from their husbands. This accords with the medical opinion recently quoted in these columns. A Washington physician, a specialist in genito-urinary diseases, declares that in cases of unfruitful marriages the husband is the sterile member of the family in about one case in six. To this may be added the infection which the young married man conveys to his wife, and which renders her sterile. The importance of this may be estimated from the statement that of every thousand married men, about 800 have had gonorrhoea.

Yet this writer asks whether "we"—that is to say the medical profession—should publish these facts to the laity! Strange, is it not, that there should remain, among those who practice the healing art, as members of the allopathic school, an idea that there is something secret and sacred about the subject of health and disease, that may only be whispered, with bated breath, among those who have received a diploma in a medical college?

It is only fair to say that the writer of the above article concludes that much good might be accomplished by the education of the people in regard to the exceedingly important subject upon what he treats. Sure enough.

As the editor has previously remarked, it is sad to realize that the normal actions and frequent aberrations of our sexual functions, the most important which we possess—since without them the human race would cease to be—should, through a feeling of false modesty, be deemed an unfit subject for public discussion, in word or print. Thus, young people are brought up in ignorance of this most important subject, or learn perverted ideas from corrupt companions. When, as so frequently happens, they meet with suffering through indiscretion, they are abandoned to the tender mercies of harpies, who make a business of preying on the fears and trials of such unfortunates.

Among the good books on this important subject that have appeared lately is "The Sexual Instinct, Its Use and Dangers as Affecting Heredity and Morals," by Dr. James Foster Scott, late vice-president of the medical association of the District of Columbia. In his preface the author says:

"The future prospects of humanity, of course, rest in the sexual domain of those who are now living, and none will dispute that the degradation of mankind is due more to sexual irregularity than to any other cause.

"It is commonly said that it is a hopeless task to turn the stream of the sexual activities into orderly channels. So, also, is it a hopeless task to do away with murder, theft, drunkenness, lying, and other prevalent misdeeds. Evils, however, can be mitigated, if not cured, if we subject them to a philosophical analysis, which may suggest remedies."

The titles of the thirteen chapters in the book are as follows: Introductory; The Sexual Instinct and the Importance of a Just Appreciation of its Influence; Physiology of the Sexual Life, A Proper Calculation of the Consequences of Impurity from the Personal Standpoint; Woman, and the Unmanliness of Degrading Her; Some of the Influences which Incite to Sexual Immorality; Prostitution and the Influences that Lead a Woman Into Such a Life; The Regulation of Prostitution; Criminal Abortion; Gonorrhoea; Gonorrhoea in Women; Complications of Gonorrhoea Common to Both Sexes; Chancroid; Syphilis, Onanism; The Perversions.

The author pertinently remarks that the two words sexuality and sensuality have become confused in the language of men of the world. Sexual power, that is necessary for the assurance of a virile race, has been prostituted by sensuality.

In regard to a subject that has been used by scoundrelly quacks to extort millions from foolish young men, and to drive many to insanity or suicide the author writes informingly.

Referring to the subject of spiritous liquors, the abuse of which promotes licentiousness, the author says: "Medicinally the stimulants are invaluable, and they have been called the milk of old people, but at best they are sharp-edged tools, and quite unsuitable for the ordinary individual." Same old talk. Why, oh, why is a poison, or a drug, suddenly changed to be something beneficial, when it is "prescribed by a physician," or taken "medicinally." The fact is that when a person is sick stimulants must necessarily have a more injurious effect on him than when he is well.

Modern dancing is criticised, as one of the leading incentives to sensuality. This is in accordance with the result of investigation of thousands of cases of prostitution, by sociologists, who all agree that the first leading cause of prostitution is love of dress and the second dancing. These figures have been gathered both in Europe and in America.

In regard to the stage, the author quotes two leading exponents of the drama as follows:

"Mary Anderson says in her book that it was 'the happiest day in my life when I quit the stage forever;' and Madame Janauschek says: 'The best thing for a young girl to do, no matter how great she expects to become, is to keep away from the theater, and do anything but go on the stage. This is what I tell them all.'

"Olive Logan herself an actress of note, whose father, mother and five sisters were members of the theatrical profession, felt obliged to abandon the stage, and wrote: 'I can advise no honorable, self-respecting woman to turn to the stage for support, with its demoralizing influences, which seem to be growing stronger and stronger day by day; where the greatest rewards are won by a set of brazen-faced, clog-dancing creatures, with dyed yellow hair and padded limbs, who have come here in droves from across the ocean.' Little improvement certainly has come about since her day."

The starvation wages paid in some stores and shops is another prolific cause of prostitution. The author quotes from the eleventh annual report of the factory inspector of New York State, urging the abolition of the sweating system:

Startling details are given regarding the regular traffic carried on in girls for immoral purposes—an organized traffic that extends all around the world.

In regard to the regulation of prostitution, the author shows that, in the nature of things, it never can be an effective protection against the dissemination of disease, because within a few minutes after having been inspected, a woman may become infected.

The author is very severe in his denunciation of the crime of abortion. To show the amazing prevalence of this crime in the United States, he quotes as follows from a report of a special committee on criminal abortion of the Michigan State Board of Health:

"To so great an extent is this (abortion) now practised by American Protestant women that, by calculation of one of the committee, based upon correspondence with nearly 100 physicians, there come to the knowledge of the profession seventeen abortions to every 100 pregnancies. To these the committee believe may be added as many more that never come to the physicians' knowledge, making 34 per cent., or one-third, of all cases ending in miscarriage. That in the United States the number is not less than 100,000, and the number of women who die from its immediate effects not less than 6000 per annum."

He quotes Lombroso, the great European criminologist, who criticises the moral laxity in this respect, in the United States, saying that this offense is so diffused that public opinion has ceased to condemn it. In reply to the arguments of those who would have it that abortion is not murder until after life has been felt by the mother, the author gives a series of interesting physiological facts, to show that there is life in the foetus at a period soon after conception. Who shall attempt to say when the soul, or spirit—call it what you will—enters the new being? The author further states that it is believed by many physicians that fully 75 to 90 per cent. of the abortions are committed by married women.

The author devotes a long chapter to gonorrhoea, an alarmingly widespread disease, that many young men are inclined to regard as little more serious than a common cold. On the contrary, the author agrees with many distinguished physicians that gonorrhoea is more to be dreaded than syphilis.

The author ignores the natural cure of this and other diseases—hydropathy, diet, etc. Under such form of treatment, both gonorrhoea and syphilis are certainly completely cured within a remarkably brief period, while all drug systems of so-called cure simply drives the poison back into the blood—to reappear in some other form after many years.

The author shows that one of the frequent effects of gonorrhoea, both in men and woman, is sterility, and that this may arise from the marriage of women to men who had gonorrhoea many years ago, and believed themselves to be cured. This is another argument against the weak, pernicious and illusive system of curing symptoms by drugs, instead of curing the disease by taking the poison out of the system. Dr. Scott quotes the German physician Noeggerath as stating that the amount of disease, suffering and sterility in women is due to their marriage with old gonorrhoeal cases, most of whom were supposed to be cured. He refers to the same German physician the amazing statement that 80 per cent. of married women suffer from latent gonorrhoea. German authorities attribute [illegible] per cent. of all diseases of the internal sexual organs of women to gonorrhoea. English and American authorities place it at 70 per cent.

It would be well if all young people, as they approach the age of puberty, could read this chapter. It would give them something serious to think about, before they start out to sow their "wild oats," the harvest of which is so often accompanied by sorrow, and disease and humiliation, not only to themselves, but to their partners in life, and to the innocent beings who spring from their loins.

In regard to syphilis, the author shows that it was first known as an epidemic in Europe almost coincidentally with the discovery of the New World by Columbus. He does not refer to the widely-believed theory that this disease was unknown in Europe previous to that time, and was imported by Columbus's men from the North American Indians. On the other hand, he refers to cases described by a Chinese writer, Hoan-Ty, written in the [illegible] B.C., which appear to be typical cases of [illegible].

Owing to bad habits that are all too prevalent among young people of both sexes—largely, by the way, due to overstimulating diet—the author advocates circumcision for all male children.

As previously stated, like a majority of other writers on this subject, the author ignores the important question of diet as bearing on sexuality, a question of greater importance than that of alcohol, as heavy drinkers soon lose their virility. In olden times, holy men retired to [illegible] and lived on herbs to calm their passions. [illegible], we are told that they were not always quite [illegible]. It is useless to look for pure thoughts and [illegible] in a man who overeats, or eats largely of stimulating [illegible].

A Deadly "Contraption."

[illegible] of John D. Spreckels recently had a narrow escape from asphyxiation in San Francisco, through a bathroom heater. These occurrences are becoming so common as to make the convenient hot-water heater a serious rival to the "perfectly-safe" gasoline stove.

"Modern improvements" have their drawbacks.

A Solid Muldoon.

MULDOON'S treatment of Root was a good "ad." for the trainer. Brig.-Gen. Bell has since taken the "cure."

There's nothing mysterious about the treatment, so far as the editor can gather, it consists of fresh air, exercise and plenty of sleep, probably with simple diet. This cure can be taken at home, but then, some people must have a boss to make 'em do things.

A Home in the Redwoods.

A CIRCULAR has been received, descriptive of the home of the "Now Folk," in the Santa Cruz Mountains, conducted by Henry Harrison Brown, a "New Thought" leader, and, before the San Francisco fire, publisher of the magazine "Now." An illustration shows Mr. Brown's cottage, at the foot of redwoods 225 feet high. The nearest postoffice is Glenwood.

Nearly thirty years ago, the editor of this department spent six happy and healthful months in these beautiful mountains, near the site of the "Now" home. He regards it as the most attractive section of the State that he knows. Especially in the fall, when the vines in the clearings among the giant redwoods are tinged with yellow and scarlet, and the call of the quail comes clear through the faint mist, are these mountains of the Holy Cross charming, and restful to mind and body.

The Home invites, as permanent residents or transient guests, those who are weary of the social functions of ordinary summer resorts, and who desire to lead the simple life.

A New Terror.

ANOTHER terror has been added to our high pressure modern life. In Massachusetts, a man was pierced by a wireless-telegraph current, and killed Shall we, perhaps, in the near future, have battles between armies, provided with wireless batteries, and so far apart as to be invisible to each other, while bombs are dropped from balloons a mile above the earth?

For Clean Bread.

LOS ANGELES has a new law relating to bakeries. A good idea. It should also provide that bread must be wrapped. It is not very appetizing to see a not over-clean driver grab a loaf in his sweaty hands.

* * *

Bad Suggestions.

RICHARD STRAUSS has composed an opera which is said to be "greater than "Salome." Such morbid productions as "Salome" and "La Tosca," and novels which give you "the creeps" have a decidedly bad effect on the mind—especially on the immature mind.

* * *

Misplaced Charity.

LOS ANGELES is a happy hunting ground for grafters who prey upon the benevolent, asking charity for various schemes. In some cases the operations are deliberate swindles, in others they serve to furnish free room and board to a female "committee," with mighty little left over for charity.

Donors should make a personal investigation before they bestow alms. Indiscriminate charity is not benevolence. It is rather a combination of laziness and selfishness, and does more harm than good.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association is doing good work in weeding out these frauds.

Beware the Cat.

NOT content with killing the rats, and the fleas that dwell on the rats—and the microbes that inhabit the fleas—a Los Angeles physician, bearing the classical name of Sawyer,—but not "Bob"—now proposes that provision should be made for killing all the cats in Los Angeles, which he declares are fully as dangerous as rats.

They might call in the assistance of the colored parson who was recently arrested in Pasadena for amusing himself by catching cats on fishhooks, attached to pieces of meat.

What about killing the doctors, who carry around microbes in their whiskers—when they have them, or in their hair, when they haven't? It really seems to the editor that when it comes to killing as a means of protection, the medicos should be about the first to go.

If we kill the men that kill the cats, that catch the rats, that carry the fleas, that harbor the bug, that causes the plague, it will be something like the old nursery rhyme of "The House that Jack Built."

Too Much Acid.

A CORRESPONDENT asks in regard to treatment of a person "who makes too much acid in the stomach."

It is impossible to answer this—which is a more or less personal inquiry—without a full knowledge of the dietetic habits of the person referred to. He may eat wrong foods, or wrong combinations of foods, or eat too often, or too rapidly. A good thing to do would be to begin with a complete fast of a couple of weeks, sipping slowly a glass of hot water, three or four times a day, and then adopting a plain, non-fermentative dietary, eating only one or two things at a time. Avoid entirely cane sugar, in every form, coffee and pastry. Continue for a time the hot water, taking a glass morning and evening, and not less than an hour before each meal, eating the food dry, and chewing it thoroughly. You can eat a mealy baked potato once a day. Eat

RUPTURE CURE

How I Evolved My Naturaid Healing System

You must know that man can not even hope to supersede in knowledge the intelligence nature that produced in him.

Neither can man advance and be sure of his footing, only in so far as he has already achieved, in other words, comparative knowledge.

For instance: When we loosen the earth around and water a drought stricken plant, we do not make it grow do we? No, we simply aid nature to do it—NATURE-AID, that is all.

Again we prop up a weak, sagging tree, which by virtue of its own weakness and weight, has simply followed another law of Nature—GRAVITY.

The prop is aiding Nature, is it not? Then with proper cultivating (NATURE-AID again) the tree actually gains strength enough to carry its own weight. When we gradually remove the prop. Look around you, the same principle applies in all Nature.

Now then I apply exactly these same principles with our bodies. Because you must know that we are certainly the product of exactly the same laws as the plants and trees, are we not? And it is my desire to appeal only to your own common sense, that is all.

THE ARGUMENT I NEED WITH THE NATURE-AID SYSTEM
My own training in Medicine and Surgery profited me nothing until I began to apply these ideas about Nature's way of doing things, which I gleaned from the natural instinct governed Indians, wild beasts, birds, etc., among whom I spent a good part of my life, often undergoing great privations, although my own hunger for health and knowledge drove me to it.

I was born a weakling, and my weak body was constantly subjected to every prevailing epidemic. I say medical science availed me nothing and was at various periods of my life given up to die eight different times by as many different doctors. I say the natural instinct governed Indians and all other of Nature's grand creations use no medicine. Why should we?.

And in the cure of rupture my system is absolutely unlike all other unnecessary bungling methods, operations, injections, drugs, trusses, springs, elastics, etc., which inconvenience and cause a loss of time. I say these are no part of my Natur-aid cure. Neither do I change your habits of life. On the contrary you constantly follow your regular vocation and are a wage earner and stronger physically right from the beginning. I have great numbers of cured people who say, send doubting Thomases to me. A few are:

MR. A. LARNINGHAUSEN, of 218 E. 30th St., City. 82 years old, ruptured 35 years.
LOUIS GLEICHNER'S SONS of Corona, Cal.
J. L. COMON, Iron Dept., Union Hardware & Metal Co., City.
C. L. BELT, With Los Angeles Gas & Electric Co., 645 S. Hill St.
WARREN SACKETT, Grocer, Hollywood, Cal.
H. SILBERBERG, 120 Chestnut St., Long Beach, Cal.

I say come and get more names. They all talk for Nature-Aid Petter.

And further, do not undertake treatment unless absolutely satisfied as to the reasonableness of my method in every particular. And if you insist on wearing trusses, demand a written guarantee contract that they will hold your rupture absolutely against all conditions, labor performed and positions assumed by the body. I also make trusses and will agree to all of this and more; so see that your truss fits or you will have physical and mental fits ever after.

I, also, absolutely correct deformities, falling womb, reduce large abdomens and correct all sorts of physical weaknesses in men and women, make elastic stockings, abdominal supporting belts, suspensories for men and other orthopedic apparatus, NATURE AIDS of every conceivable description.

Remember! The bulk of my business is patching up people after various sorts of unnecessary and bungling surgical operations, who were then discarded by the physicians as beyond help. I always make it a practice to befriend these people and file their names, also the names of their attending physicians (for future reference), and I want to tell you that I certainly know who is who in Surgery. So when in need of good services in my line, PERSONALLY or BY MAIL, REMEMBER NATURAID PETTER, will you? No surgery, no medicine. Nothing to hide. Everything above board, but we get there just the same. Satisfaction every time, or it's free, and I have lots and lots of references. Business men all walks of life represented. I am pleased to state that my little girl, eight years old, has been troubled with weak eyes: One of her eyes turned in, commonly called cross-eyes. If she attempted to attend school her eyes would give her too much trouble. The general impression was that she would have to be operated on to get relief. In January last I took her to Dr. Polaski and he has successfully straightened her eyes and improved her sight. She employs her eyes for any length of time with ease and comfort. From observation in my daughter's case and other children in Springfield the Doctor has successfully treated for similar defects, I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Polasky's method of straightening eyes and would give it a fair trial before resorting to an operation. The Law of Life.

CHARLES COURTNEY HASKELL of Norwich, Conn., sends a booklet entitled "The Law of Life," giving an outline of his correspondence school, in which he teaches what he calls the "five laws of life," in a course of twelve lessons. Mr. Haskell is a great advocate of the no-breakfast plan and fasting as a means of aiding nature to restore health. His book "Perfect Health" has been reviewed in these columns. In a letter to the editor, Mr. Haskell mentions that among his noted pupils in foreign countries are Wu Ting Fang, who has been reappointed Minister to this country from China, Count Leo Tolstoi of Russia and King Oscar of Sweden.

In a booklet, Mr. Haskell reprints a letter from Wu Ting Fang dated Peking, February 24, 1906, of which the following is an extract:

"Since my adoption of the new diet and the observance of the sanitary rules in accordance with 'True Scientific Living,' so far as I have been able to do, it gives me great pleasure to state that I have been, and am, feeling much better in health than before, and that all my former ailments, acute and chronic, that flesh (flesh eating) is heir to, have gradually disappeared. If this satisfactory condition should continue, as I hope it will, it is my intention to turn a missionary in the good cause, for what does it profit a man if he becomes a multi-millionaire, or a President, or king of a nation, and loses his health, and be sickly and miserable?"

By the way, Mr. Haskell writes that he would like to have the address of Dr. H. S. Tanner, the faster. When the editor last heard of him he was in Pasadena.

"Eradicating" a Disease.

A RECENT dispatch from San Francisco announced that "Dr. Blue of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, assisted by the City Board of Health, is prosecuting vigorously the work of eradication"—of the plague.

How? By killing rats?

When the plague is ready to go, it will go. And the doctors will, of course, claim the credit, as they do when a patient recovers, in spite of drugs and unnecessary food.

The only thing you can do toward "eradicating" an epidemic disease is to clean up. And then, it will persevere, to some extent, in persons who are inwardly foul, when atmospheric conditions are favorable to it.

Fishy.

THE Los Angeles county Supervisors have adopted the ordinance forbidding fishing within a mile of the outfall sewer of Los Angeles, to which reference was made here recently. A good thing. The ordinance goes into effect on November 18.

In a recent bulletin on "Fish as Food," the government says those fish which feed on small crustacea and the other forms of animal and vegetable life, constituting their natural food, are preferable to those living upon sewage and other matter which may contaminate the waters.

Sure!

The same bulletin contains the following statement: "Fish contain the same kind of nutrients as other food materials." Considering that fish contain no carbohydrates whatever, the absurdity of this statement is apparent.

Is this the sort of thing that we support an expensive Federal experiment station for?

Another Appendix Theory.

NOW comes an able and prominent New York physician, who declares that the appendix begins to disappear when a person reaches middle age.

Indeed! How, then, will the learned medicos explain the large number of operations for appendix, performed upon those who have long passed middle age?

In an interview, published in a local contemporary, Dr. M. F. Underwood of Los Angeles truthfully said:

"Although many surgeons say there is no use for the appendix, it is known to secrete a fluid distinctly different from that found in any other part of the body. This fluid amounts to only a few drops every twenty-four hours, but that small secretion assists in the last stages of digestion.

"Because people can live without it is no sign that it has no use. Other organs—such as the stomach, part of the liver, one of the kidneys—have been removed and still the human has lived. Still no one asserts that there is no use for the stomach."

To this it might be added that no portion of the human anatomy is superfluous, although the medical profession prefers to believe that it could greatly improve it. Also, that no person, after submitting to a major operation, is ever again in complete good health, while the chance for him of long life have been admitted by outspoken members of the profession to be slim.

To continue to use the knife promiscuously for this form of inflammation is a crime. Appendicitis is an inflammation caused mainly through constipation, due to the eating of refined, concentrated and stimulating foods, such as white flour and flesh. In the milder form, it may be readily cured by abstinence from food, rest in bed, wet packs, with hot applications over the seat of pain, and injections of tepid water into the bowels. A little olive oil, taken internally, is also useful.

The doctors often point to the fact that a large amount of pus has accumulated, and claim that in such cases an operation is absolutely necessary. On the contrary, such pus may be absorbed into healthy tissue by a long fast, the above-mentioned treatment being pursued in the meantime.

Freckles.

FOLLOWING is from an Arizona correspondent:

"I have met many persons who have not only freckles during the summer months, but the dark spots remain all the year, and also appear on all portions of the body—chest, stomach, shoulders, limbs and feet. Some attribute it to liver trouble and some to nervous trouble. Some have had medical treatment for years and others have lived hygienically in the open air, on simple food and with plenty of exercise. Can you explain what this trouble is, and if there is any cure for it? Ladies as well as men are afflicted, and while our sex can endure this with some degree of composure, it is very annoying to the women to have the face, hands, arms and neck covered with unsightly spots. I knew one lady who was so self-conscious that she refused to call on friends or have any one call on her, and never went anywhere unless heavily gloved and veiled. She said she had tried all the internal and external remedies she had recommended, but all to no avail.

"What is to be done when those spots appear all over the body? Generally the sufferers(?) are all about 30 or 35 years of age."

The subject of freckles has been discussed several times in these columns, during the past few years. A great number of remedies have been recommended for freckles but the editor knows of none that is permanently efficacious. All kinds of prepared washes should be avoided, as they are often dangerous.

Freckles on the exposed parts of the skin are due to oxidation of the iron in the blood. The same thing happens in rock containing iron, which is exposed to the sun, where you may often notice little brown spots. They are much more common in red-headed people, because their blood contains more iron, the red color of the hair being an indication of iron, as is the red in the soil. Therefore, it may usually be accepted as a fact that persons who have freckles have plenty of iron in their blood.

When these spots appear on parts of the body that are not exposed to the sun, they are probably due to some abnormal condition of the liver. Such a person should see a rational physician, and find out what the trouble is. No local application would be of any use. The only way is to get the system into good order, by correct living.

The editor cannot understand why a woman should be so much worried about freckles. From his point of view they are not unbecoming, on a healthy face. However, tastes differ. However, some people even regard as a disfigurement red hair, that crown of glory which, poets have raved over, in all ages.

Milk Versus Beef Tea.

COMPLAINTS against a naturopathic institution in Boyle Heights, Los Angeles, were recently published. The editor knows nothing of this institution, or of its manager. He may, perhaps, be open to criticism. He was refused admission to the local naturopathic society, on account of his lack of knowledge of anatomy and physiology. However, we know that several of the pioneers of the natural method of healing were ignorant German peasants. Not all the "nature healers" are perfect. There are black sheep in all large folds—even among the "regulars." There is, however, nothing in the testimony published to indicate wrongdoings, except that the charges appear to have been pretty steep.

On the other hand, some of the statements printed indicate the ludicrous and deplorable ignorance of the public in regard to food values. For instance, a nurse declared that a girl patient was "absolutely starved; that she had nothing but milk," and the "unfortunate girl's friends "wanted to give her beef tea, but were not allowed to."

Now, while cow's milk—or any other milk—is not a perfect food for an adult human being, yet two quarts of milk contain nine ounces of solid nourishment, upon which amount a person, resting in bed, could maintain life indefinitely. Neither milk nor anything else, except a little fruit juice, should, however, be given, where there is fever. A diet of milk, with rest in bed, has often accomplished good.

On the other hand, beef "tea" is now recognized by intelligent physicians as just about equivalent in value to wine, being composed of excrementitious matter from the animal, plus water, so that a cupful of milk contains more nourishment than a gallon of beef "tea." It is merely a harmful fever-provoking stimulant. Yet for fifty years this has been fed to fever patients—and still is.

"In All Things Love."

TWO officers, coming home from the Philippines, quarreled. One, who is a teetotaler, struck the other, who is not, for saying: "The man who will not drink wine on a festive occasion is either a dope fiend or else hits the pipe."

This was ungentlemanly, unreasonable and untrue. Many people abstain from drinking any kind of alcoholic beverages in public, for various reasons, some—especially since the Fairbanks episode—fearing that it might hurt them socially, financially or politically. Others think that wine does not agree with them, while a few really believe that by doing so they would be setting a wrong example.

To chide another for abstaining from wine, or women, or gambling, or anything else, is as wrong as for a man who avoids those things to make a boast of doing so.

As the editor recently said, the man who apparently has no small vices is a man whom it will be well to watch.

Do what you believe to be best, but don't seek to force your neighbor to accept your best for his best. As the apostle Paul wisely said: "In things essential unity, in things doubtful liberty, in all things charity"—the last word correctly translated meaning "love."

Packing Prunes.

CIRCULAR No. 33, of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of California (E. J. Wickson acting director,) by G. W. Shaw, tells of experiments in packing prunes in cans, the object being to enable canned prunes to be put on the market, in their natural state, without any form of "processing," and in an inviting, pliable condition. They were packed in 2½-pound cans, and did not "sugar." They were, however, sterilized, and that would make them objectionable to those who know that a high degree of heat injuriously affects the value of foods. To those who cook the prunes, it would make no difference—and they, at present, are in an overwhelming majority.

The circular also contains a description of a test as to the relative merits of cane and beet sugar, in packing fruit. This, also, will be of little interest to those who know that the concentrated sugar of commerce—cane or beet—is injurious.

A Gargantuan Feast.

PERSONS differ as much as doctors, in regard to the use of alcohol. In St. Petersburg, recently, the Orthodox monks of the Monastery of Alexander gave a monster banquet, to celebrate the feast of their patron saint, at which banquet 4300 bottles of wine and beer were consumed.

It is only a small fraction of the churches—and that almost entirely in America—that makes total abstention from alcoholic beverages a prerequisite of membership. The tendency, however, among parsons as well as physicians, is that way. Much of this sentiment is doubtless due to the substitution of doped spirits and adulterated wine and beer for the pure juice of the vine and honest malt and hops.

Youthful Suicides.

AN investigation is being made into the cause of so many suicides among children in Germany. During the past two years nearly 2000 children, mostly between the ages of 12 and 16 years, have killed themselves in that country. A dispatch says:

"Scientists agree that most cases of suicide result from disappointment of children who arrive at an age when they are disillusionized and feel the stern realities of life. A sympathetic ear is the only preventive thus far suggested, and this the authorities cannot provide. The remedy, therefore, lies in the families of the children."

This may be all right, so far as it goes, but it fails to explain such an evil condition of affairs. There must be something radically wrong in the physical, mental and moral up-bringing of these children—or perhaps all three.

What Ailed Smith.

THE following, from Life, is not bad:

"Arising in the morning, Smith rubbed himself off briskly with the sanitary towel advocated by the Board of Health, and with the windows all open, where he would be scrutinized by the neighbors, raised his chest to the ceiling 100 times, and dropped it quietly and unobtrusively to the linoleum floor. After this he plunged into a cold sterilized bath, and, drinking four quarts of [illegible] Dane spring water, lay on his back and imagined he was a jelly fish for thirty minutes. Breakfast followed, consisting of prepared bed slats and cowless milk, after which Smith walked four miles to business, taking his temperature every two blocks. And so on through the day.

"This was six months ago; since then Smith has discovered an entirely new system, which he confidently predicts will make several more men of him before the year is out.

"The only real trouble with Smith is that he has an incurable disease and doesn't know it. His ailment is inability to forget himself. If he could only let himself alone long enough he would be able to get along by following his natural instincts.

"What we all need is a lack of exercise, plenty of undigested food, and an easy conscience.

"And then, if we should happen to get sick and don't send for the doctor, we may pull through."

Eating Meat.

A FRIEND of the editor criticises a recent statement in these columns, in which the editor indorsed a statement attributed to Prof. Wiley, of the Department of Agriculture—whom the editor has frequently had occasion to criticise. Prof. Wiley stated that it was not natural to chew flesh, as the carnivora don't chew their food. The editor declared that, in this case, Prof. Wiley is right—only, that he did not go far enough, namely, to state that this is another reason why flesh food is not a natural food for human beings.

The carnivora, that live on flesh food, eat the whole animal, including the blood and the bones. In this manner they obtain salts that are only found in the blood and the bones. They also eat their food raw. Man eliminates the blood and bones, and cooks the food, seriously altering its organic composition. Therefore, cooked, lean meat is a starvation food, as proved by experiments made by German investigators. In addition to this, we have the "fatigue poisons," such as uric acid, that are found even in healthy animals. Also, we have the fact that a majority of domestic animals are more or less sick. Then, too, the gastric juice of the carnivora is much more powerful than that of man.

These facts should certainly be sufficient to show that flesh food is not a desirable diet for human beings. Unlike the natural food of man, flesh food does not disappear when it is chewed for a length of time, but rather increases in bulk. That is to say, unless it has become "tender"—which, in plain English, means that it has begun to decompose, for that is the case with your tender beef cuts and tender chicken.

You may fix up flesh food by mincing, and shredding, and cooking, and disguising with condiments, but you can't make it a natural food for man. However, the editor doesn't advise you to bolt your meat.

Battle Creek Foods.

A CORRESPONDENT asks whether a concern like the Battle Creek Sanatorium, which professes to be largely benevolent, ought to charge exorbitant prices for its foods, thus placing them beyond the reach of poor people.

No, the editor don't think that it ought.

Remember, however, that wheat, at two or three cents a pound, parched in a frying pan, and ground in a small mill, is fresher, and therefore better, than "health" foods, that have been kept for months on shelves.

Fermentation.

"FERMENTATION; the Primary Cause of Disease in Men and Women," is a pamphlet by Joseph Wallace. The author shows the fallacy of Liebig's suggestion, that fermentation is a vital process, or building-up action. On the contrary, that is the very opposite of the true meaning of the word. Another common error, pointed out by the author, is that yeast is a plant. On the contrary, he shows that it is a mass of "isolated, independent, transparent, flattened spheroid cells, without any rod or plant form whatever."

By the way, the following newspaper item is of interest, in regard to the possible alcohol contents of fermented bread:

"As flour undergoes fermentation in the process of leavening, it has been supposed that a little alcohol might be retained in the loaf in spite of the oven's heat. This proves to be the case, one German chemist having found from 0.2 to 0.4 per cent. of absolute alcohol in freshly-baked English bread, while another obtained a much smaller amount—0.05 to 0.08 per cent.—from German wheat bread. Besides the alcohol was found a little dark-brown oil, which had the odor characteristic of new bread.

Probably, the best-baked bread is what is known as French bread, although it has a decidedly yeasty flavor. English bread is—or was, when the editor lived in England, thirty-five years ago—probably about the worst of all possible breads—insufficiently baked, gray, doughy, and with scarcely any crust.

If you eat fermented bread, see, at least, that it is thoroughly baked. You may also have it toasted, or made into zwieback. On the other hand, this long subjection to a high degree of heat tends to rob the food of its vitality. So there you are, again.

The pamphlet above referred to is published by the Philanthropic Reform Publishing Co., 3 Vernon Place, W. C., London, Eng. For sale in the United States by Dr. Mary A. Heard, 248 Warren street, Roxbury, Mass. Price 5 cents.

TASTING THE CZAR'S DINNERS.

The kitchens in which the food of the "Great White Czar" is prepared are extraordinary for the elaborate precautions taken to prevent any of his household tampering with his food. The kitchens themselves present the appearance of a strong room of a modern bank, guarded by a regiment of soldiers, rather than the culinary department of a royal palace.

Even the chef—M. Eugèno Kratz—who presides over the imperial kitchens, enjoying a salary of £4000 a year, and social privileges equal to those of a general of the Russian army, is not to be envied in his peculiar position.

As soon as dinner or luncheon is ready to be placed on the Emperor's table a very elaborate system of "tasting" has to be gone through; and when the Czar is in residence at Peterhof, not only M. Kratz himself, but also his under chefs and certain high officials of the imperial army are called in to taste every dish that goes to the Emperor's table, after which experiment a reasonable time is permitted to elapse to see whether or not the "tasters" are poisoned. This curious survival of other days comes from the time of Ivan the Terrible.

When the meals prepared for His Majesty are served, M. Kratz himslf begins to taste; and after the strange "poisoning" interval has elapsed the dishes are placed in an electric elevator with a closed shaft, into which the military officials are locked, and up goes the lift to the ante-chamber of the imperial dining-room. Here again the major on duty samples the dishes under the eyes of the Czar, after which the imperial family sit down to dinner.

No dish ever served on the Czar's table is permitted access to the dining-room save through the elevator shaft. Thus the food can in no way be tampered with save by the cooks themselves and the military officials on duty. It has been said by an authority that the imperial family of Russia in bygone times sat down to their meals in a dining-room constructed of cast iron and steel, for all the world like a bank vault. This, however, is not the case now; but elaborate precautions still have to be made to prevent the enemies of the Czar carrying out their plots against his life.—[Tit-Bits.
